PARIS, Nov. 24 (United Press).—The discovery of a secret foundry where French gold coins were being melted has given the police evidence of the operations of a gang of coin traffickers who are combing France for its hidden gold. Several arrests have already been made.

A war-time act made the hoarding of gold an offense against the State, and all citizens who possessed gold money were called upon to deliver it. Under the law gold must be exchanged for its pre-war value in native currency, although under the present exchange it is actually worth about five times that amount.

The French, always known as great savers, liked to accumulate gold and there was no great rush to deliver it when gold was so badly needed by the government. Bankers say that millions of francs in gold coins are sequestered about the country, and persons possessing any must be careful not to be caught.

The situation has given gold traffickers a fruitful market. Agents of the gang have posed as sewing-machine salesmen, and in that way endeavored to win confidence in private homes. They have been offering about two and a half times the face value of coins in francs which, with very little work, gives them a clear profit of fifty per cent. If they give fifty francs for a louis, the melted gold will net them close to a hundred.

After an investigation of many weeks the police broke into the home of Maurice Lucas, a chemist, in Bordeaux and discovered a melting plant. They arrested two visitors who had come with heavy sacks of gold coins. From evidence found the police estimated that 400 pounds of gold money pieces were being melted down there daily.

THIEVES AT WORK.

Three Armed Men Enter Toronto Jewelry Store on Saturday Night.

TORONTO, Nov. 24.—(Canadian Press).—Three armed thieves entered the drug store of Dr. Arthur Lipman late Saturday night, and after beating the doctor and tying his hands, stole $272 in money and two valuable rings. With his hands tightly bound behind his back, Dr. Lipman made his way from the store to the street calling for help.

This British battle fleet is lying at anchor at Malta, ready to make a da sh to Port Said or Constantinople, should Turkey persist in its present attitude toward the British government.

LAKEFIELD NEWS OF INTEREST

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 24.—The annual thankoffering meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church was held in the of the church on Tuesday afternoon at 2.30. About fifty ladies were present, including members of the Anglican, Baptist and Methodist Women's Missionary Societies. Mrs. (Rev.) P. L. Jull occupied the chair and opened the meeting with the hymn, "Oh God Our Helo In Ages Past," after which the opening prayers were recited.

The president called attention to the fact that this was the jubilee thankoffering and was especially important and interesting. On the platform were seated two of the original members of the society, Mrs. Thomas Hendren and Mrs. Peter Baptie. The Bible lesson was read by Mrs. Baptie, and Mrs. Hendren led in prayer.

Mrs. J.A. Porter gave a very concise and interesting account of the history of the Lakefield society.

The society was organized in December, 1876. After listening to an instructive address by a returned missionary the women of the Lakefield Presbyterian Church formed a branch of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, as it was then called, and these officers were elected: President, Mrs. Finlay; vice-president, Mrs. Alex. Braden; secretary, Miss Mae Nachton; treasurer, Mrs. Robert Graham.

Among the names of early workers who served the society as presidents and vice-presidents were Mrs. Thos. Hendren, Mrs. Peter Baptie, Mrs. Wm. Baptie, Mrs. T. J. Nelson, Mrs. Duff, Mrs. Henderson and Mrs. McEwen. The keen interest of those early members gave us our society and the presence of two of them on the latform is an encouragement to go forward.

The office of secretary was efficiently filled for many years by Mrs. W. M. Graham, who gave of her services unstintingly. The field of work was at first among the women of India, and great interest was taken in the splendid work of Misses Fairweather, Roger, MacGregor and Forester. Later on the work of Dr. Mackay in Formosa was included in the programme, and contributions were sent to him. Still later the work of Mrs. Morton in Trinidad and Dr. Robertson in the North West were included, and special prayers were offered for them. The annual fee was 50 cents at first, but was later increased to $1.00, the funds were augmented by mite meetings, held at the homes of the members and in this latter way $100 was raised.

A Mission Band, known as the Earnest Workers, was formed and contributed to the funds. When the foreign settlements in the great North West opened up a new field was opened, and efforts were made to cope with the spiritual and social problems. A branch of the Home Mission Society was formed, which did splendid work in the hospitals and along educational lines. Two names stand out in connection with the work, Mrs. J. W. Ridpath and Miss Fanny Ray.

In 1914 the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies were amalgamated as the Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. At the local amalgamation meeting the presidents of the two societies reviewed the work. The presidents since 1914 were: Mrs. Thos. Hendren, Mrs. J. W. Ridpath, Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. Chant and Mrs. Jull. The Sunbeam Mission Band has been under the direction of Mrs. Bailey, Mrs. McKibbin, Mrs. Chant, Mrs. Jull, with Mesdames Dever and Garbutt as assistants.

The authorized study books have been a great help and the special mission study classes held in the homes have been of great benefit.

The Junior Auxiliary, formed two years ago, which meets once a month, is doing a great deal with talent money, which is raised in various ways.

An interesting link which unites the early days with the present is the memorial certificate to the late Mrs. David Smith of Calgary, who died during the year, and who was one of the early workers in the local branch. After her death her daughters found a sum of money in her purse which they sent to her sister, Mrs. H. C. Garbutt of Lakefield, who purchased the certificate for the Lakefield branch. Miss Cullen sang "The Better Land" very sweetly and acceptably. Mrs. Chant led in the dedicatory prayer.

Mrs. Jull introduced Mrs. Mackenzie of Knox Church, Peterboro'. Mrs. Mackenzie brought a chart with her showing the mission work as a tree with its various branches. Mrs. Mackenzie expressed her pleasure at the report of the work of the Lakefield branch. She has always been encouraged, helped and strengthened by the reports of the rural societies.

The first field of work for the Women's Missionary Society was Central India with its teeming millions; Mr. and Mrs. Douglas and Misses Fairweather and Roger of Erskine Presbyterian Church, Montreal, were pioneer missionaries. Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Campbell and one other married couple went out also, and these eight endured great difficulties, but established the work there. Now there are 35 single ladies and 25 missionaries' wives. Even now there is great need for more workers. As a British possession India is especially precious to us and now with the political unrest the work is difficult but very necessary.

In 1883 the work in Formosa was taken up, with Dr. and Mrs. R. P. Mackay as the pioneer missionaries. Now there are nine single ladies and seven missionaries' wives there, with a college, boys' and girls' schools, and a hospital, the latter in charge of Dr. Taylor.

In 1889 the work of Honan was taken up and the society is responsible for eight million people. Dr. and Mrs. McClure of Montreal went out among the first. Dr. McClure was gold medallist of McGill University and gave up very attractive offers in his native city to go out to labor among the Chinese. Their work is a most glorious page in the history of missions. A month ago Mrs. McClure passed away.

In 1897 the deaconess work was begun and a home established in Toronto where young lady missionaries can take a six months' or one-year course of training. Doctors, nurses and lay workers take special training there and the value of their work is almost beyond computing.

In 1900 the mission work among the Orientals in Canada was added. There are now more than 100,000 of these people in Canada, and sad to relate, the church is not awake to the situation. There are three centres of work—Montreal, Toronto and Victoria, in the latter city there is a missionary society among the Chinese women and a mission band for Chinese girls with a membership of fifty.

At Knox Church, Montreal, 50 Chinese were baptized and received communion. Sad to say, these foreign Christians are not always kindly treated by the whites.

In 1909 the work was taken up in Shanghai with Dr. and Mrs. MacGillivray as the early workers. In 1911 the strangers' work was added to the programme; since 1913 there have been one and a half millions entered Canada. There are eleven British organizations bringing children out and the work is enormous. The Central Board are anxious to raise the membership in this jubilee year to 100,000, and if each member gave $5 a year, what a great deal of good could be done. It takes $414,000 to maintain the present work each year, and with more money there could be corresponding expansion.

Korea was taken up in 1913. No country accepted Christianity as Korea did. Miss McKircher was the first missionary and she is still there.

The home mission work was begun in 1875 and the early work is still going on. Hospitals and schools were established. St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Montreal, built and maintains the hospitals at Hearst and Matheson as a war memorial to their young men who gave their lives in the great war. There are now seven appeals for hospitals alone in the west of our own country.

In 1884 supply work was added to the branches of work and it is something within the reach of all. It is often hard to get women to speak or read or take part in meetings, but this work all can do, and last year 800 quilts were sent to the schools and hospitals.

In 1891 the evangelization of the French-Canadians was begun, and the children of Quebec were given an opportunity to hear the Bible read and prayers. This work has brought forth fruit. In 1889 the work of the hospitals, those centres of compassion was taken up and that has its greatest appeal to the foreign population. Kindness in the hospitals has been a work which has had far-reaching results in bringing souls to God.

In 1903 school homes were begun, and now there are 18 of these which are the greatest thing in Canada and the money is well spent. Two new ones have been established, one at Prince George, B.C., and one at Assinaboia.

In 1908 library work was begun and the "Messenger," with its splendid educational and missionary departments, has resulted. In 1909 the work among the Jews in Canada was begun and has had results beyond the expectations of the most optimistic.

In Canada we have so many privileges and we do not always appreciate them, and we should pray to be given power to live un to our splendid opportunities.

Mrs. Chant moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Mackenzie, while Mrs. McMullen seconded it.

At the close of the meeting the members of the Presbyterian Soccety served afternoon tea to the visitors. A beautiful birthday cake was the central feature of the tea, with its sixty pink candles, it was a symbol of the years of work which lie behind the missionary society. The entire affair passed off successfully, and was a pleasure to all who attended.

Address on Armenia.

A meeting was held in the Lakefield Memorial Hall on Monday last for A meeting was held in the Lakefield Memorial Hall for the purpose of hearing an address by Dr. A. J. Vining on American relief work. Unfortunately, the attendance was small, and Dr. Vining formed a poor opinion of Lakefield's interest in the cause. However, the village has responded generously to previous calls for this worthy cause and no doubt it will do so again. Dr. Vining was a very forcible speaker and apparently filled with a great zeal for the work.

"The Americans are the scattered remnant of an ancient race, and their history is the blackest chapter of the world's history; no other nation was harried as they were, for more than 3,000 years they have been the martyr nation. Like Belgium, they suffered for their geographical position, but even in a greater degree. Nebuchadnezzar, the Mongols, the Saracens, the Tartons and Turks all overran Amrenia, and her people were harried, beaten and put to death. In the years of 1894-'96 the sword of the Turk was dripping with Armenian blood, and 200,000 Armenians were put to death. Gladstone, then in his 86th year, rose up and uttered a protest which echoed through the empire against Abdul Hamid, the great assassin.

In 1908 a new party rose in Turkey, called the young Turks, who drove out the Sultan and went into the sanctuaries of the Armenians and offered prayers, and were anxious, it appeared, to form an alliance with them. This was merely a pretence, for they slew 30,000 of the tortured race.

Europe was roused and the great powers sent a Swede and a Hollander to the Sublime Port as accredited envoys to make representations that this slaughter of a Christian race must cease, but the great war broke out and France, Great Britain and Russia were fighting for their very lives against the Germans, whose Kaiser had previously pinned Germany's finest decoration on the breast of the Sultan, kissing him and calling him his dear friend. The entrance of Turkey into the war was a signal of the demobilization of the Armenians in the army and their formation into labor battalions. They were then killed. Some were shot, others were killed with scythes, clubs, axes and even saws. The nation was then summoned by the Turks and driven into exile into the desert—a road without hope. Death took a million of them into eternity. Women fell by the wayside with their new-born babes and thousands were drowned and many burned alive. In the mountains they were attacked by bands of ruffians recruited by the Turks, and their beautiful girls and women were outraged and tortured to madness. The Kurds joined the Turks and the result was a chapter of hideous and unmentionable crime, and in 1915 nearly a million died, or rather were put to death; 1916 and 1917 were nearly as bad. These people, who died all the deaths on earth, were martyrs to Christianity, for hundreds of thousands when given their choice between life as Mohammedans or death, chose the latter.

The Armenian nation was the first to embrace Christianity. It is said that one of the seventy sent out by Christ went to Armenia. St. Gregory went there and the whole nation embraced Christianity. T. P. O'Connor says the Armenians are the bulwark of Christianity. People say that they are greedy for money and that is indeed their great fault, but others besides Armenians have it, but they will die for their religion anytime. Even boys of tender age refuse to give up their religion.

People say they are only Armenians, but some of the men Herxes had with him when he crossed the Hellesport were Armenians and they have a civilization centuries older than ours. Gladstone was their great defender. Some of the greatest lecturers at Oxford University are Armenians. Armenia saved Europe when the Turk threatened to overrun it in the 17th century. Armenia was our ally in the great war and now there are 250,000 orphans there who are children of men and women who gave their lives for the Allies. Only Armenians, you say; if Germany had won the war we all would have been slaves. The Archbishop of Canterbury, Gen. Allenby and ex-Premier Kerensky of Russia all paid a great tribute to this greatly-wronged nation.

In 1916 an appeal made in Toronto brought some very prominent men to gether who raised a large sum for Armenian relief, which was sent to New York. Later the money was sent to England, as it was recognized that as British subjects the channels of our own land should be used, and added to the Lord Mayor's fund of London.

Now a Canadian organization is formed to bring Armenian boys to Canada and make farmers of them and supply the farmer with his great need, viz., help that he can afford to pay. An appeal to Ottawa was practically fruitless, so the organization bought a farm at Georgetown, 26 miles from Toronto, and there the boys are being established. They have half a day in school and half on the land till they are sixteen. A year ago last July 50 boys were brought out and they were fine specimens, even though they had been dragged through hell; they are strong and athletic, and are Christians. A leader, who is also an Armenian refugee, has been a great assistant.

Their progress in every line is wonderful and they are learning English rapidly, and are very loyal to Canada, which they learn to love as a land of political and religious freedom. They are taught Canadian citizenship and salute the British flag each day, they play the game like men and save their money, for they are all obsessed with the idea of one day owning farms. Their names have, with their consent, been changed, and we have Gregor McGregor, Peter Baker, Charles Mason, John Inkster and others. Churches and women's institutes and other organizations have adopted boys financially. Peter Robinson was adopted and named by a chapter of the same name of the I.O.D.E. in Peterboro'.

They are most enthusiastic young Canadians, and not one will steal or lie; they are honest as the sun. The society works under a government charter, but that is all the government gave. At one time there were 35 millions of Armenians, and now there are but half that number, which is the price Armenia has paid for Christianity. The ninety boys who are at present in the home at Georgetown have all been financially adopted, but money is needed for the support of the home.

Dr. Vining recommended a local organization, and on motion these officers were elected: President, Rev. P. L. Jull. Vice-president, Rev. W. Cox. Secretary, Miss Graham. Treasurer, Mr. G. G. Connell.

GET ACQUAINTED WITH W. J. Y.

(NEW YORK—405 METERS)

By WILLIAM J. FAGAN.

WJY, sister of WJZ, while it has numerous features of its own, is operated by the same personnel as WJZ is handled by, has the same faults and virtues, and is used by WJZ on numerous occasions as its overflow outlet. Of course, the Radio Corporation controls both WJY and WJZ, and both are located in the Aeolian Building, New York.

WJY operates four nights weekly: Sunday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, sharing the local 405-meter wave-length with WOR, Newark.

Some of the regular features from WJY are the Weekly French Lesson, Billy Wynne's Orchestra, the Sunday evening concert by the Commodoer Concert Orchestra, and a few others. Numerous features which have become popular at WJZ have been transferred to WJY where, in spite of the fact that WJY's audience is much smaller than that of WJZ, they will be assured welcome, having built up a following due to their merits. These features include the French Lesson, the Pop Question Game and Current Events talk among others.

When it was decided to maintain two stations in New York, the RCA intended to make WJY the one handling popular features, while WJZ was to concentrate on those of high standard, such as symphony concerts, opera, etc. However, this plan has apparently been abandoned, for WJY lists classical concerts, political events, banquets of importance, etc., almost as frequently as does WJZ. WJY has been a convenience for WJZ on more than one occasion. During the Democratic Convention, WJY handled a Philharmonic concert originally scheduled for WJZ one night, while the process was reversed the next time the orchestra was scheduled. Several times recently, WJY has hooked up with WGY, Schenectady, in broadcasting the WGY players, and with WRC in broadcasting important Washington events.

What has been said of WJZ in a previous article may be applied with equal truth to WJY, and with the same staff of announcers, it is difficult to tell them apart. Sort of a Siamese-twin arrangement, although WJY is inclined to be more frivolous than its sedate relative.

Little remains to be said about WJY. Its programmes are of good quality, dance and concert music each getting an even break and with good studio recitals to round out the bill. Transmission is high-class and remote control work is fully as good as that of WJZ. It might be said that two stations operated by one company in one city from the same building means a lot of waste matter, but it is strangely untrue with the WJ family, who are getting better and lustier day by day.

BREED WISE HENS TO AVOID MOTORS

Automobile Mortality in Poultry Business May Be Overcome.

BLOOMSBURG, Pa., Nov. 21 (Associated Press).—Although the reason a chicken crosses the road never has been settled to the satisfaction of everyone, the fact that most fowls attempt to get on the other side of the highway is responsible for thousands of dollars' loss to farmers in this part of the state, and many other sections.

"Automobile mortality" is one of the chief sources of loss to poultrymen, it is declared, and two protective steps are being taken. One is the removal of the chicken pens to points far distant from the road, and the other the breeding of birds that have shown, under observation, a readiness to stay on their own side of the road when an automobile comes along.

Tests made with nearly 100 flocks of a certain breed revealed but a half dozen chickens which went across the road. With other breeds there were less than a half dozen of entire flocks along the road which did not try to cross. Some of the farmers are not slow to realize the difference and are turning to those breeds which "stay put" and avoid the losses.

On farms along main highways the losses to flocks from motor cars has been as high as 25 percent. In some cases a single passing automobile has killed four chickens.

You May Have

Pretty teeth already—and yet not know it

Make this unique test. Remove the dingy film that's clouding your teeth. Beneath it, you will find, to your own surprise, those white and glistening teeth that you envy in others.

STRANGELY enough, thousands of people who go through life wishing and hoping for glistening teeth already have them, without ever realizing that they do.

This is the reason given:

Run your tongue across your teeth, and you will feel a film. A film which absorbs discolorations and hides the natural color of your teeth.

Remove it and your teeth take on a new beauty. Maybe you have really beautiful teeth without realizing it.

Film is charged too with most tooth troubles. It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. Germs breed in it. And they, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

So, besides loss of tooth beauty, film is a serious danger to healthy teeth. You must remove and constantly combat it. It is ever present, ever forming.

Old-time dentifrices were unable to combat it successfully. And tooth troubles were a serious problem.

Now modern science has discovered a new way. A new-type tooth paste called Pepsodent that acts to curdle film, then harmlessly to remove it. No soap or chalk, no harsh grit dangerous to enamel.

FINANCES SHOW HUGE INCREASE

Improvement of $6,639,000 For Province Announced Saturday.

GASOLINE TAX.

TORONTO, November 24. — Improvement of $6,639,000, in the state of the public finances of the Province, was announced Saturday by Hon. W. H. Price, K.C., Provincial Treasurer, as an achievement of the Ferguson government during the past year.

A deficit of $15,000,000 was declared to have been replaced by one of $8,500,000, and it was pointed out that in this latter total was included the payment of $3,000,000 of the old accounts, interest, bonus and replacement charges which had been left outstanding by the Drury government. The deficit for the year proper, accordingly, was only $5,000,000.

The revenue during the past year is given as $40,500,642, an increase of $6,390,430 over that of 1922-23. The expenditure is given as $49,056,682, a decrease of $248,756.

In every department the total revenue is increased and in majorityy of the departments the expenditure is lower, although in this latter regard the government has been bound by the fact that it has been operating under estimates passed by the U.F.O in 1923.

The major savings include the sum of $667,979, pruned by Hon. Lincoln Goldie from the operating costs of the public institutions, and the sum of $111,345, representing the lower costs of legislation in view of a shorter session of the Legislature.

Such a showing as is indicated above is regarded by the Provincial Treasurer and by the members of the government, with considerable satisfaction.

Hon. Mr. Price is anxious to place the provincial debt upon a sinking fund basis, and he stated that in the record achieved in the past year he saw an auspicious promise of being able to fulfill his ambition. What is perhaps of the greatest importance to the general public in connection with the year's financial record is the fact it will influence the government to take no new taxation measures with probably the exception of the gasoline tax, which has already been intimated.

Hon. Mr. Price was asked if there would be any new taxation upon the municipalities or upon income, and he replied in the negative.

The present revenue swelled by the gasoline tax, is expected to prove sufficient for estimates which the government will present to the House.

Among other departments where savings were announced, the Prime Minister's office showed a decrease of $359,380; expenditures under the head of legislation were less by $142,664; Attorney-General's Department $236,196; Education $440,645; lands and forests, $302,873; mines and fisheries, $28,659; public works $162,739, and highways $281,089—all decreases.

BEATRICE THORPE KILLED BY SUITOR

Seventeen Year Hubert Girl Shot to Death by Jealous Lover.

BROCKVILLE, Nov. 24. — (Canadian Press).—Jealousy accompanied with unrequited affection is believed to have been the motive for the shooting at Hubert, a small community in Matilda township nine miles north of the village of Iroquois, on Saturday evening of Beatrice Thorpe, aged 17, by her would-be suitor, Thomas Collison, aged 26, of the same vicinity as a result of which the girl lies dead at her parents home and the man is in Cornwall jail facing a charge of murder. At the time of the shooting the Thorpe girl was engaged in mopping the floor of the kitchen at her home. Her parents were away and the only other occupant of the room, her brother Charles aged 24, was startled to see a face at the window, which he recognized as being that of Collison. A shot followed and at the discharge, young Thorpe hurled a lantern which he was carrying through window at Collison. Three other shots were however, fired and the girl crumpled in a heap on the floor, with a bullet wound in the side and another in the back. The remaining two bullets were found to be imbedded in the wall.

The girl's condition was such that she could not be moved to a hospital and she gradually sank and died at 6.30 o'clock after having survived after the shooting for three qqurters of an hour.

Collison was arrested shortly after wards at the home of a brother-in-law a short distance away.

The Thorpe girl had been an unwilling recipient of Collison's attentions for years and always rejected his advances. Two years ago he was ordered to leave the vicinity for two years. He went to western Canada and a month ago at the expiration of the period returned and again forced his attentions on her.

FASHIONS & FOIBLES

by Shirley Sharon

The schoolgirl, that earnest seeker after truth, learns early that plaids are smart, center closings are new, scarfs are very grown up and many buttons are more to be desired than many buttonholes.

CONSIDER the activities of the very young person. She has to go to school and to dancing class, practise and take her music lesson, have her teeth straightened, her adenoids out, eat vitamins in tomatoes and iodine in fish, feed the canary, exercise her dog, tidy her top bureau drawer and do her daily dozens of exercise. That only leaves her about half her time to think of clothes, so they must be simple. Little slim, straight frocks of flannel, soft twills, plaids, checks and stripes are admirable for school and play. The scarf collar protects her throat out of doors and leaves it open in the house and the center front closing is new and smart.

NEWS OF BETHANY.

Death of Miss Jennie Lee Occurred on Saturday—Personals.

BETHANY, November 24. — The death of Miss Jennie Lee, which occurred at 2 o'clock on Saturday morning, removed from the locality a most highly respected citizen. Miss Lee was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. R. Lee, and was born in Manvers township 63 years ago. She has been confined to her bed for the last six weeks. Previous to this illness she was a staunch worker in the Methodist church and Sunday school, and was of a retiring disposition. Miss Lee was beloved by all who came in contact with her.

She leaves to mourn her loss besides a multitude of friends, three sisters, Mrs. T. G. Ryley, Bethany, Mrs. A. Birchard, Peterboro, and Mrs. J. Wyley, Saskatchewan.

The funeral will be held from the home of her sister, Mrs. T. G. Ryley on Monday afternoon, and proceed to St. John's cemetery, Ida, where interment will take place.

Mr. James McKinnon was a business visitor to Ottawa last week.

Mr. A. Monk spent Saturday in Peterboro.

Mr. W. McCartney of Toronto spent the week end at his home here.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Crerar and family spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. M. Kidd, Young's Point.

Mrs. W. Card was a visitor in Toronto on Friday.

METHODIST CHURCH CELEBRATIONS HELD

First of Series of Centenary Celebrations Held in Toronto.

TORONTO, Nov. 24.—Having witnessed in Massey Hall the first of the series of centenary celebrations of Methodist Missions, which are being held this month and the next throughout Canada, A Toronto writer gives a descriptive account of the exhibition under the heading, "Thoughts on the Pioneer Pathfinders of the Kingdom."

Very beautiful and effective is the pageant of a century of Canadian Methodism presented on the stage of Massey Hall. Art, symbolism and imagination combine to bring the story to the hearts of men and women to whom a century, in these fast-moving days, is as a thousand years. But it is in the basement of the hall that you come face to face with reality far more beautiful than anything that the art of stagecraft can present. For here you can see and ponder over to your heart's content the practical work-a-day material in daily use a century or more ago by valiant pioneer pathfinders of the Kingdom of God in Canada.

Message of Hope.

Strong of frame, no less than stout of heart, these earnest-souled men must have been. Here is the saddle-pack of one, a rough, serviceable arrangement that carried all his worldly belongings as he rode from place to place. He had nothing to sell that men might use in that stern new life. No labor-saving device that might give a weak woman or tender child the strength and helpfulness of a full-grown man so sorely needed in those far-off days. No labor-saving device, but something far more precious. He had a message of hope and confidence—an old-world message made new again for Canada's beautiful wilderness.

Temporary Temple of God.

He made his lonely way through primeval forests by roads whose only finger-posts were fire-scorched trees. He slept in the forest shade, and kindled his nightly watch-fire to drive off prowling wolves or bears. Home, to him, meant little more than the rough home of another pioneer, where his bed was oft-times pine boughs or bundled straw. And this humble shelter would become a temple of God for the time-being. The treasurer of the saddle-pack would be revealed. The Old Book, and the hymnal, with its songs of love and faith, would do their service; and Homeland memories on the one hand, and heavenly promises on the other, would be the antiphon of assembled hearts.

Well Thumbed Bibles.

You can see the Bibles of these pioneer missionaries—well-thumbed and well-worn they are. And how well they must have been loved no one can ever know, for none will ever again travel the way their first owners did. Perhaps the rocks and pines that marked their journeyings could tell us, for many times their prayers and songs of exultation must have had for their only witnesses these silent sentinels. And what they preached has fallen on stillness too. A God-given talent for deep silence they must have had—even as Elijah of old. But they could speak to purpose, too, as Elijah did.

Mighty Realities.

And when organization came—gradually and efficiently—the labor of these men was in no way lessened. Every step forward brought fresh problems. Church building and school teaching—these were but old troubles with new faces. For these men were stalwarts. Like Oliver Cromwell, they lived and labored as in the immediate presence of God. Sin, salvation, death and judgment were mighty realities to them. Physical discomfort, hunger, cold, loneliness, sickness and weariness had no terrors. Their warfare was with principalities and powers of darkness. The body and its needs, the senses and their appeals, meant little to them when set against things of the spirit.

Unwavering in Faith.

Here are church furnishings of the early days, and oft-times not too remote for them to have been handled possibly by some of the aged ministers whom we see around us. Faded records and time-worn witnesses of daily, hourly service. Whatever purpose they served they are all alike in sanctity of association. They speak of toil-scarred hands that never wearied in well-doing, and of hearts single in purpose, unwavering in faith, and spent to the last beat in the service of God and man. For such were the Pioneer Pathfinders of the Kingdom.

HE LED OWN FUNERAL CORTEGE

Mike Merlo, general president of Unione Siciliana and its 34 branches, led his own funeral procession in Chicago. At least that is the way it appeared to thousands along the streets of Little Italy, through which the cortege moved. A life-like wax figure of the deceased stood in the first automobile. Then came 25 machines loaded with $30,000 worth of flowers. These were followed by the hearse and several score of cars filled with relatives and friends.

NOTORIOUS CROOK ARRESTED SUNDAY

Lou Keyte Is Charged With Using Mails to Defraud to the Extent of $2,000,000.

HALIFAX, November 24. — Described by Assistant State Attorney Sharbero and McSwiggin of Chicago, as "the smoothest and most dangerous confidence man in the United States," Leo Koretz, alias Lou Keyte, was arrested in a local hotel here last night on a charge of using the mails to defraud to the extend of $2,000,000 and will leave for Chicago to-morrow he having waived extradition.

He admitted, the officers said, that the man described in the circular as Leo Koretz, wanted for two million dollar fraud in Chicago, and for whose arrest $10,000 reward was offered, was himself.

At the jail he waived extradition, and announced himself as ready to return at once to face the charges. Since coming to Nova Scotia he purchased a large house near Liverpool, representing himself as a man of wealth. He wore a beard, which he said was a necessity owing to an infection of the teeth and jaw.

BRIDGES SWEPT AWAY.

Heavy Property Loss in Quebec as Result of Heavy Rains.

QUEBEC, Nov. 24. — (Canadian Press). — With four temporary bridges carried away by floods, a large piece of land inundated and people fleeing in canoes in the Baie St. Paul district, the flood situation there, according to advices received here, is a serious one. One bridge is at Bai St. Paul, which suffered extensively in the floods last month, and three others were at St. Urbain, a nearby parish. The bridges were erected to replace those carried away last month.

Torrential rains of the past two days have caused the Riviere Du Gouffre to rise several feet, and a further rise is expected. Many buildings have been partially undermined by the swirling waters, while a store was carried away in the flood.

No reports have been received of any damage elsewhere, although rains have been general throughout the province.

10,000 GALLONS ALCOHOL SEIZED

Quebec Liquor Inspectors Made Seizure Valued at $150,000.

QUEBEC, Nov. 24. — (Canadian Press).—Inspectors of the Quebec Liquor Commission seized at Batiscan about 10,000 gallons of alcohol on board the yacht St. George, and also a number of trucks which were just leaving with 200 cases of the precious liquid. The stock seized is alleged to be part of the huge cargo of liquor which had been seized at St. Sulpice on the steam barge A. Tremblay, on the previous day. Its value is placed at $150,000.

This brings to an end the gigantic scheme said to have been elaborated a few months ago between a syndicate including powerful Montreal and New York interests and some rum-runners which culminated in a mysterious visit of a large unit of the rum-running fleet from the Atlantic to the St. Lawrence.

Yesterday's seizure was not peacefully carried out. After desertion of their ship the rum-runners decided to make an attempt to regain their loot. They were fought off after a clash with the Government officers.

WILL ENTER UNION.

Knox Church Session Vote to Enter Church Union.

At a meeting of the session of Knox Presbyterian Church, Peterboro, held on Thursday, November 20th, the Act including the basis of Union of the United Church of Canada was thoroughly considered, and thereafter the following resolution, moved by Mr. Ernest Benson and seconded by Mr. Andrew Mackenzie, was unanimously passed:

"Whereas we, the members of the Session of Knox Church, have carefully and prayerfully considered the present Church Union situation, and are convinced that our Church can go with the Presbyterian Church in Canada into the United Church of Canada, and, in so doing, remain Presbyterian in doctrine, worship and church government, and can continue to carry on our work with all our organization as at present, and

"Whereas the right of call to ministers by congregations in the United Church is guaranteed, and

"Whereas the pastoral term is to be without time-limit, as at present, and

"Whereas we as a congregation do retain all our Presbyterian practices, our Hymnal and the name Presbyterian, in so entering the United Church,

We recommend to our people that Knox Church continue with the Presbyterian Church in Canada by entering with her into the United Church of Canada. Believing this to be for our Church at this time the Will of the Great Head of the Church we this affectionately enjoin our people."

Signed: E. Benson, Clerk of Session; J. F. Morrison, R. G. Clifford, A. MacKenzie, W. W. Yale, W. J. Byers, R. Laing, M. N. Clark, John P. Ego, A. H. Gillespie, Wm. Watt, T. R. Kennedy, C. H. Williamson, M. C. Mackinnon, Moderator of Session.

SEEK BETTER LIVING.

BERLIN, Nov. 24 (Associated Press) —Emigration from Germany is advancing by leaps and bounds. Within one month the number of Germans hoping to find better luck elsewhere has increased from 1,873 to 4,955. The state of Wurtemberg and the Rhineland country furnished the largest quotas.

In the Rhineland industry has been hard hit by the occupation of the French, and it has proven difficult to get the wheels turning properly again. Many wage earners, despairing of better days, are leaving for North and South America, Russia and other countries in quest of happiness.

That the Wurtemberg quota is large is less surprising. The people of that state always have been characterized by the "wanderlust."

REVOLUTION RUMOR CONFIRMED SUNDAY

Uprising in Mexico Is Timed For December 1, When President Takes Office.

EL PASO, Texas, Nov. 24. — (United Press).—Rumors of an impending revolution in Mexico, current along the border for several days, were confirmed yesterday by Enriques Salcedo, personal representative of President-Elect Calles to the Mexican Federation of Labor. The Government, Salcedo says, now had definite information that the revolutionists, headed by General Flores and the brothers Adolfo and Alfonso De La Huerta, and backed by British oil interests, have timed an uprising for December 1st, when President-Eelect Calles takes office. Salcedo exhibited circulars and other documents calling for action on December 1st, which, he said, were being circulated through underground channels along the border. Responding to these and other calls, he said, the rebels had been concentrating in border towns for ten days past — naming El Paso and Laredo, Texas; Bisbee and Tucson, Arizona; Las Crues, New Mexico, as concentration points.

To meet the situation, Salcedo sid the Federal troops were moving northward to the border in large numbers, with the city of Chihuahua as a base for operations. The garrison of 1,500 men in Juarez ,he added, would be strengthened also.

According to Salcedo, Alfonzo La Huerta is in Tuckson, Arizona, and Adolfo in Los Angeles. Flores, according to the same authority, left his home several days ago.

The Government has known of the plans of the revolutionaries for some days. He said "most of the plotters are on the American side.

22,220 People With 44 Nationalities Represented.

FORT WILLIAM, Nov. 24. — (Canadian Press).—The population of Fort William is 22,220, with 44 nationalities represented and 23 religions. Canadians lead in numbers, closely followed by English, Irish and Scottish. Three persons registered themselves as Manx, refusing to be called British.

ARTICLE No. 7

In spite of the fact that the informatory doubles have been in use for many years there is still a great deal of confusion in regard to them. Some players adopt one system, others another, and the result is anything but satisfactory. Under these circumstances, it is advisable to adopt a rule that will apply to all cases and at the same time not be too complex to be easily understood and applied. Such a rule must, of course, distinguish an informatory double from a business double, that is, one made to defeat the contract. An informatory double is a double of a suit bid of one, two or three or of a no-trump bid of one, if made at the first opportunity and before partner has made a bid. The fact that the doubler has bid is immaterial. If he doubles after he has bid but at his first opportunity, he is still asking his partner for a bid.

There is one exception to this rule that many players have adopted, and with very good results. Suppose the dealer bids no-trump, second and third hands pass and fourth hand bids two spades. Under the rule just laid down, if the dealer doubles, he is doing so at his first opportunity and therefore asking his partner for a bid. Some players, however, make an exception of this rule in case they have already bid a no-trump. In such a case, if they subsequently double an opponent's bid, they are doubling to defeat the contract. An interesting hand exemplifying this distinction has just been referred to the writer:

	Hearts — 10, 9, 8, 3 Clubs — 10, 8, 5, 2 Diamonds — Q, 8, 6 Spades — Q, 9
Hearts — J, 4 Clubs — Q, 9, 6, 3 Diamonds — 10, 9, 7, 5, 2 Spades — 10, 7	Y A B Z	Hearts — A, Q, 7, 6, 5 Clubs — K, 7 Diamonds — J Spades — K, J, 6, 4, 3
	Hearts — K, 2 Clubs — A, J, 4 Diamonds — A, K, 4, 3 Spades — A, 8, 5, 2

Z dealt and bid one no-trump, A and Y passed, B bid two spades and Z doubled, having arranged with his partner to double under such conditions to defeat the contract. A and Y again passed as the latter was under no obligation to bid since his partner had first bid no-trump and then doubled. B now bid three hearts and Z again doubled, A, Y and B passed and the contract was defeated by 300 points. If Z and his partner had not adopted this distinction, they would never have had this opportunity to defeat the contract. Under the rule as laid down in the first part of this article, Z would have been obliged either to pass or to bid two no-trump. If he passed, he would have defeated the two spade bid by two tricks or 100 points. If he had bid two no-trump, he would have had difficulty in making his contract. The writer is of the opinion that the distinction mentioned is well worthy of careful consideration. It should be interesting for the readers of these articles to try out this distinction and see how it works.

In case a player first bids a suit, however, and subsequently doubles at his first opportunity, he is asking for a bid. There is no exception to this rule. The following hand is a good example:

	Hearts — 10, 9, 7, 2 Clubs — J, 8, 6, 3 Diamonds — 8, 6, 5 Spades — K, 7
Hearts — K, Q, J, 8, 6, 3 Clubs — K, 10 Diamonds — 9, 4, 2 Spades — Q, 8	Y A B Z	Hearts — 5, 4 Clubs — 9, 7, 4 Diamonds — A, K, J, 10 Spades — J, 6, 5, 2
	Hearts — A Clubs — A, Q, 5, 2 Diamonds — Q, 7, 3 Spades — A, 10, 9, 4, 3

Z dealt and bid one spade, A bid two hearts and Y and B passed. Z had a very fine all around hand and yet hardly strong enough for a two spade bid. By doubling two hearts, he informed his partner that he had fine support for either diamonds or clubs and yet was not strong enough in spades to re-bid. In the example given, Y's hand was too weak to bid three clubs, his only four card suit, so he correctly bid two spades. All passed and Z just made his contract. The foregoing hands illustrate modern methods of handling the informatory doubles and should be closely studied.

Problem No. 4

	Hearts — J, 10, 8, 4 Clubs — Q Diamonds — K, Q, 10, 2 Spades — Q, 8, 7, 4
Hearts — 3 Clubs — A, J, 9, 7, 2 Diamonds — 9, 8, 6, 5, 3 Spades — 9, 2	Y A B Z	Hearts — A, 7, 6, 5 Clubs — K, 10, 6, 5, 4 Diamonds — None Spades — A, J, 5, 3
	Hearts — K, Q, 9, 2 Clubs — 8, 3 Diamonds — A, J, 7, 4 Spades — K, 10, 6

No score, first game. Z dealt and bid one heart and all passed. A opened the ace of clubs and then played the nine of spades. B won the trick with the ace of spades and then led the five of hearts. How should Z now play the hand so that he can make four odd against any defense?

OPERATOR PUSHES BUTTONS, ELEVATOR DOES THE REST

Standard Oil Skyscraper in Broadway is Equipped With Automatic Lifts That Arouse the Wonder of Passengers.

"It's absolutely human!" was the comment of an official of the Standard Oil Company, as he completed an inspection of one of the six automatic elevators in the tower of the company's new building at 26 Broadway.

The bank of tower elevators, three of which have been running since May 15, are of the latest type of high-speed, intensive-service passenger elevators put on the market. They are the first of their kind to be constructed in any building in New York. Already contracts have been signed for similar installations throughout the country.

At a slight motion of the operator's hand on a lever at his side, the car gate and the landing door close shut, and as if by magic the elevator starts up without any other apparent motion on his part. A panel on the side of the car has two rows of buttons, bearing numbers corresponding to the floors.

As the passenger steps in and calls out his "six," "eight," "ten," "twenty-five," the operator presses the button bearing the corresponding number. Wondrously the stops and the doors fly open—the operator has not stirred a muscle. The passenger steps out, the doors close automatically and the empty cage resumes its upward journey until it reaches the next floor for which the button has been pressed.

So it continues merrily on its way until its round trip has been completed, unless an intending passenger outside of the car has registered his desire to have it stop. In this case, too, as if with human understanding, the car stops and takes on its passenger and resumes its course. No flash of lights notifies the operator that a passenger is waiting. The car halts, apparently of its own accord, quickly opens its doors, closes them again with equal rapidity and, without the loss of a second, once more starts in motion.

There is no shooting several feet beyond the landing, no waste of time in leveling the elevator with the landing, nor is the impatient man who signals the approaching car forgotten and left to kick his heels until an obliging operator chooses to pick him up. His pressure of the button, indicating his desire to enter an ascending or a descending car, instantly registers the call on the controller and the elevator stops automatically without any action on the part of the operator, in fact, without his knowledge.

Human Errors Eliminated.

The elevators, which are built by the Otis Elevator Company, are equipped with what is known as signal control and with the micro-drive, or self-leveling feature, combined with multi-voltage control. The entire operation of the elevators, as far as stopping at floors is concerned, is accomplished automatically by the elevator controller, irrespective of the operator of the car. The car starts when he closes the gate and stops automatically at the first of the floors for which a button has been pressed.

As the elevator reaches the micro-zone the main operation is automatically cut off, the micro-drive brings the car exactly to the floor level, and the doors are opened automatically. Thus all "inching," which causes so much of the delay in the operation of elevators, is avoided. The type of control, the micro-drive feature and the multi-voltage operation with which the six new Standard Oil elevators are equipped, produce the greatest possible speed, the cars are started and slowed down with a degree of rapidity calculated not to disturb the comfort of the passengers.

"This improvement in elevator service," says a representative of the builders, "is another example of the strides made in the elevator industry. We keep just ahead of the height limit of buildings, so that whenever it becomes feasible to increase the height of business structures the elevator problem has already been solved, thus providing suitable transportation for buildings of any height with safety, comfort and speed."

The most important factor in the erection of buildings of great height is that of "adequate and suitable means of vertical transportation," in the opinion of Bassett Jones of Meyer, Strong & Jones, who, jointly with David Linquist, chief engineer of the elevator company, worked out the problem offered by the Standard Oil Building. Mr. Jones studies the question of getting people in and out of a skyscraper much as the president of a railroad studies the problems of transportation.

Saving Valuable Seconds.

"Reduction of the round trip time" is one of his solutions of the difficulties presented. With him seconds count. "There is no insuperable mechanical or safety reason why any limitation should be placed on velocity," he said. He does not see where there should be any arbitrary limit to the speed of an elevator. He has, as a matter of fact, been in a trial trip of one of the new Standard Oil cars when its speed reached the rate of 1,100 feet a minute.

"It takes time," said the economizer of seconds, "for a thought to make its way from the mind of an operator to his hand. And, too, his memory is not always accurate." Hence the automatically operated elevator.

Experiment has shown that no stops can be made accurately by car switch at high speeds. "Stops must be automatic, and so the time consumed by false stops made at ordinary velocities with manual car switch operation is eliminated. Such false stops ordinarily exceed 50 per cent. of the normal stops."

The next time saver is in the matter of opening and closing doors. Again the human element is removed. The operation which when performed by hand took at least four or five seconds has been reduced to two seconds for the "opening and closing cycle." Gates and doors are interlocked with the car operation and the leveling devices so that the gates and doors are opened automatically, and fully open when the car reaches the landing. The elevator can not leave the landing until both are closed and locked. More than 80 per cent. of accidents to passengers arise from the fact that elevators are not equipped with car gates and interlocks, in Mr. Jones' opinion.

If an operator's car is full, he can, by pressing a button, by-pass his signals to the elevator which is following him, and thus continue his route uninterrupted.

CHILDREN CROWD STREETS SATURDAY

Christmas Toys From Everywhere Make Their First Appearance in Stores.

REAL FAIRYLAND.

Fairyland has opened in the city, with Christmas at last definitely on the way. One knows that Christmas is coming, and is not far off, by the hundreds of children gathered round the store windows where toys are displayed for the first time.

For most folk, the sight of a light covering of snow on the ground last week stirred up the first thoughts of Christmas, but the children had them long ago, and many have already written their letters to Santa Claus.

Many weeks ago the stores also started their preparations for the Christmas season, and have been receiving, ever since last summer, shipments from all over the world. They just began on Saturday to put on their Christmas finery, and soon they will pass through this metamorphosis of tearing down and building up and appear in all their festal glory.

And the toy departments will be the most delightful of all. From the tiniest, shiniest, red-jacketed tin soldier to the biggest and most expensive mechanical teddy bear, all of the toys are destined to bring forth squeals and skrieks of joy from some youthful admirer.

England, France, Italy, China, United States, and Canada herself, have contributed to the supply of toys which are more varied and wonderful than they have ever been in any previous year. Even Germany has contributed a large quota, but it is noticed that the tin soldiers made in the militant country wear the red and blue of Britain and France rather than the field grey of the Fatherland soldiers.

Doll's Paradise.

There are dolls, too, of every nationality and every price, ranging from less than a dollar to figures close on to one hundred. The most expensive, and the prettiest, most talented and most 'chic' are the French dolls. They dance, pirouette, go through the most graceful movements and are gowned exquisitely.

The Italian dolls are made of felt and have a charm all their own, while some of their English sisters have faces fashioned of linen, which have the most human expression.

There are mama dolls of all sizes and kinds and these are mostly Canadian citizens, and hundreds of other kinds of dolls to delight the hearts of thousands of little girls on Christmas morning.

Boys, too, have been considered and will find their interest in the sphere of mechanical toys. For some rich little boy there is a real engine, and train of steel with all the accessories. It is run by real power, has real doors and windows, real plush seats and real electric lights.

France to Fore.

The performing animals have come from France, and bear as much resemblance to real ones as the real ones do to themselves. There is a bunny munching a piece of lettuce in just exactly the same way that a real bunny munches a piece of lettuce, a kangaroo who hops about on his long legs; and keeps his short ones tucked up in front; Bear-O, the bear, who waddles about with a clumsy gait, and the cat that walks by herself, waving her tail.

The Christmas rush in all the stores will afford employment for several weeks at least for man, who otherwise might go hungry and cold on Christmas Day. It is not the intention of the management of some of the large stores to take on as many school children and college students as they have in other years, since the rush provides an opportunity to temporarily alleviate the acuteness of the unemployment.

LAST MINUTE SHOTS.

By-election Campaign in West Hastings Will Wind Up To-night.

BELLEVILLE, Nov. 24.—(Canadian Press).—Last minute details of organization occupied two candidates and their supporters to-day, on eve of Federal bye-election in West Hastings riding, for seat made vacant by resignation of E. Guss. Porter, Conservative. Mr. Porter is running for re-election on opposition ticket and he is opposed by Charles Hanna on behalf of Government party.

There will be several wind up meetings in riding to night. The Prime Minister and Leader of Opposition have both addressed meetings in last few days and campaign which closes tonight is undoubtedly the hottest ever seen in this riding. Main issue is on the question of whether Mr. Porter was justified in bring on bye-election to seek approval of electors of his action in moving vote of censure in parliament on Minister of Labor, Hon. James Murdock, or whether he should have accepted report of privileges and elections committee of House, which exonerated Mr. Murdock.

"INDIAN SERVICE."

No Change in Programme of St. Mark's Church, New York.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—(Canadian Press). — With blue incense smoke spiralling from censors in either side of the pulpit of the Episcopal Church of St. Mark's in the Bouwerie, two Indians in native costumes intoned songs, prayers, dirges and other tribal rituels at the "Indian service" yesterday. Dr. Guthrie, at the close of the service, said he had received no word from Bishop Manning in regard to the ceremony, and that even if he had "received word expressing disapproval of the service, the programme would have gone on as scheduled just the same."

ANNVERSARY AT THE CATHEDRAL

Rev. Father Englert, of Hamilton, Preached Last Evening.

"The Lord indeed is in this place and I knew it not. For this is the house of God and the gate of heaven." This text from the 16th and 17th verses of the 28th chapter of Genesis constituted the text of the sermon preached in St. Peter's Cathedral last evening by Rev. Father Englert, of St. Anne's Parish, Hamilton, on the occasion of the commemoration of the first anniversary of the formal re-opening of the Cathedral. The big church was filled for the occasion, as also for the Pontifical High Mass celebrated in the morning by His Lordship the Bishop, assisted by honorary deacons, Rev. F. O'Sullivan of Toronto, president of the Catholic Truth Society, and Rev. Father Englert.

"The Divinity of the Church" was the subject of Father Englert's discourse last evening, which was based on the foregoing text. "Our holy church is not a political organization," said the reverend preacher, "politicians and governments have no reason to fear it. It is because so many have a wrong conception of the Church that they look upon her as an enemy of their policies. It was established to bring to us God's own personal message, to bring to us His own healing blood and to unite us with Him in the kingdom of heaven."

The visible qualities of the Church were pre-figured in God's own words for it, when He called it a "city," a "vine," and a "kingdom." Christ placed His church visibly before us, like a city on a hill. He chose twelve humble dock-laborers to launch a movement which was to conquer and transform the world and establish in it the virtues which had been thrown into the discard. These men are examples of the humble believer of to-day, the man who does not aim to satisfy himself by his own reason and studies, but presents to God a humble heart, praying that his faith will grow within him.

Just as the human element is within the church, so there is the Divine element, the presence of Jesus Christ, directing and sustaining and preserving it forever. "Behold, I am with you, even to the end of the world," said Christ, promising that He would send the Paraclete, the spirit of truth, to abide with it for evermore. The church is not merely a passive organization. God said: "I am the vine and you are the branch." Thus He is preoccupied with everyone of us. St. Paul said that we are the body of Christ. He is the Head, and just as the head of the material order directs and controls the body, so does this spiritual Head direct and control the spiritual body. In unseen and invisible ways, Christ is with us, sustaining and assisting us by His grace and by the redeeming sacraments.

"From the beginning of time, man offered a sacrifice to God. These sacrifices but pre-figured the one great sacrifice of all, the sacrifice of the Lamb on the Cross of Calvary. The men of old drifted away from God, so that the Prophet Malachias, the mouthpiece of the Creator, said, "I have no longer any pleasure in your sacrifices. But from the rising of the sun to the going down thereof My name is great among the Gentiles. In every place there is offered to Me a sacrifice, and in every place there is offered to Me a clean oblation." St. Paul said: "We have an altar upon which they may not eat who serve the Jewish tabernacles." This is our altar and this our sacrifice: the Blessed Eucharist through which the slain Lamb of Calvary pleads for us before the great throne of God. The Mass is no new sacrifice. It is but a continuation of the great sacrifice of Calvary, and when we kneel at Mass it is as if we were kneeling at the foot of the Cross where Our Saviour offered up His life for our redemption. Down through the ages the sacrifice has been offered to God, and the Mass, the continuation of Calvary, fulfills the ancient prophecy that calls Our Lord a priest forever. He is forever the great High Priest, offering eternally to God the sacrifice of His own precious blood, the Lamb slain on Calvary."

THE THIEF OF BAGDAD

BY ACHMED ABDULLAH

Once before, earlier in the day, she had communicated with the Mongols. For her soul was seared with hate against the Arabs, the Moslems, who had enslaved her, and there was in her the wish and hope that Cham Sheng, her countryman, might wed Zobeid, and, after the Caliph's death, bring the dominion of Bagdad under the Mongols' spurred heel.

A wish, incidentally, quite in keeping with that of Cham Sheng himself.

He was different, in every last characteristic, from the Prince of India and the Prince of Persia. There was about the latter, for all his ludicrous looks and sensuous living, a certain soft, ingenuous lovableness, and about the former a sweeping, godlike nobility. But the Mongol was of the earth earthy; his was an enormous ruthlessness of purpose, a cruel ambition, a stupendous, racial vigor and crunching strength. Time and again he had said to Wong K'ai, his confidential advisor, a man educated in the Palace of August and Happy Wisdom in Pekin's Tartar City, that he would take Bagdad—either by marrying the Princess or, should he fail in this, by an unhallowed trinity of intrigue, patience and force.

"Perhaps," Wong K'ai had said, "such is the will of the many blessed gods."

"It is mine own will, fool!" the other had sneered. "Mine own will—stronger than the will of all the many gods put together!"

When early in the morning Fount-in-the-Forest had visited the Mongol encampment, she had assured Wong K'ai that, a Mongol to the core of her, she would do all in her power to further the Mongol Prince's cause. Now here she was again, mingling with the retinue and presently, having reached Wong K'ai's side, whispered to him the secret of the rose tree and the fortune-teller's prophecy.

"These Arabs," she added contemptuously, "are superstitious. They believe in such portents."

"Ten thousand thanks!" replied Wong K'ai. "Exquisite and charming honors shall be thine when Cham Sheng shall plant the standard of the Five-Clawed Golden Dragon upon the walls of Bagdad!"

And, entering the Prince's palanquin, he brought to his master the slave girl's message.

This palanquin was an immense affair. Built on a marble platform, reached front and back by broad stairs and carried on the shoulders of a hundred red-faced warriors, it resembled a Chinese pagoda, surmounted by a peaked cupola. The walls of the pagoda were of malachite and jasper, carved into an inter-lacine scroll work of plum-blossoms and wind-swept reeds, while the cupola was of gold and inlaid with crystal, ivory, white and green jade, turmaline and agate, in a design of great, coiling dragons. The palanquin was surrounded by Tartar, Mongol, and Manchu horsemen, each riding under a flag painted with the device of his tribe or clan. There was here the banner of the White Tiger, the banner of the Red Tiger, of the Azure Dragon, of the Purple Light, of Sublime Union, and a hundred more; and, greater than all the other banners, carried by two gigantic, yellow-skinned priests, the banner of the Buddha of the Paradise of the West and the banner of the Buddha of the Light without Measure.

Thus the procession entered the grounds, while the Caliph's herald announced the princely visitor:

"Cham Sheng, Prince of the Mongols, King of Ho Sho, Khan of the Golden Horde, Khan of the Silver Horde . . . ."

"Heaven-Born!" cried Zemzem. "Look—look . . ."

"Oh!"

For the palanquin had stopped. Its front door was thrown wide open; and, slowly, majestically, his tall, lean form robed in crimson satin embroidered over the right shoulder with a five-clawed, golden dragon, a carved jade sceptre in his left hands Cham Sheng came down the step into the garden.

When Zobeid saw him she shuddered. His face was butter-yellow, with high cheekbones; and there was in his narrow-lidded, purple-black eyes the infinite, cruel, passionless look of one who has gazed too much on danger and death and desolation without ever feeling the pity and shame and sorrow of it.

"Oh!" sobbed Zobeid. "He chills my blood with fear!"

And she shook as if in an ague, while Fount-in-the-Forest changed shrill, triumphant laughter into a cough, and while a thin, ironic smile curling his bloodless lips, the Prince of the Mongols, as if aimlessly, negligently, with all his slow racial dignity, turned toward the rose tree.

"O Allah! Help me, All-Merciful Allah!" came Zobeid's heartbroken sob. "Please! Please! Do not permit him to touch the rose tree."

But prayers were forgotten, fear was forgotten the very next moment when, with the Caliph's herald announcing the arrival of yet another suitor, she looked toward the outer gate.

"Why . . . ." Zemzem made wondering comment—"I thought there were only three Princes coming to woo you! And here comes a fourth! Who might he be . . . ?"

"Who might he be?" echoed Fount-in-the-Forest, with angry suspicion.

"Who might he be?" echoed the curious crowd in the garden.

And the herald gave answer:

"Ahmen, Prince of the Isles and of the Seven Palaces!"

"By the Excellent Lord Buddha!" whispered Cham Sheng to his confidential clerk. "There is no such rank or title!"

And he turned away from the tree without touching it to stare at Ahmed, who rode toward the palace, superbly mounted on a stolen, snow-white stallion, superbly robed in stolen, gold-threaded brocade, superbly armed with stolen, jewelled scimitar and battle-ax, followed by Bird-of-Evil, perched like a monkey on a tiny, grey donkey, his finery only a shade less costly than Ahmed's. The latter rode his horse well, with a loose rein and long stirrups, swaying gracefully in the saddle. High in the air he carried his head, and when he came trotting beneath Zobeid's window, she smiled.

"Ah!" she said to Zemzem. "He rides like a Prince! He looks like a Prince! He is the Prince for me! Allah! Permit him to touch the rose tree—as he has already touched my heart!"

Fount-in-the-Forest stood by her mistress' side. She wondered, puzzled: who was this Prince of the Isles? Where had she seen him . . . ?

Down in the garden Wong K'ai was whispering to his master that, as to this new suitor's rank and titles, he would look into them presently; but in the meantime . . . "Please, O Great Dragon! Remember the fortune-teller's prophecy! Remember the Arab superstition! Whoever is first to touch the rose tree . . . ."

"Yes, yes!" replied Cham Sheng.

He stepped forward; and while, horror-struck, Zobeid watched, he raised a thin, yellow hand to pluck one of the flowers.

At which precise moment, up in the Seventh Hall of the Blessed, the Angel of the Scrolls, the Black-Winged Angel of Destiny, hearing Zobeid's silent prayers to Allah, decided to interfere. He interfered by ordering a tiny honey-bee that had been sucking at the rose's sugary heart to fly out suddenly with a whirring of brown-and-gold wings, to light on the Mongol Prince's hand before he could touch the blossom, to sting him painfully, and to cause him to recede a few steps. A moment later, perhaps to make assurance doubly sure, the Angel of the Scrolls ordered the same little honey-bee to fly from Cham Sheng's hand onto the back of Ahmed's horse. The horse became frightened. It bucked and reared, and before the Thief of Bagdad could pull down on the snaffle and gain control over his nervous mount, it catapulted him out of the saddle, shot him through the air in an audacious curve and deposited him in the very midst of the rose tree.

"By Allah!" she exclaimed. "Behold! He has touched the rose tree!"

"Touched it?" commented Zemzem, echoing her mistress' laughter. "Why—he has nearly crushed it!"

Ahmed accepted the accident with supreme unselconsciousness. Calmly he plucked one of the roses, stuck it in his waist shawl, and jumped lightly out of the tree and to the ground, not far from Cham Sheng, who spoke to him gliding, low words of bitter irony.

"How tragic it would have been, O great Prince of the Isles, if the horse had killed you! And—ah—ended your doubtless ancient and illustrious dynasty!"

"The Mongol pig suspects you," he whispered. "Hurry up, soul of my soul, and steal the Princess. Here!"—pressing a small crystal bottle into his hand. "This is the drug. And—here—take this bit of cloth. Sprinkle a few drops of the drug on it and . . . ."

"No, no!" interrupted the Thief of Bagdad. "I shall sprinkle the drug on the rose—the rose of destiny . . . ."

And he opened the bottle and saturated the crimson flower with the subtle Egyptian liquid.

CHAPTER IV.

Half an hour earlier, while the Prince of India was entering the palace grounds, Bird-of-Evil had asked a pert-eyed, golden-skinned slave girl how to reach the back entrance to the Princess Zobeid's apartment. He had employed methods peculiarly his own, combining bribery, flattery, and—in spite of his shrivelled, wizen outer man—open, rather riotous love making.

"Tell me, Rejoicer of Souls!" he had whispered to her. "For, when the ceremonies are over, I must see thee! Aye! I must! For thou art a bud to be worn in the turban of my heart! I would like to be thy lover, O Small, Soft Thing! I would like to crush thy lips with mine! Tell me the way, O Moon of my Delight!"

She had told him; and now he was following her instructions, taking Ahmed around the corner of the main garden path to a wall, topped by a parapet that surrounded a loggia and covered all the way up by a strong-stemmed, flowering vine.

"I shall wait below," he said. "If anybody approaches I shall whistle twice—like a crane. Up with you!"

So up went the Thief of Bagdad, using the vine like a rope ladder, reached the parapet, leaped over it, and found himself in the presence of Zobeid, who had heard the noise and, a strange premonition in her soul, had come on a run. They faced each other. He did not speak. Silently he offered her the drugged rose. She took it. She was about to inhale its perfume when, dropping her hand, she asked a low-voice question:

"Do you love me, Prince of the Isles?"

She stood there, without moving, her eyes starry, her lips parted; expectant she seemed, and triumphant and yet a little frightened. He came a step nearer. He sensed the magic of her beauty, her presence, with the blurred indistinctness of overwhelming tenderness.

"Yes—yes . . . ." he said—"I love you . . . ."

"How much do you love me, Prince of the Isles?"

"I love you—oh—with all of me! To hold you I would throw a noose around the far stars. I would give you all I have, all I am, all I ever shall be, and it would not be the thousandth part of my love for you."

"And I"—she whispered—"I love you!"

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

THE PETER SMITH CASE.

To the Editor of the Examiner,—

Dear Sir,—The Dreyfus case showed that no great nation can or will long permit injustice. It strikes at the very root of life itself. When, therefore, Peter Smith as the doors of the penitentiary close upon him, protests that he is being made a scapegoat investigation should be instituted by the Government at Toronto or other proper authority to find out what Peter Smith means.

Jutice demands that one still higher up than Peter Smith should be sternly called up to "explain," and Peter Smith should be brought up from Kingston as a witness. My belief and the belief of many is that since the rake-off swindle could not have been perpetrated without the knowledge of others, and as a matter of fact, as the evidence and as their own evidence shows, it was so perpetrated with the at least indirect knowledge of others, there was some "fund" that was to be provided for with the connivance of all concerned Peter Smith is getting justice, but others are not, and the Province of Ontario is not.

There is a widespread feeling that justice has not been done and we must have it done."Ruat Coelum."

MOVE TO ABOLISH FRENCH OCTROIS

PARIS, Nov. 21 (United Press).—Again the gates of Paris are threatened and this time they are liable to fall. Not by a foreign foe, as they have been threatened in history, but by progress and common-sense, are the celebrated portals being attacked. A campaign has been started to remove the "octroi," and if it is successful a picturesque and annoying heritage of the middle ages will disappear.

In the old days, when Paris was protected by a stone wall rather than an air fleet, the octrois were the gates and nobody could pass in or out without being examined. But sixteen-inch guns and automobiles have rendered stone walls as octrois alike ridiculous. As a matter of fact, the old wall has been completely torn down since the war, and only a few strips of it have been left standing as souvenirs. Yet the octrois, with their iron gates and tired functionaries, remain and no vehicle can pass without being checked.

What was the outskirts of Paris when the wall was built is now the residential district of the city. Beyond this circular boulevard lies a great part of the city and every day thousands of vehicles must pass these gates. The octroi of every car must stop, measure his gasoline and report it to the guard. He receives a slip of paper permitting him to pass, and must turn this in when he re-enters. This is due to the fact that tribute must be paid on goods entering the city. Gasoline is slightly cheaper outside than within, and that is why all motor vehicles are watched. It rarely do the guards check up on the declarations of drivers, but the tedious formality must be performed.

Like Central Park.

Octrois are situated [illegible] Boulogne, and the question is what a custom barrier in Central Park. Nobody has been able to explain why the octrois are maintained, and the only explanation offered is that they have always been there. Each has its staff of officials, and the question is asked, what would become of all these functionaries if the posts were removed. The present Government, however, has resolved to remove all unnecessary officials, and it may get the octrois in the near future.

One newspaper, campaigning for the abolition of the octrois, has made investigations and compiled some amusing figures. Last year 15,000,000 motor vehicles passed the city posts. It is estimated that each driver was forced to stop three minutes to measure his gasoline and get the little slip of paper. This means 45,000,000 minutes lost, or 750,000 hours, or eighty-six years. Taxes collected on goods during this period, which might just as well be levied at the markets, amounted to about a million and a half dollars. Figuring an eight-hour day, the newspaper points out that 93,730 working days were required to police the octrois, and the pay of these men amounted to almost half of the revenue collected.

Hard on Motorists.

These figures show how antiquated is the octroi system, but gives no hint of the inconvenience to motorists. Whatever the weather, or however congested the roads, these stupid formalities must be observed. The word "octroi" means city toll, and it is true that prices of foodstuffs are very slightly lower outside the gates. A housewife might pass the boundary with five bananas, but if she has six she is subject to tax. The system of putting a levy on all provisions entering the city, though quite unknown in America, prevails all over France, and [illegible] agitation is under way to substitute for it some more practical arrangement and to relieve a long suff[illegible]

"But the children don't like the food that is good for them," the neighbors would sometimes say to Mrs Mann of Anyto[illegible]n when the question of proper feeding arose.

Mrs. Mann would answer: "Well, why don't you train them to like it?"

Children can be spoiled in matters of eating just a little bit easier than they can be spoiled in any other way.

There are very few, [illegible] foods which are unpalatable if properly home-cooked, and getting the children in the habit of eating them is much the same sort of thing as getting them to do errands, or to go to school, or wash their faces or do any other thing that is habit.

The parent should take the child aside and explain to him that eating is more than a mere matter of "taste." The child should receive an education in the fact that eating for health is a mighty important thing and that, if left to do as he pleased, the child will suffer the consequences.

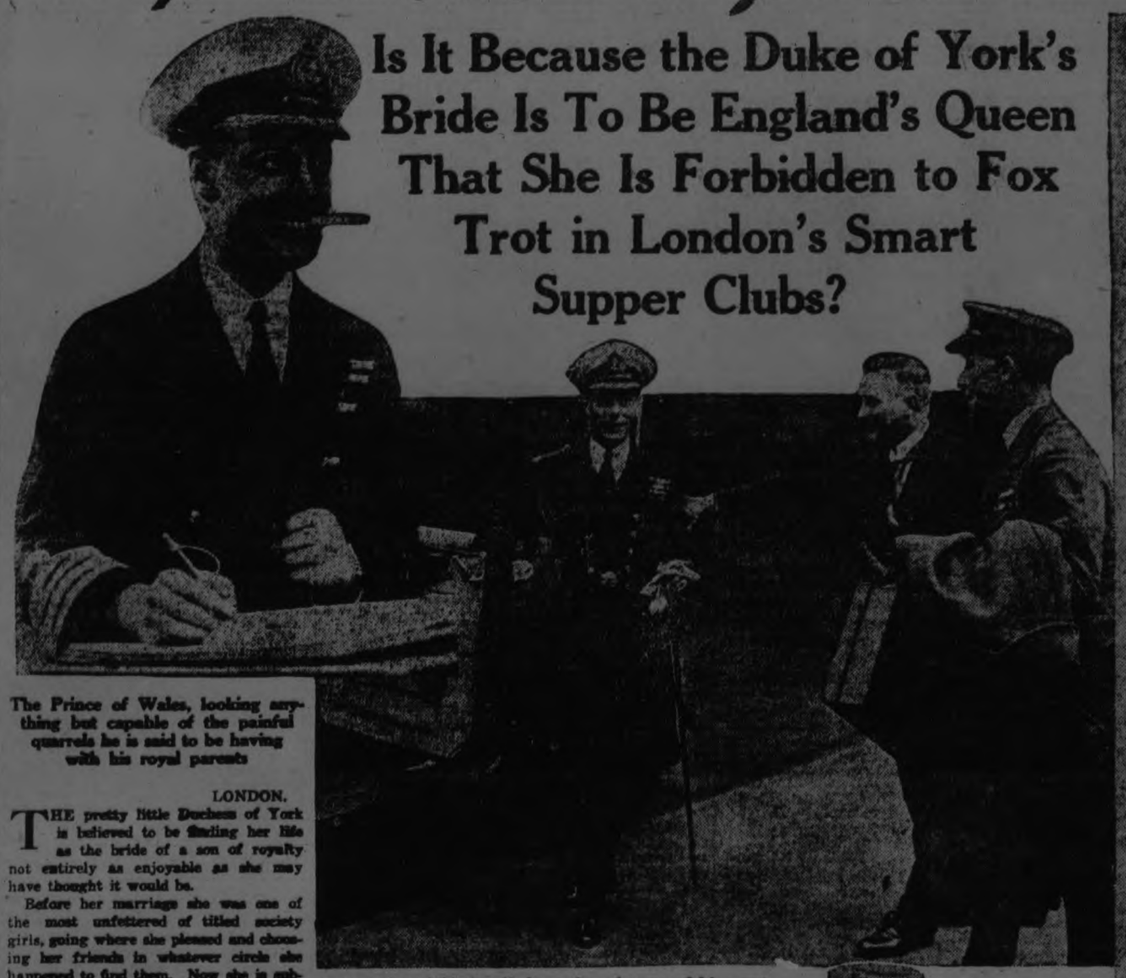
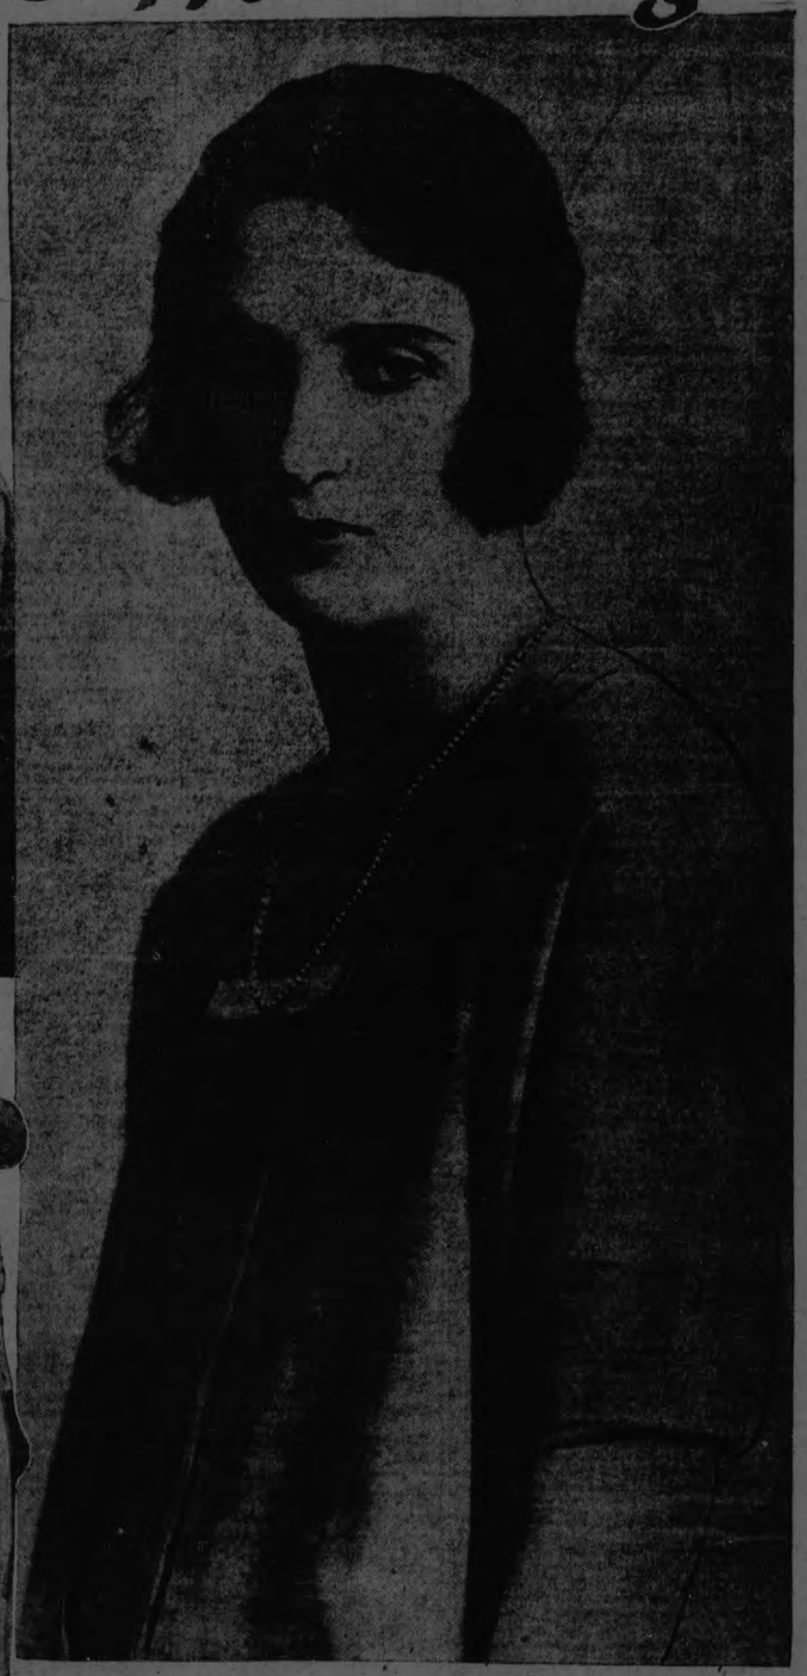
Is It Because the Duke of York's Bride Is To Be England's Queen That She Is Forbidden to Fox Trot in London's Smart Supper Clubs?



The Prince of Wales, looking anything but capable of the painful quarrels he is said to be having with his royal parents



The Duchess of York, who will, many believe, get the crown Queen Mary now wears to make up for the jazzy fox trots she is having to miss

LONDON.

THE pretty little Duchess of York is believed to be finding her life as the bride of a son of royalty not entirely as enjoyable as she may have thought it would be.

Before her marriage she was one of the most unfettered of titled society girls, going where she pleased and choosing her friends in whatever circle she happened to find them. Now she is subject to all the restrictions which court etiquette imposes on the wife of a member of the royal family, and to everybody's surprise and mystification her liberty is being curtailed in a great many ways which were never before thought necessary in the case of any one except the bride of the heir to the throne.

The latest blow to fall on the Duchess and one which must make her feel more than ever like a bird in a gilded cage is the royal ban forbidding her to dance in London's supper clubs or any other public places.

No more can she slip into the Embassy or one of the other fashionable clubs after the theater for an hour or two of foxtrotting. From now on the dancing of which she is so fond must be confined to ballrooms where she will be certain to meet only men and women who enjoy royal approval.

No other restriction could be less pleasant than this for the little Duchess to endure. Dancing is one of her favorite amusements and one in which she is extraordinarily accomplished. Her foxtrotting has been so much admired and she was seen so frequently at the smart London dance clubs that she was fast becoming known as the dancing Duchess.

All this is a thing of the past since King George and Queen Mary made known to their daughter-in-law their decision that she should reserve her indulgence in dancing for private functions and never, never again be seen on the floor of a public ballroom.

Why should this new and irksome restriction be added to all the others which hedge the once lightly tripping feet of the former Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon?

It cannot be because the Embassy and the other clubs where the Duchess was seen so frequently both before and after her marriage are not perfectly proper places. They are still considered quite good enough for the Prince of Wales and his younger brothers and other members of the royal family.

Neither can it be because the Duchess's personal conduct is ever anything but decorous. She is a young woman of high spirits, but they have a very conservative limit over which she never permits them to bubble. In her jazziest moments on the dance floor she has never been known to forget that she is a Duchess and the wife of a King's son.

What the gossips think, and will persist in thinking until there comes a flat royal denial, is that the barring of the Duchess of York from the dance clubs is only one more proof of the intention of the Prince of Wales to renounce his succession to the throne and let his younger brother, the Duke of York, inherit the crown.

Such an intention as this would give the King and Queen the best of excuses for the action they have taken. Almost everybody will agree that fox trotting in a London dance club is hardly the thing for a young woman who is expected in a few years to assume the dignities and responsibilities of England's Queen.

Of course, the political wiseacres insist it is the height of absurdity to think that the Prince of Wales has any idea of renouncing the succession, or his parents of permitting such a thing. But all their arguments cannot upset the theories of the gossips or stop their busily buzzing tongues.

If the Duchess of York is not being groomed for Queen Mary's place then why should it have been thought necessary to stop the dancing from which she was getting so much perfectly innocent enjoyment? Nobody seems able to answer this question, and so there you are!

The Duchess is too loyal an Englishwoman, too devoted a daughter-in-law, to question the wisdom of the royal decision, but it is believed that it must be causing her many painful regrets. Probably she would rather cut down on her daily allowance of tea than be forbidden to dance whenever and wherever she sees fit.

Dancing at strictly private affairs is all very nice in its way, but somehow it lacks the thrill which the smart dance clubs give their guests. The Duchess of York is said to have remarked frequently that she never enjoyed any other fox trot quite as well as those she had at the Embassy.

The gloom the Duchess is believed to feel over the fact that she no longer can enjoy this fun is reflected with no pretence at concealment at the Embassy and other clubs whose reputations her visits did so much to enhance. It will be a long time before they have another titled patron who adds to their dance floors anything like the charm and distinction that the former Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon did.

Particularly desolate over the royal ban on the Duchess's dancing is Luigi, the presiding genius at the Embassy and the man who spared no pains to make her visits there enjoyable and with nothing to mar either her pleasure or the dignity of her position.

Of course, the visits of such a personage as the Duchess of York to the Embassy were planned some time in advance and elaborate arrangements had to be made for them. A special table in a not too conspicuous location and a special entrance were provided for her and her party.

Any undesirable guests had to be weeded out for that particular evening. To those who were honored by being permitted to remain delicate hints had to be made as to the proper way to behave in the presence of royalty. It was insisted that everybody should be dancing when the members of the royal party entered and that only surreptitious glances should be taken at them.

The Duchess of York was an occasional visitor to the Embassy and other smart supper clubs long before the Duke of York fell in love with her. When her betrothal was announced it was feared that her visits might cease, but to the great delight of the management and patrons of the clubs she continued to come more frequently than ever with her fiancé.

The same fears were entertained after her marriage, but they were happily dispelled one night, when Luigi received word that the Duke of York and his bride would drop in at the Embassy after the theater.

This, however, proved the beginning of the end. Before the royal newlyweds had visited the supper clubs many times more came the royal ban forbidding the Duchess to enjoy herself in this way. Perhaps her graceful and spirited fox trotting will never again be seen by the public, not even by that very limited section of it which can find its way into a smart supper club.

The putting of shackles on the Duchess's dancing feet has given new strength to the rumors of the discord that prevails in the royal family over the Prince of Wales's long-continued bachelorhood and his reluctance to ascend the throne when the time comes.

The Duke of York, all dressed up in one of his most imposing uniforms and on his way to an important state function

His refusal to fall in love with any of the innumerable charming brides who have been picked out for him is a source of great disappointment to his parents. They regard it as nothing less than a sacred duty for him to marry and provide another heir to the throne.

It has long been whispered that the Prince of Wales and the King, his father, do not get along at all well, and that there is almost as little harmony between the Prince and his mother. The Duke of York is the "good boy" of the family, and is now as always the parents' favorite.

Really painful quarrels between the Prince and his parents are said to have become much more frequent since the marriage of Princess Mary, who served with considerable success as the family peacemaker as long as she remained in the household.

But all this wrangling seems to have no effect on the Prince's bachelorhood. He goes his merry way apparently not in the least disturbed at the grief he is causing his parents by remaining single. He has many very good women friends, several already married to other men, but nothing more. The frequent rumors of his being involved in secret romances with stage beauties are believed to have no foundation.

Many think that the only romance of the Prince of Wales's life up to date was the one that seemed on the point of ending in his engagement to marry Grand Duchess Tatiana, the most beautiful of the Czar's daughters. They met during one of her visits to England and there was every indication that they were very much in love.

But poor Tatiana met a miserable death in the cellar of a lonely Siberian house when the Bolshevists cruelly wiped out the entire Russian royal family in a welter of blood. The Prince's intimates think the tragedy left a wound in his heart which has never healed, and that this explains his disinclination for marriage.

Every day the belief is growing that the Prince may never marry at all, or, if he does, that his bride will be an American girl. In the latter event he would undoubtedly have to resign his heirship to the throne.

Those who think he is jolly well bored with the official fuss and feathers involved in being Prince of Wales and would be glad to escape the still more onerous duties that would fall on him as King regard it as very significant that he has been heard to refer to his sister-in-law, the Duchess of York, as "Queen Elizabeth."

The Prince of Wales and the Duke of York are about as unlike as two brothers possibly could be. Of course, the Duke enjoys nothing like the great popular favor the Prince has, but as he becomes better known he becomes better and better liked.

The Duke's marriage has done a great deal to increase his popularity. His wife, very quietly reared by her conservative Scottish family, was comparatively little known before her marriage, but now she is fast becoming one of the public's idols. Her winsome girlish beauty and democratic ways are winning her friends wherever she goes.

If England cannot have its beloved Prince of Wales for its next King it will be very well satisfied indeed with his brother, the Duke of York. And it probably knows of no woman it would feel prouder to hail as Queen than the Duke's charming young wife.

It would be interesting to know what the little Duchess thinks of the royal future which many believe to be in store for her. Does she regard the glory of wearing a royal crown adequate compensation for the fun she is missing through being forbidden to fox trot in public?

PETERBORO WON IN 10 MINUTES OVERTIME

(By F. D. C.)

After ten minutes overtime Peterboro Collegiate vanquished the Humberside Collegiate twelve of Toronto in the O.R.F.U. Interscholastic sudden death semi-final game at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon by 7 points to 6, scoring the winning point on a kick to the dead line after four minutes of extra time had elapsed. The teams were tied with six points each when the hour's play ended and the officials ordered two overtime periods of five minutes each to decide the issue.

The victory draws Peterboro with Hamilton Collegiate Institute, last year's champions, in the finals for O.R.F.U. Interscholastic championship, the winers of this clash to meet the Western Ontario Secondary Schools Association's title holders for the provincial honours.

Saturday's game, witnessed by the largest crowds in years, was a tensely fought and exciting battle but without seeking to rob the Toronto students of any of the credit that is rightly theirs for their determined effort, it is the simple truth that the Peterboro margin of victory might quite easily have been larger—in fact there should have been no need of extra time to decide the winner.

Not only were five of Toronto's points the result of a fumble that enabled Kirpatrick, Humberside half back, to gallop half the length of the field unmolested for an easy touchdown but the record of the game shows that not once during the struggle was Humberside successful in gaining yards by end runs or line plunges. The visitors were unable to make the least headway through or around the Peterboro line and with the exception of one gain on a successful Parks to Kirpatrick onside kick Humberside failed to make yards in the seventy minutes play.

Petes Gained Often.

On the other hand Coach Brown's outfit repeatedly tore through or around the Humberside line for their yards, making half a dozen long marches down the field to within striking distance only to have something go wrong at the critical moment. They were not handling the ball with their usual accuracy, doubtless due to its greasy condition and fumbles or bad passes cropped up at moments when a score seemed certain.

The net result was that although Humberside were stopped dead in their tracks on their line plays and Peterboro on the other hand made frequent gains, the mistakes a close range to Humberside's line coupled with the fine catching and running of Parks and Kirpatrick and the former's long accurate punting kept the vistors in the game and made the final score much closer than might have been expected.

This clever little pair deserve the thanks of their team for the stand made by the visitors for P.C.I. would undoubtedly have won going away had it not been for the brilliant work of the quarterback and running half of Humberside.

Along the line the honors all went to Peterboro. The local wings were invincible on defence, breaking up extension runs and stopping line plungers with a crash while on the attack they repeatedly opened wide gaps for the ball carrier to tear through. Humberside's forwards were badly outplayed, so badly indeed that it seems a miracle that the Petes did not have a longer lead when it was all over.

Got All P.C.I's Point.

Bookhout was responsible for all Peterboro's points, going 40-yards for a touchdown and kicking two singles, in addition which he made numerous gains through the line, the visitors finding him a tough bird to handle. His kicking however, was not up to his Kingston standard, due in some degree to bad passing and early in the game especially he was outbooted by Parks. Cole did some nice catching and Pogue, although he had the misfortune to drop one punt that cost a touchdown, caught nicely throughout the battle.

Up on the line Outram and Rye stood out as ground gainers while the tackling of the former and of Wood, Henry and Cheu was decidedly effective. Outram hurled through for many gains during the afternoon and Rye hit the line with his usual dash. The defensive and offensive work of the middles and inside wings, Rye Ebbs. Killaly, Craw and Neal is best revealed in the record of the teams so far as gains through the line are concerned.

Parks Starred.

For Humberside Parks and Kirkpatrick carried off most of the laurels. The little quarter did practically all the kicking for his team and booted the goal far and accurately while his catching was of senior calibre. Parks played ball with the McCormick Juveniles against the Maple Leafs a few weeks ago and is certainly a street footballer. It was the irony of fate that after saving the game for Humberside in the last few seconds of the regular period he should have his only fumble of the day in the overtime play result in Peterboro scoring the winning point.

Kirpatrick caught splendidly and showed a fine turn of speed getting the visitor's touchdown and averting a score by a brilliant run from behind his own line.

Barton, the flying wing, was always effective and Dunn at outside turned in some nice tackling. The others along the line were not prominent.

The conditions overhead were satisfactory but the night's rain left the field heavy and greasy, especially at the north end of the gridiron. Under the circumstances the teams played good football and the game was one of the most exciting in years.

The line up:

Middle wings—Rye, Ebbs.
Outside wings—Wood, Henry.
Subs—Fraser, Neal, Amys, Martyn, Goheen, Morrison.
Referee—Sweeney Davis, Toronto.
Umpire—Ernie Broderick, Toronto.

First Quarter.

Humberside kicked off, and the first line up showed Peterboro's superiority on the line, the local students gaining yards on two plays. They were well on their way again when Bookhout dropped the ball in a plunge and the visitors recovered at Peterboro's 35-yard line. The Petes held and Parks kicked over the line to Pogue who ran the ball out five yards. After short gains on plunges Bookhout kicked into his own line and Humberside got possession twenty-yards out. Parks tried to drop a goal and got a rouge out of the effort. Humberside 1. Peterboro 0.

Soon after the ball had been put in play again the Petes lost possession on a fumble and Parks again attempted a field goal. The kick was low and Pogue made a nice catch and ran the ball outside.

Then P.C.I. started a procession down the field. Rye and Pogue made yards on two plays, Cheu tore through for five and Cole for, ten. Outram added fifteen more on a fine dash and Bookhout crashed for nine. An extension run, however saw Cole nailed for a loss and P.C.I. finally had to kick losing possesion of the ball. The continued to force the play, however, and looked certain to tie the score when Pogue kicked over the line on an onside kick play but Kirpatrick made a beautiful run from behind his line to Humberside's quarter line.

Early in the second period P.C.I. started another offensive and smashing gains by Outram, Rye, Cole, Bookhout and Pogue carried the ball almost to Humberside's goal line. The visitor's defence suffered, however, and P.C.I. were held for downs, losing the ball two feet out and Parks kicked out of danger for the time being.

P.C.I. kept up the pressure, however, and Bookhout punted for a rouge from the thirty-yard line, tieing the score.

Humberside could not gain through the line and were forced to kick and the Petes launched another offensive that culminated in Bookhout's feature play of the day. With the Petes in posession 40-yards out he shot through a hole in Humberside's right wing, crashed through the secondary defence and although tackled just outside the line rolled tackler and ball over the chalk line for a touchdown which Killaly failed to convert. Peterboro C.I. 6, Humberside 1.

The Second Half.

Peterboro thus started the third period with a five point lead but it soon disappeared. Humberside kicked off but Peterboro forced the play and the visitors were on the defensiv until Pogue failed to make a running catch of Park's punt at centre and Kirpatrick grabbing the ball sped 50-yards for touch down, tieing the score. The Humberside half had a clear field and broke so fast that he was not even chased. Peterboro C.I. 6, Humberside 6.

Fortunetly for P.C.I. the attempt to convert failed.

The break had a stimulating effect upon Humberside's morale and for the next few minutes their line threw back Peterboro's plunges until an end run by Bookhout carried the play to the visitor's 30-yard line. Then P.C.I. decided to kick for a point. Cole who took the punt on this occasion got lots of distance into his effort but the ball went into touch five yards out and Humberside were saved for the time being.

There was no scoring in the fourth period despite the fact that P.C.I. had the ball in Humberside territory the whole fifteen minutes. The attack, however, failed when close to scoring zone and on one occasion when a kick to the deadline would have been easy the Petes were held for downs and had to turn over the ball to Humberside, Parks' kick transferring play back to centre. In the last few minutes P.C.I. started another march and when Bookhout kicked over the line from 35-yards out, a rouge seemed certain. Parks, however, showed football gray matter by returning the kick from behind his own line as the P.C.I wings swarmed in on him, saving the game for the time being as time was up immediately afterward.

The Overtime.

Humberside kicked off when the overtime period started and the Petes made yards twice in succession carrying the play to centre. There the visitors made a stand and Bookhout kicked on the third down. Then came the break that meant victory, for Parks trying to make the catch near the touchline made his first fumble of the day, the ball rolling into touch and giving Peterboro possession 25-yards out. They took no chances this time and on the first down, Bookhout booted far over the dead line for the winning point.

It was just a case of holding the lead for the six minutes that remained and the Petes succeeded, although the visitors fought until the final whistle. A nice run by Kirkpatrick gave them a chance to force the play and when Bookhout kicked into his own line at Peterboro's 45-yard line they had an opportunity. McIntyre undertook to kick for a point but his long bounding punt was snapped up by Cole who ran it out fifteen yards, relieving the situation. A little later there was a wild scramble after a short kick by Parks, Humberside gaining possession 25-yards out but one of the visitors was offside on the play and the Petes were given possession at their own 45-yard line. The game ended shortly afterward.

QUAKER OATS AND THE THISTLE DRAW

All the Goals Were Scored in the Second Half of Game.

Two goals apiece was the result of the exhibition game between the Quaker Oats and the Thistle on Saturday afternoon at King Edward Park. Many new players were on view as is always the case when the soccer season terminates with a friendly tussle.

First Half.

Two good teams lined up for the game. The Quaker's forwards were more aggressive on the opening. They repeatedly carried the ball into the Thistle territory where Warde and Rae frustrated their attacks. Then the Thistle forwards retaliated to find Bain in unbeatable mood. Logan brothers on the right wing introduced the close-passing tactics which was worth watching while McPhail never gave them much latitude. Exchanges were even, thereafter, although the Quakers should have had a two-goal lead when twice in succession Mitchell rattled the goal posts with fast drives. There was no scoring in the first half.

Second Half.

On resuming Richmond resumed playing after being injured in the first half but his stay was not long because Blowers dropped into the vacant position. From a cross from the right wing Al Williams headed past Bain. A few minutes later, his brother Tom equalized for the Quakers. This was followed up by Mitchell with a stinging shot past Curtis. Play run from end to end until Dawson forced the play up against Quaker's defence and evened up the score. Quakers 2, Thistle 2.

STORM ON SUPERIOR.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., Nov. 24.—A heavy southwest gale was blowing across the upper end of Lake Superior Saturday, forcing ships to take shelter in Thunder Bay and in the lee of Friendly Islands. Storm signals were raised Friday afternoon cautioning mariners to beware of a blow. The weather is yet unsettled and few ships have ventured out into the open lake since Friday.

GRANGE BEST SCORER

Illinois Rugby Star Finished Season With 13 Touchdowns.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—Illinois finished the 1924 conference football season with three men among the first ten scorers of the Big Ten, Red Grange, the touchdown king leading all the rest. Gallivan was fourth and Britton, conference champion point-kicker, ninth.

Grange won the individual scoring leadership despite his inability to get into Saturday's game with Ohio. He was injured a week ago in the Minnesota contest. He played throughout the four periods only twice this season.

JOHNSON'S PLAN FALLS THROUGH

Abandons Purchase of Oakland Club and $5,000 Deposit is Returned.

SUPPORT FAILED

OAKLAND, Calif., Nov. 24.—Plans of Walter Johnson, pitching ace of Washington American League baseball club, and George M. Weiss owner of the New Haven club of the Eastern League, to purchase the Oakland Coast League Club have been abandoned it is announced here

Johnson and Weiss failed to make their second payment of $25,000 on the club, which was due Saturday and the deal was called off. They paid $5,000 as an initial payment last Monday but stockholders at the Oakland Club last night voted to return this sum to Johnson and Weiss.

The two eastern baseball men, who were to have paid a total of $350,000 for the Oakland Club, intimated that men upon whom they had counted for backing had failed to support them and they were unable to finance the deal.

Johnson and Weiss had been so sure of the success of their venture that they had made plans for rebuilding the local park and for obtaining players from major league clubs.

Almost as soon as the failure of the deal was announced speculation was begun in local baseball circles as to Johnson's future.

Joe Engel, scout for the Washington Club, is at Johnson's home in Reno on a hunting trip and it is reported that he has been authorized to offer Johnson a three year contract with a total compensation of $90,000.

It also is reported that there is a movement on foot in St. Paul to collect a fund by popular subscription with which to purchase the controlling interest in the St. Paul American Association Club and present it to Johnson.

St. Paul for Sale

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 24.—Negotiations are under way for the sale of the St. Paul American Association baseball team, it is announced by John W. Norton, owner. Three different groups are bidding for the Saints franchise.

The names of the parties seeking the St. Paul Club were not revealed by Mr. Norton. It is expected that the deal will be completed some time next week.

The Saints won the American Association pennant this year and then defeated Baltimore of the International League in the "junior world series".

NOTRE DAME'S HONORS

Finished Big Season Without a Loss—Defeated All Opponents.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—(Canadian Press).—The Big Ten conference championship went to Chicago on conclusion of the conference football season Saturday, but midwest honors went to Notre Dame, not a member of the conference. While Chicago's triumph depended on a number of tie games, three of which she played with her strongest conference rivals, Notre Dame playing east, west and south games defeated everything she came across.

The champions defeated Washington 6 to 0, while Notre Dame was playing its toughest game of the season to win from Northwestern, 13 to 6. In the latter game the passing of Notre Dame's famous backfield was interrupted, Saturday generally being a poor day for stars.

"Red" Grange, ground-gaining world beater of Illinois, was absent from the line-up of his team on account of injuries received in a game the previous week, and the victory of the Illinois over Ohio State, 7 to 0, was laid to the account of brute strength.

QUEENS SCORED EARLY IN GAME WITH HAMILTON

WERE OUTPLAYED

Leadley and Batstone Again Stood Out as Great Pair of Halves.

VARSITY STADIUM Nov. 24.—Queen's University, the present Canadian champions, decisively demonstrated their superiority over Hamilton Tigers when they defeated the Big Four champions by 11 to 1 before a crowd of 17,000 spectators on Saturday. Rain fell intermittently during the game, but it was only a light shower, and did not affect the play.

The college champions were always masters of the situation, scoring two field goals in the first five minutes of play and holding their advantage to the end. They were the aggressors for the greater portion of the game. The Tigers made their best showing in the second period when they plunged for their yard four times in succession, and put them in a position to score their only point. The score by periods tells the tale. It was as follows:

Tigers	0	1	0	0	1
Queen's	7	0	4	0	11

Peerless "Pep."

The outstanding stor of the game was "Pep" Leadley, the Queen's captain. Tis spectacular running and splendid kicking were the prime factors in Queen's great victory. Leadley scored all the points made by the team, having three field goals to his credit, and forcing two rouges on other kicks. Batstone his side partner was not in the spotlight as often but played his usual brilliant game.

In the absence of "Red" McKelvey, who was unable to play because of injuries, Roy Reynolds rose to great heights and did some line plunging extraordinary. He did the best work of any man on the field in this respect.

The Tigers played well, but were outclassed and outplayed, and outside of the second period, never had a chance to win Evans, Gibb and Cox pleyed exceptionally well, but the rest of the team was not there.

Queen's got a drop on Tigers right at th start of the game when they recovered their own kick-off and threw Hamilton back on the defensive.

Tigers Caught Asleep.

This play caught Tigers asleep, as it did Varsity at Kingston, and paved the way for a quick score by the tri-color. Leadley made the kick-off, a short kick to the grandstand side. A Queen's ball. Before the Tigers got settled down Reynolds broke through their line and ran to within 20 yards of the Hamilton goal line before being dragged down. Leadley ,alert for a quick score, dropped a goal from the field. He got another field goal a minute later when Tigers fumbled at their own 15-yard line. Leadley just missed another attempt for a field goal, but got a single point out of it. That was the only scoring in the first period.

Tigers had the advantage of the wind in the second period, but the only score they could make was a single point. Batstone being forced to rouge when Gibb failed at a field goal. This followed a succession of line plunges in which Tigers gained their yards four times in succession and looked to be headed for a touchdown. When they got within 15 yards of the Queen's goal line they faltered and were forced to kick for the solitary score. The feature of this period was the defensive play of Leadley and Batson when pressed by Tigers. It saved Queen's some points.

Leadley Again.

Tigers started an aggressive in the third period, but got nowhere, A "no-yard" penalty, a couple of fumbles and Gibb's blocked kick put Queen's in a scoring position and Leadley's educated toe did the rest, first kicking a single point and then following it up with another beautiful field goal. Tigers were under pressure the most of this period and did well to hold the score down. In addition to his splendid kicking, Leadley made one of the feature runs of the day, a 40-yard dash after picking up a hounding ball baseball fashion, while on the run.

In the last period even against the wind. Queen's maintained a decided advantage and had the play in Tiger territory all the time. As a matter of fact the ball did not go beyond centre, and Tigers were fighting for their lives to avert a further score. In this defensive work Quinn and Ken Walker played brilliantly, running out punts time and again when a score for Queen's seemed certain. Leadley tried hard to score against the wind, and kicked splendidly but was unable to add to his total.

FORT WILLIAM HAS 22,220.

FORT WILLIAM, Nov. 24.—The assessment commissioner's statistics of the population of Fort William, made public Saturday, states that the population is now 22,220, an increase of 1,027 over that of last year. 1,200 names will appear on the roll.

FIRST DIVISION FIGHT IS CLOSE

Only Five Points Separate First Fifteen Teams—Six Draws Saturday.

SOME OF FEATURES

LONDON, Nov. 24.—(Canadian Press Cable).—Saturday was a day of comparative calm in English foot ball, and no outstanding results unsettled the first division of the league

Out of the eleven games played, six resulted in draws, four home teams acquired full points while one visiting combination came out with the honors. This latter club was Bolton Wanderers who emerged victorious with a two-goal score in their contest with Blackburn Rovers.

In the metropolitan encounters, that between Arsenal and Sunderland was remarkable for the frequency with which Buchan of Sunderland was penalized. Not a single goal was shot by either club, while it can be said that Buchan has rarely played a worse game.

The feature of the city was that between the two London teams, West Ham and the 'Spurs, a game which also resulted in a draw.

Watson's goal for the Hammers was a real gem. The two 'Spur defenders blocked each other and Watson cut through them a step or two then shot at thirty yards range. The 'Spur defender was left helpless.

Newcastle's Victory

Newcastle United enjoyed a rare victory at the expense of Birmingham when they sent these Midland aspirants down to the tune of four goals to nothing. The Tynesiders played magnificent football and were altogether too good for Birmingham. A splendid shot by Neil Harris put the "Magpies" in front after thirteen minutes of play and this same player added two more after the teams changed ends. Gowan added the fourth. Howcroft, the referee was knocked out by a blow from the ball in the first half, but recovered later and resumed command of the match after the interval.

Everton succubed badly to Aston Villa on the former's ground.

The first-named club have obtained the transfer of J. Broad, the Sittingbourne centre, formerly with Stoke for a fee that is understood to be in the neighborhood of $1500 sterling

Huddersfield Drops

In the feature game of Saturday, Notts County were able to maintain their leadership of the league by drawing with Huddersfield Town, thus demonstrating that their position at the head of the table has been won by sheer merit. The draw was the means of sending Hudders field down the table in which they now occupy seventh place.

The battle for league honors continues close, as may be gathered from the fact that only five points separates first fifteen teams out of the twenty-two forming the organization. Notts County are followed by Birmingham.

In the second division, Derby County again snatched leadership from Manchester United when the former gathered in full points from Stockport County, while Manchester were able only to divide the aggregate with Blackpool.

CHURCH LEAGUE—Y.M.C.A.

St. John's, by taking three games in a spectacular fashion from St. Luke's on Tuesday night, in the Church League, at the Y.M.C.A. took the lead in the first series in this League. All Saints by dropping three to Murray street, lost their chance for the title, while St. Luke's who had been leading the league, by dropping three, moved back into the third place. Murray Street, by their strong finish, eliminated All Saints, who were strong contenders for the title.

The second half of the first series of the league promises to be close, as all five teams are very evenly matched, while St. Paul's who have taken the place of St. Andrew's is the dark horse, as they have some promising bowlers lined up.

PACIFIC COAST RINGS DRAW BOXERS FROM ALL CORNERS OF THE EARTH

By HENRY L. FARRELL

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—(United Press).—Restoration of boxing in California by the passage of an amendment making the sport legal after a long period of "four-round" amusement is sure to make conditions better for the boxer but it may play havoc with the sport in the East.

That is nothing to complain about, however. California has an inherent right to the big boxing that has been confined to the east coast since the boxers ruined their own business and brought about the era of four-round bouts on the coast.

Perhaps it is all for the best, however, as the East seems to be tired of boxing and it is reasonable to assume that California will be interested in seeing some of the big bouts that failed to get a tumble in the East.

There are several reasons for the slump of interest in boxing around New York. Tex Rickard, who has been hard hit by the slack trade, blames "fighters who won't fight" for the business depression. Perhaps the failure of Rickard and other promoters to arrange attractive matches caused the New York sportsmen to turn to other sports for their amusement.

One fine match was arranged for last summer and it fell through. It was one of those "naturals" that needed no ballyhoo or exploiting to put over but it didn't go over. It was the Walker-Leonard match for the welterweight championship. Leonard was generally accused of running out of the match on the pretext of a broken hand, but the wise boys around Broadway claim that the ticket sale was a bust and that some other reason had to be found to call off the fight. The promoters hardly could have added the burden of commercialism handicapping the sport by admitting that they couldn't make enough money out of the card.

Things have happened since then that would indicate a desire on the part of the principals to create more interest in the contest. Walker and Leonard have been saying all kinds of nasty things about each other and they are reported to have been stopped by friends from engaging in a free-for-all on Broadway when they met one night recently.

It is still a natural match and the criticism that Leonard has seen fit to accept without protest is not hurting future prospects for the match. As Leo Flynn and Jimmy Johnston an astute manager and a smart promoter, ay:

"I don't care what you say about me as long as you say something and keep in print."

Walker is in very bad with the New York Boxing Commission, for no good reason, and Leonard is causing the commissioners to lose patience with him.

Perhaps this match can be arranged by California promoters. Leonard says he is going to the coast this winter and that he will accept any good matches he can get Walker will be forced to go to the coast if the California commission decides to have no working agreement with the New York commission and by the other commissions that work in agreement with the New York body.

New Jersey pulled out of the co-operative agreement with New York and the California commission would be unwise to enter into any kind of a working plan with New York or any other state.

California is in a position to be independent. It is a promising field that does not have to look upon New York as a great rival and it is in a position where it needs no protection from New York.

California has a chance to get the pick of all boxers in the game by permitting the boxers who are under suspension in New York the freedom of its territory. The offenses for which most of the boxers have been suspended in New York were of more of a technical than criminal nature. The suspended boxers certainly can't be regarded as escaped convicts or country-jumpers and the morale and safety of California hardly could be endangered by their presence.

While the return of California to the list of big boxing states hurt the game in New York, it has the possibility of working to the benefit of the sport in other states which have been impoverished since New York took a monopoly of the sport.

The boxing law in California will put a lot of boxers on the road. They will be travelling to the Pacific coast in large numbers and smart managers will be satisfied to accept engagements on the transcontinental trip if they can pick up purses that would pay their expenses and contribute to a little profit on the side.

On the other hand, the business in New York may be improved because with a serious rival, the New York commission will have a less important field with a consequent loss of the natural authority that it has sought to obtain.

The New York commission, as it is now constituted, deserves a lot of credit for a serious attempt to elevate and regulate a game that hasn't flourished more in the past because it didn't have the supervision that the New York body has sought to exercise.

The New York commission has a thankless job because it has so many ten-cent gallery seats to shout: "You're wrong" every time it takes a step. The commissioners are all substantial business men and they get no salary for the time they spend at extra duties and no satisfaction for the abuse which is sometimes heaped upon them.

In trying to regulate the sport in New York, the commission has had its biggest task in getting champions to fight. It has insisted that the New York rule requiring a champion to defend his title once in every six months be observed by the champions who want to fight under the New York rules.

The commission made a concession that the champions would not have to fight in New York as long as they fought in a decision bout but this practically closed other fields because New Jersey, which is the only other stater in which a big championship fight can be staged at a profit does not permit decision bouts.

With a decision law, California may help the New York commission, although it may take some big bouts from the cities under the jurisdiction of the New York body. If inactive champions are told that they can defend their titles in California and remain in the good graces of New York, it is quite reasonable to figure that some of them will go to California and return to New York for some contests.

Without considering all the complex angles of the situation, it can be assumed that boxing in California will hel pthe game. There are enough boxers to support the sport in a dozen states and it has been shown that boxing cannot thrive with all the boxers in one state.

THREE GAMES OPEN GIRLS' NET LEAGUE

Three interesting basket ball games were played at the Y.W.C.A. on Friday evening in the Ladies' League.

The first game, Quaker Oats vs. Otonabee Mills, was anyone's game until the final whistle blew, when the Quakers were declared the winners by the score of 14 points to 12.

This was the first game between these well matched teams and both should give a good account of themselves before the finish of the season.

Normal Students 12; DeLaval 10.

This was a more strenuous game, and both teams showed more combination and greater accuracy in shooting and passing.

The Normalites have a good team and do not lack rooters from their school associates. Their team will be pretty close to the top when the series of games are completed.

The game finished with the Normalites being declared the winners by the score of 12-10

Y.W.C.A. vs. Bell Telephone.

This game did not have quite the thrills of the other games but was interesting from all angles. The Y.M.C.A. team showed good combination and was well versed in the inner working of the game, much more than their rivals. The Hello girls are a new organization—a first season team—but with a little more coaching and some more practice, will be an aggregation to be considered before the season is over.

This was a good game right through but the "Y" girls showed up in better combination and shooting, with the final score chalked up as Y.W.C.A. 5 points, Bell Telephone 2.

Westclox vs. Canadian Woollens.

This game ended with the Woollens having to default the game owing to not having enough of the team mates on hand. This was regretted as in other seasons the Woollens have had a pretty snappy ball team, and great things are expected of them this season. But games cannot be played if the players forget to be on hand at the scheduled time.

Basket ball games are played every Friday evening at the Y.W.C.A. Gym. Everybody interested is cordially invited.

LIFE SPAN SHORTENED BY GIRLS' MORTALITY.

Dr. E. L. Fisk asserts that: The average human life has been lengthened from twenty-one to fifty-eight years in the last three centuries.

High mortality among women between seventeen and thirty-two prevents the average life from increasing.

Active rational measures are required to remedy the conditions responsible for this mortality.

Too little exercise, sleep, fresh air and proper food and too many cigarettes and late hours are to blame.

THREE POISONED.

One Girl Dead as Result of Eating at Dance.

KINGSTON, Nov. 24.— (Canadian Press.)—One girl is dead and two are ill of ptomaine poisoning with which they were stricken on Saturday evening, apparently caused by some food they had eaten. Of the trio, who became ill shortly after arriving at the dance, Margaret Morrison, aged 15, daughter of Dr. C. A. Morrison, died last night. Her elder sister, Mary, is in hospital critically ill, but will recover. A girl friend from Toronto, visiting the Morrisons, is less seriously affected with the same complaint. Investigation is being made.

BILLIARD EXPERTS' LATEST STUNTS

A Pretty Handicapping Puzzle by Smith and Newman.

By SPOT BALL.

By their pre-eminence as cueists, Newman and Smith have almost constituted a law unto themselves in the billiards world, and, as past records in any form of sport have proved, such a position is not entirely for the good of the game. And, moreover, a most illogical situation has arisen as a result of this virtual dictatorship. Prior to the commencement of this billiards season the leading professionals held a meeting, at which it was decided upon what terms each would meet the other.

I will not go into full details of the matter now, as they are not material to the subject in my mind, but I would like to dwell upon the cases of Newman, Smith and Davis. The two "champions," having realized that Davis was, so to speak, their natural successor for highest honours, decided that he must be encouraged and helped along in the profession by giving him engagements.

And the terms upon which they were to meet him were as follows:—Davis to receive 6000 start in matches of 18,000 up, and in the event of his winning, the concession to be reduced 1000, but if he lost his start would be increased 1000.

Now, it will be remembered that in the first match of the season, at Burroughes Hall, Piccadilly, Newman was defeated by Davis on the handicap shown above, while, a few weeks later, Smith succeeded where the champion failed, and beat Davis over the same distance. So here we are at once landed in a pretty kettle of fish. When Newman and Davis meet again, the champion, by virtue of the agreement entered into, will only concede 5000 start, while Smith will be called upon to give 7000 in 18,000 up.

These figures show, according to the players' own computation, that Smith is 2000 in 18,000 better than Newman, but while I have the greatest respect for the Darlington man's ability as a match player, I should not feel inclined to back him in such a game. Perhaps matters will adjust themselves when the three players have again met, but the present situation proves that a long view of potentialities is much more to be desired than hasty legislation.

Newman's Experiment.

And this brings me up to the experimental match now being played by Smith and Newman. It is only a few weeks since the champion sprang his sensational proposals upon the public, and the suggested conditions had hardly been assimilated when the present game was agreed upon. In view of Willie Smith's frequently expressed hostility to all innovations regarding the rules of the game, some surprise was felt that he was willing to take part in the match, but, as he told me last week, it was only as a personal favour to the promoter that he would do so. He also said then, and has since reiterated, that he would never lend himself again to any experimental games under freak conditions.

So far as the game has proceeded at the time of writing, it has clearly missed its declared objective of "brightening billiards," for the proceedings have been monotonously slow compared with the ordinary game of billiards. The abolition of the "D" half circle is much too drastic, as many of the finest strokes of the game are summarily done away with, and the absence of the "D" cuts right across the fundamental basis of the game. I shall be able to criticize the experiment more fully next week after its completion, but I must say now that if there is to be any reform in the rules and conditions of the old game —which, in my opinion, is absolutely unnecessary—let it be in the table or affecting the object balls, without interfering with the cue ball at all.

COLD WAVE SWEEPS ITALY.

Snow Falls Near Rome—Rural Natives Set Watch For Wolves.

ROME, Nov. 22.—Italy is in the grip of a severe cold spell which covers virtually the entire peninsula. Not only the mountains in the north but even those surrounding Rome are covered with snow and the temperature here sank during last night to about 20 degrees Fahrenheit, which is unusual for this region.

The sheep and cattle already are being driven down from the Abruzzi Mountains to the plains for the winter season, and in several villages special wtaches have been organized as a defense against the wolves forced out of their mountain haunts by snow and hunger.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

"THE SEA HAWK" RICH IN DRAMA

Aabatini's Novel Made Into Outstanding Picture of Year by Frank Lloyd.

Regarded, by virtue of its originality and magnitude, as even a better entertainment than the author's well remembered "Scaramouche," Rafael Sabatini's "The Sea Hawk," a, picturized by Frank Lloyd and released as a First National pictures comes to local play-goers to-day on the screen of the Capitol Theatre.

Resplendent in rich dramatic value and requiring many and massive backgrounds for its many big sequences, "The Sea Hawk," as transferred to the screen by Mr. Lloyd, is not only one of the outstanding cinema achievements of the past year but one of the singular triumphs of screen history.

Whereas the average super-production has had its locale on the land, a majority of the big scenes of "The Sea Hawk" have been taken at sea, on four gigantic ships of the Sixteenth Century period, two of them rowed by galley slaves.

The story begins in England, where Master Peter Godolphin is murdered shortly after his sister Rosamund and Sir Oliver Tressilian announce their coming marriage. Oliver is accused of the murder because a trail of blood leads from the dead man's body to the doorstep of Penarrow Hall, Oliver's home. When Oliver submits to an examination and proves his innocence to the justice, Lionel, his brother, fearing that he might be accused of the murder, has Oliver kidnapped and taken aboard a ship about to sail for Algiers, thus making it seem positive that Oliver had fled from punishment for his guilt.

At sea the pirate ship on which Oliver is held prisoner is attacked by a Spanish marauder and Oliver becomes a galley slave for several years. When a Moorish gallease attacks the Spaniard, Oliver frees himself from his chains, helps the Moors to conquer the ship, and is made a commander by the Basha. Later, hearing that Rosamund is about to marry Lionel, Oliver goes to England and, aided by his corsairs, takes Lionel and Rosamund from the altar and returns to Algiers with them, bent on making Lionel suffer for his intrigue and convincing Rosamund of his own innocence. In Algiers, however, the fair-haired Rosamund attracts the attention of the Basha, and some highly interesting encounters between the forces of Oliver and the Basha are said to develop.

AT THE GRAND.

"THE ROSE OF KILLARNEY."

The success of two continents, "The Rose of Killarney," in which James E. Plunkett, the Ameriean producer, will present his young international singing star, Gerald Griffin, in the Eastern part of the States and Canada, before sending him on his annual tour of the world, was written by Ralph Thomas Kettering. In his new role, Mr. Griffin is said to eclipse all his previous impersonations.

"The Rose of Killarney" is aa charming romance, with brilliant dialogue, genuine humor, and a love story of enchantment. The scenes are laid in the world's businest city (New York) and the world's beauty spot (Killarney).

Mr. Griffin's singing of tender melodies has made him one of the most popular singing stars on the American or European stage to-day.

His songs are sung in every land, and his records are to be heard in the homes of all classes.

His new songs and operatic aria's are said to be catchy and tuneful, and include: "My Sweet Killarney Rose," "Day Dreams," "Shamrock Leaves," "The Welcome on the Mat," "Ireland is Heaven to Me," "Thank God for a Garden," "Vesti la Giulla" from Pagliacci, and other operatic and favorite melodies.

Mr. Plunkett has surrounded him with the original cast and production.

COMING, DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS IN "THE THIEF OF BAGDAD."

Douglas Fairbanks' amazingly romantic and dramatic story, heretofore thought impossible of achievement on the screen, "The Thief of Bagdad," will be the attraction at the Grand Dec. 1, 2 and 3rd. There is said to be in this story a wonderful love tale to set your pulses going ;a wealth of adventurous incidents that stirs audiences to a rousing pitch of excitement. It will be a new experience to you to see a magic rug soar above the house-tops and off into the sky, bearing the Thief and the beautiful Princess of Bagdad. Another new and strange experience will be to witness a winged horse fly up to and through the clouds, bearing the Thief of Bagdad, of whom all nations for hundreds of years, have been reading about in the tales of Arabian Nights. You may have read about the Invisible Cloak, but you surely have not seen it uless you have viewed Douglas Fairbanks in "The Thief of Bagdad." Born of a poet's dream in Arsby, this remarkable story was developed by Douglas Fairbanks into a beautiful reality. Nothing like it has ever been attempted; nothing like it has ever been seen; nothing like it has ever been accomplished. These statements seem exaggerations ;but when compared with the criticisms of this picture wherever it has been presented, cause them to appear to lack in justifiable enthusiasm. The critics of the "New York Times" sums up the matter justly and, according to all accounts, truly, when he said that "The Thief of Bagdad" is a "feat of moving picture art which has never been equalled or even approached." So also the "Evening Telegram": "It is the greatest picture we have seen or even expect to see." This is a specially organized company of musicians, mechanicians and equipment —a replica of the presentation at the Liberty Theatre in New York— with the same colorful atmospheric effects, symphony orchestra, original score, Mohammedan Chanter, and full scenic investiture.

AT THE ROYAL.

NEW MAE MURRAY PICTURE ENTITLED 'MLLE. MIDNIGHT

Piquant Film Star Plays Part of Lively Mexican Senorita. Also Lady of Royal Blood. She Appears as a Member of the Court of Napoleon III in Prologue.

ROYAL TONIGHT.

Mae Murray, for whom such adpective as beautiful, dazzling, bizarre and bewitching seem to have been expressly originated, is determined to give something entirely different and unexpected in every picture she makes. Her newest Metro production, "Mademoiselle Midnight," at the Royal Theatre tonight, with her husband, Robert Z. Leonard, directed, is just as different from "Fashion Row" as the latter is from her previous pictures.

In "Mademoiselle Midnight" Miss Murray plays the part of a great lady of the court of Napoleon the Third, and then the descendant of the same character in Mexico many years later. Both these roles lend themselves to colorful characterizations of which Miss Murray has taken full advantage.

Miss Murray is admitted by members of her own sex to be the best and most originally dressed star. "Mademoiselle Midnight" gives her every opportunity to take advantage of her abilities along these lines. In the picturesque hoop skirts with all their quaint eighteenth century frills Miss Murray was never more beautiful and charming.

Designs Own Costumes.

No motion picture star works harder than Mae Murray.She is a tireless little bundle of human energy. She designs every garment she wears in her pictures. She spent more than six weeks preparing her wardrobe for "Mademoiselle Midnight" and that means she was very busy every minute. In the first place she spent several weeks reading up on costumes of the eighteenth century and those of old Mexico.

For days she spent her entire time in the Mexican quarter of Los Angeles seeking the shawls, designs and properties for her clothes. Not entirely satisfied with what she found, Miss Murray sent a representatives of her company to Mexico City to bring back such materials as he might find that would be suitable for use in the picture. The result is that in no part of "Mademoiselle Midnight" can there be the slightest criticism of the clothes worn by Miss Murray or any of the other members of the company.

Old Mexico was never brought to the screen in a more colorful manner than it has been in "Mademoiselle Midnight." Settings, characters, and all details have been watched carefully with the result that the entire production has the real atmosphere of the Southern country.

Elaborate Episodes.

One of the most elaborate episodes of the picture is a party in Mexico City. The setting for this covered the entire floor space of one mammoth enclosed stage.

It was in this setting that Mae Murray did a Spanish dance which is said to be the most sensational of her career.

"Mademoiselle Midnight" was written by John Russell and Carl Harbaugh and included in the cast are Monte Blue, Robert Edeson, Robert McKim, Nick de Ruiz, Nigel DeBrulier, Johnny Arthur, Otis Harlan, John Sainpolis and other actors and actresses of note.

"Mademoiselle Midnight" is a Metro picture, sponsored by Tiffany Production, of which Robert Z. Leonard is director-general and M. H. Hoffman general manage.

BENNY LEONARD AT ROYAL TO-NIGHT.

Benny Leonard, world's light weight champion, in the first of a series called "Flying Fists," makes his bow at the Royal to-night. This series is on the order of "The Leather Pushers." Each episode is complete in itself. They contain plenty of comedy, exciting situations and a ring bout. They should be as popular as "The Leather Pushers."

AT THE REGENT.

SHIRLEY HAD OWN DIAMOND MYSTERY

Shirley Mason William Fox star who will be seen at the Regent Theatre to-day in her new picture, "The Great Diamond Mystery" laughingly tells of a real diamond mystery that she knew about when she was a little girl.

According to Shirley a very eccentric character lived in her home town. His mania was liable to go off on most any sort of a tangent One time he began to wonder what would happen to a diamond if it were placed on a railroad track and a train allowed to run over it. The man discussed the probable outcome with everybody who would listen. Some told him the diamond would be buried into the rail; without being harmed in the least; others insisted that the precious stone would be crushed to powder.

Finally the man determined to see for himself. He saved his money and bought a nice sparkler, unmounted. Getting few of his friends together they went down to the railroad to await the fast mail. The moment it had thundered by, there was a scramble toward the track. The diamond was gone —absolutely disappeared. Moreover it had not been imbedded in the steel rail for there was not even a dent in the steel! nor was there a patch of tell-tale powder In a few moments the diamond was found in the cinders at the side of the track. The vibrations of the rail caused by the approaching train had simply caused the diamond to roll off without being touched.

"Well, what did the man do then?" Shirley always is asked. And he replies with a impudent little grin., "Why, he put the diamond back and waited for the next train, —but, gee, I've forgotten what happened."

MAYOR TURNER EULOGIZES THE CITY OFFICIALS

His Worship Tells Rotary Club of Efficient Service Being Given.

MUNICIPAL MATTERS.

Mayor Reviews Work of Various Departments of Civic Government.

Warm tributes to the efficiency of the city officials were paid by His Worship, Mayor J. J. Turner in the course of a most interesting address before the Rotary Club, at its weekly luncheon to-day, upon the subject of municipal affairs. Mayor Turner covered the whole field of municipal departments in his speech, which was full of information in regard to civic matters.

Quite appropriately Rotarian S. R. Armstrong, Peterboro's City Clerk, was chairman to-day, while the speaker was introduced by Rotarian James Hamilton, who declared that in J. J. Turner Peterboro had a chief magistrate of whom the citizens might well feel proud, a mayor with a keen grasp of municipal problems, business ability and a pleasing personality.

Mayor Turner first expressed his appreciation of the most valuable assistance and counsel offered to himself and the aldermen by City Clerk Armstrong, whose comprehensive knowledge of municipal law, and ripe experience, all made him of the greatest help to the council. In Mr. Armstrong Peterboro possessed a city clerk equalled by few and beaten by none, His Worship declared.

The efficient work of City Treasurer Frank Adams, and of City Assessor W. H. Henry, was also warmly praised by the speaker, who passed on to refer to the Tax Collection Department, and to pay a tribute to Tax Collector W. J. Green, at the same time explaining the recent discussion over this office. It did not seem to him that in view of the fact that over $700,000 was collected each year by Mr. Green that the salary paid was sufficient.

Mayor Turner complimented City Relief Officer Finch Miller, Plumbing Inspector Arthur Metheral, and Sanitary Inspector Charles Stapleton upon the able manner in which their duties were performed.

Of the Police Department he said that it was possible that the full value of the services rendered by the police, was not appreciated by the citizens generally. His Worship referred to the absence of serious crime, and thought that credit for this must fairly be given to the police department. At the same time there was not the continual vexing of citizens with trivial charges, as in some other centres.

The Fire Department was doing most valuable work along the lines of fire prevention, as well as of fire-fighting. Systematic inspection of premises was being carried on by Chief Gimblett and his men and citizens were being educated along fire-prevention lines.

His Worship also referred to the community work done by such organizations as Rotary and Kiwanis, and to the splendid work of the Protestant Home, the House of Providence, Children's Aid Society, St. Vincent's Orphanage, the Public and Separate schol boards, the Health Association, the Well Babies' Clinic, the Nicholl's Park Board, the Nicholls' and St. Joseph's Hospitals, the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition, and other similar organizations and institutions.

After ten months in the mayor's chair, he declared that he had faith in Peterborough and was sure that the city officials were giving capable service in all departments.

Before the Mayor's address, Rotarian Jack Seels called attention to the Kiwanis Winter Fair, and urged the Rotarians to co-operate in making the event a success.

Chairman Armstrong also asked for the support of Rotarians, and the applause idicated that it will be forthcoming.

FUNERAL OF VICTIM.

Beatrice Thorpe Funeral Was Largely Attended.

BROCKVILLE, Nov. 24.—(Canadian Press).—Beatrice Thorpe, 17-year-old girl who was shot and killed at her home in Hulbert, Ont., on Saturday, was buried to-day in Little Cemetery at Brinston's Corners, Rev. HOW TO PUT GARDEN TO BED FOR WINTER

Mulches Unnecessary For Hardy Shrubs and Plants; Some Suggestions.

Putting the garden to sleep for the winter is an easy task if one grows nothing but hardy shrubs and plants. The necessity for mulches is much overrated. None of the hardy shrubs or perennials needs a mulch to prevent freezing. Lawns do not need a covering for any purpose. The hardy garden is as safe in the winter as in the summer, as far as temperatures are concerned.

Last winter there was heavy mortality among roses, including hardy climbers and Chinese rivet, which is extensively used for hedges. With the hardy climbers and privet, this was due to exceptional conditions. A mild, wet fall with no severe weather until Christmas kept plants growing very late without ripening the wood. Then came a drop to 18 degrees below zero, which froze the moisture in the wood and killed the top growth. Roots were uninjured and new growth has come this summer.

Protecting Climbing Roses.

If one does not wish to take a chance this winter with climbing roses, a good way to protect them is to lay them on the ground and cover them with earth. It is not likely, however, that winter killing of these subjects will occur a second year in succession.

Monthly roses, which are only semi-hardy, should always have protection in our winters. The tops must be covered with straw, or similar wrapping, which will admit air, but prevent killing temperatures. Such roses are always a risk, because no wrapping can be depended upon to protect them in subzero temperatures.

Newly planted perennials and cane fruits especially should have a mulch, not to prevent them freezing but to keep the frost from heaving them out of the ground. This heaving action comes when the ground thaws and freezes again and a much will prevent the thawing. Plants should be inspected frequently to see whether they have been heaved, and if their roots are exposed they should be pressed back into the earth.

Watch for Heaving.

Where bulbs have been planted too near the surface they are subject to heaving and may be killed in this manner. A mulch may be used for their protection, though it is never necessary with properly planted tulips and daffodils. Hyacinths are not so hardy and a much is advisable for them to protect them from the lowest temperatures.

Mulches on bulbs and perennials should always be removed early in the spring. If they are allowed to remain until top growth begins the sprouts may be injured on raking off the mulch; and the mulch has a tendency to force the top growth, so that it is soft and more liable to injury by late frosts.

TRIAL NEAR CLOSE.

One More Witness For the Crown in the Home Bank Case.

TORONTO, Nov. 24.—(Canadian Press).—There will be one more witness for the Crown in the trial of P. F. M. Stewart, Home Bank director. It is probable that the trial will be concluded to-morrow. At the opening of the session to-morrow, Judge Coatsworth will give his judgment in the case of C. A. Barnard, another director, whose trial was completed a couple of weeks ago. Major A. E. Nash, of the firm of Clarkson, Dilworth and Gordon, accountants, was cross-examined this morning by the defence. Major Nash said that there was no color in the statements he had prepared of the bank's affairs, and what he reported was a statement of the bare facts without comment. He admitted that A. E. Calvert knew more about the Home Bank affairs than any living man. Calvert, however, did not know the origin or reasons for some of the big loans. He also admitted that a layman going over the bank's books would find nothing wrong unless he were suspicious or on guard.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

LIQUOR TRIAL RESUMED TO-DAY

Eastland Claimed He Purchased Liquor Last Summer From a Strange Man.

At the resumed hearing of the liquor case against James Akey and W. Eastland before Magistrate Langley to-day, James Akey said that he and Gibbs went out to the Eastland farm to get 5 bags of potatoes for Gibbs. Eastland works the land as a garden, and who has it leased from Akey.

I did not know the beer was in the car until I came out of the house with the officers, but I knew there was some beer in the house, for I had a drink while I was there.

The beer did not belong to me and I did not have it for sale.

Mr. Strickland—Every time Gibbs buys a bag of potatoes do you go with him.

Answer—No.

This beer you had was pretty good stuff?

Oh, yes, it was pretty fair.

You have seen a good many cases of liquor in your day?

No, I have not.

You have seen a few, then?

Yes, a couple.

When the officer came in, did you think that you were going to be arrested?

No, I never thought of such a thing. I knew right well it Inspector Stewart had anything to do with it he would hang me if he could.

You have never been in any liquor deals before, have you?

Yes, once.

Eastland, called to the box, said: "I was to garden the place and keep down the weeds and any other extra work I done I was to be paid for."

Mr. O'Brien—"You had some beer and some whisky on your premises?" —"Yes."

"Whose liquor and beer was it?" —"It was my own. I bought it on the 21st of June from a man in town here who brought a whole car load of it in. I had it for my own use and not for sale. I am 61 years of age and have been drinking all my life. I have drank enough in my day to float in it, but I paid for every drop I drank.

"Gibbs came out to get some potatoes. I was having a drink of beer when Gibbs and Akey came in and I gave them each a glass. I put the beer in Gibbs' car, and neither he nor Akey knew it was there until Inspector Stewart and Constable Maker showed it to them. I was not selling the beer, but was taking it to my sister's house on Simcoe Street, where I was going to stay for 3 or 4 months."

Mr. O'Brien—"Did you ever sell any liquor?"

"No, not a drop in my life."

"The beer cost me $6 a case and the whisky $40 a case, making a total cost of $270."

"The man I bought it from was a big stout man, clean shaved, and wore a fedora hat."

Mr. O'Brien, to the Magistrate—"His description of this man tallies well with a well-known bootlegger in this city."

Mr. Strickland—"Where did you get the $270 to pay for the liquor?"

"I had it with me. I had $500 on my person."

"Did Gibbs ever get a drink before from you?"

"No, that is the first drink he ever had in my house."

"I do not know the man whom I bought the liquor from, and I have never seen him since. I met him at an eating house on Water Street, and he asked me if I wanted any beer or liquor. We went over to the Market Square and bargained there, and that afternoon he brought it out to my place in his car.

"I am a good judge of whisky. I can tell good from bad. The whisky I bought from this man had not ripened; it was green, and was not as good as what I expected to get. There was not much kick in the beer; you could drink two quarts and it wouldn't have any effect on you. I never bought a bottle of beer or whisky from a bootlegger before this, but I have stole whisky and had it stole from me, but I never bought it."

Mr. Langley—"What kind of a car was it that this man delivered the liquor to you in?"

"It was a large, heavy car. I would think it was a McLaughlin or a Rolls Royce. The car was all curtained in and the cases were not covered with anything."

In Mr. O'Brien's address to the Magistrate, he said there was no evidence showing that Akey was in any way connected with the liquor. Akey should not have been placed on trial, because there is no evidence against him. I submit, as a matter of fact and law, that Akey should be discharged and that Eastland should get an acquittal.

Eastland had the right to give Akey and Gibbs a drink in his own house. There is no reason why this man should have to show a receipt of the purchase of this liquor. He has no other way to spend his money. He bought this liquor to have a good time with just the same as anybody would buy a car for pleasure.

EASTLAND FINED IN LIQUOR CASE

Four Hundred Dollars, or Three Months in Gaol.

In County Police Court this afternoon, before Magistrate O. A. Langley, James Akey, charged with having liquor for sale on his farm in North Monaghan, was acquitted and William Eastland, who faced the same charge, was fined $400 and costs, or three months in jail.

J. F. Strickland acted as prosecutor, and J. A. O'Brien appeared for Akey and Eastland.

In Mr. Langley's judgment he said that there was no evidence against James Akey, and a man cannot be convicted on suspicion. "I cannot convict Akey on this charge of having liquor for sale," he declared.

"Eastland had control of the liquor and he has given evidence here that the liquor was not for sale, but was for his own personal use, but I cannot say that his evidence satisfies me. I am not satisfied that his evidence as to where he got the liquor is truthful. I therefore find that he may be convicted of the charge against him."

"There will be a conviction of the defendant, William Eastland, and there will be an order issued for confiscation of the liquor found in the house," said the Magistrate.

KIWANIS FAIR OPEN TO-NIGHT

Feverish Activity Marks the Final Day of Preparation For Big Event.

The old Market Hall is humming with activity. The Kiwanians, whatever their usual frame of mind may be, are in a "knocking" humour to-day. Most of them who were on view were armed with hammers and nails and were driving them into booth partitions with vigor and vim Others were occupied with ladders and brushes and hundreds of yards of crepe paper were being ruthlessly scissored to form the décorations for the numerous sections.

No big enclosure already presents a very gay appearance. There is every indication that the Kiwanis Winter Fair is going to be something notable and quite out of the ordinary. The Market building, in which the majority of previous bazaars have had rather a lonesome look, owing to its size, is going to be comfortably filled wth the different booths. They are arranged in wall formation down the western and eastern sides, with variety in the color schemes, which embrace all the hues of the rainbow, and in the varied types, and there are small wall sections at the north end. The southern portion holds the specially-constructed dancing floor and the tea room is also located in the pillared portion at the extreme south end. A sale of home-made cooking supervised by the ladies, is another attraction that should have a good patronage.

Everything imaginable, from mahogany to tooth brushes, from snowshoes to packaged tea, from furniture to Christmas cards, is going to be on view in an endless variety at the big exhibition. There is life and electricity already in the air and anyone who misses the show will miss a real good time.

Two dart games will be in progress, and a musical programme, under direction of M. B. Chenhall will include this evening vocal solos and duetts by Mrs. Walter Byers, Hugh Nevin and Max Irvine, the "glue" quartette may also be impressed into service tonight. An excellent orchestra has been provided for dancing during the four evenings.

The official opening takes place at eight o'clock, when Mayor Turner will press the button that opens the show, G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., Deputy Speaker of the House of Commons, and W. H. B. Bradburn, M.P.P., will also be present and speak a few words. After that, the fun will commence.

In preparation for the games, big baskets of assorted fruit were going up the stairway this afternoon. Dr. J. J. Craig, at whose booth "Oral Hygiene" will be demonstrated, and where five hundred packages of tooth-paste will be distributed free, was also carfully conveying his little pet "nurse" upstairs, the lady hiding her pretty face behind a modest newspaper veil.

LIBERALS MEETING.

Ontario Leader May Indicate Course of Campaign at Next Session.

TORONTO, Nov. 24.—(Canadian Press).—Liberal members of the Ontario Legislature and chiefs of the Liberal party from various ridings are holding a meeting this afternoon to discuss the political situation and party organization. W. E. N. Sinclair, Ontario Liberal leader, will preside. This evening the Liberal leader will tender a banquet to Liberal members and those at the conference. Hon. Hal McGiven, Minister without portfolio in the King administration, will be one of the chief speakers. It is expected that Mr. Sinclair will speak of the course he proposes to pursue in the Lekislature at its next session, which will be assembled during the latter part of January.

HOLLYWOOD'S LURE IS STRONG AS EVER

The Stream of Movie Seekers Seems to be an Endless One.

By HAROLD E. SWISHER.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 24. (United Press).—Tennyson once gained fame for himself and a certain brook when he wrote about it flowing "on and on forever." Apparently no one had previously given much thought to a brook doing that, but the poet was not disputed in his claim.

There is another stream Tennyson could write about were he alive and in Hollywood to-day. It appears as endless as the one which invoked the muse. We speak of the stream of aspirants to cinematic honors which pours into the film capital every day in the year.

Right now the flood is running high, exceptionally so for this or any other year since motion pictures emerged from the nickelodeon days to become one of the country's richest industries.

Each incoming train bears its proportion of sleek youths and vampish cuties, all certain that they will knock the directors for a row of contracts just as soon as they have an opportunity to show their abilities.

Didn't they have the lead in the class play last spring, and didn't the folks all say, "you ought to be in the movies, you're so swell?"

So they worked all summer in the dry goods store or behind a soda fountain, and saved enough to buy a ticket to Hollywood, confident that fame, money and the world's applause is just around the corner.

Many of them, most of them in fact, will soon be back home behind the counter or the fountain—wiser and, perhaps, sadder for the experience.

"We are having a heavy run on girls seeking rooms during the long hard grind in quest of screen success," Miss Marjorie Williams, secretary of the Hollywood Studio Club told the United Press.

The Studio Club is operated by the Y.W.C.A., and aims to care for as many screen-struck girls as possible while they seek the magic sesame that will open the studio gates to success.

"I don't know what prompted this new flood of would-be screen stars There was a time during the summer that they fell off, and we were hopeful that the wide advertising disclaiming the screen novice's chances in Hollywood was bearing fruit," Miss Williams continued.

"But just within the past week or two they have started coming strong again. Most of the girls have sufficient money to keep them for awhile, but in many cases not enough to last over the dreary days."

The Studio Club is planning a new home to accommodate perhaps 100 girls. There will be no trouble in filling it, Miss Williams predicts.

As part of the relief work, the Club attempts to place girls in other employment when they find their his trionic hopes blasted, the secretary stated, adding that "there are few of them who will do anything else however. They come here determined to get into pictures, and it is surprising how they stick to that aim right down to their last cent."

Other agencies, including the Travellers' Aid Society, the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, and many more are endeavoring to cope with the situation, discourage those who have not left home from making the journey and preventing girls who do arrive, almost penniless and without friends, from falling into evil ways.

Making Sure of a Harbor Berth!

Capt. H. F. Hallitas of S.S. Pomeroy

As the Great Lakes grain carriers unload in Montreal harbor, waiting their turn in endless procession, the big ocean-going steamships line up at adjacent berths to fill their holds with the same grain as it pours in a golden stream from the spouts of the harbor's efficient carrier system. So great is the pressure on the Port's facilities that the Lake Captains telephone by Long Distance from far-away lake ports to reserve accommodation for unloading when they shall reach Montreal.

From January 1st to September 30th this year, Montreal exported 22,000,000 bushels more grain than the seven next important ports of America combined. The total was over 99,000,000 bushels.

HALIFAX SOCIETY ENTERTAINED FOR A YEAR CHICAGO SWINDLER OF MILLIONS ARRESTED SUNDAY

Leo Koretz Chose His Victims From Chicago's Wealthy Circles—Money Pressed Upon Him For Supposed Investment Schemes— Oil Wells, Rice and Booze His Ventures.

TOOK EVEN HIS MOTHER'S MONEY AND UNSCRUPULOUSLY DUPED RELATIVES

Preparing to Visit Prominent Halifax Family When He Was Arrested—Heavy Beard Disguised Him—Was Planning to Move On To South America.

HALIFAX, Nov. 25.—(Canadian Press). — Leo Koretz, alias Lou Keyte, self-admitted perpetrator of swindles approximating two million dollars in Chicago, whose arrest in a local hotel Sunday evening robbed this Province of one of its newest and most spectacular residents and added a fresh chapter to United States criminal annals, remained another night in the cell in the local jail. When he will be taken back to Chicago has not been decided, and Messrs. Sharbaro and McSwiggin, assistant attorneys to State Attorney Crowe, of Illinois, said last night they did not know when the prisoner would be taken away.

If Koretz had his way he would start at once, according to statements he made yesterday to the authorities. He is described as being weary of the chase and anxious to go through his trial. Shorn of his disguising beard and evidently suffering from re-action following his sudden change from freedom and affluence to the gloomy environment of a jail cell, he presented a very different front to that which his Nova Scotian acquaintiances have become familiar. In another week, he declared he would have been on his way to South America. His present visit to Halifax had been for the purpose of obtaining transportation and passports on a steamer going south, and he was to have sailed this week, he told the authorities.

Admits Fraude.

Koretz is quoted as admitting that he conducted swindles in the United States amounting to approximately two million dollars, and that he is unable to pay it back. He had spent a fortune since coming to Nova Scotia, and, according to all information available, he paid all bills incurred here and has no creditors. He referred in his statement yesterday to his "beautiful wife and two children," with whom he had not communicated since his indictment in Chicago in September, 1923. The chase began then, and he went to New York, where he first stayed at the St. Regis Hotel, under his right name. Finding himself traced to the St. Regis, Koretz said he took an apartment on 42nd Street, New York, and adopted the name of Lou Keyte for the first time. It was while there that he is said to have purchased a book store at 922 Madison Avenue, which he placed under the management of Temple Scott, who is understood to have visited Koretz last summer on his Nova Scotia estate.

Traced By Illness.

In New York Koretz said he was made familiar with the attractive qualities of Nova Scotia as a summer resort, through a prominent sporting goods house in that city. En route to Canada in January he was taken ill and placed in a sanitarium in Montreal. It is understood that he was diabetic and that this fact was known to the United States authorities, who were able, throubh his essential familiarity with physicians and hospitals, to trace him. It was in this manner that he was traced to Nova Scotia although the exact channel through which he was finally apprehended has not been divulged. The Chicago attorneys now here state that their secret service department had known since January that Koretz was in Canada.

Koretz has waived extradition and has signified his desire to go back at once. Before Judge Wallace in the county court Monday morning, for his preliminary hearing, he was remanded to jail for fifteen days, which was his right by statute. It was not his desire, however. He engaged a lawyer, and last evening he made no assignment of all his holdings in Nova Scotia. While Koretz made no detailed confession he discussed the manner in which some of the huge fortune came to him. It had been no effort, he declared, and added that in many cases the cash was forced upon him. One Chicagoan, he said, implored him to accept $200,000 for investment in his schemes, while another instance he told was that of a judge in Chicago who was so impressed with Koretz that he deserted the dignity of the bench to enter the realms of finance.

In Social Whirl.

It was rumored yesterday that Koretz was armed when arrested. This, the police declare, was not true. He was unarmed, and made no resistance. Saturday afternoon he and lady friends danced at the Royal Nova Scotia Yacht Club, and Saturday evening his party visited a local dance hall. Sunday evening he was to have attended a party at the home of a prominent Halifax family, and was prepared to keep this appointment when the visit of the police brought his social activities to a dramatic close. Immediately after his arrest he asked that his beard be shaved off.

"The whiskers have served their purpose," he said.

With his arrest here, however, it is learned that Koretz has lived in Nova Scotia since last March when he purchased Pinehurst, a historic residence near Liverpool in a rural district for $18,000. Since then he has spent $35,000 in additions to the house.

Protected by a full, bushy beard, which he grew as a disguise, and assisted by his evident wealth, lavish entertainments, generosity and interest in the district, Koretz became very popular and had even

DIED OF EXPOSURE.

Manitoba Men Sank Exhausted After Battling Prairie Snow Storm.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 25. — John Paulson, aged 64 years, of Howardville, Man., died here Monday as the result of exposure suffered eight days ago, when he lay for nearly ten hours on a snow-swept prairie trail.

On November 15, he started out from Howardville to Riverton, a distance of 15 miles to catch a train for Winnipeg. He was caught in a raging snow storm which proved too much for him, and, completely exhausted, gave up the trek. He was found by t traveller early next morning with both feet frozen and other parts of the body badly frost bitten.

CANADA LURES DUTCH CROWDS

Traffic Congested Around C. N.R. Displays in Rotterdam—Immigration Outlook Good.

GET FULL QUOTAS.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—(Canadian Press Cable).—So great is the interest in the display of the Canadian National Railways in the company's office in Rotterdam in connection with the campaign to obtain emigrants for Canada that the police of Rotterdam are complaining of the congestion of foot traffic in the vicinity of the office. The railway and emigration office in Rotterdam was opened only two weeks ago.

W. J. Black, director of colonization for the Canadian National Railways, has returned to London from a tour of a considerable portion of Europe. Mr. Black reports that the prospects of securing suitable types of settlers never were better than at the present time. The government of Holland, he says, has recommended the translation of the Canadian pamphlets on migration into the Dutch language.

In Hungary, where many districts are settled on lines similar to the Mennonite settlements in Western Canada the inhabitants are keenly interested in Canadian migration Mr. Black says, and it is probable that as large a quota of emigrants will offer as Canada will be able to absorb.

INDIAN INFORMERS BARE DEATH PLOTS

LAHORE, Punjab, India, Nov. 25. —(Canadian Press Cable Via Reuter's.)—An investigation has commenced here into charges against a number of persons held in custody in connection with a bomb outrage in 1918 in the Anarkali Bazaar, in the heart of the city of Lahore, in which two Europeans and six Indians were injured.

Remarkable evidence was given for the prosecution by two informers. The first deposed that he joined a subversive movement in 1922 and began to carry a pistol and cartridges with the object of killing Europeans and government supporters. He then made acquaintance with Ganda Singh, one of the accused, who, he alleged, was forming a society to take violent measures against the government. Subsequently witness was introduced to Mangal and Mahru, two immigrants who had returned from Canada, the latter of whom admitted having thrown a bomb in the Anarkali Bazaar. Witness was persuaded to become secretary of the secret society, but he was finally arrested in June of this year.

The second informer said that he had learned how to make bombs from Ganda Singh, who asked him to approach Mangal and Mahru. He prepared a bomb and in order to test it Mahru aimed it at two Europeans in the Anarkali Bazaar. Ganda Singh expressed his appreciation of Mahru's "heroic action," but advised him not to do anything more so as to avoid suspicion. Later Ganda Singh advised Mahru to adopt the methods of the Ghadar party and cut the telegraph wires and root up the railway lines. Ganda Singh was finally arrested on information supplied to the police.

COURT IN UPROAR.

MONTREAL, Nov. 25.—(Canadian Press.)—Reference at Monday's session of the police enquiry proceedings under Mr. Justice Coderre, to a "private list" which gave to persons arrested and whose names appeared thereon the "right" to appear before the chief of police before the matter proceeded further was made by constable Marchand.

Witness testified to having arrested Max Cattel, now dead, whose name has appeared several times in the couse of the probe, and another man. Their names he said had been placed on the "list", and he had heard nothing further of the affair.

Another story of alleged police brutality was told to the court, when Clovis Bonin, machinist, testified that he had been brutally attacked by Constable Henri Morin, who, he said, used a baton on him with serious effect and then arrested him. He had later been acquitted in the courts. The constable took the stand in his defence and denied using his baton. He said on the night in question he had been doing his beat when he noticed Bonin, who ran away at the sight of his uniform and he had followed him. After a long chase, during which he fired two shots in the air, he had captured Bonin, who fell, but he had not struck him. Bonin broke away but was re-captured soon after, the witness said.

Demonstration in Court.

One of the most notable demonstrations of sentiment by the audience that has yet been seen in the course of the inquiry into the police inquiry into the police administration in Montreal, by Mr. Justice Coderre, took place yesterday when former Police Captain Carle broke down in giving his evidence, sobbed and wept copiously, the crowd booing Ald. J. A. A. Brodeur and the executive committee the while.

The incident occurred toward the close of the ex-captain's testimony, when he was telling of his efforts to obtain reinstatment. He smiled satirically as he told of the many appointments given him by Alderman Brodeur, none of which were kept by the latter. He told with some bitterness of how he had gone to the city hall four times a day, twice each morning and twice each afternoon, in the hope of obtaining an interview with the chairman of the executive committee.

When he admitted having begged the chairman almost on bended knee to reinstate him in order that his son might be able to go through college, the strain proved too severe, and the burly ex-police officer buried his face in his arms, wept and sobbed like a child.

Earlier in his evidence, Captain Carle declared that Lieut. Demers had paid $500 for his promotion, and that other officers had had to buy their rank.

Had Seen Marked Cards.

Recalled to the stand to continue his evidence, ex-Captain Albert Carle, founder of the police union, said that the information which he had furnished to Alderman J. A. A. Brodeur, chairman of the executive committee of the city, as to the card playing activities of Captain Bellefleur, was based on the evidence of reputable witnesses. His report had been made in January, 1924, and had covered a number of points, including the statements that Captain Bellefleur had played cards with marked cards at the east end abbatoir during 1919 and 1920. Information on this point had been given witness by an informant who had since died. The marked cards were, however, in the possession of one

BRITAIN TOLERANT OF EGYPTIAN DEMAND FULFILMENT OF TREATY

Provisions of Independence Agreement Were Not Observed—British Cancel Concessions.

EXACT ALL TERMS.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Replying to criticisms levelled at some of the points contained in the British note to Egypt, it is asserted by an official source that the foreign office note contained no demands which did not fall under the points reserved by, or covered in, the Egyptian independence agreement of 1922.

This agreement provided, among other things, for the suppression of political demonstrations ,the retention of their powers by three British officials, namely, the financial and judicial advisers and the director of public security, and that Great Britain would become the protector of foreign interests in order to allow foreigners to carry on their work in Egypt.

Great Britain, it is pointed out, has been lax in the matter of the suppression of political demonstrations. British officials hoping that the Egyptian internal troubles would quiet down and allow matters to adjust themselves. With the murder of Sir Lee Oliver Stack ,which the British Government claims was indirectly due to laxity in allowing political demonstrations of an anti-British character, the Government believes that the time has arrived to demand that agreement of 1922 be fulfilled to the last letter.

Will Enforce Demands.

The British note therefore, makes such demands and the British Government is prepared to carry out those not willingly granted by the Egyptians. The Government has already taken steps to have the Egyptian troops removed from the Sudan where they had been allowed

TROUBLE IN EGYPT IS DISCUSSED AT GENEVA

Rumor That League of Nations May Be Asked to Intervene.

GENEVA, Nov. 25.—Egypt replaced opium at Geneva Monday as the topic of greatest interest. The delegates to the international opium conference assembled in the corridors of the League palace, all discussing the Egyptian situation and all wondering whether the League would eventually be called upon to extend its good offices.

No appeal has yet been received from the Egyptian Government, although Dr. Mohammed Guindy, the Egyptian delegate to the opium conference, was strong in the belief that Egypt, notwithstanding she is not a member of the league, would dispatch some memorial to that body.

Another possibility, the realization of which would certainly bring the dispute before the council, is that some state actually a member of the League would inform the secretariat that it deems the Egyptian affairs a menace to peace.

BOY STUMPED THROUGH BUSH WITH BROKEN LEG

Accidentally Shot While Alone, He Bandaged the Wound and Rejoined Party.

KINGSTON, Nov. 25.—Seriously wounded in the leg, when his gun which he had placed by a tree, fell and discharged, Carl White, aged 15, of Jones Falls, cut bandages from his coat and wound up his leg, making tourniquet with the aid of a stick.

Despite the fact that he was suffering intense agony the boy walked a half mile to his boat on one bone of the leg, instead of two, he often having to straighten the leg back in place. He reached his boat and then rowed for two miles to a hunting party where he was taken in charge and a doctor called. He was brought to the Kingston Hospital, where he is doing well.

OPIUM MEETNG FAILS PURPOSE

No System Adopted For Effectively Checking the Smoking of Opium in Far East.

JAPAN GAINS END.

GENEVA, Nov. 25.—(Canadian Press).—The Palace of the League of Nations was the scene yesterday of another sensational public meeting of the opium problem, when the Far Eastern opium conference was revived. After words accusative, and almost violent in nature, between the Japanese, British and Indian delegates, an agreement was reached in principle on the matter which was one of the causes for the collapse of the first opium conference.

This matter concerns the freedom of Japan to import opium and recognition of import certificates by British authorities when Japan transships her opium at Hongkong to be sent in various directions.

Despite this accord, however, the first conference is generally regarded as practically a complete failure because it provides no effective system for putting an end to opium smoking in the far east.

It was the object for which the first conference was called. When Monday's session opened Mr. Sugimura, of the Japanese delegation, announced that Japan would not sign the convention as drafted unless Japanese certificates were approved. He continued his offensive so hard that the British delegation finally gave in to the extent of agreeing to recognize the validity of all certificate vised by a Japanese consul. This was considered a victory for Japan.

Sir Malcolm Delevingne of the British delegation repudiated charges that Great Britain was discriminating against Japan.

RAJAH STOPPED SECOND CHEQUE FOR BLACKMAIL

Total Demand of $1,500,000 On Unnamed Indian Potentate in London Suit.

CHEQUES STOLEN.

Society People Stand in Line All Night Waiting For Opening of Court.

LONDON, November 25. — Ever-increasing interest is being shown by the London public in the action brought by C. E. Robinson, a former bookmaker, against the Midland Bank for 125,000 pounds, which he alleges the bank owes him on account of a settlement with a mysterious Eastern potentate who had become over-friendly with Mrs. Robinson. Not in recent years has another case, not even the famous Russell legitimacy controversy, aroused greater attention, on account of the enormous sums involved, and because of the anonymity of the eastern potentate, whose name is being kept secret for political reasons.

Before adjournment of a session that was full of sensation on Monday, Sir John A. Simon, counsel for the bank, submitted that on the evidence produced, there was no case for the jury. He disputed that the bank had ever undertaken to be answerable to the plaintiff for the money, and argued that it was the Prince's money, "taken from him by menace of exposure."

Bank not Negligent.

Negligence, the defendant's counsel maintained, had nothing to do with the case, and he said, whoever the money belonged to, it was not money about which Mr. Robinson could bring action against the bank.

On this particular point, Judge Darling in the course of the day's hearing has expressed the opinion that after perusing the signatures to the various checks involved and on the evidence before the court it seemed that whoever had put the money into the bank had also drawn it out.

"If that is the case," the judge asked, "where is the negligence?"

Issued Second ...que.

"Mr. A." the unnamed Indian potentate, who fell prey to the charms of the pretty, plump wife of the bookmaker, issued a second cheque for $750,000 to have the matter hushed up, it developed to-day. Later he stopped payment on this draft, which made a total of $1,500,000 he had been asked to pay.

Facts about the second cheque came out on Monday, at the trial of the suit of the bookmaker, Charles Robinson, against the Midland Bank, which permitted one of the plaintiff's former associates to draw $625,000 of the first $750,000 obtained from the dusky prince, thus depriving the bookmaker of the reparation payment.

THE TOLL GATE MYSTERY WAITS FOR A SOLUTION

The Liberals Will Make an Effort to Get More Information.

MEETING YESTERDAY.

TORONTO, November 25. — Pledging themselves sincerely to the support of their principles and of their leader, and outlining a policy of definite and vigorous action, representatives of 111 provincial ridings, meeting here yesterday, brought into being a new Liberal organization.

Not until the mystery of the provincial "Toll Gate" has been solved to the satisfaction of the people of Ontario will the Liberal party, led by W. E. N. Sinclair, be freed from the solemn pledge given yesterday—undertaking adopted by an unanimous vote of the delegates, and voiced dramatically by leaders, at his banquet to them last night, and in his efforts Mr. Sinclair will have the support of his new organization, which bears the title of "Liberal Leaders' Advisory Committee."

The gathering pledged itself to two other tasks: full investigation of the Settell charges, "In order that public ownership may be vindicated in open," including the publication in full of Settell's letter to Sir Adam Beck; and strong efforts to have the Ontario Department of Education turned over to a separate Cabinet minister.

Mr. Sinclair, in a fighting speech, gave assurance that there would be a Liberal candidate, not only in every riding at the next provincial election, but in every bye-election; in the meantime, Liberalism, as he defined it is a party "wise enough to avoid entanglements or alliances of any sort, yet wide enough to embrace every non-Conservative in the province."

Summoned at the invitation of Mr. Sinclair himself, and attended by more than 150 delegates, yesterday's gathering resolved itself into two major parts: a closed session in the afternoon to deal with matters of policy and organization, and a banquet tendered in he evening by the leader.

At the latter gathering, representatives heard not only definite enunciation of Mr. Sinclair's stand but received encouraging messages from Hon. Hal. B. McGiverin, minister without portfolio in the Dominion Cabinet; F. Wellington Hay, former Provincial leader; Senator Andrew Haydon; Mrs. J. H. Beaton, president of the Ontario Women's Liberal Association, and other prominent Liberals.

Members of the executive committee of the new advisory organization, as given out by Mr. Parliament, include: W. K. Murphy, Thomas Marshall, W. Chisholm, Cornwall; Tom McMillan, Seaforth; W. H. McGuire, W. Hay, Listowel; Duncan Ross, Barrie; Mrs. H. Carpenter, Hamilton; Miss Helen Kinnear, Port Colborne; Miss Sangster, Stouffville; W. A. Fraser, Trenton; George McLean, Orillia; L. V. O'Connor, Lindsay.

A NATIONAL ASSET.

As the greatest transportation company in the world, the Canadian Pacific Railway has maintained a national service in the Trans-Canada Limited which is second to none and on the conclusion of the summer schedule of this crack train has transferred the equipment to the Vancouver Express which leaves Toronto every night at 10.10 p.m. on its trip across the continent, via Winnipeg, Calgary, Banff, Lake Louise, the spiral tunnel, Sicamous and parts of the Canadian Pacific Rockies famous throughout the world, on its way to Vancouver, where the travellers are unanimous in their praise of the service of the Vancouver Hotel. The Canadian Pacific also operates a steamship service to Victoria, the Mecca for winter tourists.

Not only does the Vancouver Express carry tourist and standard sleepers, but it also carries a compartment-observation car complete in itself, while a parlor car is added from Revelstoke to Vancouver.

Added to this national service is a feature service from Toronto to Montreal via the Lake Shore Line, which has been entirely reballasted with crushed rock and relaid with 100 pound rails, insuring a maximum of comfort for travellers at night as well as an absence of dust in daytime. Trains leave Toronto Union Station at 9.00 a.m. daily, 10.00 p.m. daily except Saturday, and 11.00 p.m. daily. Arriving at Windsor station, the traveller has the benefit of immediate facilities in the women's rest room, lunch room and barber shop, which cannot be duplicated in any other station in Montreal. An added convenience is offered those who wish to travel to Montreal from North Toronto, in the 9.45 p.m. train, daily except Saturdays, from Yonge street station.

Canadian Pacific agents will gladly make your reservations and supply you with any information you require. They are fully qualified to offer a "second to none" service to the public.

TO START HIGHWAY.

Work Will Be Started on the Highway From North Bay to Cobalt.

TORONTO, Nov. 25.—(Canadian Press).—The route of the new northern highway from North Bay to Cobalt has at last been settled. Premier Ferguson announced yesterday that the road would pass through Cook's Mills, Timagami and Latchford, and that the construction work would commence almost at once in order to provide a winter employment. In a very few years it would be possible, the Premier said, to motor from Toronto direct to Timmins.

As many men as can be used to advantage, several hundred in all, will be employed in cutting the road through this winter. Steps already have been taken to assemble camp outfits and the work of slashing out the right-of-way.

BRITAIN TO LOOK AFTER EGYPTIANS

No Outside Meddling, Says Daily Mail Headline To-day.

LONDON, Nov. 25. — (United Press).—"Hands off Egypt." Thus the British Conservative press to-day warned the League of Nations and the rest of the world.

"No outside meddling," says a Daily Mail headline, while the ensuing editorial announced: "The crisis in Egypt is being handled with refreshing firmness. Egyptian agitators have been taught that the British lion is very much alive. The British Empire is not prepared to allow any outside interference."

The contention that the League of Nations might interfere is characterized by the Daily Mail as "absurd."

The rest of the Conservative newspapers join in the abrupt rebuff to any suggestion that the League has jurisdiction.

ELECTION OF MAYORS.

Four Re-elected By Acclamation Yesterday.

TORONTO, Nov. 25.—(Canadian Press).—Nominations were held in many Ontario cities and towns yesterday. The following Mayors were elected by acclamation:

Pembroke—Mayor L. H. Barrand (re-elected).

Port Arthur—Mayor W. J. Crooks (re-elected).

St. Thomas—Mayor J. A. McInnis (re-elected).

Wingham—W. H. Willis.

CYNICAL AFRICAN NATIVE.

The native of tropical Africa, it seems, gets a good deal of amusement out of the white man. He is quick in noticing his chief characteristics, to which he attaches a name which usually fits him admirably. For example, that one man who takes a lot of time thinking out a thing is known as "Mr. Lot-of-Thought." Another whose gait is peculiar, is "Mr. Peacock." One who never lets the "grass grow under his feet" is "Mr. Rush-About." Another who likes a joke is "Mr. Laughter."

ARMY OF SMUGGLERS WORKING IN SPAIN

Attempting to Smuggle Copies of Ibanez Pamphlets Across Border.

PARIS, Nov. 25. — (Canadian Press). — An army of volunteer smugglers is now engaged in attempting to get copies of the pamphlet written by Vicente Blasco Ibanez in denunciation of King Alfonso and Premier Rivera across the Spanish frontier, the author said yesterday. The printing of the Spanish edition of the pamphlet—about two million copies—was finished Saturday night but up to yesterday Ibanez was uncertain whether a single copy had crossed the Pyrenees.

Regarding the plans for his projected Spanish Republic, the novelist declared it would be inspired by the example of the French revolution.

"But the only thing Socialist we would do," he declared, "would be to expropriate great land holdings of nobles and give to each peasant sufficient land for tilling purposes instead of permitting vast tracts to be used for pasturage of wild bulls destined for bullrings."

THE TRAFFIC OF LONDON TOWN.

Twenty years ago there were no motor omnibuses on the London streets and the horse omnibuses were but a fraction of their number. During the busiest hours to-day 640 omnibuses pass Charing Cross in the hour, 556 pass the Bank, 542 pass Oxford Circus, and 518 pass Piccadilly Circus. Omnibuses and underground trains carry 4,000,000 passengers a day. The population has increased less than 20 per cent. since the beginning of the century, but for every journey in 'bus, tram, train or cab made then, there are now made between thirty and forty to-day.

Two Swedish authors are going to engage in a public debate to determine which of them is a liar. The chap who lies the most convincingly will probably prove the other fellow ought to have the title.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Special Services in Christ Church—November Weddings.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 25.—The services at Christ Church on Sunday were enjoyed by all who had the pleasure of listening to Rev. C. E. Clarke of Christ Church, Belleville. Mr. Clarke was the rector at Campbellford up to the time that Rev. G. C. Clarke the present rector came. Mr. Clarke had the sevices both morning and evening. In the morning he preached on the text, other man have labored and ye have entered into their labor.

He spoke of the beginning of the Anglican Church and the growth of the church throughout the world.

In the evening he spoke of the necessity of the Clergy being educated and that in this day when people, old and young were getting good educations, the ministers of the Gospel had to preach something worth while in order to keep the people coming to church. There is a great tendency the world over to stay away from church and if the younger generation of to-day stay away what effect will that have on their children. We have to keep up to the times and have our sermons interesting and worth while. Mr. Clarke's sermons made a profound impression on those present. At the evening service the choir sang a beautiful anthem "Saviour again to They dear name we meet", the solo parts being taken by Major Bygott and Mrs. F. De F. Free.

Mr. Clarke of Belleville, is the third former rector to preach during the Annivesary month of November. The fourth and last preacher for next Sunday will be Rev. Dr. Kingston, Professor in Trinity College, Toronto.

Rev. C. E. Clarke, was the guest of Dr. and Mrs. E. J. Free, Grand Road, over Sunday.

On Monday night the Willing Workers of Church had their regular meeting in the Parish Hall. The principal business for the evening was the planning for the Bazaar and supper held on Friday and Saturday of this week. The supper to be held on Saturday night. After the business was over, refreshments were served and a social hour spent.

Wedding Bells.

Miss Lillian Ruth Dunk, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Dunk, River Road, Campbellford, was married at Belleville, at two o'clock, on Monday, November 24th, at the Baptist parsonage, by the Rev. M. S. McKecknie, to Mr. Percy Allan Tweedie, of Stirling. They were unattended but were married in the presence of the bride's parents and two brothers. After the ceremony the company motored to Stirling, where Mr. Arthur Tweedie, uncle of the groom, had a sumptuous wedding supper for them, with about twenty guests, the immediate relatives and friends, present.

The young couple will reside in Stirling and the best wishes of all their friends, both in Campbellford and Stirling, will follow them during their life together. Ruth will be missed in Campbellford, where she had many warm friends.

Haig and Peeling.

There was a quiet wedding in the Bloor street Presbyterian church, Toronto, on Thursday, November 20, 1924, when Miss Evelyn Peeling, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Peeling, Centre street, Campbellford, was married by Rev. C. M. Wright, to Mr. John Haig, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Haig, Seymour township. After their honeymoon the young couple will reside in Seymour. Evelyn's many friends here join in best wishes to her and her husband.

Mr. J. L. Hoover, Queen street, received word on Monday that his brother-in-law, Mr. Samuel Lowe of Carleton Place, died an Sunday. The funeral will be held on Tuesday.

St. Andrew's Church.

Rev. Dr. Robert Laird, a former pastor of St. Andrew's church, Campbellford, now treasurer of the Presbyterian church in Canada, will be the preacher both morning and evening in St. Andrew's church next Sunday, November 30, 1924. While in town Mr. Laird will be the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Andrew Haig, Front Street.

On the Tuesday night following, December 2nd, the ladies of St. Andrew's will give a fowl supper.

On Tuesday night of this week the C.S.E.T. ('teen age boys) with Mr. Earl Stepens, B.A., as mentor, will re-open and have the first meeting after the holidays.

Methodist Church.

The services both morning and evening were well attended. The pastor preached two excellent sermons. A large percentage of the congregation come early on Sunday evenings for the song service, which begins at a quarter to seven.

The Ladies' Aid will meet for their regular meeting on Thursday, November 27th, in the Sunday School-room of the church.

The Girl Guides of the church will have their concert on Tuesday night in the Sunday School-room. The "Guides," "Rangers" and the "Brownies" have been making great preparations for this concert.

On Sunday afternoon, at the Sunday School, Mr. Geo. Lucy, pianist and choir leader, had some splendid music, which added a great deal to the enjoyment of the session. He was assisted by Mr. Walter Lowe (cornet), Mr. W. Sutton (clarionette), and Mr. Kelmel (violin).

The Young People's League meeting on Monday night was a very interesting one. The president presided. After the business part was over, Miss Alma Simpson, fourth vice-president, took charge of the programme, as follows: Bible lesson Miss Simpson; vocal solo, "Lullaby," Cherrie Turner; reading, "The Cultured Daughter of a Plain Grocer," by Mr. Craighead; piano solo, Ina Boyd.

The topic was taken by Rev. W. Elliott, pastor. His subject, "The Fourfold Life of Jesus." "Jesus is our example." He is a great pattern. Some one has said that "Jesus is God's idea of a perfect man." Mr. Elliott spoke of the mental side, physical side and religious side of our lives. His address was a help to all present.

Miss Nellie Hoover has been appointed missionary treasurer for the League.

The League is having splendid topics. Last Monday, Miss Payne, captain of the Girl Guides, gave a splendid and instructive chart talk of the stars.

After the meeting this week, a surprise treat of ice cream and cake was given to the members present by the president and pianist. After a social half-hour the meeting closed.

Mrs. Twigg, Centre street, who returned by motor to Toronto with her son Walter, about two weeks ago, and who has been visiting her sons and daughters in Toronto, motored home on Sunday.

Miss H. R. Patterson and Miss Mary Patterson, Ragian street, who spent a few days last week visiting friends in Toronto, returned to their home on Friday.

Miss Retta Frederick, who spent a month with her uncle and aunt, in Toronto, returned to her home on Church street the last of the week.

Mrs. B. Reid and grandchild, Harriett Reid, is visiting her brother, Mr. James Borland, Seymour and other friends in Campbellford.

Mr. George Stephens and daughter Myrtle of Peterborough, who were in Campbellford attending Mr. Stephen's father's funeral on Sunday, were also the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Beavis, Garry street.

A Cooking Sale.

The cooking sale, afternoon tea and sale of work held in the Baptist church, on Saturday afternoon, under the auspices of the Baptist Canadian Girls in Training, was well patronized and almost everything was sold out.

Those in charge of the sale of work table were Miss Lily Weston, leader of the C.G.I.T., Miss Myrtle Hall, Margery Shaw, Marguerite Reid and Marion Cairns. Those in the tea room, Misses W. Glenn, O. Glenn, I. Adams, G. Willoughby, Violet Mason(the two latter ones cashiers). Dalmas Montgomery was in charge of the cooking table and Dulce Carter the candy table. Miss Evelyn Weston was the convenor of the tea room. The proceeds amounted to sixty-five dollars. Twenty-five of this goes for next summer's "camp fund," and the remainder to help pay for the new piano in the Sunday school room. Miss Weston and her girls are to be congratulated on the success of the afternoon and the interest they take in the work of the Baptist C.G.I.T.

Mrs. Webster, of Edmonton, spent the week end with her sister, Mrs. E. F. Richardson, Mill street. Mrs. Lord, their mother, who has been visiting Mrs. Richardson for some time, returned with Mrs. Webtser to Edmonton on Monday.

Energy for Men in Fry's

A DAILY cup of FRY'S Cocoa will do wonders in giving that energy of body and clearness of mind, you need for a good day's work.

To read the analysis of FRY'S Cocoa is readily to believe the claims of Dr. Andrew Wilson, F.R.S.E., Dr. Robt. Hutchison and many other scientists, that it is the nearest thing to "liquid energy" that exists in the world to-day. Food for every department of the human body, and Nature's kindliest stimulant for heart and nerve—theobromine—is found in FRY'S. Tea and coffee are mere flavours but FRY'S is a complete food.

FRY'S has that delicate "chocolaty" flavour that comes only from a blend of the choicest cocoa beans and the experience of 200 years.

BANK OF MONTREAL REPORTS MARKED GROWTH IN ASSETS

The annual report of the Bank of Montreal for the fiscal year ending October 31st indicates to an extent the more quiet business conditions which have prevailed in many lines of business in Canada during the past twelve months.

On the one hand there has been a steady gain in deposits with this institution, thus increasing the funds available for the business of the country, while on the other hand there was a recession in the requirements for trade and commerce. As a result, the excess funds over commercial requirements are reflected in a marked increase in the holdings of Government bonds and other high grade securities, which under present conditions give a relatively low yield

An analysis of the statement of assets and liabilities shows the strong position in which the Bank has placed itself.

Liquid Assets at High Level.

Total assets at October 31st, the end of the fiscal year, amounted to $748,836,088, as against $692,382,109 at the end of the previous year. Of this amount liquid assets total $468,516,968, at which level they are equivalent to 68.85 per cent of liabilities to the public, as compared with $391,227,837, or 62.55 per cent a year ago.

The principal gain has been under the heading of Government securities and railway bonds and stocks, indicating that, due to lessened commercial activity throughout the country there has been an endeavor to keep as much as possible of the Bank's funds continually employed. Dominion and Provincial Government securities now stand at $91,612,453, up from $63,185,030; Railway and other bonds, debentures and stocks $6,385,569, as against $2,328,051; Canadian Municipal securities and British, Foreign and Colonial Public securities, other than Canadian, $42,392,715, as compared with $37,601,758. In cash holdings the Bank reports gold, subsidiary coin current and Dominion Notes, $94,996,723, up from $81,589,681, and deposit in Central Gold Reserves $14,000,000 compared with $17,000,000.

Deposits Increase.

From month to month the Bank has been reporting gains in deposits and at the end of the fiscal year total deposits ammounted to $636,869,521, as against $579,056,783, a gain of over $57,000,000 during the year These figures indicate a substantial increase in savings accounts and it is also probable that a porftion of the large gai is accouted for by a Government deposits that were being accumulated in anticipation of the payment of loans maturing on November 1st.

Total loans of $254, 259, 220 compared with $276,968,486 at the end of the previous year. The principal accounts in this classification are current loans and discounts in Canada, which now stand at $214,565, 215 as against $236,656,924; and loans to cities, towns and municipalities of $15,432,780, in comparison with last year's figures of $21,703,843.

Profit and Loss Account.

Net profits for the year after deducting charges of management and making full provision for all bad and doubtful debts, were $4,454,504, as compared with $4,496,416 for the previous year. The profits, added to the balance carried forward brought the total amount available for distribution up to $5,114,086. This was distributed as follows: Regular dividends and bonus $3,815,000; provision for taxes Dominion Government $412,500; Reserve for Bank Premises, $125,000; leaving the amount to be carried forward to balance of Profit and Loss at the end of the year at $761,586, as compared with $659,582.

The report will be submitted to shareholders at the annual meeting, which will be held on Monday, December 1st.

CHICAGO WATER SUPPLY.

10-000 Cubic Feet of Water Taken Out of Lake Michigan Every Second.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—(Canadian Press).—Counsel for the Government for the Chicago sanitary district and for a number of cities about the great lakes are getting ready for argument before the Supreme Court of the United States next week of the case involving the right of Chicago sanitary district to take 10,000 cubic feet of water per second from Lake Michigan.

The case is of utmost importance to the whole Great Lakes region. Enormous drainage, it is claimed, lowers the lakes and damages no less than 100 harbors in the United States and 50 in Canada. Lakes are said to be lowered 8½ inches by drainage, while there is still greater lowering in the St. Lawrence.

BUILDINGS WATCHED.

Wild Night Drinking Parties Are To Be Stopped.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—(Canadian Press).—Government police patrolling the Senate and House office buildings as well as the Capitol, are under strict orders to prevent rooms being made scenes of wild night drinking parties and rendevous for bootleggers. New orders have been issued as a result of recent incidents in which Miss Clara Miles, aged 26 years, jumped from the second story window of Senator Lenroot and broke her leg. The incident was only one of many known to the Capitol police.

NEW O.H.A. TROPHY.

Consolation Series of Intermediate and Junior Series.

TORONTO, Nov. 25.—(Canadian Press).—It is the intention of the Ontario Hockey association this winter to run a consolation series in Intermediate and Junior sections. This series will be open to all teams entering the O.H.A. this season full winters hockey.

Group winners will go on as usual in elimination for championships while losers will battle amongst themselves for new trophy. Details of new competition will be worked out at annual convention of the O.H.A. to be held Saturday, December 6th at the Temple Building, Toronto. This new service will be very popular with smaller towns and villages, throughout the province.

ENFORCEMENT OF O.T.A. OUTLINED

Province Has Been Divided Into Three Districts With Separate Inspectors.

TORONTO, Nov. 25.—(Canadian Press).—For better enforcement of the Ontario temperance act as outlined recently by Hon. W. F. Nickle, K.C., attorney General, Province has been divided into three districts—Toronto and Vicinity, Western Ontario and Eastern Ontario. J. A. Ayearst, has been named chief inspector for Toronto and district, Frank E. Elliott of Stratford for Western Ontario, and William Bain for Eastern Ontario.

Plans for new enforcement campaign were before a conference held yesterday afternoon in office of General V. A. S. Williams, commissioner of Ontario provincial police.

Inspector Bain is a new man on the provincial police. For the past five years he has been chief of police at Trenton and, it is said has purged that district of bootleggers and criminals. P. A. Ayearst who will enforce law around Toronto has been for 20 years actively associated in temperance work, enforcing liquor laws. He became provincial officer early in the days of Whitney Government.

PRINCE PLANS NEXT TRIP.

He Will Leave For South Africa on March 25th.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—(Canadian Press).—It is officially announced that the Prince of Wales will leave England about March 25 for South Africa. The Prince will visit encrute Gambia, Sierre Leone, Gold coast, Nigeria and St. Helena.

TRIAL OF MRS. SERAFINI WAS STARTED YESTERDAY

Evidence Heard Was Repetition of That in Former Bandits' Trial.

MONTREAL, Nov. 25.—(Canadian Press).—The trial of Mary Serafini, charged with the same offense that sent her husband and three other men to the gallows at Bordeaux jail last month, namely the murder of Henri Cleroux, who was murdered during the hold-up of the bank of Hochelaga collection car on April 1, was started here yesterday. Evidence heard was a repetition of that in the former bandits trial.

R. L. Calder, K.C., Crown prosecutor, in his address to Jury went over particulars of the hold-up and shooting of Cleroux and one of the bandits, Paul Stone.

The World Creates No Finer Skates

PEOPLE who skate for the first time on C.C.M. Automobile Skates are delighted with their easy, free-running qualities.

The reason for this is largely due to the Special Chrome Nickel Steel used. This steel takes a hard, keen, smooth-running edge, which enables you to get full power out of every stroke. A little effort gives much speed!

The blades of C.C.M. Skates have a peculiar springy toughness and flint-hard edge, thanks to an ingenious C.C.M. method of heat treatment, which eliminates brittleness and makes C.C.M. skates practically unbreakable. They will stand very severe usage without bending or snapping.

There are C.C.M. Skates for hockey, for racing, for figure skating, for pleasure skating. Skates for men, women, boys and girls, from 90c to $15 per pair. Each one a good skate for the price asked.

PROVINCIAL FINANCES.

The action of Provincial Treasurer Col. W. H. Price in bringing down what practically amounts to the budget within a few weeks of the end of the fiscal year instead of waiting until the Legislature is in session is a novelty that will be appreciated.

The financial year, so far as the Province is concerned, ends on October 31st, and hitherto Provincial Treasurers have withheld all information as to Ontario's financial position until the session, which usually meant that the budget figures were not known until March at the earliest.

There was no reason for this delay except precedent, and Col. Price has chosen to ignore the old custom, with the result that the people of the Province know just about where Ontario stands.

As to the figures themselves they show that there has been a deficit for the year of $8,556,039, as compared with $15,195,226 last year.

The ordinary revenues, the Provincial Treasurer claims, have increased in every department, the total being $40,500,642, or an increase of $6,390,430 over the preceding year.

On the other hand, the ordinary expenditures have been lowered by $248,756, but in this connection the report says that heavy payments were made on Drury Government accounts, and that the actual decrease affected by the present administration was over $3,000,000.

BATTLE ENDS TODAY.

Today the people of West Hastings are deciding by their ballots the question of whether E. Gus Porter shall finish his term at Ottawa or whether his seat shall be filled by Charles Hanna, the Liberal standard bearer.

To the average voter in the riding that must appear to be the real question to be settled, for so many other issues have been introduced by so many speakers in so many different ways that the man-on-the-street may be forgiven if he dismisses them all from his mind and marks his ballot according to his own views as to the candidates and the parties.

Few by-elections in Canada have been marked by the presence of so many political leaders, and in few contests have so many public meetings been held.

West Hastings is a big riding, but it has been covered from one end to the other by speakers on both sides, and last night the campaign ended with the unusual event of two mass meetings in Belleville on the one night, the Government meeting held in the Armouries and the Porter gathering in the Opera House.

Both sides express themselves as confident of the results.

The intensity of the fight has communicated itself to the county generally, and the Examiner, in common with newspapers all over the Dominion, expects many inquiries tonight as to what happened in West Hastings today.

DISPENSING CHRISTMAS CHEER.

With the rapid approach of Christmas, those social service organizations, church societies and other similar bodies are beginning to plan for the seasonal activities that take the form of bringing Christmas cheer into the homes of citizens who because of unemployment or from some other good reason are not in a position this year to supply such things for their families.

There will be rather more than the usual need of such activity this Christmas of 1924 from present indications, especially should severe weather conditions set in early.

Fortunately, there are many organizations ready to assume their share of the burden, and the only danger is that because of the multiplicity of bodies anxious to help the work of dispensing Christmas cheer may be overdone in some cases and not done at all in others.

In other words, it seems to the Examiner at least that there is a very evident need of a systematized scheme for the carrying on of this most necessary work, a sort of a clearing house as it were through which the various organizations could find out what is being done by others and be informed as to what was expected of them.

Nothing very elaborate in the way of an organization would be needed, but it at least should be possible to have a central bureau—the Chamber of Commerce might perhaps undertake the task—where enough information would be available to prevent overlapping and duplication, and to ensure that in every Peterborough home this Christmas there will be something of the Yuletide good cheer and happiness.

MAKE THEM UNIFORM.

An earnest effort is to be made at the inter-Provincial roads conference, which opens in Toronto today, with representatives present from all parts of Canada, to secure uniformity of traffic regulations throughout the various Provinces of Canada so that wherever a Canadian tourist goes he will encounter the same laws and regulations as in his home Province.

It is a movement that deserves success.

There is no real reason why the Provinces cannot reach a common ground in their regulations in regard to speed laws, headlights, road signs and other matters of that kind.

For years British Columbia had a keep-to-the-left rule, which was not only a nuisance to every driver from outside the Province but was also a menace to safety, while the British Columbian in turn when he came into other Provinces where the keep-to-the-right custom prevailed was similarly handicapped.

This glaring difference was abolished as a result of a previous inter-Provincial conference, and there are other discrepancies and variations in the regulations that should be straightened out to the general advantage.

In the days before the motor car it did not matter very much how widely the traffic laws varied.

The Ontario man seldom, if ever, had occasion to drive in Quebec, and so he did not care what the regulations there were.

Today, however, the automobile has made inter-Provincial travel a matter of course, and it is essential that uniformity in the rules shall be reached.

ONE ISSUE WITH THEM.

J. A. Currie, M.L.A. for S.E. Toronto, brought out the views of the practical politician when the Conservative convention in Toronto was discussing the result of the recent plebiscite vote in Ontario. He said:

"I have found that this temperance or prohibition question always brings grief and no votes to the Tory party."

That is the point of the man who sees nothing ahead except the date of the next election, says the London Advertiser. The view is that of the cramped mind of a ward politician. Every question considered, each bit of policy, must be measured only by its ability to secure a certain number of votes at the next election. There is nothing heroic, nothing daring about it—simply that the party must stay in power, and the sweets of office become more precious than the bearing of honorable scars in a battle where a principle is at stake.

Poor and spineless as was the Currie motive, it did not carry with it the colossal impertinence or the political stupidity of J. A. McCausland of Southwest Toronto, who made of himself a nuisance at the Conservative convention. Premier Ferguson's declaration that he was determined to have regard only to the vote expressed by the people on October 23 was not sufficient for McCausland, who fears that his political existence is at stake because he can do nothing for the wet majority in his riding. To him it is the only question of importance on the political horizon; he has closed his eyes to all other issues, and for that reason his usefulness in the Legislature—if he ever had any—has departed.

Mr. McCausland has made the people weary with his threats of resignation. By all means he should carry that threat into operation at once. It might come as an awful shock to him, but is is a fact that things would run along very well without him.

PARTY ORGANS.

There was a time, not so very long ago, when the general public had the idea that the newspapers of this country derived most of their revenue from—yea, even exlated by the grace of—this or that political party, "trust," or "big interest." No doubt, there were instances where such was the case, but, as a general proposition, it was never true to the degree that the public supposed.

When the Great War was on, and union government was established, and all the resources of the country were mobilized in defense of our very existence, it is easy to imagine what happened to newspapers whose revenue depended upon party patronage; for parties there were none, and party patronage there was none, and newsprint was selling at $120 a ton, f.o.b. the mill, as compared to $40 delivered, before the war.

The war and union government were the great emancipators, in whatever degree emancipation may have been necessary. The process of emancipation worked in two ways: First, by the elimination of that parasitical section of the press which depended for its existence upon patronage, rather than on the strength of its economic position as an advertising medium; secondly, the necessities of war time demonstrated the value of newspaper publicity as it had never before been demonstrated. The newspapers of the country came into their own in popular recognition as the most effective and economical means of reaching the people. The economic position of the newspaper as an advertising medium—as the most important cog in the machinery of merchandise distribution—was established beyond peradventure, and newspaper revenues increased accordingly. Nowadays newspapers must stand or fall upon their ability to function satisfactorily as great show windows in which merchants can display their wares to the people—great show windows, properly dressed and lighted with the best editorials, news and features obtainable.

Reputable newspapers no longer seek to swell their circulation with subscriptions which are of little value to the newspaper in fulfilling its functions as a distributor of merchandise. Reputable newspapers never have sold and nowadays less than ever have need to sell their news and editorial columns to any political party or interest for a mess of patronage. The greatest material safeguard to the freedom of the press is adequate revenue derived from much and diversified advertising and circulation.—Hamilton Spectator.

WALL STREET'S WAY.

(New York American.)

"How can I fail to make money in this stock market?" asks the Little Man, tempted to speculate. "Stocks are going up: everyone says we are in for a boom; why shouldn't I make money there, too."

Little Men do not often make money even in a rising "bull" market—or keep the money when made. They buy stock on slender margins. When there are professional traders become bears and drive the speculative stocks down far enough to "shake out" the margin holders. "Shake out" is a polite term for making the margin holders lose all they have put up.

Thereupon the market starts gaily up again, and on its rise it accumulates another pool of money of the Little Men. Then they draw off that pool and repeat. It's a perfectly natural process.

With rare exceptions, Little Men do not make money on any kind of a market. Its fluctuations ruin them. People who buy and pay for stocks—as much as they can afford—and forget the fluctuating daily market often make and keep money.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

It will seem quiet in West Hastings tomorrow when the Captains and the Kings have departed.

Don't forget to decorate your home or place of business in honour of the Governor-General's visit on Friday.

A Government official declares that there are 5,000 people in Ontario's jails and penitentiaries and five times that number outside who ought to be in. Does he mean there are that many bootleggers?

GOVT. ECONOMY FORCES OUT 28,000 TEACHERS

BERLIN, Nov. 25. — Owing to the rigidly entorced economy measures of the government there are 28,000 graduated teachers in Prussia without position and only slight chance of any obtaining work for themselves.

In Berlin there are 1,800 of them working as street car conductors, postal clerks, coal heavers, piano players in motion picture houses and other classes of employment.

A THOUGHT.

"A thankful heart is not only the greatest virtue, but the parent of all the other virtues."—Cicero.

THANKSGIVING

May I never let a day go by that does not record some thought or deed of gratitude for its opportunities of service afforded me.

May I strive always for patience and tolerance, and be truly penitent when I fail of understanding and appreciation that there is always another whose burdens are heavier than mine, or, at least, one whose strength is less.

May I so live that I shall learn a little more and love a little better each day, and always may I be as grateful as I am this day.

MEMORIES

Oh, for the beautiful time of make believe when as children we played that rocks were fortresses and shrubs were trees; when the hay-loft represented a cabin in the hills and the old cow browsing in the back lot was a wild buffalo we longed to kill; when the neighbor boys, dressed up in old red tablecloths and chicken feathers, stealthily approached to make us surrender our dolls and their finery only to be smothered by the dust from a feed bag since we dare not try the scalding water as did a Puritan maiden in a favorite story!

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Nov. 24.—Today's cattle were just ordinary and the early business forecasted steady prices with a demand none too urgent.

Rogers & Maybee are only buying about 150 steers for today's shipment, and these were bought from from $6.00 $7.25 a cwt. and about steady with last week. G. Campbell of Alvinston, had 19 steers in for which he received $7.15 a cwt. plus freight, but these cost $8 a cwt, when taken out last spring and the seller said he had lost money on the transaction. Frank Hunnisett was a heavy buyer of baby beeves, which cost from $7 to $8.25 a cwt. The same buyer also took some rough heavy steers at $5.25 a cwt. The top paid for handyweight butchers was for two 1,000 lbs. each at $6.25 a cwt.

There were fairly heavy dealings in stockers and feeders this morning. One firm took three loads from 750 to 950 lbs. each, at $4.75 a cwt. Adam Peterman bought a load averaging 900 lbs. each at $5.10 a cwt. Butchers cows were steady. Most of the cows on offer did not class above mediums and these sold from $2.75 to $3.25 a cwt. The best of the canner cows brought $1.75 a cwt. Cutters were $2.00 to $2.50 a cwt.

Among today's calves were quite a shipment of heavy ones from the west. These went in bunches to the packers at 3½ cents a pound, but Ontario grassers were 25 cents a cwt. higher. The calf trade has flattened out and only a few choice calves sold at 10 and 10½ cents. Medium calves are not better than 8 cents.

Lambs were firmer from 25 to 50 cents a cwt. and Fred Dunn had 400 some from Manitoulin Island, which he was holding at 12½ cents a pound. Reasonably light lambs sold at 12 cents and one large bunch over 100 lbs. each sold at $11.60. Good butchers' sheep were 6½ cents.

There was no fixed market on hogs this morning, but it was understood that the price at last weekend of $9 a cwt. f.o.b. was holding.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.— Largely on account of a decided falling off in the United States visible supply total, the first decrease shown in four months, wheat to-day scored a substantial upturn in price with May delivery and July as well both over topping the highest previous quotations this season. The wheat market closed firm at 1 1-4 to 2c net gain, December 1.55 3-4 to 1.55 7-8 and May 1.63 1-2 to 1.63 5-8. Corn finished at 3-8c decline to 1-4 advance, oats 1-8 to 1-2 up and provisions unchanged to 25c higher.

STERLING RATES

MONTREAL, Nov. 24.—Sterling exchange rates were quoted here today as follows: Sterling demand $4.62 5-8; Sterling cables $4.63.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Nov. 24.—The feature of the local cash grain trade today was the improved demand from domestic and Ontario buyers for supplies which resulted in a fairly active business being done with sales of No. 2 northern spring wheat at $1.71 per bushel, and No. 3 northern at $1.65 per bushel, c.i.f., bay ports. The principal demand was for oats and it was estimated that between 300,000 to 400,000 bushels changed hands, including sales of No. 1, extras at 5 cents per bushel over the Winnipeg November option, c.i.f. Montreal. There was also some demand for car lots of Ontario malting barley and sales of No. 3 extra grade were made at $1.08, and No. 3 grade at $1.07 per bushel, ex-track and car lots of Ontario No. 2 white oats sold at 62 cents, No. 3 grade at 60 cents and No. 4 grade at 58 cents per bushel ex-store.

A stronger feeling developed in the market for all lines of mill-feed and prices scored an advance of $1.00 per ton which was attributed to better demand for both domestic and export account. Prices were firm for all grades of rolled oats.

The egg situation was featured by the strong feeling that developed for strictly fresh grades and prices were advanced 4 to 5 cents per dozen. Storage grades were also up 1 to 2 cents per dozen. Owing to the listed demand from all sources for butter the market was extremely dull. The export business in cheese showed no improvement although the trend was steady.

Beans were quoted at $2.75 and $2.85 per bushel for one and three pound pickers.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, Nov. 25.—Mr. and Mrs. John Simpson and family spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. John Fairman of Seymour West.

The weekly prayer service will be held as usual on Thursday evening Mr. Alfred Simpson having charge of the meeting.

Mr. Alfred Barnum left on Friday morning for Toronto, where he will spend a few days.

Mr. Thos. Fry has finished the erection of his new house on the 11th Concession, the carpenters having left the past week.

RELIGIOUS BOOK PROVES GERMANY'S BEST SELLER

FREIBURG, Nov. 25.—Racy topics do not always furnish the year's best sellers in German literature. Last year's selling record was held by Bishop Keppler's religious book, "Mehr Freude" (More Joy), which scored 175,000 copies on the first edition. The demand was so large that translations were made into Bohemian, Danish, Norwegian, English, Flemish, French, Italian, Dutch, Portuguese, Swedish, Spanish and Hungarian.

NEWS OF HASTINGS.

Another Party of Hunters Return Home—Personal Mention.

HASTINGS, Nov. 24.—Another party of hunters returned home on Saturday evening. The members of the party were: Messrs. Fred Boyce, Kearney, captain of the team; George Boyce, Kearney; Renny Teasdale, Kearney; Dr. Armstrong, Jos. Braithwaite, Wilfred Hicks, Alex. Shearer, Roseneath; Mr. Armstrong, Warkworth; Arthur Fleming, D. E. Scriver and W. S. Wellman, Hastings.

This party camped at Rainy Lake, on the border of Algonquin Park in Nipissing District. Many amusing instances are related by different members of the party, one being that on the first day out, when they were out blazing the trail, one of the men became exhausted with fatigue and had to be carried back to camp, which was a distance of about three miles.

A very unfortunate hunter of Roseneath who was on the watch behind a good-sized tree, seemingly heard a faraway noise in the bushes, and the sound of the hounds baying in the distance. On stepping out from his watch to the clearing he collided with two young deer who were running wild as a result of the chase, one of the deer kicking him on the shin and the other toppled him over.

When he got up and came to his senses he took aim at the fast-fleeing game but missed his mark, and too late realized that his chance was lost.

The hunters report plenty of game, and weather conditions much the same as those locally. The party procured their full count and a splendid time is reported.

The secretary of the Hastings Hockey Club has received a communication from the secretary of the Trent Valley League that a meeting of the league is to be held at the Royal Hotel in Marmora on Friday afternoon, Nov. 28, to arrange for the coming season's schedule.

Some of those from Hastings who, on Friday night, attended the High School "at home" in Campbellford were Misses Francis and Helen Jones, Vera and Elsie Weeks, Muriel and Ruby Cruikshank, Edna Brooks, Mary Walsh, Myrtle Dodd, Norma Anderson, Messrs. Bryant Scriver, W. E. Tate, Clifford Baker, David Walsh and Lynn Hill.

Miss Elna Portway, Mae and Lea Bertrand, of Norwood, spent Saturday in Hastings.

Mr. Bert Plant, of Smooth Rock Falls, has been the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Plant, Bridge Street.

Mrs. S. J. Merrill and Miss Pearl, of the Wilson Settlement, were the guests of the former's sister, Mrs. A. V. German, on Sunday.

RAJAH STOPPED

Raymer Goddard, one of the bank's attorneys, told Justice Darling that "Mr. A."—as the rajah for reasons of state, is known—actually handed over the second check to Robinson and his associates. The bank's defence is that the potentate was blackmailed.

"Mr. A." is the dusky son of an Indian potentate, so powerful that his name is kept from the newspapers although everyone in London knows it by this time. He was surprised with the lady in a Paris hotel, and wrote a cheque for 150,000 pounds on the spot to avoid publicity. Those who acquired the cheque deposited it in the Midland bank, where most of the money was drawn by one of them, without the knowledge of the bookmaker husband, who has made it up with his wife, and now wants the money.

Robinson is suing the bank which is attempting to show that the Indian prince was blackmailed, with connivance on the part of the fair, plump inamorata.

The first witness on Monday was one of the alleged conspirators, Hobbs, who testified he had not brought with him the documents demanded by the court last Friday. Some of these—cheques and papers—had been stolen, he said, and some he had never had.

These cheques were said to have included one for 130,000. Hobbs, in his testimony, was in an unenviable position, being under cross fire from both sides. The bank alleges that he with Mr. and Mrs. Robinson and others, conspired to blackmail the Indian potentate. Robinson denied that either he or the wife were parties to anything of the sort, but accused Hobbs, with others, of having blackmailed the prince and appropriated money which His Higness intended as a settlement on Mrs. Robinson.

Robinson asserted that he knew of only 25,000 pounds being paid by the Prince until he discovered that Hobbs et al., had obtained 125,000 pounds more in his (Robinson's) name. Robinson claims that the bank paid out this money to Hobbs et al., on forged signatures, and that the money, in reality should have gone to Robinson.

Hobbs said that a Captain Charles Moss in the court room, claimed to have paid 20 pounds for some of Hobbs' papers in the case. The captain was identified, and ordered by the judges to leave the room.

Not British.

Among the other witnesses was an Anglo-South American bank official, who testified that Hobbs had opened an account in the Paris branch of the bank with 120,000 pounds. He added that 90,000 francs of this amount were transferred to the account of the Indian prince's white aide-de-camp, and another account opened for Montague Newton, with 40,000 pounds. Newton is accused by both the bank and Robinson of having been a party to the alleged blackmail. The presiding judge took occasion to explain that the aide-de-camp mentioned was not a British army officer.

The intense interest in the present case was demonstrated by the long lines of people who stood throughout the night in the cold November fog, waiting for the court to open. Stylishly dressed society women and men rubbed elbows with east siders, calmly munching breakfast from packages and with messenger boys who were holding places for wealthy patrons.

terfere with the independence of Egypt which was granted in 1922, but merely clears up and enforce that agreement. It is further pointed out that it was intended to discuss these questions with Zaghoul during the last visit to London, but the Egyptian Premier's attitude was said to have made such discussion impossible.

The military forces of Great Britain in the Sudan consist, not including the Sudanese troops, of about two battalions. There is approximately one division in Egypt. The Egyptian forces consists of about seven battalions with two battalions in the Sudan.

New Government Formed.

CAIRO, Egypt, Nov. 25.—A new Government headed by Ziwar Pasha, president of the Senate, has taken control in Egypt. Zaghoul Pasha, having complied with the British demands as far as he deemed expedient—an apology, the payment of indemnity, and the promise to punish the assissins of Sir Lee Stack, Sirdar of the Egyptian army—withdrew from the Premiership, and his resignation was immediately accepted by King Fuad.

Ziwar Pasha also takes the office of Foreign affairs, until it is known whether Ahmed Zulficar Pasha, Minister at Rome, to whom the portfolio has been offered, will accept.

Other members of the new Cabinet as officially announced are: Communications, Nekhj Aguirgi Moteit; Education and Justice, Khashaba Pasha; War, General Sadek Yehia Pasha; public works, Osman Muharren Bey; agriculture, Mohammed Said Abu Ali Pasha; Pious Foundations, Mohammed Sidky Pasha.

On the assembling of the chamber last evening the former Premier, Zaglout Pasha, received an ovation He announced that he had tendered his resignation upon the receipt of Viscount Allenby's note on November 22 but the King asked him to reconsider his decision. When he was notified Monday of the seizure of the customs by the British he informed the King that he would do everything for his except remain in power. He had entered the Government for the country's good, and was leaving it for the country's good. His Ministry had endeavored to deal with the critical situation arising from the deplorable crime, but Egypt would probably be exposed to dangers which could be avoided by the Cabinet's resignation.

Zaglout exhorted the nation to preserve the utmost calm in these anxious times and promised to support the new Government. Madame Zaglout was an interested spectator of the proceedings.

Opposition speakers attacked Zaglout, accusing him of weakness and failure to protect the country's dignity against Great Britain's onslaught. Various motions from both opposition members and supporters of the former Premier were mainly to the effect that the Egyptian Parliament protested to all Parliaments and to the League of Nations against the British action. The Chamber adjourned until the new Ministry was completed, after appointing a committee to examine these motions

One hundred British marines were landed yesterday at Alexandria and occupied the customs. This action, however, did not interfere with ordinary business, and all remains quiet.

POLITICS BORE RADIO FANS.

BERLIN, Nov. 25.—(Associated Press).—Radio amateurs in Germany have no interest in solo singing or poetry, and they are not keen about sermons, a nation-wide poll has disclosed.

Light opera music is the most popular subject for radio broadcasting, and next comes the news of the day. The weather reports interest many people, as do lectures in Esperanto and lessons in foreign languages. Fashion news and politics are well down toward the bottom of the list.

HALIFAX SOCIETY ENTERTAINED

agreed to preach a sermon in the local church in the near future. He made frequent excursions to this city where he became a member of the Nova Scotia Yacht Squadron.

Chose Clients Among Rich.

Unlike the Boston Ponzi, who chose to reap his ill-gotten gains from working people, poor widows and orphans, Koretz selected keen-minded analysts of trade and exchange, high-priced executives, shrewd lawyers, wealthy men and rich widows as his clientele. Nor did he spare his own mother and other relatives.

Koretz is alleged to have used three kinds of bait with which to play his clients—oil, rice and booze. Those who did not invest in his first venture in Arkansas rice fields, were induced to put large sums of money into his oil scheme, the Bayano River Trust of Panama, where there was supposed to be a wonderful El Dorado — twenty-seven oil wells just gushing with gold, ten tank steamers, saw mills, railroads, pipe lines and limitless riches for those who were lucky enough to get in on the stock. Or if this failed, he had "booze certificates" to sell, and it was learned that Koretz was heavily engaged in liquor deals.

His rich and shrewd clients were like children in his hands. They listened to him, feted him, drank his liquor, accepted his hospitality, invited him to their own homes, felt honored when he appeared and then tumbled over each other in frantic efforts to entrust money to him for investment in one of his three schemes.

Suave in manner good-looking, the best dancer and the best dressed of Chicago men, Koretz was a prime favorite with the ladies and they "fell for" his ventures. Even his secretary invested $3,500.

Entertained Investors

Koretz paid his closest attention to oil. It was oil that was featured on the handsome menus of one elaborate banquet to seventeen of his investors in June, 1922. On the cover was a childhood portrait of Koretz and on the frontispiece was another labeled: "The Man of To-day." Futher along were his own caricatures entitled "Wallingford" and "Ponzi."

Then there was a "dividend dinner" at the Drake hotel when a tiny train ran around the table, which was decorated in the middle with oil derricks in miniature and a replica of an entrancing, tropical forest.

It was this dinner, however, that led to the downfall of Koretz. "How about an inspection tour of the property?" one of the investors suggested.

"Fine," said Koretz. "I'll pay all expenses."

And so the expedition was arranged.

They started out from Chicago and Leo traveled as far as New York with them. There he saw them on to the boat, gave each a handsome gold bill-fold and adjured them to "live like kings—it's all on me."

A few days later came a bewildered cablegram from Panama, addressed to Koretz in Chicago: Unable to locate property. Cable further directions.

It was unanswered and, next day, came another this time to a brother of one of the voyagers. It read: Get in touch with Leo. Can't find property here.

Efforts to "get in touch with Leo" revealed that he had quietly checked out of the St. Regis Hotel, New York, leaving no forwarding address!

The Bubble Bursts

A county grand jury and a federal grand jury began to investigate Koretz's operations and his alleged liabilities and bankruptcy proceedings were opened. Meanwhile a search for the missing man was started both in the United States and in other countries. It was thought at the time that he might have escaped to a Central American country, put out to sea in a speed motor boat, or headed for South America by aeroplane. Descriptions were broadcast over land and sea by telegraph, wireless and radio. Then a search of his office revealed torn letters that indicated he had recently purchased the Flying Fox, a powerful steam-going yacht, formerly owned jointly by Jacob H. Schiff, Charles Broadway Reise and C. K. Billings and it was thought he might be headed for Czecho-Slovakia. The yacht was equipped with wireless, thus enabling him to keep track of the efforts being used by this means to trace him.

Numerous bottles labeled 'oil' but containing pre-Volstead liquor were also found in his office. There was also a letter from a firm of New York jewellers stating that a black pearl scarf pin had been shipped to him and that it was a bargain at $6,700. There were also bills for a cheaper scarf pin for $2,205, and many other bills, several of them unpaid. Correspondence also showed that a member of the law firm for which he had once worked as office boy had invested $25,000 in the rice scheme and $15,000 in the oil venture. Another investor had put in $200,000 and another $100,000. It was very evident that Koretz did not deal with small fry.

Interesting information was forthcoming as to his 'come on' methods of procedure. Just before his departure he returned to a woman, a former school teacher, $35,000, which he told her was accrued premiums on her original investment of $25,000. This woman promptly turned the money over to the creditors' committee after the bubble had burst.

Another case was that of a merchant who invested $100,000, only to receive it back in a short time with $20,000 more accompanied by a cheery note from Koretz. Needless to say this merchant was a heavy loser when the break came.

When Koretz disappeared his wife was living with her children in an expensive suburban home, surrounded by many luxuries, all gifts of her husband whom she believed was a millionaire "broker." She knew little of his business operations, however. When the full extent of her husband's operations was known, Mrs. Kodetz sold her jewelry and automobiles to add to the restitution fund. Koretz's mother, who had invested $45,000 in her son's schemes, and other relatives also contributed to the fund, the total from the family amounting to some $400,000.

Koretz was the son of middle-class Jewish parents and was very ambitious when he entered a law office as office boy. He studied law books at night and finally went to a law school from which he graduated and opened an office. He was not particularly successful as a lawyer, however, but always boasted that some day he would make a fortune.

TRAVELLER'S TIP.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—Leo Koretz, arrested in Halifax, was located by a "tip" from a Chicago traveller who met and became suspicious of the "retired millionaire," as Koretz was known in Halifax. Prosecutors in several branches of the courts may fight for the right to bring Koretz to trial, but although the Government will charge him with failure to file income tax returns, Attorney Crowe's office is expected to try the case first.

McGarmody, he said. Witnesses said he had been shown them by his deceased informant.

Witness had also made reports regarding a little game operated in the kiosk in Lafontaine park and had told Alderman Brodeur that Bellefleur also played cards in various police station for money. Information on this last point had been given him by constables from the station in question. These affairs covered the years 1920, 1921 and 1922.

Son Used Stolen Bicycle?

Then there had been the matter of a bicycle, which witness had also reported to the executive chairman as being in Captain Bellefleur's possession during 1922 and 1923. The machine had been stolen in the first place and was used by Captain Bellefleur's son.

Bellefleur, according to Carle's information to Mr. Brodeur, had also used cots belonging to the police department, while constables had to use second-rate ones.

Witness said he had also brought to the attention of the executive information concerning the Rose David house at 2403 St. Lawrence boulevard, also known as "the municipal house." This resort witness claimed was known as "the police disorderly house" and was patronized by the police. He had asked Mr. Brodeur to make an inquiry into conditions there and he would find that members of the force were mixed up in the place's operation. This house was supported by the police, he declared.

Carle told the commission that the police union, of which he was founder, had come into being on September 10, 1918, to cope with unsatisfactory conditions in the force in regard to four main points: "Salaries, clothing, long hours of duty, and general treatment of the personnel by their superiors." The salary question was fought out at arbitration, following the police strike, and settled during the end of February and beginning of March, 1919.

Asked for the result Carle stated that an increase of $50 had been given to the constables in January and a further $300 following the board of arbitration's ruling, making a total of $350, bringing the constables' pay up to $1,100, $1,200, $1,300 or $1,400, according to his grading. Sergeants under the revised plan had received $1,500. The original demands of the union had been $1,700 for constables and $2,500 for captain as they had wished to be in line with other cities such as Toronto and Ottawa.

Carle went into a long discussion on police conditions in 1918, declaring that in their clothes they looked more like rag pickers than policemen." A long laugh went up when witness recalled that one year the summer tunics had been handed out in October and the winter overcoats in February or March.

Asked for a statement of the grievances of the men at the time of the police union's formation under the heading of "general treatment," witness replied that some men were well treated, while others were not. Some were shown favor and others disfavor. There was no system for the recognition of merit.

"Do you know of any case of promotion in particular that you can refere to?" "Yes, Captain Bourgeors was appointed inspector."

"By what means." "By means of $2,500." (Laughter).

"By means ot paying money?" "By means of cash—cash paid."

"Are these suppositions proven facts?" "They have been proven in a court of law."

Mr. Lanctot: "To whom was this money paid?" "To—I forget—I believe to a certain notary."

Still Pay For Promotions.

"Do you consider that the difficulties regarding promotions in the police force have been adjusted." "It is still a question of patronage and favoritism."

"What do you mean?" "Well, it's a question of the value of the "shares"—when the shares are high enough people go up and when they are low they don't."

Witness, pressed by counsel, stated that he meant money was paid for promotion in the force.

"Have you any particular case you can cite?" Yes, sir. Lieut. Demers used to be a constable at the corner of St. Denis and St. Catherine streets. He told me that a promotion had cost him $500 and a few months later he was promoted."

Witness went on to explain that the union wanted honest, sober and intelligent men taken on the force, and also to get them treatment based on merit, competence and education.

If the police force was conducted on fair lines, giving jusice to all, Carle did not think a union for the policemen would be necessary. There were still injustices suffered by constables and officers, as for instance witness' own case. He had been fifteen years, four months and 27 days on the force. He entered as a result of recommendations by several constables after he had saved a constable's life by disarming an assailant. In 1913 he was appointed police instructor and in 1914 he was promoted captain. In 1923 he was removed from his position. His record during the whole fifteen years contained only one entry in any way against him, and that was the record of the incident which brought about his discharge.

Why He Was Discharged

The incident in question occurred on May 23, 1923, when he was captain in charge of a station. There was trouble between the executive committee and the police union at that time, and he had openly manifested his support of the union. On the date he mentioned he had entered in his station diary "Capt. Carle visiting the district," and had gone out for that purpose.

On the front steps of the station he met a friend who reminded him that he was due to appear at the police union to be installed as secretary-treasurer that evening. Witness protested he had no time to go, but the friend offered to drive him there in his car and assured him that it would only take a few minutes. In all he was away from the station an hour and a quarter, of which time three-quarter of an hour was taken up with his appearance at the union. While absent he had left a constable in the charge of the station. There had been a false alarm during his absence, otherwise all had been quiet.

He made up his reports as usual and continued on duty all night. A few days later his conscience smote him because he had not made a perfectly accurate entry regarding the evening of May 23. He also feared that someone might inform his superiors that he had been away from duty that night. So he corrected the entry, striking out "Capt. Carle visiting district" and substituted "Capt. Carle at the union.

A few days after that his diary had been called for at headquarters, Chief Belanger then informing him it was for a little matter—a bagatelle. Soon afterwards he was removed from his position.

CRITICISM UP TO DATE.

"Of late years," said a distinguished professor to his class the other day, "literary criticism has greatly gained in breadth and geniality." There is much color to the statement. The personalities that marked differences of opinion in the age of Dryden and Pope, and made rival reviewers fierce antagonists off the literary arena as well as in it, have been, on the whole, conspicuous by their absence in these more sedate times. Even the petulant flippancy with which Jeffrey assailed Wordsworth or the Quarterly, castigated Keats, has been more or less relegated to the discard, and for a long time nothing has appeared in print to equal the savagery of the attack made on Montgomery by Macaulay.

The veneer of conventionality is, however, very thin and not difficult to pierce, and there are some temperaments that are eternally on the ache to pierce it. When a literateur of some note wrote a few years ago to a magazine which had published a rather unfavorable notice of one of his works and used the locution, "You should not allow your man to take such liberties," he was, and he meant to be, deliberately insulting to the reviewer in question.

Only the other day a lady novelist and critic arrived at New York from London to take up her residence in this country. She at once showed the mettle of her posture by firing off certain broadsides at some of her fellow-citizens in the republic of letters. Of one of them, well known for the production of a few whimsical works, she said, "So-and-So is the ass who sits in the Cafe Royale." She is apparently fond of that short and ugly word, for speaking of a much discussed book by another writer, she damned it with faint praise by the assertion, "Genius ought to be allowed occasionally to make an ass of itself."

It is to be hoped that these effervescences will be toned down by contact with the hard facts of literature as it is practiced and of life as it is lived in the United States. If not, and if the samples given are to be regarded as symptomatic of a new era in criticism, the prospect is startling, not to say terrifying.

REQUESTS TO SHERIFF TO WITNESS HANGING

McGaughey's Lawyer Has Not Given Up Hope of Commutation.

LINDSAY, Nov. 25.—The date when Fred McGaughey must face the law's decree for the murder of Beatrice Fee is fast approaching, and as the time grows shorter hope for a commutation of the sentence or a stay in the execution becomes fainter. The authorities here believe that the sentence of the court will be carried out on December 5th, although Mr. Leslie Frost, counsel for the condemned young man, has not entirely given up hope.

Sheriff Vrooman has already been approached for permission to be present at the jail on the date in question. These inquiries have been made by representatives of the press as well as one or two medical men. The Sheriff is giving those inquiries very serious consideration, and if permission is given any person outside of jail officials, etc., to be present, certain conditions must be conformed to.

STEAMSHIP AGROUND.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.— The steamship Esperanza, of the Ward Line, is ashore near the Tampico Bar. Passengers and crew were reported to have been taken safely off the wreck.

TO HUNT IN U. S.

Pacific Coast Wild Game Hunting To Be Organized.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.— (United Press).—Incorporation papers filed by the Pacific Coast Sportsmen's Club at Sacramento insure the establishment of a unique hunting preserve in California, according to an announcement here by the chairman of the board of directors.

The most interesting feature of the club will be a 20,000 acre park of wild land enclosed with a safety-fence of iron wire and stocked with African lions, Bengal tigers and other carnivorous varieties of dangerous big game.

Purchase of 50,000 acres within a few hours 'motor drive of Los Angeles is being completed. The club holds options on this land and these will be closed as quickly as possible. Membership will be limited to 4,000 Plans will be worked out rapidly and there seems now little doubt that the club will open its gates next September.

A club house costing $250,000 with groups of cottages will be erected and the club will be equipped for golf, polo, tennis, archery, swimming, fishing, and shooting. The games will include ducks, geese, pheasants, wild turkeys, deer, elk, buffalo, bears, lions, tigers, leopards and American mountain lions.

JANETVILLE NEWS.

JANETVILLE, Nov. 25.—On Monday morning of this week Mr. H. Tims of Fleetwood left his home for his carpenter shop, bringing his dinner with him, so that he was not missed by his family until evening. Not returning home at the usual time, a search was instituted, when his body was found in his shop. The man held a hammer in his hand and evidently had died while engaged in his ordinary work.

The funeral took place from his late residence at Fleetwood, on Wednesday, and was conducted by Rev. W. H Dafoe of Bethany.

Successful Sale.

A very successful sale was held at the farm of the Wright Bros., on the 9th Con. of Manvers, on Wednesday of this week, beginning at 1 o'clock sharp. The sale was conducted by Mr. Ed Jackson and Son. It is the concensus of opinion that ,where men have plenty of stable room and fodder such dispositions of farm stock and implements usually bring higher prices in the spring than now or later in the fall, and the additional price paid in the spring will pay well for the feed and care. The best price paid for horses at this sale was about $135.00, and for cows $48.00.

Personal Items.

Mr. Arthur Stinson has gone to Lindsay to attend the School of Telegraphy Arthur is a happy, genial youth, and is missed very much by his many friends.

Mr. Walter has taken unto himself a wife and has rented the farm of Mr. Harry Anderson just east of the village. Walter is a bright, steady chap, and is almost sure to make good.

Mr. Harry Anderson is selling out his marm stock and implements next week, and is retiring from the farm for a much needed rest.

Mr. Mervin Armstrong was standing on the ridge-board of a neighbour's house yesterday morning, cutting a great figure on the sky-line then we learned that the stork had left at his home a new boy weighing eleven pounds,. No wonder Merve was on the house-top.

Mr. William Sanderson of Lindsay, has moved to Janetville and occupies the house recently vacated, but still owned by Mr. Richardson now of Peterboro. Mr Sanderson is a blacksmith and has taken over the business of Mr. William Arthurs, who has been ill for some months past.

Rev. and Mrs. Ross have returned from Trenton where they spent a most enjoyable week renewing old acquaintances and visiting old friends. Mr. and Mrs. Ross and Mrs. Philip Empey spent part of the time together at their home.

Why Stay Fat? You Can Reduce

The answer of most fat people is that it is too hard, too troublesome and too dangerous to force the weight down. Marmola Prescription Tablets overcome all these difficulties. They are pleasant to take, entail no dieting or exercise, and have the added advantage of cheapness. A box is sold at one dollar by all druggists the world over, or send the price direct to the Marmola Co., General Motors Bldg., Detroit, Mich. Now that you know this, you have no excuse for being fat. You can reduce steadily and easily without going through long steges of tiresome exercise and starvation diet with fear of bad effects. Get a box and start getting slender now.

MOONSHINER JAILED.

Renfrew Man Caught in Act of Making Liquor.

RENFREW, Ont., Nov. 25.—(Canadian Press).—John Asselin went Monday to the county gaol for a term of six months for breaches of the Inland Revenue Act and the O.T.A. License Inspector Silvester entered his home in Renfrew on Saturday and caught him in the act of distilling "moonshine". He professed to being unable to pay fines amounting to $40. Complaints had been received that Asselin was crossing to the Quebec side of the Ottawa River and selling liquor to men engaged on the big power works under construction at Bryson.

BARBER THREATENED IN LINDSAY LIQUOR CASE

Alleged "Stool Pigeon" is Innocent, Authorities Say.

LINDSAY, Nov. 25.—The feeling aroused over the police court case, in which a young barber was fined $600.00 and costs for bringing a consignment of wet goods from Montreal, was intensified on Saturday night when another barber, who is alleged to be a stool pigeon in the case, received threats that dire happenings would befall him if he did not make himself scarce. The police have taken a hand in the affair, and claim that the man charged with tipping off the authorities is innocent of the charge.

The young man found guilty of the infraction of the Temperance Act has raised sufficient money to pay the fine, but his solicitor has made application with a view of having a portion of it refunded.

SCHOOL CHILDREN SHOW THRIFT

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—An increase from $11,807,000 to $20,435,000 in school savings bank balances took place during the year ended June 30, 1924, according to a report issued by the Savings Bank Division of the American Bankers Association. The report states that the collections increased from $10,632,000 to $14,991,500 in the same period, while the number of pupils participating in school savings grew from 1,907,851 to 2,236,326.

Implicated in Hold-up of Molson's Bank in Montreal.

MONTREAL, Nov. 25.—(Canadian Press).—Edgar C. Raymond, former bank clerk, was found guilty, and Joseph Girard was acquitted by a jury in the court of King's Bench Monday afternoon after trial on the charge of implication in the hold-up and theft of $1,780 from the Cote des Neiges branch of the Molsons Bank on Febtuary 14 last.

Sentence was postponed until the the end of the term.

HIS HAND CUT OFF.

Mariposa Farmer Injured Adjusting Corn Chopper.

LINDSAY, Nov. 25.—A serious accident occurred near Manilla, Mariposa township, on Saturday when Mr. Lloyd Lake lost the major portion of his hand while engaged in corn cutting operations. It appears that the hood that encloses the knife of the cutting box had become displaced, and in attempting to replace it, the knives flew out, completely cutting off Mr. Lake's right hand save his thumb. The injured man is at present in the Ross Hospital.

LEAGUE ACTIVITIES

GENEVA Nov. 25.—So regularly are governments required to send delegates to Geneva for League of Nations meetings—assembly, council, or special commissions—that many of them have purchased houses or have leased apartments. These are for the double purpose of housing delegates and of serving as offices. Hardly a week now passes but what some meeting of importance is scheduled for Geneva.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair became beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

President Coolidge opposes holding an inaugural ball if he must attend and try to dance. Never having learned to dance his New England canniness warns him against the effort now.

She was about to raise the drugged flower to her face when, suddenly, a revulsion of feeling swept over Ahmed. Yes—he said to himself—he loved her. He needed her. He wanted her. He could not do without her. Life without her would be as salt, as pain, as bitter as gall. But she must become his of her own free will, not through intrigue and stratagem and deceit and subtle Egyptian drug. He was on the point of confessing, of telling her: "I am a nobody! I am the Thief of Bagdad!" But words would not come to him. The shame of it choked him. He drew her to him. As if by accident, his fingers playing with hers, he slipped the rose from her hand and crushed it in his waist shawl. Amost immediately he released her. He ran back to the parapet.

"No—no—" he stammered; and, like a thousand lovers since the beginning of Allah's creation, like a thousand lovers until the end of Allah's creation, he spoke words, so usual, so commonplace, so trite, and which he felt and knew to be so intensely true: "I am not worthy of you, Zobeid! Not worthy of you!" And he leaped over the parapet and, climbing down rapidly, reached the ground.

When Bird-of-Evil saw him alone, without the Princess, he spread angry, impatient hands.

"Where is she?" he demanded. "Did you not give her the drug?"

"I could not," Ahmed replied.

"Why not?"

"You—you would not understand!"

"Wouldn't I? Tell me! Tell me!"

"Very well. I would not use the drug—because I love her!"

"You are a fool!"

"Doubtless!"

And Ahmed turned away, to leave the garden, to leave the palace grounds, to leave Bagdad. But it was too late. For, hardly had he turned the corner of the main path, when there came to meet him a number of palace officials who salaamed deeply and spoke polite words:

"We have searched everywhere for you. The Caliph of Bagdad awaits the princely suitors. Be pleased to come with us, O Prince of the Isles!"

So Kismet engulfed the Thief of Bagdad in its merciless whirlpool, while Zobeid—slyly laughing at what she thought to be her lover's shyness, loving him the more because of it—sent a message to her father that she had made up her mind:

"Four are the Princes of Asia who ask for my hand. From India comes one. He is the descendant of the many gods of his people. But shall I choose for the sake of birth? From Persia comes the second. His wealth is as the sands of the desert. But shall I choose for the sake of riches? From far, yellow Mongolia comes the third. Him a million steel-clad riders follow into battle. But shall I choose for the sake of power? There is yet a fourth Prince. I do not know if he be rich or powerful, nor what his ancestry. But him I love, and him I choose, as, according to immemorial tradition, those of my race have always chosen the ones whom they love, as thou, father mine, years ago, didst choose my dead mother—may her soul dwell in Paradise!"

The hall of audiences was an immense quadrangle. Up to a height of twenty feet the walls were covered with ivory and snowy enamel skilfully blended with shiny white lac and overlaid with a silver-threaded spider's web of arabesques as exquisite as the finest lace. The upper part of the walls, above a broad strip of quotations from the Koran carved from black marble, was a procession, a panorama of fresco paintings—an epitome, a resume, of all Islam's proud history. There was an immense dazzlement of light from a hundred crystal chandeliers; catching the vivid flutter of the war banners where the chiefs of the outer tribes were squatting at the back of the hall; rousing the silken gowns of the Bagdad dignitaries who sat cross-legged on pillows to the left of the peacock throne into tulip brilliancies of purples and blues and yellows and reds; stabbing gold and silver into the splendid robes of the three Princes—not to forget the fourth, the self-styled Prince of the Isles—who was just below the throne, facing it.

The Prince of India carried his head high. He was a descendant of the gods, cousin-in-blood to Vishnu the Creator, Shiva the Preserver, Doorga the Destroyer. Sure he was of his Fate. Zobeid would be his. How could it be otherwise?

The Prince of Persia was stuffing his mouth with candied violets. He was rich. No woman could withstand riches. By Allah—he thought—this soft little Zobeid would be sweeter than all the sweetmeats that he had swallowed in all his life!—and so, in the meantime, he helped himself to another picee of candy.

The Prince of the Mongols seemed inscrutable; like a golden statue. He would win the Princess, happen what may. If not to-day, then to-morrow. He was a Mongol. He came from the cold, cruel, stony North. His will was stronger than the will of all the household gods, stronger even than the will of the Excellent Lord Gautama Buddha.

Only the Prince of the Isles was oppressed. Shame was searing his brain and soul like a red-hot lance point. He did not look up, paid no attention to Bird-of-Evil, who stood in back of him, whispering into his ear.

The Caliph rose.

"It is the immemorial custom of my family," he said, "that when princely suitors come from the far corners of the earth to woo a daughter of the house of Bagdad, she may follow the dictates of her own heart. Four Princes came to-day. I am honored." He bowed gracefully. "My daughter watched them from the balcony. She has chosen. She has chosen the man whom she loves. To him she sends her ring as a token."

And he gave to the herald who approached a narrow gold band set with great ruby-red pearls in the shape of two joined hearts.

Came a great thumping of silver kettle drums; a blaring of long-stemmed trumpets; a waving of banners, while the herald stepped down from the throne. He passed by the Prince of India, the Prince of Persia, the Prince of the Mongols. He stopped in front of the Prince of the Isles, salaamed deeply, and slipped the ring on Ahmed's finger.

Then cheers rose, rending the air. The dignitaries of the court, the chiefs of the outer tribes, the priests and merchants and slaves and eunuchs who pressed into the hall from the garden, laughed and shouted.

Cheer after cheer, full-throated, triumphant, bloating, rising ever higher. But, too, grumbling, bitter words as the three Princes compalined and protested that the choice was manifestly unfair. What?—they demanded—Zobeid did not choose me, the descendant of the gods; nor me, whose riches were uncounted; nor me, whom a million warriors followed into battle? Listen—listen, Heaven, Born . . . they surrounded the Caliph, who had left the peacock throne with noisy clamorings.

But the ruler of Bagdad smiled. He stroked his long, white beard, and declared that the choice was final.

"My friends," he implored, "do not behave like naughty children. I grant you—for I am a proud father—that there is no woman in all Asia to equal Zobeid in beauty and charm and the many accomplishments. But even so, do not challenge the decrees of Fate! Do not begrudge the Prince of the Isles his victory! Be generous! Come—and drown your sorrow in clinking goblets and rich food!"

And, while they continued to protest and grumble, he led them toward the banquet hall where a splendid feast had been prepared.

Ahmed had used the commotion and excitement to slip, unnoticed, into the garden.

"Away from here!"

"But—the Princess Zobeid . . ."

"I will not stoop to deceit and lies."

"Pah!" sneered the other. "The tom-cat eats a thousand chickens—then he goes on pilgrimage to the holy places! You are a thief!"

"I know! And I will steal everything—everything—including the Prophet Mohammed's green mantle and diamond crown! But I will not steal the heart of the one whom I love!"

So he ran down the garden path when, suddenly, as he passed a small marble pavilion, he heard soft words, turned, looked, and saw there, Zobeid, who walked up to him.

"My lord," she said, "my slaves brought word to me that you left the hall and came to the garden. You came to see me—to seek me—to seek me—didn't you? Ah—I knew it! And I came to see you—to seek you . . ."

She lifted her face to his, to kiss him. But he shook his head. He dropped the ring into her hand. Then, in simple words, he told her the truth:

"I am not a Prince. I am a nobody—an outcast. I am a thief."

"A thief . . ." Fount-in-the-Forest who, unnoticed, had followed her mistress and was hiding in a thick clump of trees close by, echoed to herself. All at once she remembered where and when she had seen Ahmed. Why—he was the robber who, last night, had entered Zobeid's room, who had threatened her with the dagger, and had escaped through the window.

Swiftly she ran back to the palace. She sought out Wong K'ai, the Mongol Prince's confidential adviser, and told him what she had discovered. Wong K'ai lost no time. He entered the banquet hall. He whispered in Cham Sheng's ear. The latter rose. He addressed the Caliph.

"Your Majesty," he said, "desecration most foul has been brought upon your ancient dynasty. The escutcheon of the Bagdad Caliphs has been sullied. This Ahmed—he who calls himself Prince of the Isles, he to whom your daughter has promised her heart and hand—is nothing but an imposter, a common thief, whose kingdom is bazaar and market-place, and whose wealth is what is contained in other men's pockets!"

And when the Caliph stammered that he did not believe it, that it was impossible, the Mongol went on: "There is no doubt of it. One of the Princess' slave girls recognized him. Nor will he himself dare to deny it."

"Bring me this Ahmed, this thief!" he thundered.

MRS. FANNIE WHITE

Woman Of Forty Victim Of Constipation

Mrs. Fannie White of 678 Marcy Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

"Almost every morning, for the last five years I suffered with sick headaches, I felt this was due to nervousness, never dreaming that faulty intestinal elimination caused my suffering. I felt wretched, my appetite was gone, I lost interest in preparing my meals, life was not worth living. A few days' treatment of Carter's Little Liver pills wonders. They are small, easy to take, no griping—and leave pleasant after effects."

STOMACH TROUBLES ARE DUE TO ACIDITY

Tells Safe, Certain, Speedy Relief For Acid Indigestion.

So-called stomach troubles, such as indigestion, gas, sourness, stomach-ache and inability to retain food are in probably nine cases out of ten, simply evidence that excessive secretion of acid is taking place in the stomach, causing the formation of gas and acid indigestion.

Gas distends the stomach and causes that full, oppressive, burning feeling sometimes known as heartburn, while the acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach. The trouble lies entirely in the excess development or secretion of acid.

To stop or prevent this souring of the food contents of the stomach and to neutralize the acid, and make it bland and harmless, a teaspoonful of Bisurated Magnesia, a good and effective corrector of acid stomach, should be taken in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water after eating or whenever gas, sourness or acidity is felt. This sweetens the stomach and neutralizes the acidity in a few moments and is a perfectly harmless and inexpensive remedy to use.

An antiacid, such as Bisurated Magnesia, which can be obtained from any druggist in either powder or tablet form, enables the stomach to do its work properly without the aid of artificial digestants. Magnesia comes in several forms, so be certain to ask for and take only Bisurated Magnesia, which is especially prepared for the above purpose.

KIWANIS WINTER FAIR BROUGHT OUT GOOD FIRST NIGHT CROWD

The Advance Notices of "Something New and Something Novel" Have Been Lived Up To In Every Department.

BIG NIGHT TO-NIGHT.

"Something new, something novel, something nice," was the slogan of the Kiwanis Club when they started their Winter Fair arrangements, and they have certainly lived up to it. It is one of the best arranged affairs of its sort that has ever been put on in Peterborough, and the Club is to be congratulated, individually and collectively, for the work they have put into the exhibition, which surpasses in attraction and number of exhibits, and seems really more representative of Peterboro alone, than the big display on view in the Manufacturers' Building at this year's annual Fair.

The Kiwanis Winter Fair opened in the market Hall last evening. His Worship Mayor Turner pressed the button that officially declared it open to the world, and then the fun began.

The Kiwanians have transformed the big upstairs hall into a delightful centre of activity and amusement. Everyone of the sections is absolutely complete in itself, and everyone has been arranged and decorated with an artistic effect that makes the entire ensemble extremely attractive. It is a real Fair and those who attend do not want to miss what might be called the back alleys, the sections that have their being at the rear of the booths that front the main entrances. Back of the front exhibits are intriguing small enclosures that hold some of the very nicest things on display.

There were over four hundred people in attendance last night, a fair crowd for an opening, and one and all seemed impressed with the metropolitan astmosphere of the big Winter Fair.

The exhibits are varied, and range all the way from the efficient-looking sets of teeth that decorate one stall to the mahogany doors that form the main portion of another. The range of daily activity in which the members of the Kiwani. Club are engaged, is a wide one. Some idea idea of what they do when they are not larking around a luncheon-table, or helping to construct a camp for under-privileegd children may be gleaned by a visit to their Winter Fair. Every one of the Kiwanians is busy with some one of the booths or amusements that make the time fly in the Market Hall, and the ladies also are co-operating in the direction of the tea-room and the sale of home-made cooking and candy. President Jack Marshall acts as general convenor.

The tea-room, of which Mrs. J. A. McKone is general supervisor, is a charming little enclosure at the south end of the building, done in black and silver linings, with cherry blossoms over a latticed entrance, tall palms, Japanese lanterns, and umbrellas, and Japanese kimonas and ear 'mums on the dainty waitresses.

MORE

The sale of home-made cooking is in charge of Mrs. Chas. Cooke, and is a double section done in a very pretty arrangement of blue and gold, with a blue and gold roof and festoons around the big Kiwanis emblem in the centre. Here there are quantities of the most delicious-looking cooking, including pies, cakes, doughnuts, nut bread, cookies and cheese straws. Unique decorations are baskets filled with fresh pine needles and cedar boughs.

Another double section is devoted to the sale of home-made candy in fancy frilled paper holders. Here the traditional blue and white of the Kiwanis Club has been used with pretty effect and there are lighted lamps and flowers. On the four days, the following ladies will have charge in turn: Mesdames J. John, H. Huffman, C. C. Cragg and F. H. Dawson.

One of the corner sections is that of Kiwanian Jack Jefferies, who has a display of goods from the Richard Hall store, in a striking bedroom suite in walnut, with bright chintz hangings on the walls, rose window draperies, a rich rug, and a dainty lady in rose dressing gown admiring herself in the mirror.

One of the most interesting exhibits, is that contrived by J. R. Heron at The Examiner section. This is a very effective little booth done in orange and lavender, and contains an exhibit of news gathering that should be of interest to everyone frequenting the Fair. A news story, from the moment that it is written by the reporter, in the rough copy, is traced on down or up, rather, by its various stages of preparation, to the completed metal plate ready to be bolted onto the press. A galley of type is shown, and a complete matrix; the old method of hand-setting from a loose case is contrasted with the modern linotype system, there is an interesting exhibit of cuts a section of the newspaper "morgue" that deals exclusively with information anent the Hunter street ridge, and an Examiner of thirty-nine years ago, with four pages of print, is contrasted with the twelve and sixteen and twenty-page newspaper of today. Here also are Christmas cards from The Examiner's stock, with two charming young ladies in charge.

Kiwanian Percy Bond is showing toilet goods and French ivory articles in a spendid variety in his red, white and blue checked section, where a beauty specialty demonstrator will be ready to answer questions as to creams and face powders. The cherry blossoms that make such an attractive decoration also adorn this section.

The Peterboro Business College has an efficient-looking corner, under Kiwanian Jack McKone's direction, where typewriters of various models are on view, also adding machines and a big mimeographer.

Just around the corner, in the rear of these booths, are the grey section where the Peterboro Paper Box Company and the Peterboro Pattern Works Kiwanian Hugh Nevin and Kiwanian Walter Byers' pet hobbies, have a display of Christmas and ordinary workaday paper boxes and machine patterns; Kiwanian Roy Irwin's very striking small enclosure done in dead black with white ceiling, an invisible lighting effect showing up to advantage his exhibit of men's fine clothing; Kiwanian Roy White's booth where Porter S. White's products include the Heinz and Apex goods and Christmas stockings and cakes, and a demonstrator dispenses tiny soda biscuits with mayonnaise dressing and peanut butter garnishes; and Kiwanian Frank Dawson's very artistic arrangement of prosaic flour and feed bags, fronted by a quintette of bright red roses drawing attention to the Five Roses flour. Blatchford's Egg Mash is also featured here.

The farther back section at this western end of the hall also holds Kiwanian E. V. Varne's booth where Victrolas and Victor records and radio machines are on view and music may be heard from the bright green and red enclosure; Kiwanian Walter Oke's display of fruit in tiers of baskets that hold luscious-looking apples and grapefruit and pears and grapes, with a blue and yellow front to the little booth; and Kiwanian Walter Kidd's very effective display of the Gallagher remedies, all the tiny pots of ointment and the large bottle of medicine done up in blue and white Kiwanis colors, jars of medicaments, glass jars holding healing herbs as a special showing, and all the lettering on the pretty blue and white signs done by Mr. Kidd's brother, W. E. Kidd.

Kiwanian Jack McNabb has a colorful corner section where blue and white striped paper forms the standards. There are tall piano lamps and rugs here to form a fitting setting for the lovely evening gowns on view on half a dozen forms. Coral and rose were the striking keynotes of last night's display.

Kiwanian Mark Bredin has his bread on view, with dozens of fresh, shiny buns, bread of every variety of loaf, and a big, nice-looking box of fruit peels, in another blue and white section.

Kiwanian J. Craig has a little lighthouse in his "Oral Hygiene" booth, with a tiny nurse looking out from behind its barred window. Here free samples of tooth paste are bestowed on a grateful crowd, and there are white-robed nurses in attendance to demonstrate the best method of cleaning the molars and grinders which are on view and to show the modern methods of filling up cavities in aching teeth. The energetic doctor essayed to show the audience a picture entitled "The Tommy Tucker Tooth Film" last night, and succeeded in putting the lighting system temporarily out of business. Tommy Tucker and his teeth are being demonstrated to the children of the public schools this week. The Prince of Wales' pupils saw them yesterday, and the Central School was to see them this afternoon.

The Canadian Packing Company next door, with Kiwanian Carl McLean in charge, has a little black and white concave enclosure where the candling and grading of eggs is explained and demonstrated. There are yellow chrysanthemums to add a touch of color to the white shelves where packaged butter and boxed eggs are displayed.

Kiwanian Harry Dicken has a very effective corner section, showing "all British goods" in men's wear, displayed to the best advantage in a dainty enclosure of white lattices, with rugs and ferns and artificial sprays to give color, and a revolving stand to show off men's dress apparel. Here are also on view English shoe polishes, familiar to overseas men, the famous "K" boot and the ski-ing boot used in Switzerland.

Farther down, fronting the main entrance, are the two fine prints presented for raffle by Kiwanian Dicken representing two scenes from the Surrender of the German Fleet.

Up at the north end are the narrow wall exhibits of various members. Kiwanians Alex. Dick and Harry Huffman have combined displays in a showing of the products of the Dick and Carew Lumber Company, made especially for H. Huffman and Sons, contractors, and have on view a very interesting exhibit of mahogany doors, in natural and varnished finishes, also samples of flooring. Their small booth is arranged with rugs and ferns and the cheery little Christmas orange trees that give a vivid note to many of the displays.

Next door is the floor display of packaged cereals from the Quaker Oats stock, with the familiar Quaker on guard over all, and Kiwanian Lloyd Hamilton in charge. Farther on, Kiwanian Douglas Grant has an artistic display of shoes for day and evening wear, and hosiery to match, in a blue and white and orange paper setting, and Kiwanian W. Welbourn has a Bell Telephone display, demonstrating the equipment of a telephone system, in a blue and white, fern-decorated section.

Kiwanians Levi Bond and Jack Chadwick have a big corner section on the eastern side, devoted to a display of the products of the Canadian Woollens mills. Here are woollen cloths and a colorful, ingeniously-arranged exhibit of yarns of various sorts, in wool and silk and woollen mixtures, with skeins of many tints and enormous bobbins wound with pure white wool. Little orange trees decorate this booth also.

The Peterboro Cereal Company's display by Kiwanian J. W. Meyers is in a booth where "Reindeer Flour" signs in red border the front and bags of flour are cleverly arranged.

Kiwanian T. J. Turner's contribution to the Fair is an exhibit of the warm motor rugs of the J. J. Turner factory, and chilly-looking snowshoes. Kiwanian J. John has packaged teas and coffees, in a red and yellow section with a mirror background.

Grafton's corner near the entrance with Kiwanian W. E. Conway displaying the stock of his big store, has a painted back "drop" with a vivid orange velvet 'length in its centre and a flooring of pure white festooned with green. Everything new in men's and boys' wear is on view here in suits and accessories.

Around at the rear of this section are also several well-contrived enclosures. Just at the corner is the Social Hygiene booth, with Kiwanian Ray Scott in charge, assisted yesterday by Mrs. W. D. Tyrer and Mrs. S. F. M. Touchbourn, where a big flag forms the backing to the yellow festoons that decorate it, and literature in connection with the society is dispensed.

Something remarkable that drew the attention of the discerning yesterday afternoon was the skillful work of J. R. Brownlee, "Peterborough's Blind Man," in the decoration and arrangement of his tent. With his "seeing" fingers, he did just as excellent work as any sighted person, going about his task in a very workmanlike manner, unassisted, and proffering between times the loan of his hammer and tacks to neighboring stalls. Mr. Brownlee has a very attractive showing of his work in reed and cane baskets and stands and demonstrates his skill during the evening. His booth also contains the pretty artificial flowers in wax and paper contrived by Mrs. I. Smallwood.

Kiwanian Harry Boyle has achieved a really splendid exhibit in his orange and black section, where peels and preserved cherries are on view in big jars, and plates of assorted nuts and raisins.

One exhibitor hung his sign in the air. All the space was gone when Kiwanian W. H. Lacey applied, so he put his big familiar slogan on a sign and hung it up amongst the many pennants and lights that give a colorful note to the atmosphere.

Last evening, the specially-laid dancing platform was well patronized, and there was a brisk sale for the ice cream vendors and the soft drink peddlers, located near the entrance. The two big dart games, in blue-hung squares, had a merry crowd all evening. The first winner of the night was William O'Rourke, whose award of an aluminum roasting pan, was proudly borne about the hall, and the first person to buy a ticket for the Kiwanis Fair was Robert Hendry, of the J. J. Turner staff.

President Jack Marshall, with members of the Club, on the platform, acted as chairman for the opening of the Fair, and introduced Mayor Turner, who officially opened the event, with a few brief, appropriate words that referred to the public-spirited work of the Club and recommended the support and cooperation of the community in their behalf. W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., followed, and told the audience how Premier Ferguson, when making arrangements for the inauguration of the new Boys' Home at Bowmanville, asked the advice of the Kiwanis Clubs as to its management. G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., who had been scheduled to speak was out of town.

Kiwanian M. B. Chenhall was in charge of a musical programme, which included several orchestral numbers and vocal solo by Max Irvine, "Come to the Fair." The orchestra, Follis' organization, provided excellent music for dancing and will be on hand again this evening. Ken Blood's orchestra has been engaged for Wednesday and Thursday nights.

Last night, none of the door prizes were appied for. Mr. Frank Dawson was in charge of the different awards, which were as follows: 1st door prize, $5, donated by John J. Allen, won by Ticket No. 2215. 2nd prize, 24 lb. bag of flour, donated by J. W. Meyers, won by Ticket No. 2236. 3rd prize, 1 cook book, donated by F. H. Dawson, won by Ticket No. 2326. The Raffle prizes were: 1st, a five-pound box of candy, donated by Dr. J. Green, and won by Miss Hardwick, Water street; 2nd a box of cigars, donated by E. Wright, and won by Stewart Gordon. Winners of the door prizes may procure same from J. A. MacNabb, chairman of the Attendance committee.

FAIL TO REPORT WHOOPING COUGH

Dr. Young Criticizes Citizens Who Keep Contagious Disease Secret.

BOARD OF HEALTH.

In his annual report to the Board of Health, presented this morning, the City Medical Officer of Healtoh slates those who fail to report cases of contagious disease, more specifically whooping cough. In other respects his report showed a satisfactory condition in the city. The text of the report was as follows:

"In reporting the Health of the city for the past year, I may state it has been very free from contagious disease and is so at the present time. The number of cases attended at Queen Mary Hospital from November 14, 1923 to November 14, 1924 was: Scarlet fever, 35; diphtheria, 5; whooping cough, 3; measles, 11; mumps, 2; spinal meningitis 1; sleeping sickness, 1; and others 1.

During the year there were 108 old houses connected with the sewer and 6 new houses connected. Ten cesspools were also connected making 189 in all.

Improvements made to Queen Mary Hospital included a new roof, new eavetrough; septic tank and over hauling of the furnace. Storm doors and fly screen were added. The hospital has been regularly inspected by the Fire Department and nurses have been given training.

Several cases of contagious disease have been traced from outside places, but I have been informed that many cases, mostly of whooping cough have been kept quiet and not reported and these by people who should know better and in some instances do know better, but do not do their duty to the public and are the loudest crowers when they think they have a chance to find fault. It would be advisable if these people would practice paddling their own canoes.

Report to Department

The report of the M.O.H. forms the basis of the report forwarded by the Board of Health to the Provincial Board, and it was suggested this morning by Claude H. Rogers that the activities of the school, dental and medical officers be incorporated.

Chairman George H. Duncan remarked that the Board of Health has nothing to do with these officials.

Mr. Rogers: — "I think we are responsible for the work.

Mr. Duncan:—"I don't believe in butting in on the Board of Education."

After discussion, it was decided to mention in the report that the schools were attended to by a dentist and a doctor acting under the Board of Education.

Isolation Hospital.

Plumbing Inspector, A. G. Metheral reported adversely on the septic tank, just installed at the Isolation Hospital, saying it will serve only 12 to 15 people, according to the best authorities. He understood, and some members of the Board of Health understood, that the plant was intended to serve 30 persons.

Mr. Metheral reported that the installation is a splendid job for the smaller service, but is inadequate in case of an epidemic. Canadian authorities say 648 feet of laterals should be constructed for a system intended for 12 persons. At the plant installed at the Isolation Hospital there are only 600 feet. A change had also been made in the location and nature of the septic tank, which was not approved by the plumbing inspector.

After discusion the Board decided to defer payment of the account until an investigation is made of the alleged failure of the contractor to carry out his contract.

Most Hospital Boards.

Following suggestions made by Mayor Turner that the two hospitals, Nicholls' and St. Joseph's, might shoulder the management of Queen Mary for an equal time each year, saving the city thousands of dollars, and providing their nurses with the necessary training in the treatment of contagious diseases, a conference has been arranged. John Crane, the secretary of the Nicholls Hospital Trust, informed the Board that a committee had been appointed to investigate the matter, and a meeting will be held on Tuesday next, to which representatives of St. Joseph's Board will be invited.

Full Time M.O.H.

Answering a query addressed by the Board, the Department of Health named the following places where a full time medical officer of health is employed, and those where a school physician is also employed.

Toronto, both; Hamilton, M.O.H.; Windsor, M.O.H.; Brantford, both; London, M.O.H.; Port Arthur, both; and Fort William, both.

There were present Chairman G. H. Duncan, Mayor J. J. Turner, Jas. Lynch and Claude H. Rogers.

THINKS FERGUSON SHOULD DIVIDE UP

Resolution Says Department of Education Should Have Separate Head.

Mr. Joseph Wearing attended Toronto yesterday as a member of the Provincial Liberal Leaders' Advisory Committee and was the mover of a resolution condemning Premier Ferguson for assuming the portfolio of education along with his other duties. Mr. Wearing stated that Mr. Ferguson's hands were full controlling the malcontents of his own party over the administration of the O.T.A., and that he had no time for the important work connected with the Department of Education, which was fast running toward chaos as a result of the one-man government now exemplified at Toronto. The resolution was carried unanimously.

MRS. SERAFINI ACQUITTED

Wife of Bank Clerk Murderer Was Charged With the Same Offence.

MONTREAL, Nov. 25.—(Canadian Press).—Mary Serafini, widow of Guiseppi Serafini, hanged recently at Bordeaux Jail in connection with the murder of Henri Cleroux, the Hochelaga Bank chaffeur, was acquitted this morning by a jury in the Court of the King's Bench after only four minutes' deliberation. She was charged with the same crime for which her husband was hanged.

Ten minutes later, after the jury had deliberated half a minute, she was acquitted on the charge of having received stolen goods.

THE SPEED OF THE FINGERS.

The fingers of the right hand are quicker and more accurate than those of the left.

Two fingers working together are faster than one going it alone. And a combination of two fingers on opposite hands is faster than two fingers on the same hand.

Practice tends to increase the rate of the slow ones more than the fast ones.

Uncovering Ancient City of Sardis.

American scientists have renewed the work of excavating the ancient city of Sardis in Asia Minor. This work was commenced several years ago and was interrupted by the war. An advance party is now at work and Howard C. Butler, of Princeon, has just sailed to assume charge of the work. The temple of Artemis, which is claimed to be the third largest building of its kind built by the Greeks, has been uncovered. The city was at its zenith during the reign of King Croesus and was destroyed by an earthquake in 17 A.D.

"Headaches, Bilious Spells, Are Now All Gone"

Mrs. John Ireland, Nobleton, Ont., writes:

"I was a great sufferer from severe headaches and bilious spells. I tried a number of remedies without obtaining any benefit until I was advised to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. These completely relieved me, and made me feel like a new person. I am very grateful to Dr. Chase's Medicines for what they have done for me, and you may use my letter for the benefit of others."

WEST HASTINGS CAMPAIGN OVER

BELLEVILLE, November 25. — West Hastings is balloting to-day to elect a Member of Parliament.

The campaign, which closed last night, with mass meetings in Belleville and Trenton, addressed by Premier W. L. King and Hon. Arthur Meighen, has been the most exciting ever held in this constituency.

With clear weather and the roads in good condition a record vote is anticipated.

E. Guss Porter, Conservative candidate, and a member of the riding for 23 years, resigned his seat when the committee on privileges and elections, in the Federal House brought brought in a report favorable to the Hon. James Murdock, the Minister of Labor, who had been charged by the Opposition with using for his personal benefit knowledge obtained in his capacity as Minister of the Crown. The Governmetn party, with Charles Hanna, as its standard bearer, claim that Mr. Porter should have acepted the decision of the House.

The 1924 soccer season was brought to a dramatic finish, last week, not on the football field but at the meeting of the P. and D. F. A. Board of Directors when the G. W. V. A. resignation was accepted, at their request, not to participate in any more games during the season and refused any redress under any consideration as amendment to amendments were tabled as a solution to the crisis. Ultimately the Board of Directors had to accept the inevitable declaration.

Two Games Forfeited.

The two games that were scheduled to be played to complete the league were: G. W. V. A. versus the Quaker Oats; and G. W. V. A. versus the Thistle, when they declared they would not play any more games According to rule, the forfeiture of the points went automatically to the Quaker Oats and the Thistle.

The executive have not declared the winners of the League Championship, as yet but in all probability that will be transacted at the meeting of the Board of Directors to be held on Monday evening, Dec. 1st, in the Chamber of Commerce Rooms.

Throphies Won.

The Thistle have won the League championship, (White Challenge Cup), and won the Gordon Cup. The association present medals to the winners.

The Canadian Woollens won the Clarke Shield as runners-up in the league and defeated the Thistle in the Peck Cup.

During the local season, Richmond (Thistle) has headed the goal-scorers list with 36 goals in all competitions and 2 in the Plenty Cup game—38 in all. Mitchell (Canadian Woollens) comes next with 15 goals. Charlie Griffine holds the unique position as being a goal-getter as well as a goal-defender and has the best goal-keepers record. Wasson (G.W.V.A.) and Rae, (Thistle), have been the most consistent full backs. The half-back lines in any of the teams have never been solid, owing to so many players receiving in juries while playing that position. In the forward line, Mitchell (Woollens) Burgess (Thistle) and Richmond (Thistle) have participated in every game played.

Referees Deserve Credit.

The "Knights of the Whisite" who handled the games during the season were:: Mr. Jack Clark, Mr. Alex. Mitchell, Mr. J. C. Russel, Mr. Alex. McKinley and Mr J. L. Howarth who handed in his verbal decision to quit at the Board of Directors meeting early in the season. Every one of them deserve great praise for the manner in which they handled the decisions on the field of play.

GOAL SCORERS.

DONATION FOR CHARITY FROM JUNIOR SOCCER

Sum of $62.90 For Local Orphanages—Executive Meeting.

The treasurer, Mr. I. Ball, brought in his financial statement, having a balance on hand after paying all expenses of $51.90.

It was unanimously decided to donate ten dollars to the Chamber of Commerce for the use of rooms for the meetings.

The medals which the teams themselves selected has been sent for and will be here for presentation in a week or so.

The treasurer reported that the sum of sixty-two dollars and fifty cents will be equally divided between the Children's Aid Society and the St. Vincent's Orphanage as the result of the final for Mayor Turner's Charity Cup.

The president reported having interviewed G. N. Gordon, M.P., and had that day received a communication from the Deputy Speaker to the effect that the Gordon Medals to accompany the County Cup will be in the hands of the president in a few days.

It was decided to call a general meeting to have the cup and medals presented by the donors as soon as the medals arrived.

The secretary was instructed to write the chairman of the Parks Committee thanking him for the excellent arrangements made by him for use of King Edward Park which the Association greatly appreciated.

OFFERS TO JOHNSON.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—(Canadian Press).—Clark C. Griffith, president of the Washington baseball team said Monday that Walter Johnson, veteran pitcher, had not signed a new contract with the Senators but that Joe Engel, scout, had been authorized to offer Johnson the choice of two contracts, both providing for increases in salary.

Rude Shocks Follow After Men Die

Even those considered "well-to-do" have left their families in such poor circumstances that they cannot properly "carry on."

Think over the cases you know about—children working, education neglected, homes broken up, dressmaking, boarders—

But what about your own family's position?

Probably you do not know how easily provision can be made under our Monthly Income Jubilee Policy—the product of fifty years of service. For an annual premium equal to $5.78 a week a man age 30 can provide an income of $100 a month ($1,200 a year) to his wife (age 30) to continue as long as she lives after him.

No better or safer investment is possible. None could bring such far-reaching blessings to your wife and family. Arrange it now and make their future safe.

Any one of our representatives will be pleased to assist you in making this provision for your loved ones.

HOCKEY IN OTTAWA.

OTTAWA, Nov. 25.— Canadian Press).—Calgary tigers and Ottawa Senators played a two-all tie in the first of a two-game exhibition series here last night. A crowd of 4,500 turned out to see the contest and were rewarded with a particularly good brand of hockey for so early in the season. Both teams played hard but a cleanly and fast pace was maintained for full sixty minutes.

FLORADORA.

Ahoy, old-timers! It's just 24 years since the first performance of 'Floradora' and its famous double sextet. "Tell me, pretty maiden, are there any more at home like you?" Ah, if they sang it now, the answer would be, "A few, kind sir, but they're not at home—at the movies dancing and necking."

The theater has changed, hasn't it? But not any more so than the public. The stage is a pretty reliable mirror of the audiences, especially their morals, faiths and credulity.

SIR ARTHUR CURRIE DENIES STATEMENT

Published Statement That 100,000 Men of Canadian Army Were Useless, Is False.

OTTAWA, Nov. 25. — Denying the published statement that he had said that 100,000 men of the Canadian Army had been of no use, and maintaining that his interest in civil service affairs was only that of private citizen with no political end in view, Sir Arthur Currie, principal of the McGill University, gave some frank advice on improving civil service in addressing professional institute of civil service of Canada yesterday.

Referring to reported statement he said:

"I never made such a statement, I would be last man in world to say that 100,000 of gallant men who served in Canadian corps were of no use No one knows better than I what these men accomplished and what they endured. If there is one thing that should be inspiration to every man in Canada it is heroic sacrifice and devotion to duty and unselfish spirit they displayed.

UNITED FARMERS HOLD CONVENTION

Indian River Club Presented Good Report— Officers Elected.

The Peterboro County U.F.Y.P.O. convention was held in the Simcoe Street Hall.

The meeting was opened with the singing of "O Canada." Mr. Cecil Bolton, of Indian River, acted as chairman. After the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting the reports from the various clubs were received. The Indian River Club read a splendid report. They have a good membership, and have taken an active part during the past year in debating, softball games, etc., with other clubs and various organizations.

The clubs have decided to have another debating competition this year, as it has proved such a help to the young people of the county.

The Executive Committee, consisting of Messrs. Smithson, Smith and Brown, were re-appointed.

The club regulations were amended and a new score card for the debates arranged.

One interesting feature of the programme was an instructive address by Mr. H. B. Cowan on 'Debating.'

President—Cecil Bolton, Indian River.

Secretary—Mae Petrie, R. R. No. 8, Peterboro.

The officers expressed their keen interest in the organization, thus the young people of the county anticipate a successful year. The U.F.Y.P.O. has done a great deal to develop the natural gifts of the farm young people.

ASK EVERYONE TO MEET BYNG

Invitation To Reception By Governor General Includes Every Citizen.

WANTS A CROWD.

In connection with the visit of the Governor-General to Peterborough on Friday next, the main points to bear in mind are:

The Governor-General and his party will arrive at the Canadian National Railway at 10 o'clock a.m.

The party will be taken for a drive around the city, visiting the schools as previously announced, and the Lift Lock. Citizens who wish to join in this drive are invited to do so.

The civic address will be presented at the Armouries at 11.30 o'clock.

Immediately after the presentation of the address, Lord and Lady Bynig will receive the citizens. His Excellency has expressed a desire to meet as many citizens as possible. No special invitations have been issued, and all citizens are invited to meet meet him at the Armouries.

It is especially requested that citizens decorate their premises, and make the city as bright as possible.

The route of the drive as has been published, will be followed if time will permit, but it is possible that some of the route will have to be omitted, if it is found that there is not time to carry out the full programme.

HAD NARROW ESCAPE.

Canadians in Danger When British Empire Club is Gutted by Fire.

LONDON, Nov. 25.— (Canadian Press.)—A party of Canadians had a thrilling escape from being burned to death early this morning in a fire in the annex to the British Empire Club, Piccadilly street, which is used as the residential quarters for overseas visitors. The housekeeper, a woman, lost her life, but all the visitors escaped unharmed, although early editions of the London evening papers state that other lives were lost in the fire.

Canadians in the burning building who managed to get out in safety were: Hon. H. H. Stevens, Minister of Trade and Commerce in the Meighen government; H. S. Thompson, former Canadian food controller, now permanently engaged in business in London, and Herbert Otto Frind, Vancouver, B.C.

Mr. Stevens was awakened by the roaring of flames, at one o'clock this morning. He found that the fire had enveloped the elevator shaft and staircase and at once he roused the rest of the inmates. They threw up windows and all called for help.

Night workers and policemen quickly gathered at the scene of the fire and in a few minutes the fire brigade arrived equipped with ladders to assist in the escape of those who were trapped by the flames.

STILL SUPERSTITIOUS.

A news dispatch notes that the Kern County (Cal.) Cattlemen's and Sheepmen's Association has contracted with a rainmaker for an inch and a half of rain, to be delivered between November 20 and December 20, for which $4,000 is to be paid.

While the terms of the contract are not given in detail, it would seem that the rainmaker has the long end of the bargain unless he is penalized in case of failure. Perhaps he is required to execute some hocus-pocus under the semblance of doing something to earn his money, but we imagine that the chief labor in which he'll engage will consist in hoping that nature will be kind and send along the showers in a land where moisture is too often withheld. Should the rain fall in sufficient quantity the rainmaker's purse will be replenished to the extent of a neat sum whether he exerts any influence on the situation.

A few years ago professional rainmakers had quite a vogue in some arid sections, but the country has yet to hear that any of them ever was successful in producing the desired moisture. The rain may have fallen, but that of itself would not be proof of their instrumentality—rather of their good luck in having nature coincide with their schemes of buncoing some credulous people out of good coin. Not all Americans and Canadians have emerged from superstition if it is believed that man is able by incantations to coax from the sky that which nature withholds by law.

Many a good man has been spoiled by taking a "position" instead of a job.

BARNARD FOUND GUILTY.

Director of Home Bank Convicted on Three Counts.

TORONTO, Nov. 25.— (Canadian Press.)—C. A. Barnard, K.C., of Montreal, one of the directors of the defunct Home Bank of Canada, was this morning found guilty of three counts in connection with the collapse of that institution. Charges were, briefly, making false statements to the department of the bank's condition, unlawfully using such staements and negligently concurring in false returns. Another director, Lieut.-Col. Clarence Smith, is awaiting sentence of convictions regarding bank cases, also two officials of the bank.

Statements referred to in each case is annual report of Bank's affairs for its fiscal year ending May 31st 1923, to Minister of Finance. With those previously convicted Barnard will be sentenced on Dec. 1st, He is first of those tried to have been found guilty on all three charges made by the Crown, R. S. Robertson, who is counsel for Barnard asked for certificate for appeal. Judge Coatsworth will give his decision on application on Friday. Until his sentence Barnard is allowed same bail as he had during his trial. As in all other home bank cases judge found that annual statement for 1923 contained false statements.

"Though accused neglected director's meetings, he was actively mixed up in business of bank throughout and did not neglect any opportunity of using its funds for his own purposes and those of his companies. Meantime he must have known that enormous debts concerning which he interceded with Minister of Finance had, instead of being paid or reduced, piled up higher and higher until all control was lost Accused was deeply involved in all wrecking transactions either by direct participation or actual knowledge and cannot now plead ignorance."

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

"GERALD GRIFFIN."

(By John Dunne.)

Reports reaching Broadway from the country are indeed encouraging to producers. Some of our noted Broadway successes now on tour report capacity business. One of the real surprises of the season is the remarkable business being recorded everywhere of Gerald Griffin, who is appearing in "The Rose of Killarney" in which he toured Australia, New Zealand, England and Ireland, with marvellous success. That he will be greeted with an audience of large size is evident from the advance sale of seats which is large enough to indicate that there will be few, if any, empty seats in the house when the curtain rises. Several theatre parties have been arranged for Saturday's performance. This demonstrates that the theatre goers of this city and vicinity are well posted as to who is who on the stage. The box office reports a wonderful sale, especially this being Mr. Griffin's first appearance in person.

"The Rose of Killarney" is said to be a scintillating comedy of love with brilliant lines and witty dialogue.

Mr. Plunkett has surrounded his world's favorite singer and actor with the original cast intact. If you really love comedy with a human touch, a tear and a thrill here and there, with plenty of music and singing, do not miss Gerald Griffin's performance to-night. His interesting stories of his travels abroad, between the acts, are well worth the price of admission if nothing else.

There are a few good seats still to be had at the box office. Do not miss seeing this artist on Saturday, and hear him sing; if you do not you will surely be disappointed when you learn of the real enjoyment your friends have had. "Gerald" is beloved the world over and his songs are gems, you'll go home-a-humming.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS IN "THE THIEF OF BAGDAD"

Douglas Fairbanks' amazing picturization of the Arabian Nights, "The Thief of Bagdad," which will be presented at the Grand, Dec. 1-2-3 Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, is generally considered beyond question as being the most extraordinary exposition of screen art that has been known up to the present time. According to all accounts, it marks a distinct and radical advance in this popular form of all entertainments, and placing it on a higher plane than it has yet attained. In "The Thief of Bagdad" Douglas Fairbanks will be seen at his best as the agile happy-go-lucky rascal of old Bagdad. The story is based upon the Arabian Nigts tales and utilizies the services of thousands of people. Fairbanks' role is that of a Thief who reforms and becomes a veritable Prince,—conquering unbelievable difficulties and finally winning the hand of the beautiful Princess. To depict such happenings as are revealed in "The Thief of Bagdad" has never before been considered within the bounds of possibility. Some of the adventures are: The Thief mounted on the Winged Horse, flying up and through the clouds; the Thief and the Princess, on the Magic Carpet soar above the house- tops and into the sky; the raising of the Magic Army from nothingness, and The Invisible Cloak, by the aid of which the redoubtable Thief reaches the presence of the Princess. When presented here, it will offer all the colorful atmospheric effects, a symphony orchestra, full scenic and stage effects, a band of Arabian Musicians, and a Mohammedan Prayer Man, which marked the presentation at the Liberty Theatre here in New York. Furthermore there will be brought into use all the latest inventions for the moving picture, including Edisons' new high-tension lamp as well as the newly invented silk and rubber screen.

This picture will positively not be shown anywhere else in this city this year.

AT THE ROYAL.

Wesley ("Freckles") Barry, the famous boy actor, is booked for the Royal on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. His newest vehicle is Geo. M. Cohan's popular stage success, "George Washington, Jr." It's a clean, hilarious comedy with the Cohan touch, and Barry is the idol of every "growing up" boy. We cannot tell a lie, you'll like "George Washington, Jr."

MAY MURRAY SCORES TRIUMPH IN MLLE. MIDNIGHT AT THE ROYAL

A decided departure from the usual run of Mae Murray pictures, and filled with many fine moments of comedy and drama, "Mademoiselle Midnight," the star's latest picture, opened last night at the Royal Theatre for a stay of three days.

The film began with a prologue depicting the court of Napoleon III, and introduced a French lady in waiting. This girl, portrayed by Miss Murray, is the grandmother of the modern girl of the story proper. The beauty of the scenes at court was simply astounding, and Miss Murray looked magnificient in the hoop-skirts of the period.

Going into the modern period, the change of scene nevertheless kept the same air of old-fashioned beauty that prevailed in the opening sequence. The Mexico of Miss Murray's picture was a delightful, backward sort of place with quaint houses and quainter people.

The star appeared as Renee, the daughter of Don Pedro de Quiros, a wealthy cattle owner of proud family. Renee is afflicted with a curious malady inherited from her grandmother, a lady in the court of Napoleon III. At midnight she is subject to a madness which makes her incapable of knowing what she does.

With this premise, the story developed many thrilling moments, and kept the audience on edge.

Monte Blue played the part of Brent, an American who loved Renee, and he was never more ingratiating, nor more manly. He made you feel enthused all over whenever he appeared and put the quietus on the villain. Robert McKim was Manuel, a Mexican outlaw, and added to his laurels as one of the best of screen villians. Others in the fine cast included Robert Edeson, John Sainpolis, Evelyn Selbie, Otis Harlan, Nigel de Brulier and Nick de Ruiz.

BENNY LEONARD LIGHTWEIGHT CHAMPION IN NEW SERIES AT ROYAL

The first of a series of prize ring stories starring the lightweight champion Benny Leonard, was an added feature at the Royal last night This series will be as popular as the Leather Pushers. Leonard makes a fine screen appearance. He has youth and good looks in his favor. The stories are each complete and contain much humor besides a thrilling ring encounter.

LARRY SEMON IN THE "GOWN SHOP"

"The Gown Shop" is an elaborate comedy, parts of which should more than please the feminine fans on account of the numerous models and magnificient gowns displayed. The laughs are there also.

AT THE REGENT.

CHARMING PATHOS IN THE NEW "GO-GETTER" SERIES

One of the finest touches of pathos ever injected into a two-reel story, is the verdict of the critics who have seen the death of the clown in the first episode of F. B. O's new "Go-Getter" series, directed by Del Andrews and showing every week at the Regent Theatre. And this particular bit, which is guaranteed to bring a mist to the eyes of the hardest-boiled spectator, is just one instance of what can be done in two-reel entertainment if the proper formula is used.

Briefly, the old circus clown with his two youngsters is driving across the grade crossing when the Fast Mail, with George O'Hara in the cab, comes thundering along. The vehicle is not hit, but the old man dies from the shock, and O'Hara takes the two fatherless boys under his protection. That only tells the bare outline of the incident, but it is worked up into a charming scene of emotion in the picture.

This and other touches —thrills, sympathy and actual pathos — show that a broad field of entertainment value has been tapped in F. B. O's unusual series of "Featurettes." They are comedies with dramatic clash, dramas with comedy moments, and Entertainment all the time!

AT THE CAPITOL.

The Capitol Theatre was packed to the limit last night, with every available seat taken, for the first showing of "The Sea Hawk", screened from Rafael Sabatini's novel of the same name, and every member of the audience seemed to be thoroughly in sympathy with the story unfolded before them. This is rather unusual, because the locale and theme of the big picture are naturally far removed from anything that would ever have been experienced by any one in this city, still the men and women who watched the romantic episodes of a fiery sea pirate in a foreign land applauded with vigor his romantic escapades and sympathized with his trials.

The characterizations are immense Every actor appears to have found his proper niche in the story. The veteran screen performer, Milton Sills, has probably the most forceful role of his long career as Oliver Tressilian, the erstwhile English country gentleman who is betrayed by his brother and sold into captivity to the Moors, to spend years as a galley slave at the long oar, and then to free himself and become a leader of the pirates, a follower of Mahomet and the scourge of Islam. A story like this, with the romantic element of a fair lady who is snatched from her English home by the pirate bold and transported to the slave markets of Tangiers, naturally would not lack color, but in handling the tale the producers have achieved a masterpiece of the silent drama. They have done the remarkable thing of bringing to life for a modern audience the long-past existence of story tale times, and those who watch "The Sea Hawk" thrill in turn to the fierce daring of the corsair raiders, or flinch under the whip that drives the bleeding galley-slaves to their task, or sympathize with the lady of gentle birth, shrinking before the eyes of the slave merchants in the market where flesh and blood is bartered.

Sabatini, with consummate art, has provided his pirate chieftain with an unfortunate past that brings him the sympathy of his audience right from the beginnng. A proud and courageous man, fighting against treacherous friends and cowardly foes, has always the heart of the multitude and Sakr-el-Bahr's cruelty is forgotten when the provocation that drove him to such a life is remembered. This quality of sympathy with the main actors goes far to making any picture a success and to engendering that personal interest in a happy ending that keeps any audience up on their respective toes right to the end of a dramatic production.

Detail in costuming and background and scenery has been carried out to the smallest infinitesimal portion in this picture. Nothing has been glossed over in getting the effects of the sea spectacle. The stately galleases are a marvel to modern eyes, the hand to hand fight aboard them are fierce and thrilling close-ups, and the costumes are wonderful. The screen picture follows out most faithfully the story as told in the book. Enid Bennett makes an appealing and lovely Lady Rosamund Godolphin the blonde heroine of the tale and Wallace Beery adds humour with his characterization of the skipper Jasper Leigh.

LIGHTS OUT FOR A KIWANIS FAIR BOY

About eight o'clock last night, the lights in the Market Hall went out for a few minutes. When they flashed up again the quiet little boy who had been 'minding' Mark Bredin's display of bread and buns was fast asleep. "Lights out" to this small junior evidently meant but one thing.

When William O'Rourke won the first prize at the dart games last evening, an aluminum roaster, it looked to him probably like a simple kitchen utensil, and nothing more. But it had more than one use. Mr. O'Rourke, who has lost his hearing, found that it served as an excellent sounding board for the vocal solo that comprised one item of the evening's musical programme, and hugging his metal pan tightly to his breast, he might have been observed thereafter, with a pleased smile on his face, "listening" intently to the strains of the orchestra, in whose neighborhood he spent a great portion of the evening.

MORE EVIDENCE MONTREAL CASE

Constable Joseph Robert Says His Superior Was Frequently Intoxicated.

MONTREAL, Nov. 25.—(Canadian Press).—One of the first witnesses to take the stand this morning at the Local Police Probe in justice Coderre's court was Constable Joseph A Robert, for three years a member of the traffic squad, who declared that his superior, Lieut. Trudeau, of No. 2 Police Station, was "Frequently intoxicated while on duty."

Another witness was Jean Montmarquette, who told of his difficulties when he applied for a job on the police force last autumn. He swore he was told by "Certain officer" that the only way for him to get on the force was to "see an alderman and slip him something."

The Chief of Police had finally told him to go and see Alderman Prodeur and when he had followed these instructions, the alderman was so angry he "nearly threw me out," said the witness.

OBITUARY.

P. A. KEARNEY

The death occurred at his family residence at Young's Point on Monday evening at 7.35 of P. A. Kearney a well known resident of that district.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday morning, Nov. 26th at 9 o'clock from his late residence and will then proceed to St. Mary's church, Young's Point, and thence to St. Mary's Cemetery.

Society

Mrs. J. V. Gallivan will receive at her home, 248 Hunter Street, Wednesday, November 26th, from 4 to 6 p.m.

The Women's Patriotic League of Ashburnham held their first meeting for this season last evening, at the home of Mrs. J. E. R. Munro, Aylmer Street. In the absence of Mrs. R. H. Parsons, the chair was taken by Mrs. G. L. Hay. The usual business of the society was transacted and it was decided, in order to increase the funds in the treasury, to hold an afternoon tea on Tuesday, December 2nd, at the home of Mrs. Jas. McDonald, Charlotte Street, a member who kindly offered her home for the occasion. The next meeting of the League will be held on the first Monday in January at the home of Mrs. G. L. Hay.

The friends of R. H. Parsons, City Engineer, who has been seriously ill with penumonia, will be pleased to learn that he is on the way to recovery.

Mrs. J. A. Aylmer is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Eric McDougall, in Toronto.

FORMER PETERBORO MAN WAS KILLED

W. J. Mitchell Instantly Killed When Auto Struck a Culvert.

HAMILTON, Nov. 25.— W. J. Mitchell 11 Last avenue north, while returning to this city from Mount Forest about 11 o'clock at night, was almost instantly killed when an auto in which he was riding struck a culvert near Mount Forest. Bert Rayner of Toronto, who was driving the machine, was not seriously injured.

Was Superintendent

Mr. Mitchell was superintendent for the W. C. Brennan Construction Company of this city, and had charge of some paving work at Mount Forest. The job was finished yesterday, and last night a banquet was tendered to those who had been engaged on the job. Immediately after this Mr. Mitchell started for home with Mr. Rayner. They had not gone two miles when the machine side-swiped a culvert which was narrowly constructed. Mr. Mitchell was thrown out of the auto and his neck was broken.

Mr. Mitchell is survived by his wife and one son, Austin, who was engaged on the job, and returned to the city a couple of hours ahead of his father.

The deceased formerly resided in Peterboro, where he was well and favourably known. Three brothers reside in Peterboro, namely, George, Robert and Harry, Mrs. H. Girven and Mrs. J. Mortimer of Douro, are sisters. The funeral was largely attended.

FABLES ON HEALTH

"Your children are sure sprouting out," the neighbors would tell Mrs. Mann of Anytown. She would sigh just a bit for their passing childhood.

Realisation that the kid days were over and adolescence in sight bids many a mother and father stop and think. Here are days when great care is required.

In matters of eating it is essential that foods be given which aid this critical period of growth.

Specialists have, at one time and another, urged parents to encourage children at this period to eat the following foods:

Milk in abundance; cocoa or chocolate, instead of coffee; breakfast cereals, wholewheat and graham bread and plenty of toasts, fruits of all sorts, both fresh and stewed; plenty of green vegetables and a limited amount of meat; custard pudding and all puddings made from milk or served with milk or cream sauce; purees instead of ordinary soups and a limited amount of pie, pastry and the like.

PROSPERITY

Steel industry, barometer of general business conditions and individual prosperity, is swiftly climbing back toward full-time operations. Output of pig iron in October was nearly a fifth more than in the month before.

A gigantic boom is apparently approaching, with nothing on the horizon that might stave it off. Railroads, for instance, are handling enormous tonnages of freight, in one recent week breaking all former records.

GOMPERS ELECTED LABOR PRESIDENT

The Veteran Had No Opposition in the Convention.

EL PASO, Texas, Nov. 25. — (United Press).—The re-election of Samuel Gompers as president and the disapproval to put Labor on record as opposed to the League of Nations or a world court were the two important actions to close the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor here to-day. The convention was expected to approve the stand of the Committee on International Relations in opposing the resolution of the International Seamen's Union, which protested against America's entry into either the World Court or the League of Nations.

The veteran Gompers had no opposition in the convention, and his election as head of the Labor movement for the forty-fourth time was confirmed.

Arrangements were completed today for approximately 325 of the delegates to attend the inauguration of General Pelcs Calles, President-Elect of Mexico, as guests of the Mexican Government. Two special trains of ten cars each will leave for Mexico City to-morrow with the delegates.

Ahead of each train will be a pilot troop train, a special guard of 100 Federal soldiers will be assigned to each train, and, in addition, an armoured car will be placed at the front and rear of both specials.

GAMES OF CHANCE MAY BE ALLOWED

Exhibition Associations Want Amendment to Criminal Code.

OTTAWA, Nov. 25. — (Canadian Press).—A large deputation of representatives of various exhibition associations, from every province in the Dominion, waited upon Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, and Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Minister orf Agriculture, this morning.

The chief request was for the amendment to the criminal code permitting the use of wheels of fortune and games of chance, at all exhibitions, and granting the same rights in this respect as are now enjoyed at church bazaars. It is understood that the deputation also suggested an advance in Government grants to "B" fairs, which are now fixed at $3,750.

Early consideration was promised by the Cabinet representatives and it was intimated that a favorable consideration may be given in regard to the desired amendment to the present legislation, in order to assist the exhibitions in the conduct of their fairs.

BRITISH WITHOLD ACTION IN EGYPT

Students Returned to School To-day, But Refused To Take Up Their Work.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—(Canadian Press.)—The British Government is going to withhold further action in Egypt to allow the new Cabinet there time to re-consider the British demands, only part of which the Zaghloul ministry agreed to. It is stated the British Government has hopes that the Cabinet of Ziwar Pasha will be able to see its way clear to agree to the demands in which case the assassination of Sirdar will be considered closed as far a diplomatic relations of Great Britains and Egypt are concerned.

An improved atmosphere prevailed in Cairo today following yesterday's sensational political developments resulting from the course taken by Great Britain in consequence of the assassination last week of Sirdar, Sir Lee Stack.

British troops paraded the streets again this morning but otherwise there were few signs of the unusual. Students in educational institutions who had struck in protest against the British demands, returned to schools but refused to take up their work.

Ziwar Pasha's new Cabinet discussed the situation today with ex-Premier Zaghloul Pasha and it is learned the new government's program will be submitted to the chamber of deputies this evening. If an immediate vote of confidence is not forthcoming it is understood Ziwar is prepared to recommend prorogation of Parliament or even dissolution.

Egyptian parliament was adjourned by royal decree today to December 25th.

WOMAN CHARGED WITH PLOTTING BLACKMAIL ACT

Montague Noel Newton, Who Posed as Mrs. Robinson's Husband, Reveals Details.

RAJAH CAUGHT.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The direct charge that Mrs. C. E. Robinson, who is the chief witness for her husband in the latter's suit against the Midland Bank for $750,000, had proposed that she be discovered in a bedroom with the mysterious "Mr. A." the unnamed Indian prince, who has caused the present trial to be a sensation, was made late yesterday afternoon when Montague Noel Newton, frequently mentioned by previous witnesses in the trial, suddenly appeared as a witness and detailed his connection with the Robinson's affair with the eastern potentate.

Robinson is suing for a sum which he alleges the bank owes him on account of a settlement with the mysterious "Mr. A," whose alleged indiscretions with Mrs. Robinson had been discovered by her husband.

Newton, on the witness stand, declared that Mrs. Robinson told him in November, 1919, that the Eastern Prince was "enormously wealthy." It was suggested, Newton testified, that he should take the part of her husband in an apartment room scene because "her own husband didn't look like the husband of a society lady, and, anyhow, in all the business they had done between them he (the husband) always preferred a back seat."

Side Cupboard.

The witness said that he agreed to Mrs. Robinson's proposal. There were to be five persons in the affair, including himself, Robinson and wife the eastern potentate's aide-de-camp, who is known in the case as "Mr. C," and a Mrs. Bevan, who was Mrs. Robinson's confidante.

When Mrs. Robinson first proposed the idea, Newton added, she told him that the prince's aide-de-camp had called and told her of "Mr. A's" wealth, and the aide-de-camp's part was later revealed when he inspected Newton and approved of him in the role of the "injured" husband.

Newton further testified that "Mr X" told him that the prince had three million dollars in a bank in India, as well as a considerable sum in London. Newton said that, after a discussion of the financial possibilities from all angles, he (Newton) was given a latch key to Mrs. Robinson's London house in Chapel street.

BLACKMAIL VICTIM.

RAJAH SIR HARI SINGH,
Indian Potentate, who was mentioned as "Mr. A." in the London scandal, now being disclosed in Mr. Justice Darling's Court. He is Hari Singh, son and heir of Sir Pratab Singh, maharajah of Jammu and Kashmir.

CAST OF CHARACTERS IN BLACKMAIL TRIAL LONDON'S SENSATION

Attempts Were Made to Conceal the Identity of the Victim For State Reasons.

Sir Hari Sin nephew of Sir Pratab Singh, Maharajah of Jammu and Kashmir, the "Mr. A.," who paid $750,000 to hush up his affair with Mrs. Maude Robinson.

Mrs. Maude Robinson, thirty-six-year-old beauty, who inherited Grasshopper Ointment business from her grandfather. Met Prince Hari at 1919 Victory Ball in London. Accompanied him to the Continent.

Charles Ernest Robinson, her husband, who sued Midland Bank of London for $625,000, balance of $750,000 hush money. Australian, aged fifty, bookmaker, formerly wealthy.

Montague Noel Newton, ex-army officer, who, it is alleged, engineered blackmail plot. Raided room of Mrs. Robinson on Christmas night when the Prince was with her, and impersonated her husband.

William Cooper Hobbs, lawyer's clerk, to whose firm Newton took Robinson. Took $265,000 from the bank, though his share was supposed to be but $20,000 of hush money.

FURNACE DEATH CLUES INDICATE WOMAN'S DEATH

Bloodstains Found on Clothing, Table Linen and Furniture to be Examined.

LOOK FOR TRAMP.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 26. — Authorities drew a web of evidence about an unnamed culprit in the Sheatsley furnace mystery yesterday.

The prosecutor left for Lithopolis early in the day to question a woman who was said to have taken lunch with Rev. C. V. Sheatsley and his family a few hours before the pastor's wife was found smoldering in the parsonage furnace. Before leaving King made it plain that he does not suspect the Sheatsley luncheon guest, but expects to get from her "some information."

Edwin Abbott, an undertaker, who removed Mrs. Sheatsley's remains from the furnace told County Prosecutor John R. King that a portion of Mrs. Sheatsley's skull was broken. He indicated, however, that this might have been caused by the intense heat of the furnace. The woman's body will probably be exhumed.

Numerous articles of clothing, table linen and furniture bearing what the prosecutor believed to be human bloodstains, were placed in the hands of a chemist.

Rabbit Blood.

In a statement at Canton, Ohio, Rev. Sheatsley said the stains were rabbit blood. He had cleaned several rabbits at the parsonage after a hunting trip two days before the fatality, the pastor said.

It is now very apparent that Mrs. Sheatsley was slain by someone who either shot or beat her severely before her body was placed in the furnace, King said.

"The suicide theory is very remote, and we have only to proceed on the basis that she was brutally slain."

Detectives were ordered to search for a 'strange character' reported by several residents of the Bexley district to have been calling at back doors and asking for an opportunity to enter the basement.

The man's first request was for clothing, residents said. Refused clothing, he invariably asked if he might warm himself in the furnace room of the basement.

An important question raised in the investigation was whether Mrs. Sheatsley had not been decapitated before her body was thrust into the furnace. None of those who saw or handled the body remembered seeing a head on it. Prosecutor King said he would interview the undertaker who handled the remains, and if the undertaker cannot state positively that the head was on the body there may be an exhumation. Prosecutor King, who saw the body, said he could not be sure that it had a head.

"I remember the question was raised, and Coroner Murphy pointed to a part which he said was the head," King said. "It was such a gruesome thing, however, I did not take a good look."

The prosecutor was aided in his inquiry and search of the house by Dr. H. M. Brundage, a pathologist, and H. C. Long, a chemical expert.

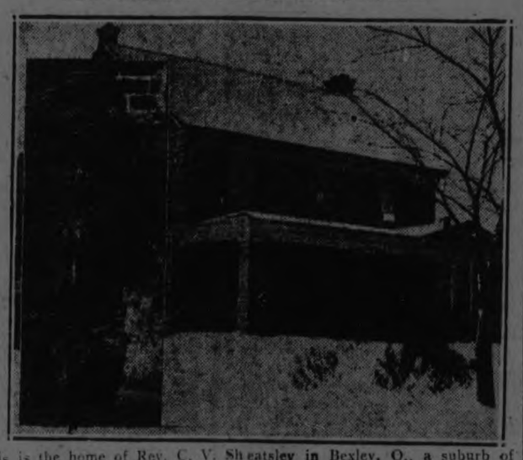
Experts' Test.

Dr. Brundage and Mr. Long made the examination of Mrs. Sheatley's lungs and oesophagus and said their tests positively showed Mrs. Sheatsley was strangled and her body later thrust into the firebox, and yesterday they set out to prove the accuracy of their conclusions.

The furnace was banked with coal and a blazing fire was set roaring. Two guinea pigs were then thrust into the fire bowl. At the expiration of two minutes the squeals of guinea pigs ceased and life was extinct.

The physicians and the chemist said the animals undoubtedly collapsed from the carbon monoxide fumes they breathed in the fire. They said the experiment would most certainly bear them out in their contentions about the manner of Mrs. Sheatsley's death.

THE SHEATSLEY PARSONAGE



This is the home of Rev. C. V. Sheatsley in Bexley, O., a suburb of Columbus. Mrs. Sheatley's body was found in the furnace in the basement. The inset shows the door through which her body was removed.

Lutheran minister of Bexley, O., whose wife's body was found in the furnace of their home.

ITALY RECALLS CORFU INCIDENT

Refers to Egyptian Situation and Finds Justification For Mussolini.

TROOPS LANDED.

ROME, Nov. 26.—The Italian press, in its comment on the Egyptian situation, continues to find occasion for justifying Premier Mussolini's handling of the Corfu incident with Greece last year, characterizing his methods as mild compared with those Great Britain is adopting against Egypt.

The Giornale D'Italia yesterday published a caricature of Viscount Cecil remarking that it was he who almost pushed the League of Nations into action against Italy last year and wondering what he thinks of the landing of British troops at Alexandria.

"England," adds the newspaper, "does not go in much for subtleties she just grabs Egypt by the neck and forces her, willy-nilly to get down on her knees.

Communist Criticism.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The Communist party in a manifesto issued Tuesday blames the "British Imperialistic policy" for creating "the inflamed feeling in Egypt which was the driving force that generated the attack on the Sirdar."

When Premier MacDonald followed up his peremptory dismissal of Premier Zagloul Pasha with his Imperialist despatch to Viscount Allenby, the Manifesto continues:—"He did his share toward effecting the operation of terms that are now in the ultimatum and contributed his quota in the development of the present situation.

"Well may he speak highly of the

ELEVATOR REFUSED TO UNLOAD GRAIN BOATS

Port Colborne Management Reply That They Had Reserved Space.

WINNIPEG, November 26. — Charges were lodged yesterday with Matthew Snow, local member of the board of grain commissioners, to the effect that the government elevator at Port Colborne, Ont., had refused to unload grain from vessels arriving from Fort William.

The complaint was made by the lake shipping interests and according to Mr. Snow the full particulars of the case have been wired to Leslie Boyd, the chairman of the board, who is in Ottawa.

The elevator management claimed the space had been reserved by other interests and was being held for the arrival of their grain. This action was unusual, according to Mr. Snow, and only on one previous ocasion had a government elevator followed such a course.

Congestion at the bay ports is reported to be serious, and is seriously impeding the flow of western grain across the lakes to the east. The congestion is attributed to the anxiety of the trade to move grain from the lake head elevators before the close of navigation.

CHAPLIN WEDS AGAIN.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 26. — At five o'clock Tuesday morning in the little town of Empalme, near Guaymas on the Gulf of California, Charlie Chaplin was married to Lita Gray, his leading lady, by Civil Justice Antonio Haro, according to despatches received here from Guaymas.

Immediately after the ceremony the couple returned to Guaymas, reaching there at seven o'clock. The wedding party had breakfast at the Hotel Albin and afterwards went to their suite of rooms which had been reserved in the hotel.

Daughters of Kingston Doctor Mistook Poison Potion For Port Wine.

FRIEND RECOVERS.

Obtained Ipecachuana in Father's Surgery Before Going to R.M.C. Dance.

KINGSTON, Ont., Nov. 26.—Miss Margaret Morrison, aged fifteen years and five months, and Miss Mary Agnes Morrison, aged nineteen, daughters of Dr. C. A. and Mrs. Morrison, one of the leading families of this city, are dead as a result of drinking wine of ipecac in mistake for port wine, before attending a tea dansant at Royal Military College after the Rugby game on Saturday afternoon. The cause of death is officially given by the doctor who attended the girls as accidental poisoning from wine of ipecac.

It has not yet been definitely decided whether an inquest will be held or not, but the coroner here is of the opinion that one is not necessary as there is no other element beyond that of accident. He has, however, made a report to the Attorney-General's Department and will be guided by the decision of the Queen's Park authorities.

Miss Isobel MacDonald, of Alexandria, Ont., who was visiting the Morrison girls, also drank some of the ipecac, but not so much as her two friends, and while she was ill for a while she has now recovered.

Contents of Bottle Analyzed.

The remainder of the ipecac in the bottle from which the girls poured their drinks, has been analyzed and found to contain nothing but wine and ipecac. It has also been definitely established that the girls ate or drank nothing else between the time they took this and when they were taken ill at the dance. One of the doctors who attended the girls said that the wine of ipecac they drank was the kind in ordinary use in many households. While deaths from this cause were not frequent he had heard of them before. Judging from the quantity the girls said they had taken, it would appear, he said, that two or three ounces would have very serious if not fatal effects.

The dance at which the girls were taken ill commenced at 4.30 on Saturday afternoon. Miss Morrison and her friend, Miss McDonald, danced until about 5.30, when Miss Mary Morrison went to the dressing-room and complained of feeling ill. She was found there by a well-known society woman of Kingston, who related yesterday just what happened.

"I found Miss Morrison, who was an extremely pretty girl, sitting in the cloak-room complaining of feeling ill. She told me she was not very ill but had felt badly before leaving home. She had a friend with her. She had come to the dance because she did not wish to miss it. I suggested that she call a taxi and go home, but she replied that she would go back to the ball-room shortly. The next time I went to the dressing room she was still there, and I then found her friend, Miss McDonald, and the girls went home in a taxi.

EXPULSION OF ALIENS FROM BRITAIN URGED

British Fascisti Overwhelmed With Applications For Membership.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—(Canadian Press Cable. The British Fascisti is being overwhelmed with applications for membership according to a statement made by General Blakeney to a meeting Tuesday of the London contingent. General Blakeney added that the Fascisti headquarters were going to send a petition to support a measure for expelling aliens from Great Britain.

Addressing the gathering also, Sir Ormonde Winter said he believed the London county council intended to apply to the Fascisti for help in the coming election. If so the Fascists would afford the assistance they were entitled to give. He hoped Fascists in England would develop until it exacted that recognition from the government which would enable it to act as an auxiliary to the special constabulary.

BEER SCOW NOT WAREHOUSE FOR LIQUOR EXPORT

Sarnia Magistrate's Decision Sentences Owner to Six Months In Jail.

SOLD TWO CASES.

SARNIA, Ont., November 26. — Harry W. Lougheed, a well known resident of this city, and former manufacturer, was sentenced to a six months term in jail in a deferred judgment by Magistrate Henry Gorman on Tuesday. He has filed notice of appeal, and bonded himself for $2000 pending its hearing.

Lougheed is proprietor of the notorious beer scow at the foot of George street, and he was charged with selling two cases of ale to government operatives from Toronto. If the appeal fails it is expected that the scow (still operating on the river) will cease business.

Lougheed in his defence claimed to be the agent of a London brewing company, in charge of an export warehouse with a legal right to make sales for export to a foreign country.

The judgment says in part that "under sections 45 and 46 of the O. T. A., the only places from which liquor may lawfully be sold for export are 'bonded warehouses,' and sales from these can be made only to a person in a foreign country."

Consigned to Detroit.

"The liquor sold by the defendant formed part of consignment cleared, or alleged to have been celared, from a bonded warehouse of the London Brewery, and consigned to one Grandi in Detroit, Mich.

"Evidence indicates that the shipment for some reason not quite clearly defined, was stopped at Sarnia, and stored in an old hulk on the River St. Clair, located at or near

ELECT HANNA WEST HASTINGS BYE-ELECTION

Liberal Candidate Will Have Majority of Nearly 500 When All Polls In.

A KEEN CONTEST.

How the Vote Went In Some of the Outlying Divisions.

BELLEVILLE, Nov. 26.—(Canadian Press.)— West Hastings riding, which has returned a Conservative member to Ottawa ever since Confederation, with but one break, has gone Liberal by a majority of more than 400. Yesterday the electors defeated E. Gus Porter, who has represented the constituency in Parliament for nearly twenty-four years, and returned Charles Edward Hanna, Liberal candidate, giving him a lead of 495 votes over his Conservative opponent. In the election of 1921 Mr. Porter was returned by a majority of 1,171. Polling yesterday came at the end of a campaign such as West Hastings has never witnessed. The by-election was caused by the resignation of his seat by Mr. Porter following his failure to substantiate charges he brought in the House of Commons against Mr. Murdock. He accused the Minister of Labor of having broken his oath of office and of having withdrawn his savings from the Home Bank in consequence of information alleged to have been secured as member of the cabinet. The voters of West Hastings have endorsed the decision reached by the House of Commons, which voted the charges to be unfounded. Hon. Mr. Murdock himself played a prominent part in the campaign, and the result is hailed as a vindication of his honor and judgment of parliament.

The Liberal campaign, which was directed by Hon. T. A. Low and G. N. Gordon, member for West Peterboro, was participated in by the Prime Minister and several members of the Cabinet, while the Conservative candidate had the assistance of Right Hon. Mr. Meighen and practically the entire body of his front bench supporters in the House of Commons. Other Parliamentarians who also addressed meetings during the campaign included Senator Gideon Robertson, Hon. Edmund Bristol and Senator McCoig.

The polling was the heaviest in the riding's history. In Belleville, 6,139 voters went to the polls, 800 more than had ever voted in the city before. The Liberal candidate was given 3,370 of these votes, while 2,796 went to Mr. Porter.

The voting showed that railroaders, who form a large and important

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

CHURCH UNION HALF-TRUTHS

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir: If "a half truth is the biggest untruth" your readers can judge the size of the following samples.

(1) A statement signed by Dr. James Pedley, Dr. Chown and Dr. George Pidgeon, and broadcasted recently in the Canadian Press, quotes the opening sentences of three of the twenty Articles of Faith in the "Basis of Union," each Article beginning "We believe." These men declare those twenty Articles to be "the Faith of the three Churches"—"mutually agreed upon and accepted both by their Courts and their people." But they do not tell—or even hint—that while these Articles of Faith are in the Basis of Union, nobody in the "United Church" subscribes to them, nor is asked to do so.

The case is made worse by the fact that in the first draft of ordination vows laid before Assembly (See Minutes, 1907), there was a vow in which ministers were asked to declare acceptance of these Articles of Faith, but that vow was dropped, to please those who did not wish to vow acceptance of any definite Christian Truth, and now the Ministers of the United Church are not asked to declare acceptance of any of the Christian Truths in the Basis of the Union. All that is required of them is that they shall "satisfy" someone who may happen to be examining them, as to their "essential agreement" with these Articles of Faith.

A man asks for a position of trust in a railway, where human lives are at stake. Are you a total abstainer? Are you fit to be trusted with it?" "Yes, I've taken the pledge." "Let me see it." He shows a beautiful pledge. "But you have not signed it." No, but I'm in "essential agreement" with it! Here are men entrusted with a work where human souls are at stake. Here are the Truths upon which the welfare of those souls depends. What must be said of the pretence of claiming that the "United Church" stands for these Truths, when no one is asked to subscribe to them, to declare that he accepts them?

(2) Another half-truth, constantly echoed, is that "A congregation can call its minister and the Presbytery induct him, just as at present." But they obscure the fact that between the so-named "call" and the induction, between the congregation and the Presbytery, and above both of them, is the Settlement Committee, a power unknown in the Presbyterian Church, an arbitrary, supreme power, responsible to none, and that this Committee may appoint whom it will, regardless of the so-named "call," a thing impossible in the Presbyterian Church.

They quote the first part of a sentence from the Basis of Union, as follows: "Any pastoral charge, in view of a vacancy, may extend a call or invitation to any properly qualified minister or ministers," and they usually fail to quote the remainder of the sentence, which is—"but the right of appointment shall rest with the Settlement Committee, which shall report to the Conference, for information only."

(3) A frequent half-truth is the "Loyalty" cry. They quote the pledge "to submit to the discipline of this Church, and to follow no divisive course." But they carefully omit the remainder of the sentence, which pledged them—"to submit to the discipline of THIS CHURCH, and to follow no divisive course from the present order established therein."

The Unionists, in Assembly and other Courts of our Church, are following a "divisive course from the present order" of Doctrine and Polity "established therein" and the duty of every loyal member of the Church is to "maintain and defend" the Church, and to resist to the uttermost this "divisive course from the present order established therein." If any wish a change they can leave the Church for some other.

These three are samples of the "half-truths" that abound in recent "Union" propaganda. What must be thought of a Movement that inspires and permits and uses "half-truths?" How are "half-truths" judged in business life? Think of "half-truths" in the Church of Christ, and in His Name! What of the effect on men outside the Church, when they see "half-truths" in the Church? What confidence can be placed in any other statement on the question, by those who use "half-truths." Let us hope that with many it is because they do not know. But even that does not lessen the tragic result.

E. SCOTT.

Montreal, Nov. 20, 1924.

Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Reading through the Presbyterian Witness of November 20th, 1924, (A Union Propaganda Paper) I see where the Convener of the General Assembly Committee on Church Union cites the case of the Wee Frees in Scotland dwindling down to practically nothing. He is, in this, like all things he writes about when referring to Church Union, one sided. The Wee Frees in Scotland have certainly lost ground but let us look at the cause of it in a broad minded manner.

The doctrine discipline and procedure were the same in the United Presbyterian (or Convenanters) and Free Churches and by an overwhelming majority of the people the United Presbyterians and the Frees became the United Free, still keeping the same doctrine, etc. In the remote Highland Glens and villages the people could not see eye to eye with their Lowland brethren. Therefore they remained the Free Church, better known as the Wee Free. They have lost in membership, but what is the cause of it? The vast majority of their best and bravest young men are today lying buried in the far flung battle lines of the last Great War. And what was left of them, young and old, have nearly all emigrated to the Colonies! Now the convener of the Union Committee and men like him, are trying by act of Parliament to deny those people and other likewise minded, the right to worship God in the Faith of their Fathers.

In many churches, especially in Ontario, ministers are using the one sweet and hallowed hour on a Sabbath morning, when good and Godly people meet to praise and worship their Creator, instead of preaching the gospel of Christ Jesus, to bellow out union propaganda. It is painful for a Christian to see how the mighty have fallen.

Where was the convener of the Union committee in 1915? I have no doubt but that he was lying among the sheep folds listening to the bleeting of the sheep when the vast majority of the Presbyterians were doing their bit against the Hun. It was then they took the scratch vote on Church Union when only one-third of the members were here to vote. The other two-thirds were too busy trying to win the great war.

I was disgusted with the convener of the Union Committee when at Ottawa and in the presence of learned men he sneered and ridiculed Presbyterian Doctrine and had the boldness to read part of an epistle, one of the most ungodly ever penned by Robt. Burns:

O though who in the Heavens doth dwell,
Who as it pleases best thysel,
Sends one to Heaven and ten to Hell,
All for thy glory, and not for any good or ill, they've done before you.

I may be pardoned if I refer to the same Robt. Burns and site part of an epitaph which I think would be most suitable for the Convener of the Union Committee.

When you are numbered with the dead,
Below some grassy hullock,
With justice they may mark your head,
Here lies a famous bullock.
Yours truly,
A SCION OF THE BOLD DENHOLM.

ELECTRICIAN HAD A NARROW ESCAPE

Pulled Wrong Switch, Doing Damage of Over $50,000.

MONTREAL, Nov. 26.—(Canadian Press).—George Coleman, civic employee, had an extremely narrow escape from death yesterday when he pulled the wrong switch on a 10,000 volt circuit at the new plant of the Montreal water and power company in Ville St. Paul. Damage of $50,000 resulted from ensuing the short circuit and practically every street car in the city was brought to a standstill at the height of the morning rush hour. Coleman ran when he saw the widening flame which foretold what was imminent," said an official of the plant. Had he not done so there would have been nothing left of him—he'd have been burned to a crisp."

Coleman it was stated, was employed testing the new and powergul apparatus which is being installed in the plant. He had been performing the same duty every day for a month but yesterday he accidentally "pulled the wrong switch" thus throwing 10,000 voltage upon another circuit already "loaded." to capacity.

SERMON ON CHURCH UNION AT OMEMEE TRACED MOVEMENT

CHURCH SOCIALS.

OMEMEE, November 25. — At the morning service in the Presbyterian church, the minister, Rev. J. A. Black gave some valuable and timely information on the question of church union. He briefly traced the history of the movement since the beginning of the present century to the bill which became an act of the Dominion Parliament on July 19, 1924. Any congregation wishing to vote follows the list of members upon that date. Without doing anything, any congregation in any of the three uniting churches, may become a part of the United Church of Canada on the 10th of June, 1925.

If the session or management agree or ten members petition in a congregation of one hundred members or less, a vote of the membership is to be taken between the 10th of December, 1924, and the 10th of June, 1925. This vote will decide whether or not the congregation goes into the United Church.

The pastorate in the United Church is looked upon as a permanent one, but a change may be arranged if either the minister or congregation makes the request to the proper authorities. There are so many things to be looked after and settled that it may be some time before there is much change in the arrangement of pastoral charges.

The pastor gave some of his reasons for being in favor of the union and pleaded for a continuance of harmony and good fellowship in the congregation. He also expressed the hope that all would go forward as one, into the United Church, and into the richer fellowship and larger service of the coming days.

Epworth Social.

A pleasant social evening was held in the Methodist Sunday school room on Monday evening, by the Epworth League.

The meeting was in charge of Miss Violet McBain; Miss Ethel Wright gave a splendid address on Canadian Literature dealing with the works of Robert Louis Stevenson. Mr. J. L. Brooks rendered a pleasing solo and Morgan Rowland gave a piano selection. A pleasing part of the programme was the presentation of a miscellaneous shower by the pastor to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Jackson (nee Miss Hilda Sanderson). The shower was drawn out by Master Lloyd Rowland in his express wagon, and the gifts were opened and placed on display.

Mr. Jackson thanked the Leaguers for their kindness in a happy little speech which he interspersed with several timely stories which created much merriment.

Following the shower a contest called the Vegetable Love Story was put on after which refreshments were served and a jolly half hour enjoyed by all.

Ladies' Aid Guests.

Mrs. J. Shields entertained the executive of the Ladies's Aid of the Methodist church, at her home on Wednesday evening, and while there the ladies presented Mrs. William Earl, who has held the office of treasurer for many years, with a fountain pen, with an engraved monogram and guard, accompanied by a packet of post cards upon which to return a message when on her trip to visit her daughter in Pittsburg, Kansas, which she started on on Friday.

Mr. Isaac Fee has the lumber on the lot, joining his home, for the building of two shops, which will soon be under the course of construction.

Mr. Joseph Beatty has a carload of coke in, the retail price being $11.50.

Mr. Wagstaff, of Cannington, has purchased a building lot from Mrs. J. Rutherford, facing George Street, and intends erecting a new dwelling.

The Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church decided at a meeting on Thursday to provide the annual treat and Christmas entertainment for the Sunday School, and the date was set for Friday evening, Dec. 19.

Born—On Monday, November 17, to Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Boate, a daughter.

Miss Lottie Howden is spending a few days with relatives in Peterboro.

AT ALL DRUGGISTS

CAMPBELLFORD HAS NEW CHIEF

John Brown, Formerly of Peterborough and Port Hope, Gets the Position at Fifteen Hundred Dollars.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 26.—A special meeting of the Council, was held in the Council Chamber last night, to consider the tenders for Chief of Police. Members present—Mayor A. J. Mayer, Reeve Davidson, Deputy Reeve Dorie, Councillors: Kingston, McDonald, Redden, Abernethy, Cole and Johnston. Town Solicitor Humpries was also present.

The committee appointed to select a list of the best applications, had met and choose eleven out of the one hundred and fifty-seven sent in.

Moved by Councillor McDonald, and seconded by Councillor Johnston, that the Committee's report be accepted. Carried.

Moved and seconded by Councillors Kingston and McDonald that the By-law which engaged Chief Duncalfe, be rescinded. Carried.

Mayor Meyer, asked if any one wished to address the Council. Mr. J. R Wilkinson took the opportunity. He said he had made application for the position of Chief of Police, but plainly saw he was not considered, even if he was a returned man. It seemed to him that there should be some good men found in the Town of Campbellford as well as in other towns. He also said that those who paid taxes in Campbellford, should have some consideration, before bringing in outsiders.

Mr. H. Seaborn also addressed the Council along the same line.

Councillor Johnston asked Mr. Seaborn if he had ever had anything to do with the collecting of the poll-tax, or any of the fines, which had not been accounted for? Mr. Seaborn he had had nothing to do with them.

Councillor Johnston also asked Mr. Seaborn if he had ever arrested a man and taken him up to the police rooms and then let him go?

Mr. Seaborn said he had but that Chief Duncalfe had told him to do so.

Councillor Johnston asked him who had hired him as assistant policeman, Chief Duncalfe or the Town?

Councillor Cole moved that the appointment of Chief of Police should be laid over for the Council of 1925. No seconder, so the motion was lost. The question was asked if Mr. Brown would be willing to perform the duties of night watchman. Reeve Davidson assured them he would, as Mr. Brown understood that was part of his duty.

Moved by Reeve Davidson and seconded by Councillor Kingston, that Mr. Brown be appointed to the position of Chief of Police at a salary of fifteen hundred dollars. Councillor Cole asked for a notice of the motion (just as he had done at the last Council meeting over another motion), as the motion was not in order. Mayor Meyers said that Councillor Cole had the right to do this. Councillor Kingston then asked the Town Solicitor for a ruling. The solicitor said the motion was quite in order, so the motion was put before the Council. Reeve Davidson asked for yeas and nays. Yeas: Reeve Davidson, Deputy Reeve Dorie, Councillors Abernethy, Johnston, Kingston, McDonald and Redden. Nays: Mayor Meyers and Councillor Cole. One of Councillor Cole's arguments during the evening was that he could not see why Reeve Davidson wanted to hire a man for fifteen hundred when there were one hundred and fifty-three applying for the position at twelve hundred.

Council then adjourned.

Mr. Brown will begin his duties as Chief of Police on January 1st, 1925.

When Mr. Brown addressed the Council at the last meeting of the Council, many of those present were favorably impressed.

CHARLES HANNA

In the railwaymen's section of the city, Charles Hanna secured his biggest leads. He carried the advance poll here by 88 to 48, and by 27 to 23 in Trenton. In addition to the majorities he secured in Belleville and Trenton, the Liberal candidate carried rural sections in the north and south of the riding. Mr. Porter's display of strength was made in the second tier of townships, in Rawdon and Huntingdon, and in the villages of Frankford and Stirling.

The totals for other municipalities in the riding are not available, but the majorities are as follows: For Hanna, Belleville City, 611; Trenton 170; Township of Sidney, 106; Township of Farraday, 123; Township of Woolaston, 1; Township of Herschel, 81; Banger, Wicklow and McKlure, 174.

For Porter: Village of Bancroft, 13; Village of Stirling, 66; Village of Marmora, 103; Village of Deloro, 83; Township of Rawdon, 195; Township of Huntingdon, 300.

The Townships of Marmora and Lake are tied. The West Riding of Hastings is traditionally Conservative stronghold. Since 1867 (Confederation year) until 1904, when the old constituency was merged in the present riding, there was only one brief break in the steady record of the Tory triumph. Mr. Porter has represented Hastings West continuously since its present boundaries were established in the election of 1904. His Conservative majority since that time has always been in four figures. They were as follows: In 1908, Conservative majority, 1,161; in 1911, Conservative majority 1,771; in 1917, Conservative majority 1,625; in 1921, Conservative majority 1,171.

FAST DRIVING HAS INCREASED WRECKS

Road Accidents Increased 26 Per Cent. in Past Year in England.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Motor cars in England have not yet become so common that they kill as many people each year as does influenza, which statistics show to be the case nowadays in America, but the toll of life on the highways is becoming a matter of concern over here, too.

In the past 12 months road accidents increased in number by 26 per cent. over the previous year. Sir Henry P. Maybury, director-general of roads in the Ministry of Transport, told a recent meeting of motor manufacturers, that he has been impressed with the growing tendency to increased speeds by all manner of vehicles.

High speed driving is more dangerous in England than in almost any other country with good roads, for the country highways seldom keep to a straight line for any considerable distance. It is doubtful if they ever will, unless automobiles become considerably more numerous and new roads are demanded. One of the charms of England is her winding narrow roads, lined with hedges, and few want to see them given up merely for the sake of getting from place to place in less time.

HALIFAX MAN WAS FOUND NOT GUILTY

George Coleman Charged With Murder of W. F. Grover, Was Found Insane.

HALIFAX, Nov. 26.—(Canadian Press).— After one hour and twenty five minutes deliberation the jury try ing Gunner George Coleman for the murder of Bombadier W. F. Groves who was shot at the gate of Sandwich Battery, near here, on the morn ing of July 17 last, returned a verdict of not guilty because the accused was insane at the time of the shooting. Mr. Justice Chisholm presiding, said he could not concur in the jury's finding but that the jury was within its rights, thereupon he remanded Coleman until "the pleasure of his honor the Lieutenant-Governor.

The defence of Coleman was a plea of insanity and his experiences overseas were held up as evidence that he suffered injuries affecting his reason. Groves was shot when he answered the bell signal at the Fort indicating that someone desired entrance. When he went to the gate he was shot dead. Evidence at the trial was to the effect that Coleman went to a neighbor's house and admitted the shooting, later giving himself up to the authorities.

TRAFFIC PROBLEMS BEING DISCUSSED

Provincial Ministers of Highways Are Now In Conference.

TORONTO, Nov. 26. — Problems of highway and traffic regulation are before the conference being held at the Parliament Buildings by Provincial Ministers of Highways, highway engineers, motor vehicle administrators, and executive committee of the Canadian Good Roads Association.

Sudanese Content.

KHARTUM, Sudan, Nov. 26.—The Sudanese newspapers published the British note to the Egyptian government in both the Arabic and English language. It appears that the Sudanese generally are contented with the British action and in some quarters the view is expressed that the projected measures do not go far enough.

The Sudan Herald demands the complete severance of Sudan and Egypt, and urges, in addition, the evacuation of the Egyptian militaries and the removal of the Egyptian civil population. The latter consists mainly of government employees. The Telegraph and telephone services are being worked by Britons, the Egyptian employees having been suspended.

SOVIET CONSIDERS AUTONOMY OF JEWS

MOSCOW, Nov. 26.—(Associated Press).—Sentiment is growing in Russia for the establishment of a Jewish republic. The subject has been under discussion among prominent Hebrews and members of the Government for some time past. It is known that the Soviet, which is anxious to solve the problem of all nationalities within its borders, is prepared to give complete autonomy to the Jews provided some means can be found of unifying their interests and of locating them in a homogeneous colony within the Soviet Union. At present there are upward of 6,000,000 Jews in Russia, scattered over a wide area.

Bolshevik officials take much pride in saying they have solved the minorities question in Armenia, Georgia, Azbaijan and the Central Asian States, where for centuries all efforts of Czarist Russia in the same direction failed. They are confident the Jewish question can be solved in a similar way. The Government has created a special commission in Moscow to study the Jewish question and to extend schemes for the colonization of the race. The Ukrainian and White Russian Governments have already allotted large tracts of land to the Jews for settlement purposes.

Although the Hebrews' aspirations for self-government have never been as pronounced as those of other minorities it is certain a great majority of them would welcome the creation of a republic of their own, provided they are given guarantees of security and independence from the central Government at Moscow. The Bolshevik revolution released the Jews from the bondage of the czars, and under the present Soviet regime they are allowed all the privileges accorded Russian citizens. But Jewish leaders here seek an autonomous republic of their own, similar to that under which the Tartars, Ukrainians, Kirkhesians, Georgians, and other alien nationalities within Soviet Russia are living.

There is no thought on the part of the Soviet Government officials to usurp the place now held by Palestine as a National Home for the Jews, for they recognize that religious motives largely govern those who have sought domicile in the Holy Land. The authorities here envisage a much broader scheme of settlement for the Jews, one where they would have not only complete religious liberty but full scope for the development of their political, economic and cultural aspirations.

PAINT ABSORBS THE ECHO.

A hall which has conflicting echoes may be improved by rebuilding to the extent of changing some of the lining of the interior but a second method is to make the reflecting wall a good absorber, so that the sound is swallowed up and little or none reflected. Painting the wall accomplishes this. It is less expensive than the other methods and can be easily done. The paint, however, to have the greatest sound-absorbing factor, should have the qualities of porosity and flexibility; consequently thickness is a very important requisite. High plasticity is desirable for certain finishes. Several successive coats of paint may be applied.

MUST BE CLEARED UP.

It is of the greatest importance in the public interest that there should be a proper investigation into certain details of the Provincial Government's financial transactions with the Home Bank prior to the period when Peter Smith was in charge of the treasury, and the decision of the Ontario Liberal leaders to press for a probe into these episodes will be favourably received by citizens of all stripes of politics, who feel that the mystery should be cleared up.

Peter Smith is in the penitentiary; so, too, is Charles Matthews, who was Deputy-Treasurer, and before that had been connected with the Treasury Department for years.

It never reached the treasury of the Province.

The previous Provincial Treasurer, Hon. T. W. McGarry, has sworn on oath that he did not receive any of it.

If there was a toll-gate before Peter Smith fell by the wayside—and the evidence suggests that there was—who operated it?

Until that question has been answered it is folly to say that the case has been closed by the sentencing of Peter Smith and Charles Matthews.

KINGSTON'S GUN.

Kingston has a grievance.

For many years it has been the practice of the military authorities to fire a gun at 9.30 o'clock every evening; year after year the boom of the cannon has been heard each night.

Kingstonians used the gun as a time signal and as a curfew.

They set their watches by it, and the children were trained to recognize the gun-fire as a warning that it was time to go home.

Honest old burghers, snug in their beds, lay awake until the hollow report of the cannon sounded and then dropped happily to sleep, satisfied that all was right with the world.

Economy has spiked the gun.

Somebody at Ottawa, seeking to shave the expenditures as fine as possible, discovered that Kingston's evening salute cost money, and the order has gone forth that the nightly ceremony will be abandoned after the end of this month.

They have grown to love that nocturnal blast, and they are afraid things will never be the same again.

According to one Kingston authority it costs only $36 a year to fire the gun.

If that be the case, let the cannon roar.

If Kingstonians can be amused at a cost of $3 per month, Peterborough would be the last city in Canada to complain about its share of the expense of furnishing the sedate old city with about the only excitement it ever experiences.

THE PEDDLER VS. THE MERCHANT.

The London Chamber of Commerce is doing its home community a good service by a series of articles emphasizing the desirability of patronizing the permanent merchants rather than dealing with the transient peddlers who are constantly making a house-to-house canvass.

What is true of London is equally true of Peterborough, and doubtless many householders here have had similar experiences to the one mentioned by the London body.

A few days ago a woman was called on by a transient peddler who persuaded her to buy a length of cloth for ten dollars.

The peddler assured her that the price was extraordinarily low, and that only by buying from him could she obtain such a bargain.

Imagine her surprise and mortification when she discovered that a neighbor had purchased the same amount of the same material from the same peddler for seven dollars.

But the climax came when a mutual friend of theirs who had admired the cloth found she could buy a like quantity of the identical goods at a prominent downtown store for five dollars and seventy-five cents.

The average transient peddler, is plausible and convincing, but a moment's thought should show the householder that it is impossible for such a vendor to undersell the permanent merchant while the latter through his modern establishment offers you protection, assurance of full value for your money, the right of exchange and refund, the large and varied stock to choose from and many important services impossible to the here-today, gone-tomorrow peddler.

Peterborough people should remember that every dollar spent in a Peterborough store contributes to the prosperity of the city, while money spent with the transient house-to-house salesman contributes to nothing but his own success.

WEST HASTINGS.

The battle of West Hastings, fiercely fought on the platform and through the press and enlisting the services of the leaders of both the Government and Opposition, has ended in a triumph for Charles Hanna, the Liberal candidate, who yesterday converted a majority of 1,171 for Porter at the last election to a Liberal margin of approximately 470.

The result is a surprise to the country generally, although probably not so much so in the riding itself, or as great a surprise as it would have been several months ago.

When the writs were issued for the by-election, made necessary by the resignation of Mr. E. Gus Porter, the Conservative member, when the House failed to sustain his charge against Hon. Jas. Murdock, there seemed little doubt of the result of the campaign.

Mr. Porter had been selected to make the charge against the Minister of Labour for the obvious reason that West Hastings was considered an absolutely "safe" riding.

For over twenty years the constituency had been represented at Ottawa by Mr. Porter, and it was natural to expect that if he were forced to resign his seat and make an appeal to the electorate he would be returned.

The result has shown that there is no such word as "safe" in the lexicon of politics.

A by-election that at one time looked as if it were going by default has been won by a Liberal candidate in a riding that has rarely elected anything but a Conservative.

The factors entering into the turnover are not easy to analyze, especially viewed from an outside angle.

The Murdock issue, which Mr. Porter claimed to be the only one that mattered, may not have had much to do with the final result, but, having made that episode the pivotal question of the campaign, yesterday's loser cannot complain if the verdict is accepted as a vindication by the electors of the Minister of Labour.

The net results of the Porter charges, therefore, are that Mr. Porter is back in private life, Mr. Murdock has been backed by Parliament and the voters of West Hastings, the Government has gained a seat that was needed and the Opposition has lost a member from its not very corpulent ranks.

THE EGYPTIAN ULTIMATUM.

The confidence of the Empire in the Mother Country will be strengthened by her firm, fearless and yet scrupulously fair action in perturbed Egypt. The British Government is not tearing up recent pledges. It has not been thrown into a devastating panic by the assassination of the Sirdar. It has merely taken such steps as are clearly necessary if friendly relations are to be continued between the Egyptian people upon whom we have showered benefits for forty years and the British nation which alone can protect Egyptian prosperity, constitutional development and sympathetic training in the great art of self-government.

The point apparently at issue between the Zagloul Government—which has just resigned—and the British experts on Egypt is whether the policies of the former and its general attitude toward anti-British agitation in Egyptian centres, has or had not been calculated to maintain these friendly relations. The British believe that the constant fomenting of hatred against whatever British connection with Egyptian affairs still exists, has not been dealt with by the Egyptian authorities with sufficient severity. It has not been dealt with, for instance, as severely as we would expect the American authorities to deal with similar poisonous propaganda against us in American centres; and yet the relations between the British and Egyptians are infinitely more delicate and dangerous.

Lord Allenby has intimated that if the Egyptian Government does not take adequate steps to protect foreign citizens and interests in Egypt, the British authorities will. He has demonstrated the stern sincerity of this threat by promptly occupying the Customs House at Alexandria when th eultimatum to Egypt expired without having been fully accepted. Undoubtedly, if the Egyptian rulers remain sullen and inactive, the British occupation will penetrate much deeper. Great Britain has shown before that she can maintain order and command respect in Egypt; and she can do so again.

Of course, there never was any chance that France would intervene. For one thing, France has fish of her own to fry. The withdrawal of the Spanish in Morocco is said to be causing the French Government great uneasiness, but what it is really doing is dangling before the French Government a most tempting opportunity. The French can subdue the Riff if the Spaniards cannot; and it will not be long—if the Spanish army finally abandons any large section of Moorish territory—before "border incidents" will give the French an excuse for trying.

This at once raises a delicate question. Should the French penetrate to the Straits of Gibraltar in their benevolent absorption of the Spanish zone in Morocco, they will find themselves vis-a-vis with the Rock whose chief value to the British has always been that it commands the Straits. But it will no longer command the Straits in any exclusive sense if the French establish an impregnable naval base at, say, Ceuta, on the north coast of Morocco. This possibility has been long in the British mind—so much so that articles have been written in British periodicals urging Great Britain to exchange Gibraltar for Ceuta while Ceuta is still in Spanish hands. Ceuta, these experts say, can be made just as strong for present-day warfare as Gibraltar whose impressive bulk is more suited to mediaeval than to modern conditions.

Thus it is plain that the collapse of the Spanish campaign in the Riff confronts the French with a possibility which they would greatly prefer to handle while on the friendliest terms with Great Britain. As mere sentimental "friendship" does not go very far between nations in such matters, the French may quite pardonably suggest to the British, in view of the sudden crisis in Cairo, something in the way of a bargain. They may hint that a free hand in Egypt could be bought for a free hand in Morocco. They may even permit a spatter of provocative comment from a few of their more irresponsible journals in order to convey this hint. But we may be very sure that nothing serious in the way of intervention will be considered at the Quai d'Orsay while the appetising plum of the Riff country hangs so loosely in Spanish hands.—Montreal Star.

WONDER WHERE MY BRAINS ARE -

When we take revenge, we only give the injured better instructions on how to "get back." Revenge recoils like a crawling snake. It is the lowest, creepiest way of trying to get on in the world.

But there are two kinds of revenge—the "sour," and then there is "sweet" revenge.

A lady was sitting in a theatre just in front of a pair of newlyweds. The smart young man and his "smart" better-half were passing unpleasant remarks about the way the woman was dressed. She heard these biting remarks.

The woman turned her head slightly and saw that the bride was much older than the bridgroom, and in tones of "sweet revenge" she said: "Madam, may I ask you to have your son remove his feet from the back of my chair?"

Could anything be sweeter? Masterful retaliation! Inimitable insult, if you call it so. The woman's words will keep a wound green for years.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Nov. 25.—A further supply of Western feeders came in today, and loads of these, around 900 lbs. each, are priced at $5 a cwt. with through billing. Rogers and Maybee bought a few cattle for export today, paying $7.25 for odd choice steers, and $6 a cwt for a load of short keeps. Some good export bulls were $4.50 a cwt.; cows about the same, and heifers $5.50 to $6 a cwt.

Light killing heifers were $4.25 to $4.50 a cwt., and these were 25 cents a cwt. higher. Canner cows continue in demand, and some buyers complain of being unable to get a supply. There were no high class butchers on sale, and a couple of good handyweights brought $5.75 a cwt., and good mediums were selling at $5 to $5.25. The peak of the season for stockers and feeders is abou reached, and a large number of loads will go out again today. Poor-bred stockers are going at $3 to $3.50 a cwt.

With fewer cattle available the market had a little better tone today and although prices were no better it was difficult to make sales. Top calve sold at 10½ cents and good ones a cent a pound less. Good medium calves were 8 to 8½ cents.

Lambs made a further advance on Monday's rise of 25 to 50 cents a cwt., and light lambs are inclining rivalry among buyers. Shields & Co. sold on bunch of 25 lambs under 85 lbs. each at 13 cents. 25 other bunch slightly heavier sold at 12¾ and today's prices make lambs a dollar a cwt. up from last week. Heavy lambs are 10 to 10½ cents a pound.

Hogs are quite steady at the bid of $9 a cwt. f.o.b. and $10 of cars. Packers are advising shippers to pay 25 cents a cwt. less for immediate further shipments and point to the lower Chicago market this week.

STERLING RATES

MONTREAL, Nov. 25.—Sterling exchange rates were quoted here today as follows: Sterling demand $4.62 3-8; Sterling cables $4.62 1-2.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—Wheat took a downward swing in price to-day, affected by an apparent pause in export business and by selling to realize profits. Closing quotations on wheat were heavy, 2 to 3 1-4 cents net lower, December 1.52 5-8 to 1.52 3-4 and May 1.60 5-8 to 1.60 3-4 with corn 1 3-4 to 2 1-8 cents off, oats 5-8 cents to 7-8 a 1 cent down and provisions varying from 7 cents decline to 27 cents advance.

MONTREAL GRAIN

MONTREAL, Nov. 25.—The demand from local buyers for cash grain in the domestic market to-day was dull and the volume of business was much smaller than that of the past few days, the only sale of importance reported being 100,000 bushels of No. 2 Canadian western oats at five cents per bushel over the Winnipeg November option, c.i.f., bay ports. The trade in car lots was also limited, but the tone of the market was steady with Ontario No. 3 malting barley quoted at $1.08, No. 3 grade at $1.07 per bushel, e-track, while odd cars of Ontario No. 2 white oats sold at 62 cents, No. 3 grade at 60 cents, and No. 4 grade at 58 cents per bushel, ex-store.

EGG PRICES

OTTAWA, Nov. 25.—The storage egg situation is about steady with a slightly weaker undertone, noticeable especially in car lot demand. It is generally conceded that stocks in Canada will not be sufficient to meet the demand for home consumption before fresh eggs become more plentiful. At present United States storage eggs would cost about 40 1-2 cents delivered Toronto and Montreal.

RED BLOOD MAKES ALL OUR STRENGTH

Red blood is the driving force of life. If we lack strength we should think first of our blood. We should create more red blood. Then, through the new vitality that comes with rich, red blood, we quickly regain lost strength and vital nerve power.

Weak men and women can find an easy, safe way to create red blood. Then, as the blood is nourished, they will find strength quickly returning.

Wincarnis gives to the blood the very elements from which red blood is created. For fifty years this blood builder has restored exhausted, nervous, pale, thin sufferers.

If your body vitality is at a low ebb go to your druggist today and begin the safe Wincarnis treatment. A sixteen ounce bottle, which is a fourteen day Wincarnis treatment, is sold by all leading druggists for $1.50.

Wincarnis is so effective that only three tablespoonsful a day need be taken. Try Wincarnis at once and realize the new strength just a few days will bring.

WOMAN CHARGED WITH PLOTTING

"I agreed to the proposal. It was planned that five of us should participate in this business—myself, Mr. and Mrs Robinson, the aide-de-camp (who is not mentioned by name lest the rapah's identity be disclosed) and Mrs. Bevan."

The latter is a chum of Mrs. Robinson, who travelled to Paris with her before the surprise entrance into the hotel bedroom where the potentate and the bookmaker's wife were in bed.

Hobbs Was Solicitor.

"It was planned that Mrs Robinson should return to her Mayfair home with 'Mr. A,' and that I was to watch the house and discover them together," the withness said.

"I was given the key to the house here in London. We discussed all phases of the question and agreed we would need a solicitor, so we got Hobbs, who thought the scheme some sort of a fairy story."

The Hobbs referred to is William Cooper Hobbs, a lawyer's clerk, to whose firm Newton took Robinson The clerk is the one who took $625,000 from the Midland Bank, where it was deposited to Robinson's account.

Profound Sensation.

Newton's appearance yesterday afternoon created a profound sensation in the court room, which was packed with spectators, who ever since the opening of the trial last week have been following tensely every revelation of the witnesses.

Previously, Sir Richard Havelock Charles, president of the Medical Appeal Board, and one of the King's surgeons, had been called for Robinson and had answered in writing a number of questions concerning religious customs and practices in India. These questions and answers were not divulged in court, Dr. Mary Scharlieb, who lived many years in India, also testified in writing along a simflar line.

During the trial, Justice Darling announced that, because of the peculiar questions which the jury would be called upon to answer, he would adopt the unusual precedent of giving the case to the jurors without summation. Newton was on the stand only a few minutes when court adjourned.

GERMAN MEAT EATERS DEMAND FANCY CUTS

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—It pays German cattle breeders today to fatten their cattle, something that has not been true since the war. Fat cattle on the hoof bring up to 30 cents a pound, and hogs as high as 37 cents.

During the inflation period few farmers cared to bother about fattening their livestock, partly because the prce of feed was so high, and because the German people were so happy at having anything to eat at all that they did not lay much emphasis upon especially choice cuts.

With the return of stable conditions there has come a demand for choice meats, and farsighted farmers are giving much time and thought to the feeding of cattle.

SISTERS DRANK

On Monday morning I was shocked to hear of her death.

"I understand that the three girls went to their father's surgery and drank what they thought was port wine. It is also said that Miss Morrison did not know what was the cause of her illness, but thought she had eaten some chicken."

Ate Nothing at Dance.

Gen. Sir A. C. MacDonnell, commandant of the Royal Military College, said that the deaths of the two girls had absolutely nothing to do with the tea dansant, which was an informal affair. "The young ladies were taken ill before any refreshments were served," he said.

The girls remained at the home of Dr. Morrison until Sunday afternoon, when the condition of two of them became so serious that two other practitioners were called in and the girls were taken to the Hotel Dieu. Here everything was done that human skill could offer without avail.

The Misses Morrison were great favorites in this city, and the news of their death caused a profound impression.

Last Thought of Parties.

It transpired yesterday afternoon that when Miss Margaret Morrison, who died Monday, knew she was dying, she asked that the family make no difference in any of their plans because of her death, and that her sister, Mary, who died Tuesday, should go to certain parties to which she had been invited, and which were to form a part of the Christmas festivities.

The double funeral of the sisters will be held on Thursday morning to St. Mary's Cathedral.

GO HUNGRY 15 DAYS AND BE YOUNG AGAIN

CHICAGO, Nov. 26. — (United Press).—If you want to be young, quit eating for fifteen days.

This is the advice of University of Chicago scientists, who have just completed a series of experiments on the ability of the body tissues to consume food and generate energy.

If the tissues are tired, as they're apt to be, a fifteen day rest will restore them to the condition they were when you were 15.

Fifteen days of fasting increases the "metabolic rate," or ability of the body tissues to consume the food. Prof. Carlson declares. He has submitted to the experiment himself

The fast is not painful, he declares, the only great diadvantage being a gradual weakening. Hunger strikes are not the terrible ordeals they have been pictured, he says.

Get rid of constipation by internal cleanliness

HEADACHES, biliousness, sleepless nights, heaviness, are Nature's warning that intestinal poisons are flooding your system. If this is allowed to continue, you may become a victim of serious organic disease.

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favour Lubrication

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

FRENCH DEALER REVEALS FAKES

Says Host of Newly Rich U. S. Art Collectors Give Rise To Unscrupulous Practises.

LAUDS CULTURE.

By C. F. BERTELLI.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—The science of faking antiques has reached such a point that colonies of ants are being trained to bore into furniture so as to give it the air of age and permit it to be sold at fabulous prices.

The well-known art agent, Bertie Hollander, commenting on the revelations of spurious art in the trial of Johnny Vigoroux, former Demotte agent, to-night told of visiting Parisian flats where ants are raised and said the host of rich new art amateurs resulting from the war had made art dealers resort to such unscrupulous practices.

Hollander said:

"Of course, no reputable dealer would stoop to such practices, but the fact remains that there are dozens of art dealers who deliberately falsify antiquities.

Real Culture In U.S.

"I believe, however, that Americans are least likely to be fooled, for it is my belief that Americans to-day constitute the only real culture."

Hollander is one of the partners in the antiquities firm of Simon et Cie in Place Vendome, one of the oldest and most respectable houses in Europe.

Meanwhile the evidence continues to accumulate on the vast traffic in so-called antiques in which Americans have been principal victims in recent years.

Reports which are being traced to their source place American millionaires as the "original fall guys" for a variety of dealers in alleged antiques, who maintain sumptuous offices in the Rue de la Paix, Fifth avenue and Bond street.

Their method is to find half an antique and make it whole. Thus a Louis Fourteenth chimney, minus one arm of a carving may be worth approximately $4,000, but the same chimney complete would be worth $50,000.

Supply Missing Parts.

Unscrupulous dealers enjoy veritable masters in art to supply the missing part whereupon the piece is disposed of to some American collector for a tremendous sum with the complicity of experts of whom there are several millionaire firms in Paris.

The whole of Europe has for years been raked through for genuine antiquity to supply the enormous demand from America. Clement Vautol, of the Journal, illustrating the modern trend of thought as regards America, writes:

"Let us leave these crooks who sell false antiques to Americans alone. What does that matter to us? The Americans are enchanted with their acquisitions, and I think it would be cruel to disillusion them and spoil their innocent pleasure in their antiques."

Vautel deplores the publicity given the Vigouroux trial. He writes:

"That is silly propaganda. What can it matter if the wilds of Illinois and Wisconsin are filled with examples of ancient art which any Parisian would immediately label as false? If the American millionaires are satisfied, let them remain so."

Such may be given as an illustration of the average cynical French attitude toward the present revelations.

WARSAW CORRESPONDENCE

WARSAW, Nov. 26.—The annual meeting of the Warsaw U.F.W.O. was held at Mrs. John Cooper's home on Thursday afternoon. The new officers are: President, Mrs. E. R. Hambling, re-elected; Vice-President, Mrs. Charles Foster; Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. Rufus Payne; Mrs. Harold Darling is delegate to the U.F.W.O. convention.

Mrs. Percy Lloyd invited a number of her neighbors and friends in last Wednesday evening. Her brother, Mr. Donald Alford, was to give a radio demonstration. He worked away for a long time, but could not give the demonstration, and found someone had been kind enough to cut his wire. The guests were invited to return on Thursday evening, when a good concert was given.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Edwards were in the village Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Dewart, Indian River, spent Sunday in the village.

Rev. Mr. Knox will preach in the Methodist Church Sunday evening. The annual missionary subscriptions will be taken up.

On Sunday evening the Methodist Church was well filled. Rev. F. G. Weir preached on "The Wrath of God."

There was service in the Baptist Church, and also in the Anglican.

Rev. W. Atkinson conducted the service in the Presbyterian Church. He read the Thanksgiving letter from the Moderator of the General Assembly. This letter spoke of the union of the different Presbyterian Churches about fifty years ago. Some were fearful of the results, but events have proved the wisdom of the union. Much was said about missionary work. The contributions have been large, but the need is very great. If each member would give the value of four two-cent postage stamps weekly there would be abundance. He also spoke of the coming prospect of union, and reminded the people of Christ-like humanity and peace. Mr. Atkinson's sermon was from the text, "Come and see." He spoke of individuality in coming to Christ. Nathaniel scouted the idea of the Nazarene being the Master, but was told to "come and see" for himself. People must be led to Christ Himself. Often, too, people who make little profession are really in the right way.

Next Sunday the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be observed in Warsaw in the morning and in Cottesloe in the afternoon. Preparatory service in Warsaw church Friday evening.

The Ladies' Aid will hold their meeting at the Presbyterian Church on Thursday afternoon. This will be a special missionary meeting and the Sabbath collections will be for missions.

The hunters have returned and all had a pleasant outing. In some parts very few fawn were seen, probably destroyed by wolves. The Tedford gang were at Crane Creek, and Mr. Alex. Watts, one of the oldest hunters from this district, shot a deer. He saw a bear, but it was too far off to shoot. The party got their number. The eight men in the gang, of which Roland McCauley was a member, got their eight deer, and Mr. McCauley got a large wolf. The Miller gang, who went to Bass Lake, got five deer among the nine. The White Lake party got four deer. Their gang varied in number. It is near enough for members to come and go. Two men from Toronto, also Mr. Meiklejohn from Campbellford and Mr. Driscol of Peterborough, were there for a few days. They took their Chevrolet car right in to T. Miller's camp, consequently the car needs some repairing. Archie Hawthorne was with a party beyond Bancroft. Their hunt was good, but they had difficulty getting their cars out on account of snow. The Cordova Mines party of seven bagged only one deer. They did not even see many. Saw a bear and some wolves, but got none. Franklin Jory and party, numbering eight, got five deer, but saw nothing else. They were at Jack's Lake. The Pakesley, near Parry Sound, gang, including E. R. Hamblin, Charles Goir, R. Payne and some others from near Warsaw, as well as some from Lakefield, to number of fourteen, got their fourteen deer and five skunks, which were under their camp and which nearly put the gang out.

The rain was very welcome. The river is very low. The hunters report the back lakes low. Springs were low and land was very hard. There is still a good deal of plowing to be done. The hard frost put a complete stop to it for a few days. Some were at it this afternoon.

The cattle that have come home from the ranches are generally in good condition. Some are still out, but will be brought home just as soon as the weather turns rough.

One Warsaw farmer was touched to the tune of $200 by the cattle-buyer who failed to pay.

Mr. Foster is still collecting milk and cream and taking it to Peterborough.

The Warsaw Methodist W.M.S. will hold their annual bazaar on Thursday evening, December 5th. Supper, from 5-7.30 p.m., sale, 7-8 p.m.; entertainment, 8 p.m. Admission 35c and 25c. 1d125-1w 4466

GERMAN FREIGHT TRAFFIC GROWS

BERLIN, Nov. 29.—(Associated Press).—Freight traffic on the German Government owned railways increased 12 per cent. in September, as compared with the business of August, it was announced recently by the railroad administration. The increased traffic is due partly to the fall shipments of agricultural produce, but is also attributable to a marked improvement of the economical situation in general.

NEW SCHOOL AT REABORO OPENED

At Least Four Hundred People From Surrounding District Visited New Building Yesterday.

OMEMEE, Nov. 25. — Monday afternoon, November 24th, 1924, will long be a memorable event in the history of the community, when the new school at Reaboro was opened for inspection and dedication. During the afternoon, it is estimated that at least about four hundred people visited the building, and expressions of praise and wonder were heard on every hand. The building, which is of red brick, securely laid with black mortar, is situated a short distance north-east of the old school, and is in such a conspicuous position that motorists are attracted at once to the appearance of the structure. The interior of the school is very modern. There are two main rooms, for junior and senior teachers, well ventilated, cloak-rooms, teachers' room, storeroom and light, cheerful play-rooms in the basement, where a cement floor is laid, a water system is installed and also a furnace. The ceilings are of wood, and there is very little plaster to be defaced. Two clocks adorn the walls, which are a gift from the Women's Institute of Reaboro. The building throughout, which, when entirely completed, will cost about $15,000, is a credit to any community.

The programme for the afternoon was held in the Community Hall. Inspector Jennings capably filled the chairman's chair, and the first number on the programme was "The Maple Leaf Forever," followed by a brief prayer by Canon Marsh, of Lindsay.

The chairman made a few remarks before calling on Mr. William Flavelle, of Lindsay, who took great pleasure in presenting from the firm of Dundas and Flavelle, a handsome Union Jack, as he felt their business had prospered only through the co-operation of the Reaboro district. No school is complete without the emblem of nationality, and he hoped that the feeling of patriotism would continue to grow from the flag.

Mr. Fred. Hickson made a fitting reply.

At this juncture, a well-worded address was read by Miss Rhoda Smith, and the presentation of the clocks was made by Mrs. I. McNevin, president of the Women's Institute.

Mr. Hutchison, the senior teacher, replied briefly in a neat speech.

Three-minute speeches were then given by R. J. Patterson, M.P., Warden Moore of Bobcaygeon, and Mr. William Graham, the Reeve of the township.

The architect, Mr. McGeough of Bobcaygeon, was then called upon, and in his Irish humor caused many a smile. He felt he had taken more interest and pains with this school than any building he had previously erected on account of Reaboro being his old home, and he felt as did Contractor Cullins, who spoke after him, that they have come up to the requirements and are now leaving a well-satisfied people.

Mr. J. R. McNeillie, the treasurer of the county, gave a brief talk and produced a few figures, showing that in 1863 the grant to Reaboro School Section was $29.12, while in 1924 the grant was $400, which shows the great advancement and accommodation which is being carried out in recent years.

An important feature on the programme was the presentation of the $50 scholarship, it being a memorial from the late Dr. Harry Rea, of London, as a memorial to his father, the late Isaac Rea, of Reaboro, to the pupil of Reaboro School who receives the highest marks at the entrance examination in June. This is the second year it has been given, and Miss Elsie Reid had the good fortune of not only obtaining the highest marks at Reaboro, but also in the County of Victoria, including Lindsay.

Mr. Thomas Hawkins, the chairman of the School Board, read an illuminated address to Mrs. R., who was present, in which it referred to the scholarship as a benefit to all who are willing to pay the price of hard study. Mrs. R. replied very fittingly and made the presentation.

Mr. J. W. Deyell then spoke for the press and presented the memorial, which is emblematic of the scholarship, and felt that her school career will be followed with interest by the community at large.

Mrs. Waldon an ex-teacher of 52 years ago was invited to the platform but declined the invitation. Mrs. Hampton of Millbrook, also a teacher in Otonabee in 1866, gave a brief address.

Time would not permit addresses from many other notables who were seated on the platform among them being: Canon Marsh, J. D. Flelle, Rev. A. L. Brown, J. Agnew, Mayor Graham, W. W. Staples, E. Weeks of Lindsay, Rev. Lloyd and Inspector R. F. Downey, Peterboro, Rev. Holmes of Lindsay and others.

The best was reserved until the last and the Hon. Dr. Cody of Toronto spoke under difficulty, as a fowl supper was under process in the basement of the hall and a certain amount of confusion was noticed. However, the honorable gentleman won his way into the hearts of the large audience. He opened with a definition of Ops township, after congratulating the trustees and ratepayers on the magnificent building, as an abundant, prosperous, wealth opulent township. He expressed the regret of Premier Ferguson for being unable to attend, but conveyed the greetings of the minister and his wish that this school would continue to send out a worthy succession of Canadian citizens.

He first related to the building as a good investment as it always any educational building brings in the splendid interest in lives of the young for the future.

Dr. Cody then spoke to the boys and girls, saying in part, "In receiving a building you are proud of, do not destroy it as in olden times when every desk was carved with initials or possible the whole autograph. It is yours in trust, hand it on, as beautiful and well equipped to those who follow." He next referred to the regularity of attendance, and said that "the average attendance at Canadian schools is satisfying when climatic conditions in far north are considered. The attendance in the province is about 600,000 and the average attendance is not far short of 500,000 Co-operation and trust in the teachers are helping to lift the standard to the highest degree. Reboro boys and girls, the school exists for you, do your level best, get all the inspiration you can, be as diligent and industrious as you can for if we neglect our early opportunity, we never get it again. Many of the leaders in public life have come from the rural schools and possibly some day one of the boys from here within the sound of my voice may be Prime Minister. Do not waste your time. Let there be between children and teachers a relation of real respect and whole hearted sympathy."

The speaker then referred briefly to the recent changes made in the curriculum and the subject of less home work.

The reflected credit on the present principal who was successful in passing thirteen out of fourteen pupils at the entrance examinations at midsummer, and he hoped that real victory would never cease to come. The teacher does not find the truest monument in school but in after years when the boys and girls are filling important positions. The best teacher should be procured, for he or she makes the school and leaves the mark upon the pupil forever. If you have not started the year under happy auspices begin now and redeem the occasion. This building is not only a moral and intelligent uplift in this part of Victoria county, the township of Ops, but to the whole dominion. A great responsibility is yours and a great opportunity is yours. Ask yourself the question, What shall I do for Canada? I'll do my best and help other, please God, to do the best that in them is an so obey the word of God. Stand by Canada, believe in Canada, and if you possibly can and let the whole community continue to be a fountain of good character and wonderful citizenship."

A hearty vote of thanks was then extended to Dr. Cody for his excellent address by Richard Smith, seconded by William Best, and the National Anthem brought the lengthy programme to a close.

Some of those who attended from Omemee were: Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Sandy, Mr. and Mrs. H. Lamb, the school staff, Misses D. Anderson, E. Shepley, G. M. Meredith and J. Widis, Misses L. Parsons, J. Lamb, G. Sandy, H. Mackey, E. Mitchell, Reeve W. D. Stinson, Rev. J. A. Black and Messrs. L. A. Southworth, S. , Mackey, J. Williams, T. C. Ivory and R. Foast.

LINDSAY NOMINATIONS.

Mayor Graham Re-elected By Acclamation—Attendance Small.

LINDSAY, Nov. 26.—Some forty-nine candidates were nominated for the local municipal government on Monday night as against eighty-three place in nomination a year ago. The attendance at the meeting was the smallest in years. Very little interest is being manifested, and the likelihood is that the members of the retiring council, who have all qualified, will be elected without opposition. Mayor Graham is given a second year term by acclamation, while Geo. W. Hall, Water Commissioner and J. E. Anderson, W. W. Staples and Jas. W. Anderson have been elected school trustees by acclamation.

BUSINESS IN ENGLAND

Present Condition is Five Per Cent Under 1913 Figures.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—(Associated Press).—Great Britain is today earning much more money than of late years, and in 1923 its income from productive power, and services rendered to the outside world, totalled around $17,350,000,000, or $400 per annum for every man, woman and child in the country. This represents an increase of $1,650,000,000 on the 1922 figures, says the Economist.

It is calculated that British business in 1923 was working at 95 per cent. of its 1913 capacity, against 86 per cent. in 1922, and only 80 per cent. in 1921.

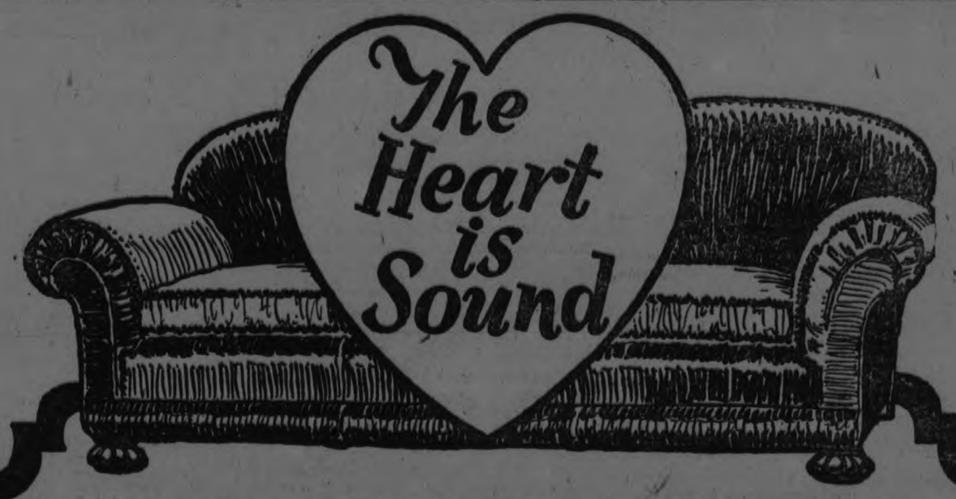
The Heart is Sound



A Chesterfield That is Strictly Mothproof and Strongly Built

SNYDER'S Sani-Bilt Living Room Furniture, guaranteed mothproof, is built to endure. We take special care to build chesterfields and chairs that preserve their shape.

Four rows of springs in the seat, instead of three as in ordinary chesterfields, make Sani-Bilt Chesterfields extraordinarily resilient and firm. All these springs are cross-tied into place with heavy cord. Then a steel wire stretched from arm to arm along the front of the seat helps to keep the edge from slackening down. The Scotch webbing under the springs of a Snyder's Sani-Bilt is anchored to stay, this material being specially made for us and practically unstretchable.

Sani-Bilt frames, whether on chesterfields or chairs, are heavy and strong, being built of solid Canadian hardwoods. The joints are "corner-blocked," glued and screwed, making a rigid, permanent job. We take a pride in building our frames as good workmanship can make them.

The rigidity of the frame is due to the corner blocks being glued and screwed.

Note the thorough method of interlacing the webbing.

Moths Cannot Harm Sani-Bilt Furniture

Snyder's Sani-Bilt Furniture is guaranteed absolutely mothproof. No moths will harm it in the slightest degree. The Sani-Bilt process is unique. No other manufacturer of upholstered furniture in Canada has this process. It is based on a secret formula, perfected by a group of famous chemists from whom we hold the Canadian rights for upholstered furniture.

The Sani-Bilt guarantee also covers construction and fillings. If faults or flaws of construction are discovered, we will make them good. Do not accept any alternative to Sani-Bilt. Furniture that is said to be "just as good," is not as good.

FORMER PRIMA DONNA THINKS HOPE DIAMOND CARRIES CURSE

May Yohe Says She Is the Most Unfortunate Woman in the World.

HUSBAND SHOT.

Captain John A. Smuts Insists Shoting Was An Accident.

BOSTON, Nov. 26.—"I once thought the curse of the blue Hope diamond was a myth, but now I am convinced that the old Indian fable was a true one. A curse follows anybody who ever possessed that horrible gem. I think I am the most unfotunate woman in the world."

May Yohe, former prima donna, and wife of Capt. John A. Smuts, South African soldier and cousin of Premier Jan Smuts, thus explained the curse of the blue Hope diamond, following the accidental shooting of Captain Smuts on November 19.

Captain Smuts, seriously wounded, with a bullet in his chest, lies in City Hospital, proclaiming "I am a game fellow," and insisting that the so-called "suicide note" was written by himself after the accidental shooting.

"May grew hysterical," he said at the hospital, in describing the shooting, "and said the papers would claim she had shot me, and I wrote that foolish note so, if the worst followed nobody would blame May."

Virtually secluded in her room, Miss Yohe was prostrated by the accident, and declared: "What a terrible thing to have happen! The reporters have asked me awful questions, so have the police. Do they think I shot Jack? Why, I love him, and I never fired off a revolver in my life!"

Captain Smuts explained the accident occurred when the gun, an old-fashioned affair, opened hard.

"Suddenly there was an explosion, and I looked about to see where the bullet had struck. Then May cried out that I was bleeding. I felt no pain," he stated.

Regardless of any theories the police may have about the shooting, it was pointed out they are powerless to take any steps in the face of Capt. Smut's insistence that the shooting was an accident and in view of his statement that the 'note' was written to protect his wife from suspicion in the event he should die.

COUNTY COUNCIL HAD LATE START

After waiting from two o'clock, the time set for opening its fall session yesterdy, Peterborough Council got under way at 3.30 o'clock, with Reeve H. B. Rye in the chair. It was learned at 2.45 that the Warden is in bed ill, and at the time there were only ten members present out of the eighteen on the council.

Two or three more arrived later, but so many remained absent that it was decided fruitless to proceed and the council adjourned at 4 o'clock after hearing the communications.

Communications.

The recent fire at the House of Refuge barn brought advertisements to the County Council suggesting fire proof construction. These were referred to the Board of Management of the House of Refuge.

PLANE WRECKAGE FOUND.

Washed Ashore Near Sacket Harbor—Two Men Missing.

SACKET HARBOR, N.Y., Nov. 26.— Wreckage of the plane in which Pilot Carl Croby and Harry D. Conne, of Ogdensburg, left that city Sunday afternoon and for which a search has been conducted, was washed ashore near Little Sandy, seven miles north of the Big Sandy life saving station late yesterday. No trace of the men was found by a life guard who discovered the wreckage.

WILL WELCOME U. S. FLEET.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Nov. 25.—In a statement issued to-day, Premier Bruce said that the Australian people would give a rousing welcome to the United States' fleet when it visits this country next year. He declared that the visit would strengthen the warm friendship between the Australian and the American people.

Council of 1893 Needed 26 Ballots In Choosing Its Warden

While the County Council was awaiting a quorum today one of the members in a reminiscent mood recalled the battle of the ballots thirty-one years ago when twenty-six ballots were taken before a warden could be selected. After strugling all through the first afternoon and the second forenoon, William Anderson, reeve of Otonabee was given 13 votes against 9. Mr. Anderson started out with 2 votes on ballot number 1, He was dropped aftogether a ballot number 2, reappeared at ballot 16 with 1 vote; popped up again with a single vote in ballot 20, jumped to 4 on the next; fell to 3 on ballot 22 and disappeared at 23 to come in strong with 13 vote on the final. John Brown, reeve of Belmont, John Finlay, reeve of Norwood, and John Maloney, reeve of Douro, were also on the last ballot with 1, 3 and 5 votes respectively. Edg. Pearse was county clerk at that time.

CONTEST MAY DEVELOP FOR COUNCIL OF CAVAN

Several Names Already Mentioned—Fair Prices at Cattle Sale.

CAVAN, Nov. 26.—There is likely to be a contest for Cavan Council this year. Two or three names are already being mentioned as being in line to run for deputy-reeve. Should this be the case it will make it necessary for more to run for councillors.

Whitfield's school is closed on account of mumps. The teacher, Miss E. McKnight and several pupils are ill.

Mr. S. S. Staples shipped a car of hogs on Monday. The price paid was $9.25 a hundredweight.

Plowing Resumed.

The latter part of last week, particularly Saturday, the frost was out enough to allow farmers to plough. On Monday very many were at it, but on Tuesday morning it was again frozen too hard. Nine twenty-five may seem a good price for hogs, but in reality they are not high enough to make the feeding of them profitable. They should be at least eleven or twelve cents. Grain is high.

Sale of Cattle.

Messrs. S. S. Staples and Harold Cathcart, held a sale of cattle on Thursday afternoon, Mr. Staples acted as auctioneer. About thirty head were sold. The prices realized were fair.

There was a fair sized crowd in attendance.

About sixty couples attended the dance in Cavan Community Hall on Thursday evening. Messrs. Moncrief, Fisher and Cardwell were in the orchestra which funished the music. The crowd was not large, but a good time was reported. The door receipts were over sixty dollars.

Grain Movement Light.

There is very little movement of grain just now, prices remain firm. Wheat was lower for a few days, but is up again. One dollar and thirty-five cents was paid at Frazerville last week, when drawn by the truck.

FRUIT TREATMENT HEALS KIDNEYS

Concentrated Fruit Juices Give Astonishing Results

Anyone who has suffered with Weak or Irritated Kidneys—with the accompanying miseries of pain in the back, splitting headaches, swollen hands and feet, rheumatism and constipation—ought to try the Fruit Treatment for their trouble.

To those who use intensified fruit juices—"Fruit-a-tives"—for the first time, it seems almost impossible that the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes combined with tonics, could relieve Kidney Trouble.

But a short treatment of "Fruit-a-tives" gives quick relief and the regular use of these intensified fruit juices or "Fruit Liver Tablets" prove their marvellous virtues.

Get "Fruit-a-tives" today and begin the Fruit Treatment. At all dealers; 25c. and 50c. a box; or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa, Ont.

WINS $1,000 PRIZE AND 1300 MILE BICYCLE RACE AT 65

Each year Physicial Culture Magazine offers $5,000 in prizes, first prize $1,000, for the best story upon health built up by natural means.

Robt. G. Jackson, M.D., of Toronto, won the $1,000 first prize for 1924, for the story of how he was built up by Roman Meal and a system of exercises taken in bed.

Good Science shows that meat has 592 food units to the pound (See Life Its Mysteries and Miracles, BY J. H. KELLOGG, M.D.) Roman Meal has over 1,600 food units to the pound and all of its units are in balance, made so by using four ingredients in its compound, whole wheat, whole rye, flaxin and bran It is the most nourishing and strength-building food sold; especially valuable for children from the 10th month and for nursing and expectant mothers, because of its sound body building properties; also for the dyspeptic and constipated.

In May, 1924, Dr. Jackson easily won a 1,300 mile bicycle contest in 19 days, living largely upon Roman Meal and milk and without tasting meat, against a man 30 years younger and 30 pounds lighter, who lived largely upon meat. Roman Meal is a wonderful food, you ought to try it. Prevents indigestion, positively relieves constipation. At grocers.

KILLED DEER WITH BIRD SHOT

SARANAC LAKE, N. Y., Nov (United Press.)—Kenneth H. Holcombe of Rouses Point, is one of the few men in the north country to kill a deer with bird shot. On a recent morning he went duck hunting. He bagged one bird and then started home fro breakfast. In a pasture with some horses, he was amazed to see a fine buck. He crept within range and gave the deer both barrels. The buck ran for half a mile and then crashed.

DRAMATIC STUDY CLUB MET MONDAY

Mrs. W. McKee Bingham, Director of Club, Was Main Speaker of the Evening.

The first evening meeting of the Dramatic Study Club, in connection with the Women's Art Association, was held on Monday night at the Conservatory of Music, with a good attendance of members. Mrs. W. McKee Bingham, director of the Club, gave an entertaining paper on Medieval Plays, citing examples in a description of "Gorboduc" a tragedy, and "Gammer Gurton's Needle", a comedy, and Mrs. Fred Hooper read a paper on the Early English Drama. Mrs. Bingham also sang an old song, "Bois Epais" (Sombre Woods), with accompaniment by Miss Edna Borbridge. At the conclusion of the meeting, light refreshments were served, Mrs. N. D. Seaton acting as hostess.

Mrs. Bingham's Paper.

Mrs. Bingham's paper on "Medieval Plays" opened with a brief introduction, as follows: "For many years the stage had been occupied by dramatic performances of various kinds, but though morals and mysteries were the natural and inevitable predecessors of the modern play, they differ from it essentially in form and character. To the author of "Gordobuc" is due the credit of producing the first work which can, by any stretch of imagination, be termed our earliest dramatic poem. The authorship is ascribed to two persons: Thomas Norton 1565) author of the first three acts, and Thomas Sackville (Lord Buckhurst), who contributed the last two acts.

"The argument of the tragedies is as follows: Gorboduc, King of Britain, divided his realme, in his lifetime, to his two sonnes, Ferrex and Porrex. The sonnes fell to discention and the younger killed the elder. The mother, who more dearly loved the elder, for revenge killed the younger. The people, moved with the crueltie of the fact, rose in rebellion, and slew both father and mother. The nobilities assembled, and most terribly destroyed the reebls; and afterwards, for want of issue of a prince, whereby the succession of the Crowne became uncartain, they fell to civil warre, in which both they and many of their issued were slain, and the land for a long time almost desolate and miserably wasted."

"Side by side with the first English tragedy are several examples of first English comedy. Possibly the earliest is "Gammer Gurton's Needle", a domestic comedy, a true bit of English realism, representing the life of the peasant class. Gammer Gurton is patching the leathern breeches of her man, Hodge, when Gib, the cat gets into the milk pan. While Gammer chases the cat, the family needle is lost a true calamity in those days. The whole household is turned upside down, and neighbors are dragged into the affair." Finally, after many comical situations, the lost needle is found stuck in the leathern breeches and order is once more restored.

Early English Drama.

Mrs. Fred Hooper's paper dealt with the Early English Drama, and described interestingly the development of this form of theatrical entertainment. "Before Shakespeare's immortal entrance upon the stage of English life there was form of drama, comprising the Miracle Play, the Mystery Play, and the Morality Play. The natural development of the drama seems to be first, the deed, second, the story, third the play."

"Among primitive races the deeds of gods and heroes are often represented at yearly festivals and originally the drama was but an old story put into action by living performers who "made believe" or imagined themselves to be old heroes."

An example of this found in the Miracle Play, representing the time of the Creation of the Day of Judgment and usually produced, up to the 16th century, when they were replaced by Elizabethan drama, on Corpus Christi Day, first by monks and clerics, then by the guilds entrusted with their presentation.

The Morality play was a development of the Miracle or Mystery play and personified the vices and virtues of humanity having its prototype in the modernized version of "Everyman" introduced in our day by the Ben Greet players. "The subject of the play is the summoning o fevery man by Death; and the moral is that nothing can take away the terror of the inevitable summons but an honest life and the comforts of religion."

"The final stage in the development of the English drama is the artistic period. It chief object is to repreesnt human life as it really is."

Mrs. Hooper then went on to speak of the revival of Latin literature as having a decided influence upon the English drama, and ended with an allusion to the Elizabethan drama and the man who brought it to perfection. "Shakespeare was not simply a great genius. He was a great worker, and developed in exactly the same way as did his fellow craftsmen. The Elizabethan drama is an orderly, though rapid development, in which many men bore a part, and our early dramatists are all worthy of study for the part they played in the development of English drama."

LIMBURGER MADE HORSE LOSE RACE

Cheese Made Horse Strong, But Didn't Add Any Speed.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 26.—(United Press).—Limburger cheese is not a good horse tonic. It may make a nag strong but not fast.

The story is told by Jim Clark, editor of the Breeders' Journal.

Driver Mike liked limburger before a race. The odorous cheese was like a tonic to him. So before a race at Cranwood Track, near here, Mike gave his horse, Burrowlite, a mouthful of his favorite sandwich, hoping it would add speed to his nag.

As the horses lined up for the first heat, the other animals, whiffing Burrowlite's breath, snorted and otherwise signified they longed for the great open spaces, where the grass is green and limburger is unknown.

Burrowlite himself seemed uneasy and anxious to run. The race began. Burrowlite was flashing along in second place looking like he was going to come on to win.

Driver Mike claims he heard Burrowlite belch distinctly. The odor of limburger assailed the air. The gas attack befogged the horse. Burrowlite stumbled and broke but scooted past the judges' stand second.

In the next heat Burrowlite didn't show a thing. The cheese evidently was too strong for him.

WHY GOLDFISH LEAVE HOME.

A distinguished doctor of Germantown, Pennsylvania, went to some considerable expense to build a pond on his lawn to accommodate a rare collection of goldfish, but after a time he was perplexed to note that a great many of his finest specimens had disappeared. At first he suspected cats, but the felines proved an alibi and the fish seemed to leave right under his eyes. In the endeavor to solve the problem he had all-day watch set upon the pond and at daybreak the wateer was astounded to see a kingfisher dart from a neighboring tree and plunging into the pool come up with a goldfish which proved to be the bird's breakfast. But the doctor has almost as much love for the birds as he has for goldfish and rather than shoot the bird he rolled up his fish-pond and took it indoors.

TWO BLANK CHECKS SIGNED BY SINGH

Amazing Revelation at the Blackmail Trial In London.

LONDON, Eng., November 26.—The amazing thing about this affair is that Mr. A. despite his high position in the world, was reduced to such a state of oppresion and fear that he signed in his check book two blank checks capable of being filled in for any amount.

Sir John Simon, counsel for the Midland Bank, of London, in a suit for $625,000 brought by Charles Robinson, a bookmaker, made this statement when the case was resumed to-day.

Counsel for the bank was unable to create much of a sensation by his announcement that "Mr. A." which is a court abbreviation for Rajah, Sir Hari Singh actually gave blank cheques to Robinson and the alleged conspirators, for the spectators have become satiated with startling exposures during the week in which the case has been before Justice Darling.

Interest seemed to centre in the possibility of further details of Mrs. Robinson's adventures with the Rajah coming to light. Her husband's suit against the bank is based on the fact that William Hobbs, a lawyer's clerk made away with most of the money obtained from the Prince. The bank in defense is trying to show a blackmail plot. On the stand yesterday Montague Newton an ex-Army officer confessed having participated in such a plot and declared Mrs. Robinson had suggested that "Mr. A." be caught in bed with her.

Further light upon the distinguished person in world affairs held the potentate who was caught Paris hotel with Robinson's wife paid $750,000 to avoid exposure so was thrown by the distinguished counsel, when he said, "Mr. A." an object of admiration and where ever he went and was your highness when abroad."

The identity of the Rajah is concealed for reasons of s though everyone in Londo this time familiar with his name and title, which is Hari Singh.

she used her tears, soft, emotional, thoroughly feminine, given to dreams, she emerged from her dreams to be frankly practical when faced by a hard emergency. So it was to-day. She must save her lover. She knew that force was out of the question, and that it would be impossible to argue and plead with her father. Remained one weapon—bribery. She took from about her neck a string of fifty priceless, evenly matched black pearls; tore it apart, and gave the dark-shimmering heap to Zemzem.

"A pearl to every soldier of the guard!" she said. "Have them set Ahmed in safety through the secret wall panel into the street!"

Zemzem hurried off. The soldiers of the guard obeyed readily and gladly. Slaves themselves, there was in their heart no rancour or hate; in fact, rather a certain admiration for the Thief of Bagdad. Too, here was treasure; a priceless pearl for each of them; and no risk of discovery. For how would anybody ever know of it? They would not tell: the Princess would not tell; and the gorilla was unable to tell! So, swiftly, secretly, they hastened Ahmed by a back path into a small, walled garden heavy with the acrid scent of marigold and the pungent, cloying sweetness of red jasmine, thence by an underground passage that ran for nearly a mile and through a grass-covered, intricate trap door into an empty, deserted street, with a kindly:

"May Allah protect you, O Thief of Bagdad!"

And there he sat, alone with the pain in his body, the pain in his soul, until the sun died in a sickly haze of coppery brown and the moon boomed up in the West, stabbed on the outer horns of the world, dispassionate, calm, indifferent to the heart of man.

There he sat the night through, until the wind drove the dusk toward the East and the sky flushed with the jade-green of young morning; until, with the sun rising higher and higher, there echoed from the palace a great blaring of trumpets and beating of drums, and, not long afterwards, Bird-of-Evil, who had escaped with the help of one of the soldiers, joined his friend and told him what had happened.

It appeared that, after the thief's exposure, the Caliph had gone to his daughter and had bid her choose another husband. Stoutly Zobied had maintained that, happen what porteo goods in the domestic market.

Those who do not trade mark their goods, and those who do trade mark their goods but who have neglected to cultivate the consumer, have particularly good reasons for feeling uneasy.

For example, we know of one Canadian manufacturer who is competing with goods from England, Scotland and Europe. He is placing his excellent line of goods on the domestic market without a mark or name of any kind on them. Even if Canadians preferred to give him their trade, they couldn't identify his goods. Is it any wonder that the competition of imports is worrying him?

We know of another manufacturer who makes a splendid line of unbranded goods—in many cases better than competitive lines imported from Britain, Central and Southern Europe and the Orient. But the imported lines have the prestige with the consumer, simply because the public has never been told of the excellent quality of the domestic line. In fact, we have heard of cases where the domestic line has been sold by clerks under the guise of imported, simply because it was easier to sell it that way. If that manufacturer isn't feeling uneasy, he should be.

We know of other Canadian manufacturers of worthy products, both trade marked and not trade marked, who are suffering unduly from a growing competition of imported goods, because they haven't nationally advertised their own lines to the consumer and therefore have not built up prestige for their products.

British, American, European and Oriental goods, particularly under conditions that are likely to prevail in the world for years to come.

The best protection that Canadian manufacturers can secure against the competition of imports is to gain and hold the goodwill of the Canadian consumer.

The consumer is the key.

The consumer decides your fate.

If the consumer favors imported goods, you lose.

If your domestic line is preferred, you win.

The quickest, surest, safest and most economical way to gain the goodwill of the consumer is to trade mark or brand your goods and nationally advertise them.

Spread the news all over Canada that you manufacture excellent products. Let everybody know about their good qualities. Show how perfectly your goods meet the requirements of Canadians. Build up prestige for your line. Show that you have faith enough in your product to advertise it and stand behind it. Cultivate the goodwill of the public and prove yourself worthy of their confidence and you will surely gain it, and with it a protection of the strongest and safest kind —the assurance of consumer demand and the continuance of trade.

We would like nothing better than a conference with any Canadian manufacturer who has to meet the competition of imported products. We have no magic to offer him, but we have a sound business proposition to lay before him, provided he makes a worthy product that can be marketed at a reasonable margin of profit.

LATEST-FARM-NEWS — FARM-PROBLEMS

The modern majesty consists in work. What a man can do is his greatest ornament, and he always consults his dignity by doing it.—Carlyle.

INDIANS START EVOLUTION OF CRANBERRY PIE

SORTED BY HAND.

Used By Indians Before White Men Discovered Their Charm.

That snappy, red cranberry sauce shaking in its glass dish alongside of your brown and white turkey may appear a beginning, when you start on your holiday dinner. In point of fact, however, this festive stage amid bright lights and hilarity is really the climax of cranberry history.

The scene changes to a dismal, lonesome marshland, flat and dreary, where the cranberries grow. This red, acid little berry is peculiar and exclusive, with requirements that suit no other crop. No ordinary farm or garden soil will produce cranberries, and the climate must be just so, an acid, marshy swamp with moderate, even climate.

Indians Used the Berries.

The original cranberry man was a wild Indian. Back in the days of the famous Lewis and Clarke expedition of 1805, the food value of this berry was discovered when Indians were observed picking them in a swamp to go with their wild turkey dinner. To-day the commercial cranberry farmer goes through a series of methodical processes. He first must locate the special field required. There are few places in the United States where these berries can be grown, and fewer yet outside of this country. It is quite true that swamps abound in all sections, but the southern swamplands must be counted out for the reason that heat waves are not tolerated by this acid little fruit. On the other hand, a temperature too low retards the blossoming and subsequent development. These blossoms by the way, have a resemblance to orchids, blooming in company with water lilies and the usual decorations of marshy places.

After the grower has found the right sort of soil, a survey must be made to locate the springs and streams necessary for alternate draining and flooding of the fields. In seasons of drought the natural water supply drains off, and in winter flooding is often needed to protect the plants from frost. An expert is required for regulating the water supply, for while the roots of the vines may live under water, they will not grow there. Care must be taken, therefore, to thoroughly understand the water relations, and the entire drainage system must be studied; poor drainage reduces the crop, makes picking difficult, and causes troublesome weeds to thrive. Different qualities of soil must also be considered in this connection. Some varieties are composed of peat, which allows the water to drain off quickly, while others have compact soil, where water drains off slowly.

A Complicated Process.

This water question involves reservoirs, pumps and pump houses and other mechanical devices. In spite of this equipment the cranberry regions are hardly spectacular but carry an aspect of general flatness. The ditches have the effect of furrows in a ploughed field and the rectangular pump houses are not exactly suggestive of classic architecture. Dikes must be built to hold the water in the reservoirs and thus maintain sent to the Shelter Homes of Peterboro over the province for wards of the society.

He also spoke in strong terms of the need of the children for affection and understanding as well as money, and of the duty incumbent on members of boards such as these to enquire constantly into social conditions and the difficulties and the needs of children. Supervised playgrounds, skating rinks and summer camps were recommended, supervision of dance halls and recreation centres of all types, but above all, a study should be made of those influences that have no direct bearing on the life of the child. What was necessary was a comprehensive, understanding sympathy with the desires of the child, and a realization that under some of the "tough" exteriors affected by youths was a longing and yearning for better things and for someone who would take a real interest in them. All should not be left to the matron in charge. Much might be done by each individual member of the Board and the taking of wards into their homes for short visits was recommended. "Don't delegate all your opportunities to someone else. Take a personal interest. Find out something about the children and try and find good homes for them."

"One of the greatest curses of the age is the fact that everyone is trying to get out of work. Many children grow up with no definite knowledge of work, and that is bad. Men who succeed in life worked hard as boys."

Mr. Kelso referred to the case of a child sent to the reformatory at the tender age of eight years and said: "A boy of eight years who goes to the reformatory learns the bad, instead of the good. That is always the case. Because little boys must have a hero, and the child of eight in a reformatory will make a hero of the bigger boy of fifteen who is there because of some evil tendency. One boy, when asked what he had learned in a certain reformatory, said that he had learned to open any lock with a piece of wire."

Speaking of the work of the agent Mr. Kelso alluded to the County Council of Cornwall, who had lately presented their agent with a motor car for his own use, and he also advocated the assistance of an office helper in accounting and telephone

MILLBROOK GOOSE LAID 14 EGGS THIS AUTUMN

MILLBROOK, Nov. 26.—Mr. J. H. George, Fallis Line, has a grey goose which, this fall, laid fourteen eggs—a most unusual record as geese generally lay only in the spring.

This goose is one year and a half old, and laid twelve eggs earlier in the season, hatching out goslings and raising her family. She would have set again this fall had Mr. George not discovered the eggs in time and used them for household purposes.

MORE FALL WHEAT SOWN THIS SEASON

An Increase of 30,000 Acres in Ontario and a Decrease of 6,900 In Alberta.

MILLBROOK, Nov. 26.—The latest bulletin from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics (Agricultural Branch), contains the interesting information of the acreage and condition of fall wheat and rye. "The total area sown in fall wheat for the season of 1925 is 832,200 acres as compared with 808,600 acres sown in 1923 for 1924. The total sown this fall represents an increase of 23,600 acres, or 3 per cent.

In Ontario, the acreage sown in fall wheat is estimated at 782,500 acres, as compared with 752,500 acres last year, an increase of 30,000 acres, or 4 per cent. In Alberta there is a decrease of 6,900 acres, or 17 per cent.

The area sown in fall rye in Ontario is placed at 120,341 acres, a decrease of 6,300 acres, or 5 per cent.

By provinces, the condition of the two crops this year is:—Ontario, fall wheat, 100 as against 101 last year; fall rye, 95. Manitoba, fall rye, 96; Saskatchewan, fall rye, 99; Alberta, fall wheat, 103 for both years; fall rye, 103. Manitoba, fall wheat, 101 as compared with 100 last year.

For all Canada, the proportion of land intended for next year's crops that has been ploughed up to October 31 was 32 per cent, as compared with 43 per cent last year, and 48 per cent in 1922. In Ontario the proportion is 42 per cent, as compared with 54 per cent last year.

PROPER WAY TO FEED AND CARE FOR FALL PIGS

More Attention Must Be Given to Fall Litters on Account of Climate.

NEED LOTS MILK.

Many Mineral Feeds Available in Both Organic and Inorganic Forms.

The fall-farrowed litter must be housed and fed under more or less artificial conditions in this climate during the winter. The rapidly developing pigs demand mineral matter for the building of bone and muscle, meal and other feeds in a relatively concentrate form, and also some form of succulence to assist in the normal functioning of the digestive organs.

There are many mineral feeds available in both organic and inorganic forms and these include charcoal, bone meal, tankage, wood ashes, bone black, ground limestone, earthy matter or sods, etc. These may be fed in hoppers, or if finely ground, may be added to the meal ration at the rate of a few pounds per hundred of meal.

Succulence may be supplied to the hogs in the form of roots, or potatoes if roots are not available. The potatoes give better results when boiled and mixed with meal. The roots may be pulped and mixed with the meal ration or fed whole, but for the younger pigs they should be pulped.

A meal ration composed of equal parts of shorts, middlings and finely ground oats is suitable for pigs of 2½ to 3 months of age, when supplemented with about 3 per cent of linseed oil meal and skim milk. A well developed pig of that age will consume about one pound of this meal mixture and five pounds of milk per day. Tankage or meat meal may be substituted for the milk at the rate of 6 to 8 per cent of the meal ration, but seldom gives as good results. For older pigs, a meal mixture composed of ground oats, 2 parts; shorts, 1 part; middlings, 1 part; bran, 1 part; barley, 1 part; and linseed oil meal, 3 per cent. gives good results. A variety of meals is usually better than a single meal. An equal quantity of roots may be added to the meal ration after the pigs are 3 to 4 months of age, but carefully avoid overfeeding.

In housing the main feature to keep in mind are cleanliness, suitable ventilation and the supplying of a reasonably dry sleeping berth. If this berth is situated in a shed or draughty building is should be enclosed. Pigs will do better in a shed than in a dark, damp, poorly, ventilated corner of the stable, even though the stable is considerably warmer.

Cramped quarters are to be avoided, as daily exercise is as desirable as proper feeding.

INCREASING FLOCKS.

F. Ayerst, who has traded in live stock around the Fraser Valley and Lower Mainland points for many years, sold 104 pounds of wool in the New Westminster market last Friday at 16 cents per pound. He says there are quantities of wool still held by farmers who expect to get 20 cents per pound for it.

The lot came from T. W. Hardy's Elgin Oxfords—16 sacks. Both mutton and lamb are scarce locally, but Ayerst is convinced the ever-prevailing shortage of local lamb and mutton will not be

Record Of Great Achievement On Canadian Farm Told By American Settler Who Started With $20

HIGH RIVER, Alberta, Nov. 26.—In a letter written recently to W. C. Hammond, manager, Union Bank of Canada, at High River, O. F. Malmberg, of Malmberg & Sons, says in part:—

"We located in High River, Nov. 18, 1904, a family of 11 children, my wife and I, six boys and five girls, ages 3 to 24 years. We had 12 work horses, five wagons, household goods, 40 young horses, and $20 in cash, after paying our freight. We came from Grand Ronde Valley, Oregon, U.S.A. We homesteaded, worked, and lived good. There are now 44 of us, including 'in-laws' and grand-children, and all in Alberta except four—one daughter, her husband and two children. They are in New York State.

"My three sons and I (Malmberg & Sons) have, since coming here, produced 234,000 bushels of wheat, 190,000 bushels of oats and barley, and have sold of our own raising, cattle for $27,500, hogs for $55,000, horses for $8,200 and sundries $10,000, and have worked out, earning $43,000. We have had extended to us at one time, a line of credit of $100,000 in recent years.

"Estimating the amount of farm produce that we have consumed at $30,000 during the 17½ years we have been here, and figuring the values of what we have produced in dollars, the total is $533,700. All these are figures which can be verified."

NO BENEFIT IN CHANGING SEED

Many Farmers Have Came to Their Financial Loss by Changing Seed.

TEST YOUR GRAIN.

A common question asked by farmers is: "Does it pay to change seed?" The inference here is that where the same seed has been used on the same farm for a few years, it may deteriorate in its ability to produce a profitable crop. It is also a common belief that one operating a farm characterized by relatively light soil should obtain his seed frequently, from a crop which is produced on soil of a heavier character, and vice versa. Some authorities have scoffed at the idea that a change of seed is ever necessary. They argue that seed grown year after year is a district must, of necessity, become acclimatized and better adapted to the soil conditions of that district. It is safe to say that many farmers have followed this advice to their financial loss. Investigation and observation have revealed the fact that it is not possible to lay down any definite rule as to when seed should be changed. It is obvious that certain circumstances may arise to make the change of seed appear imperative, even to the casual observer. For instance, a crop may be so badly damaged through lack

"May Allah protect you, O Thief of Bagdad!"

And there he sat, alone with the pain in his body, the pain in his soul, until the sun died in a sickly haze of coppery brown and the moon boomed up in the West, stabbed on the outer horns of the world, dispassionate, calm, indifferent to the heart of man.

There he sat the night through, until the wind drove the dusk toward the East and the sky flushed with the jade-green of young morning; until, with the sun rising higher and higher, there echoed from the palace a great blaring of trumpets and beating of drums, and, not long afterwards, Bird-of-Evil, who had escaped with the help of one of the soldiers, joined his friend and told him what had happened.

It appeared that, after the thief's exposure, the Caliph had gone to his daughter and had bid her choose another husband. Stoutly Zobied had maintained that, happen what

MADE OWN SHOES.

Wild Rice Grew on Quinte Bay as Well as Rice Lake.

COBOURG, Nov. 26. — The first fruits that the U.E.L. settlers found to use after coming to Canada were the wild plum, which was plentiful in some sections, and wild strawberries. The wild plum was placed under cultivation, and later produced a fruit that was much prized. The strawberries were quite often brought in to the settlers by the Indians and exchanged for some articles which the original inhabitants of this country greatly prized.

Wild Rice at Quinte Bay.

We are apt to think that wild rice belongs altogether to Rice Lake but Dr. Canniff in his history of the settlement of Upper Canada, states it was found at different points along Bay of Quinte, and that the Indians gathered it there in their early days as they do now at Rice Lake and sold it to the settlers.

The Discovery of Ginseng.

The Ginseng plant was one of the first commodities in Upper Canada that gave the settlers monetary returns. For many articles which they had for sale, when they began to grow their crops, barter and exchange was the rule and very little actual cash passed between buyer and seller, as there was very little cash in the country. In the year 1716 a Jesuit is said to have discovered in the forests of Canada, the Ginseng plant, which was in great demand, especially in China. In it Canada had a natural product that should have brought wealth to many succeeding generations. But so great was the settler's need to secure a little money, that they were searching for it, early and late, and cutting it too early in the season is said to have badly depleted the product until soon there was little to be had. The Indians were pressed into the work and gave valuable assistance as they knew where the ginseng beds were.

Gathered 500 Pounds.

In 1799 Ebenezer Washburn, a dealer in Ginseng, wrote to Col. Bell in Thorlow township asking to be allowed 500 pounds of Ginseng and asking the latter to collect more if possible as the demand was great. It was shipped by way of Montreal.

The Cost of a Plow.

Gowdey, an early historian, states that most of the first settlers made their own plows and harrows. The iron for the former cost from $9 to $12. When constructed they were of the rudest order and cumbersome. However, the rich loom of the uncropped forest lands, when cleared could almost always be depended upon for a good crop of potatoes and Indian corn, and also other products.

Sickles At First.

The early grain was at first cut with a sickle, as the many stumps interfered alike with the harvesting and reaping. After a time the American peddlers that came in small boats and rowed from settlement to settlement along the shore, brought in the scythe, and it was not long before these were in general use among the farmers.

Hauling in the Grain.

Dr. Canniff states that the rudely made hand sleighs, which of course were considerably larger than the modern sport hand sleigh, and also the larger ones manufactured to be drawn by a horse or ox were used at first to draw in hay and grain. Then some constructed a sort of wagon. A hardwood tree was sawn across, making four pieces each about a foot in length. Holes were bored through the centre of the blocks and they constituted the wheels of the wagon. The axle-tree of hard wood was then fashioned to suit the wheels, and in this way a rough but serviceable vehicle was made, which proved of great use, especially in hauling hay and grain to the place of stacking. Canniff says that it is left on record that a wagon was built on this wise that carried one hundred and fifty sheaves. As roads were opened through the forests "boughten" wagons were brought into the country, from the United States because of the cheapness of the line. The Cultivation of Hemp. where flax to be manufactured into cloth by clothing was largely grown by the settlers, but they also turned their energies to the raising of simply For this there was a good reason that was in Great Britain, but it was felt on hand here also for the manufacture of rope and of rope harness, was the first harness used.

own a small flock of sheep sure way for a farmer's family days to get on the road to dence. For the wool, was spun, then woven or knit into every kind of article of wear. Hosiery, mittens, hoods, dresses and underwear were manufactured, the different processes being carried out at first by in the home. About 1817 there machinery brought into Kingston for carding wool and later into others parts of the Midland district. It is stated that families who had but two or three sheep have been known to part the wool on an animal during the winter season and cut off a bit here and there, which they hastily carded by hand and made into some much needed article of apparel for the family. Times were hard and appliances rude, but the early settlers bravely adjusted themselves to them.

Ba?e-Back or Deerskin

It was many a year before bridles and saddles came into general use for horseback riding in the Midland district. Bareback or a deerskin to sit upon, were the general customs. It is recorded of a Northumberland county farmer, who wished to procure nails as he was building one of the first frame barns in the country, mounted his horse and rode away to the nearest store at Kingston, made his purchase, placed half of the nails in each end of a bag, threw it over his horse's back and was home, and at work in three days' time.

Home-Made Shoes.

As soon as there were tanneries, a farmer would provide shoes for his family by taking several calf skins to a tannery. The tanner kept half for his labor and turned the other half over to his customer in the form of leather. If the farmer was good at cobbling, he made shoes for the family himself. If not, the services of a travelling shoe maker were secured. Each member of the family had his or her foot "measured" and the shoes were in due time made. The soles of the shoes were fastened by wooden pegs, generally manufactured by the shoemaker.

NATURE'S PESTS IN EVERY COUNTRY

Rats.

It has been predicted that rats will someday overpower the human race, and by sheer numbers expel man from the earth. A family residing in a London (England) flat suddenly discovered that rats were gnawing in their outhouse. The rodents gradually ate their way into the staircase, and got to walking round at night to explore their surroundings. Then one night a child's cry in the nursery brought the mother to find several rats scampering about the floor. Thereafter the children had to be taken away, and the whole family was literally driven from home by the voracious creatures. A man was dressing one morning, when he suddenly noticed two greedy eyes staring at him from an upper shelf. It was a rat. His daughter was accompanied downstairs the same day by a fat rodent. Two dogs and a cat were kept, but the rats defied them. Traps were useless, too, and this family was also obliged to leave. Sanitary authorities are going to great expense in dealing with the rat plague, which threatens to grow worse.

Mice.

It will, however, be futile to exterminate rats if mice are left to multiply. Rats prey on mice and consume their food, and fewer rats will mean more mice. The damage wrought by the latter is estimated at millions of pounds each year. In one case seven stacks of corn were threshed, and six stones of mice were destroyed by the workers, in addition to those killed by the dogs. About three hundred and fifteen mice are in a stone, so that the seven stacks must have contained nearly two thousand mice. At least twenty-four quarters of corn had been wasted by the little creatures. The plague has been met by digging holes over the infested country at a distance of about twenty yard apart Mice fall in great numbers into these holes, and polecats, hawks, and owls get a rich feast in them. In the New Forest district in England a small owl never known before in the locality appeared in large numbers, attracted by the mouse pits, and recently rendered valuable service in destroying the mice.

Green Fly.

Gardeners and fruit growers are greatly annoyed by the aphis, or green fly, and in America this creature sometimes ruins very valuable orchards. An interesting method of dealing with it has been discovered. An expert in London gathers battalions of ladybirds and supplies them to counteract the green fly's depredations. Ladybirds feed on the fly, and clear rose bushes and other plants of it much more effectively than can be done with sprays. In America collectors go to places in the Rocky Mountains where the ladybirds are known to hibernate, pack them in sacks, and bring them down to California and other fruit-growing districts on the backs of mules. This is now a regular department of the great fruit-growing industry of America and Canada. By means of the ladybirds thus set to work many orchards which used to be almost wrecked are now kept free from the dreaded pest.

The Corn-Borer.

This recalls how America has begun to use wasps in order to destroy the depredations of the terrible corn-borer. This latter nuisance has been declared by an expert to be "potentially the most serious pest which has ever threatened the corn of the country." Its larvæ tunnel through all parts of the maize plant, and severely injure its ears and stalks. The insect multiplie with amazing rapidity. But the wasps —of which America now import millions from Europe at intervals—lay their eggs on the pest, and when these hatch out the grubs kill the corn-borer. The issue of the fight is still in doubt, but the wasps are greatly helping. In no other country, it has been remarked, are insect nuisances such a peril as in the United States. The authorities, however, are alive to the danger, and are devising many plans to counter it. For example, birds—the natural foes of insect pests—are being encouraged in every possible way. Boys and girls all over the country are being trained to protect them. By nesting boxes and similar apparatus they are being assiduously encouraged to multiply, and the utmost care is now being taken to examine minutely every plant and animal which is admitted to the United States to ensure that they are not bringing in any known or unknown disease or pest.

Locusts.

In South Africa a serious nature pest has recently been the locust. In such swarms has it come that trains have been held up. The wheels have actually been prevented from gripping the rails. The plague has suggested "locust specials," which deal drastically with the thick carpets of locusts along the railway lines. To a locomotive a tank waggon is attached containing a poisonous acid. Pumps shoot the poison far and wide on either side of the track on to the little creatures. Millions are killed, and so successful has this plan proved that a regular service of "locust specials" has been instituted. The town of Johannesburg was lately plunged into darkness by swarms of locusts passing over it. Myriads of stragglers were left strewing the streets. The inhabitants are said to have collected the bodies of the locusts, pounded them into paste, which is rich in oil, and sold the product for poultry food. Recalling Scriptural narratives, natives of Africa often dry the locusts and eat them.

The Prickly Pear.

Curiously enough, nature pests have been known to serve good ends. It is said that a British army was once seriously short of food, and was saved by the discovery under the ground of large hoards of corn which had been buried by mice. These creatures, of course, not only consume, but carry away and bury corn for the winter. A story is told also of an Australian who wished to impress an English girl whom he met during the war with his wealth and position. He declared that he drew a large income from a prickly pear farm which he owned.

The lady did not know that the prickly pear is one of the greatest nuisances with which the Australian farmer has to deal. But now the Australian's joke has turned to have contained a tremendous truth. A method of obtaining motor spirit from the prickly pear has been discovered, and it has been found that the spirit works just as well as petrol. Over two million acres in South Africa are useless because infested with the prickly pear, and now this land may become a source of great wealth. It is a wonderful romance, foreshadowed in a joke.

Character

Character! One of the most important words in a human life. Development of it should start with the child. It is one of the most important duties of a parent,

How much home influence plays in its developments has often been studied by sociologists of Anytown. The home attitude itself is most important—the attitude of the father toward the mother and vice versa.

Good work on the part of a child is a matter of encouragement, not discouragement. If he is doing but medium fair work, encourage him to do better, don't nag him until he does worse. Eencouragement is one of the most potent forces of child life.

Clean outdoor competition should be encouraged.

FLAX AT REABORO.

R. Mahood Harvested 52 Bus. From 30 Lbs. of Seed.

OMEMEE, November 25. — The production of flax in this district is very scarce. Very rarely do we see a field of flax growing, although it is easily cultivated even upon the poorest soils. This is an important crop in Ireland, Russia, Russia, Italy, Germany, France, etc., and is imported in large quantities into Great Britain and the United States. It is one of the most important industries in Russia and New Zealand, where the fibre of the leaves is manufactured extensively into linen thread and cloth, but in this country and in the United States the flax is grown mainly for seed.

Mr. R. Mahood of Reaboro, had the good fortune to try a small quantity on a few wet places in a field where no other grain would have matured, and the pleasing result was from 30 lbs. of seed, for which he paid 6c per lb., he had when threshed, 52 bushels.

A SMALL ATTENDANCE AT ANNUAL MEETING OF CHILDREN'S SOCIETY

Officers Elected and Thanks Extended to Those Who Assisted in Work of the Society.

MR. KELSO SPOKE.

There was a small attendance at the annual meeting of the Children's Aid Society, held in the hall of the Public Library last night. About twenty-five people were present for the election of officers, the giving of the year's reports, and the address by J. J. Kelso, of Toronto, superintendent of the Children's Aid Societies for the Province, who spoke on "Child Welfare Work."

The meeting was presided over by Mr. B. F. Ackerman. The opening prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. C. W. Rose, and the benediction pronounced by Rev. James Gordon. J. Edgar, the secretary, prefaced his reading of the reports and resolutions by a reference to the good work done by G. W. Powell, the Agent, during his eight years with the Society. Trust funds held on account of various wards of the society, amount at present to $11,398.39, and Mr. Edgar attributed much of this to Mr. Powell's careful management.

Agent's Report.

Mr. Edgar read Mr. Powell's yearly report, showing applications received, 69; children brought into the Shelter (not wards), 26; children returned to parents (not wards), 19; children involved during the year, 335; children made wards, 8; children sent to the Industrial School, 8; mail received, 544; mail sent out, 433; mileage covered, 2745 miles; places visited outside of the city, 31; wards heard from, 43; wards placed out, 35; wards returned to Shelter, 31; wards, visited, 81; warnings given, 10; cases under Unmarried Parents' Act, 12; Money forwarded to Mr. Kelso from Peterboro county, $3899.75; cases of adoption, 5; receipts of tag day, to date, $1786.29.

Treasurer's Report.

C. S. Cummer, the treasurer, read the annual report, showing a balance on hand at present of $1536.12. The receipts for the year totalled $5918.33, made up as follows: Balance from previous year, $1867.22; City grant, $849.98; County grant, $800; board and clothes, $477; donations, $173.46; tag day, $1720.79; interest, $29.89.

Expenditures totalled $4382.21, as follows: Salaries, $2299.92; provisions $723.63; light, fuel, water and phone, $486.44; travelling and office expenses $155.51; clothing, etc., $253.20; printing and advertising $16.64; equipment, repairs and sundries, $447.85.

Capital account shows a total of $13,901.76, made up of: City property, $12,500, aBnk of Toronto, $266.30; Bank of Montreal, $1135.46.

Dominion of Canada bonds held in safe-keeping for the children, amount to $10,450, and Trust savings account books held in custody of G. W. Powell, total $948.39, a total of trust fund moneys held for wards of $11,398.39.

Resolutions Passed.

The following resolutions were also read by Mr. Edgar, and passed by the meeting:

Moved by Mr. G. W. Powell, and seconded by Mrs. D. Rogers: That this society desires to express its thanks to the following gentlemen, who have ably and willingly assisted and administered to the wants of the children in our Shelter: Dr. W. H. Lacey, Dr. J. E. Middleton, Dr. C. C. Cragg, Dr. E. H. Wood, Dr. D. C. King.

Moved by Mr. F. H. Dobbin and seconded by Mrs. Harrison: That a hearty vote of appreciation be tendered to the kind friends who have sent to the Shelter donations of clothing and eatables; also to all churches and societies for their interest in the little ones.

Moved by Mrs. J. Welsh and seconded by Mrs. J. Holmes: That we appreciate the splendid reports of our meetings in the Examiner, reported by Miss McCarthy, who always gives a full and fair report of the business transacted.

Moved by Mrs. J. Fanning, and seconded by Mrs. W. H. Darcy: that the thanks of this Society be tendered to Mr. J. A. MacKone for the very able assistance he has rendered the Society in typing notices of meetings and our annual appeal. Mr. MacKone is always willing to do anything asked of him.

Nominating Report Adopted.

The report of the Nominating Committee, composed of Messrs. B. F. Ackerman, J. Edgar, R. H. Parsons and Mrs. J. S. Fanning, was adopted as read, on motion of Rev. Dr. Rose and Ald. W. Stocker, recommending that the former officers and executive be re-appointed for the ensuing year. The officers and Executive for the year will be as follows:

Hon. Presidents: The Mayor of the City, The Warden of the County.

Hon. Vice-Presidents: Mr. J. H. Burnham, Mr. W. H. Bradburn, M. L.A., Mr. G. N. Gordon, M.P., K.C., Mr. E. A. Peck, Mr. Jos. Wearing, Rev. Father Phelan, Campbellford; Mrs. Birdsall.

President: Mr. B. F. Ackerman.

1st Vice-Pres.: Mrs. W. H. Gibbs

2nd Vice-Pres.: Mrs. J. S. Fanning.

Secretary: John Edgar.

Treasurer: Mr. C. S. Cummer.

Solicitor: Mr. Jos. Wearing.

Executive: Mesdames, Knox, Hopwood, Kimberley, Welsh, Hill, Darcy, Devey, Hodgson, Holmes and Mrs. G. Stevens. Messrs. Rev. Dr. Blagrave, Rev. Dr. Rose, Rev. H. Young, Rev. M. C. Mackinnon, Rev. F. Costello, Dr. E. Wood, F. H. Dobbin, R. H. Parsons, W. J. Hopwood and J. Abraham, representing the G.W.V.A.

The official representatives on the Board of the Kiwanis Club and the Rotary Club have not yet been appointed for this year. Ald. W. Stocker and Adjt. E. Smith represented these organizations last year.

A resolution, moved by Mr. Edgar, seconded by Mr. Ackerman, and unanimously carried, added the names of Mr. R. W. Cormack and Dr. D. W. Clark to the executive.

Mr. Edgar referred to the excellent work done by Mr. B. F. Ackerman as president during the past season and spoke of the good fortune of the society in having him as chief executive once more, his remarks being greeted by applause from those present.

Mr. Ackerman expressed appreciation on his re-election and spoke of the willingness shown by citizens generally to contribute to the work done by the Children's Aid Society, also to friendliness of various local solicitors, who suggested to many, when making their wills, that the society be included in their bequests.

Mr. Ackerman also acknowledged with thanks a donation received recently from the Junior Football Association of the city, through their treasurer, I. Ball, amounting to $31.25, being one-half of the proceeds of the final game for Mayor Turner's Charity Cup, the other portion going to St. Vincent's Orphanage.

Mr Kelso's Address.

Mr. Kelso's address on "Child Welfare" was a thoughtful, pleasant discourse on some of the experiences encountered in work amongst children, and concluded with a sincere plea for more understanding of the heart and mind of the child, and a broader sympathy with its aims and desires.

Speaking of the appeal which the work of the organization made to men of authority and the response it found among all classes in the community, Mr. Kelso said that prevention of evils was the chief aim of the society, whose aim was to keep the family together as much as possible. "It is part of the great economy of God that family life should be the foundation principle of all our civilization."

Saying that the moral and child-welfare conditions of the province were as a whole very satisfactory, Mr. Kelso alluded to the "home-finding" activities of the society, and its efforts to place in good foster homes the needy and homeless child. Since the inception of the work, over 30,000 children have been placed in such homes, and over 10,000 are now under active supervision all over the province. The majority of the wards are well cared for. Only in exceptional cases are they overworked or ill-treated. One case encountered last week was that of a child left a legacy of $10,000 by its foster-father, with $10,000 more coming to it on the death of the foster-mother.

These children are placed in homes of every type. Judges, financial and professional and business men become their guardians as well as people in poorer homes. Mr. Kelso referred to the case in Toronto last week, where a girl of nineteen made her bow to society from one of the wealthy homes of the city, her foster home, and to the case of a very important citizen of Cleveland who motored to Toronto recently in search of his family connections, only to be told by the superintendent that he had been one of the wards of the society many years ago.

Mr. Kelso congratulated Mr. Powell on the good work evidenced by the handsome sum held in trust here for the wards, and said that a total of $85,000 was held in trust all over the province for wards of the society.

He also spoke in strong terms of the need of the children for affection and understanding as well as money, and of the duty incumbent on members of boards such as these to enquire constantly into social conditions and the difficulties and the needs of children. Supervised playgrounds, skating rinks and summer camps were recommended, supervision of dance halls and recreation centres of all types, but above all, a study should be made of those influences that have no direct bearing on the life of the child. What was necessary was a comprehensive, understanding sympathy with the desires of the child, and a realization that under some of the "tough" exteriors affected by youths was a longing and yearning for better things and for someone who would take a real interest in them. All should not be left to the matron in charge. Much might be done by each individual member of the Board and the taking of wards into their homes for short visits was recommended. "Don't delegate all your opportunities to someone else. Take a personal interest. Find out something about the children and try and find good homes for them."

"One of the greatest curses of the age is the fact that everyone is trying to get out of work. Many children grow up with no definite knowledge of work, and that is bad. Men who succeed in life worked hard as boys."

Mr. Kelso referred to the case of a child sent to the reformatory at the tender age of eight years and said: "A boy of eight years who goes to the reformatory learns the bad, instead of the good. That is always the case. Because little boys must have a hero, and the child of eight in a reformatory will make a hero of the bigger boy of fifteen who is there because of some evil tendency. One boy, when asked what he had learned in a certain reformatory, said that he had learned to open any lock with a piece of wire."

Speaking of the work of the agent Mr. Kelso alluded to the County Council of Cornwall, who had lately presented their agent with a motor car for his own use, and he also advocated the assistance of an office helper in accounting and telephone work. "Do not be afraid to spend money in this work," he said. "Money should not be considered in any work that has to do with children."

The thanks of the meeting to Mr. Kelso was expressed in a few appropriate words by Mr. Ackerman.

Those present last night included Messrs. Ackerman, Edgar, Powell, Dobbin, Stocker, Abraham, Cummer, Rev. Dr. Blagrave, Rev. Dr. Rose, Mesdames Holmes, Fanning, Devey, Welsh, Darcy, Hodgson, Hopwood, Stevens, representing the Board; also Rev. Jas. Gordon, Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Medd, Mrs. D. Rogers, and Mesdames Harrison and Paterson.

KIWANIS FAIR A BIG SUCCESS

Over Six Hundred Patronized Fair on Second Night—Big Night To-night.

Attendance at the Kiwanis Winter Fair last night was very good. Over six hundred people patronized the Market Hall during the evening, and added their praises to the general chorus of commendation for the outstanding excellence of the various exhibits arranged by the Kiwanians.

The games and refreshment booths and the dancing floor were well patronized, and a very attractive feature of the programme was the presence of the Male Voice Choir, the sixty of more members of which came up in a body after their regular practise and led an interval of community singing. One of the most pleased auditors was W. O'Rourke, the deaf gentleman who discovered the evening before the vibratory powers of his aluminum roaster, won at the dart games, and who was in attendance again last evening, hugging his marvellous utensil to his breast.

The tea room, in charge of Mrs. J. A. McKone, is an unusually attractive little enclosure, where sandwiches, pie and hot coffee are served?. Real home-made cooking and home-made candy are also dispensed at outside booths, by various ladies in charge.

A further addition to last evening's entertainment was the showing of the "Tommy Tucker Tooth Film," Dr. J. J. Craig's pet film just at present, for which the Y.M.C.A. kindly provided a projection machine.

To-night's show promises to be bigger and better than ever, with something for everybody and a host of surprises in store for patrons. This is Rotary Night, when Rotarians will attend and provide some added entertainment features.

One of the most interesting exhibits in the many that throng the big Fair is the marvellous machine that inhabits the Peterborough Business College section, the "Mercedes Calculator" that multiplies, and adds, and subtracts and divides without the least apparent trouble.

Door prizes for Monday night have been claimed as follows: 1st, $5, donated by John J. Allen, won by J. Speer, 38 Hunter street east, with ticket No. 2215; 2nd, 24 lb. bag of flour, donated by Mr. J. W. Meyers, won by Mr. G. F. Allen, 571 Harvey street, with ticket No. 2236; 3rd, cook book, donated by F. H. Dawson, won by Mrs. Harold Freeman, Water street, with ticket No. 2326.

Last evening, with H. Boyle in charge, the prizes were as follows: Door awards: 1st, $5, donated by Isaac McNab, of the Dominion Life Insurance Co., won by Miss Margaret East, 223 George street, with ticket No. 2529; 2nd, 1 24-lb. bag of flour, donated by Lloyd Hamilton, of the Quaker Oats Co., won by ticket No. 2935 (unclaimed; 3rd, a "Five Roses" cook book, donated by F. H. Dawson, won by ticket No. 2941, (unclaimed).

The raffle prizes were: 1st, 5 lb. box chocolates, donated by Dr. H. M. Yelland, won by G. A. Walton, 378 Water street, with ticket No. 228; 2nd, 1 man's toilet set, donated by Carl Webber, won by E. Taylor, with ticket No. 782; 3rd, one-half ton of coal, donated by E. Taylor, of H. B. Taylor & Sons, won by Iris Borland, Water street, with ticket No. 982.

BOOTLEGGER CLEANED UP THOUSANDS EACH MONTH

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y., Nov. 26.—(United News).—Because he is a bootlegger and is therefore able to pay $1,000 monthly alimony and $1,000 counsel fees to his wife, Thomas C. Craven was sent to jail for failing to make remittances to Mrs. Craven.

"What's this man's ocupation that he can pay $1,000 a month alimony and $1,000 counsel fees?" Justice Taylor asked.

"He's a bootlegger, your honor," Counsel for Mrs. Craven replied and the court acted at once

THE THIEF OF BAGDAD

BY ACHMED ABDULLAH

At once servants, soldiers and eunuchs poured through the palace and the grounds while, in the garden pavilion, Ahmed was imploring Zobeid to forgive him the arrogance of his love for the sake of the greatness of his love.

"I saw you last night," he said. "I was the robber who entered your apartment. And I—oh—I could not help it. Life without you—why—it was like the starless night loud with rain! I longed for you! I longed for you so! My longing was as the whisper of all the ages of creation—without beginning—and without end. Please—please—forgive me—why . . ."

"Ahmed!" she interrupted him. "Thief of Bagdad! Thief indeed, you are! But"—her voice dropped—"it has not decreased my love for you, nor changed it. Here"—she slipped the ring on his finger—"come back to me—some day! I shall be waiting for you until . . ."

"Until . . .?"

"Until . . .?"

"Until you have reclaimed the good that is in you—the brave—the splendid—the honest—the fine—the decent! I trust you utterly, dear."

And then, suddenly, she stopped, turned, and listened, as from the distance came the clank of steel and hectic, staccato, shouts:

"The thief! The thief! Hunt him down!"

"Quick!" she exclaimed. "Hide yourself!"

But it was too late. Already soldiers came pouring into the pavilion. Ahmed defended himself, fighting bravely. His sword leaped to his hand like a sentient being, flashed free of the jewelled velvet scabbard, caught the haggard rays of the dying sun so that it glistened from point to pommel like a chain of diamonds. In and at them he went, with a stamping of feet, a harsh, gutteral Arab war cry, his weapon dancing a sarabband. But the odds were against him. A blow from a battle-axe against the hilt of his sword sent it spinning, disarming him. They pulled him down as hounds pull down a stag, and dragged him into the presence of the Caliph.

"The truth!" deanded the latter. "Who are you?"

"I am a thief!" replied Ahmed; and a smile curled his lips at the remembrance that Zobeid loved him, although he was what he was.

"Dog!" the Caliph bellowed with rage; he Struck Ahmed heavily across the mouth. "Son of a dog with a dog's heart! Ah—let us see how you will like the song of the whip!" He turned to the servants. "Flog him!"

A moment later Ahmed had been stripped and trussed. Swish, swish, swish!—went the rhinoceros-hide flails whistling through the air with a triumphant, vindictive scream, curling about his back, cutting it into raw, bleeding pulp. And still he smiled; still he thought of Zobeid, of her words: "I love you! I shall wait for you! I trust you utterly!" until the Caliph, watching, seeing the smile on his face, broke into thin, cruel laughter.

"Ah!" he said. "We shall yet change your impudent smile into a grimace of pain. Let us consider what torture we may invent for you." And when the Mongol Prince whispered into his ear, he laughed again. "You are right, Cham Sheng!" he continued. "A splendid, novel, gorgeous idea! Worthy of a Mongol, indeed!" He turned to the slaves. "Throw this thief to the gorilla! Let us see of what he can rob the ape, or if, belike, the gorilla will be the better thief—plucking out our clever thief's eyes and tongue—tearing him limb from limb!"

And they dragged him from the hall toward the underground cave where the huge brute was kept during the day.

Zemzem had overheard. She ran to Zobeid and brought her word of it. The latter had been in the depths of grief and despair. Now, typically, she dried her tears. For, although soft, emotional, thoroughly feminine, given to dreams, she emerged from her dreams to be frankly practical when faced by a hard emergency. So it was to-day. She must save her lover. She knew that force was out of the question, and that it would be impossible to argue and plead with her father. Remained one weapon—bribery. She took from about her neck a string of fifty priceless, evenly matched black pearls; tore it apart, and gave the dark-shimmering heap to Zemzem.

"A pearl to every soldier of the guard!" she said. "Have them set Ahmed in safety through the secret wall panel into the street!"

Zemzem hurried off. The soldiers of the guard obeyed readily and gladly. Slaves themselves, there was in their heart no rancour or hate; in fact, rather a certain admiration for the Thief of Bagdad. Too, here was treasure; a priceless pearl for each of them; and no risk of discovery. For how would anybody ever know of it? They would not tell; the Princess would not tell; and the gorilla was unable to tell! So, swiftly, secretly, they hastened Ahmed by a back path into a small, walled garden heavy with the acrid scent of marigold and the pungent, cloying sweetness of red jasmine, thence by an underground passage that ran for nearly a mile and through a grass-covered, intricate trap door into an empty, deserted street, with a kindly:

"May Allah protect you, O Thief of Bagdad!"

And there he sat, alone with the pain in his body, the pain in his soul, until the sun died in a sickly haze of coppery brown and the moon boomed up in the West, stabbed on the outer horns of the world, dispassionate, calm, indifferent to the heart of man.

There he sat the night through, until the wind drove the dusk toward the East and the sky flushed with the jade-green of young morning; until, with the sun rising higher and higher, there echoed from the palace a great blaring of trumpets and beating of drums, and, not long afterwards, Bird-of-Evil, who had escaped with the help of one of the soldiers, joined his friend and told him what had happened.

It appeared that, after the thief's exposure, the Caliph had gone to his daughter and had bid her choose another husband. Stoutly Zobeid had maintained that, happen what may, she loved the Thief of Bagdad, until her father, at the end of his patience, had said that he himself would choose her husband from among the three Princes, and had left her in a towering rage. Then a realization of her helplessness had come to Zobeid. She turned to her slaves, Zemzem and Therrya, who were in the room.

"What shall I do?" she had asked.

Again Therrya, the fortune-teller, had spread the heap of Meccan sand. Again the golden grains had gradually formed the hazy outlines of a rose.

"Heaven-Born!" she had exclaimed. "Behold! It is an assured thing. He who first touched the rose tree—he will be your husband!"

"But—what can I do?"

"You must fight for time!"

So Zobeid had gone to the Caliph, had salaamed, had kissed his hand, and asked for forgiveness.

"Father mine," she had implored, "I do not know my own mind."

"No, no! Leave the decision to Kismet—to Fate!"

"How, daughter?"

"Bid the three Princes go away in search of rare treasure. Bid them return here at the end of the seventh moon. I shall then wed the one who brings me the greatest rarity. For he shall thus have proved himself most worthy of my love!"

The Caliph had approved of his daughter's suggestion; so had the three Princes; and even now—amidst the blaring of trumpets the beating of kettledrums, and the fluttering of banners, they were leaving Bagdad, agreeing to return at the end of the seventh moon.

The Prince of India, riding in the golden howdah atop of his elephant smiled thinly. He was sure of the quest, sure of the outcome. The gods, his ancestors, would help him.

Smiled, too, reclining in his litter, the Prince of Persia, fully as self-sufficient as the former. His wealth was untold. The greatest rarity in the world, Zobeid wanted? Very well. He would find it. He would buy it for her, if it cost him the revenues of a thousand cities.

Smiled, finally, sitting in his palanquin, the Prince of the Mongols. But for better, sounder reasons than the other two he spoke to Wong K'ai:

"Many are the traders and merchants and cameleers, who, every day, pass from my country into the land of the Arabs. Many will come during the next seven months. You will remain behind, here in Bagdad, to supervise them, to train them, to give them the signal if the time should come. For the traders who will come here during the next seven months will be the pick of my warriors in disguise. The rarest thing in the world? Aye—I shall search for it! But, should I fail, I shall have yet a rarer thing—force! We shall conquer Badgad regardless of its stout walls! We shall conquer it from the inside—when these peaceful Mongol traders exchange their silken robes for chain armor, their account books for buffalo-hide shields, and their pens and ink for lances and scimitars!"

"Look! Behind you is the secret panel. It helped you to get out. Doubtless it will help you to get in again. Nor—" he laughed—"will you need the Egyptian drug this time. The Princess loves you. She will go with you of her own free will."

"I am not worthy of her!"

"Fool! Fool! Fool!"

But Ahmed did not reply. He walked away, hurt in body and heart; and it is related in the ancient Arabic chronicles that, as he walked, a strange thing happened to him.

"For," says the ancient chronicle, "as the Thief of Bagdad turned into the Square of the One-Eyed Jew, it seemed to him, suddenly, as if a mysterious force came out of the nowhere, with a great whirring of wings, like the wings of his soul, to his own soul, torturing suffering, trying to escape the cage of the dust-created flesh. Steadily this force was urging him on, compellingly, irresistibly, until—he did not know how and why—he found himself in the very mosque where, only a few days earlier, he had defied Allah and the Prophet Mohammed—on Him the Peace! And there the priest—may he walk with the blessed in the Seventh Hall of Paradise!—came up to him and bade him welcome in the name of the Prophet Mohammed—on Him the Peace!"

The priest smiled when he recognized Ahmed.

"You look troubled and grief-stricken," he said gently. "Tell me, little brother. Perhaps I can help you."

"I am searching."

"Searching for what?"

"For the unobtainable!"

"There is nothing unobtainable," said the Holy Man, "if your will be strong and your heart pure."

"My will is strong," replied the Thief of Bagdad, "but my heart is not pure."

"Then you must make it pure."

"How?"

"Through the dust and the grime of suffering and patience! Through the clear water of courage—of honesty—of decent endeavor—of faith in the Lord God!"

"Teach me, O Holy Man!"

"I shall, little brother!"

And then, when Ahmed had told him the full tale of his sins, of his love, and of his despair, the priest took him to the Eastern gate of Bagdad and gave to him a sword.

"Go out on pilgrimage!" he said "Your way to happiness will be long and weary. Patience you will need, and courage. Aye—patience and courage and the greatest faith in the world! Step out upon your path of thorns. At the end of the path—if your heart be cleansed of all sin—you will find a silver chest. This chest contains the greatest magic in the world. Go forth. Find the chest. Earn it. And return!"

Ahmed kissed the priest's hand. Then he took the ring which Zobeid had given to him and, drawing his sword, cut it in two. He placed one half on his finger, giving the other half to the priest.

"Send this to her," he said, "who already has my heart!"

And so the Thief of Bagdad left his native town in search of his own soul.

Specialists Say It Was Not Wine of Ipecac That Caused Death.

KINGSTON, Nov. 26.—(Canadian Press). — The suggestion that an overdose of wine of ipecac caused the death of two girls named Morrison here last week-end is scouted by medical men who are studying the case. They claim that the wine of ipecac could not possibly have caused death. A chemical analysis of the contents of the stomach of both girls is being made, and the coroner is awaiting the report of the chemists before concluding his inquest.

The bodies of the two girls, who became ill at a dance Saturday afternoon, and who died later, lie in state at the home of their parents in Kingston.

MAY EXTEND CIVIC WORK.

Alderman Declares Condition Are the Worst in Thirty Years.

OSHAWA, Nov. 25.—"Conditions in Oshawa have never been as bad in the last thirty years as at the present time," declared John Stacey at last night's meeting of the city council. "Men are barely exisiting, as they work on the city job three days a week; it is not enough to keep body and soul together," Mr. Stacey and Alderman Preston adocated that the working days be increased and that further sewer work be undertaken. The issue was referred to the Board of Works and has every possibility of being recommended at the next meeting, when it will probably result in the working hours being set at eight and the days at five a week.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE.

Is There A Danger Of Imported Goods Capturing Your Domestic Market?

Those who do not trade mark their goods, and those who do trade mark their goods but who have neglected to cultivate the consumer, have particularly good reasons for feeling uneasy.

For example, we know of one Canadian manufacturer who is competing with goods from England, Scotland and Europe. He is placing his excellent line of goods on the domestic market without a mark or name of any kind on them. Even if Canadians preferred to give him their trade, they couldn't identify his goods. Is it any wonder that the competition of imports is worrying him?

We know of another manufacturer who makes a splendid line of unbranded goods—in many cases better than competitive lines imported from Britain, Central and Southern Europe and the Orient. But the imported lines have the prestige with the consumer, simply because the public has never been told of the excellent quality of the domestic line. In fact, we have heard of cases where the domestic line has been sold by clerks under the guise of imported, simply because it was easier to sell it that way. If that manufacturer isn't feeling uneasy, he should be.

We know of other Canadian manufacturers of worthy products, both trade marked and not trade marked, who are suffering unduly from a growing competition of imported goods, because they haven't nationally advertised their own lines to the consumer and therefore have not built up prestige for their products.

Tariff protection is essential, but even with an adequate tariff it would be impossible to prohibit imports of British, American, European and Oriental goods, particularly under conditions that are likely to prevail in the world for years to come.

The best protection that Canadian manufacturers can secure against the competition of imports is to gain and hold the goodwill of the Canadian consumer.

The consumer is the key.

The consumer decides your fate.

If the consumer favors imported goods, you lose.

If your domestic line is preferred, you win.

The quickest, surest, safest and most economical way to gain the goodwill of the consumer is to trade mark or brand your goods and nationally advertise them.

Spread the news all over Canada that you manufacture excellent products. Let everybody know about their good qualities. Show how perfectly your goods meet the requirements of Canadians. Build up prestige for your line. Show that you have faith enough in your product to advertise it and stand behind it. Cultivate the goodwill of the public and prove yourself worthy of their confidence and you will surely gain it, and with it a protection of the strongest and safest kind—the assurance of consumer demand and the continuance of trade.

We would like nothing better than a conference with any Canadian manufacturer who has to meet the competition of imported products. We have no magic to offer him, but we have a sound business proposition to lay before him, provided he makes a worthy product that can be marketed at a reasonable margin of profit.

BRASS BEATEN BY TOOL ROOM

Only Softball Game of Three Scheduled Was a Stubborn Contest.

SCORE WAS 8 TO 5.

The Brass department of the Canadian General Electric Company last evening put up a stubborn battle against the fast Tool Room crew but lost out by 8 runs to 5. The game was fast and snappy all through, but the breaks went against the brass finishers and although they were full of fighting spirit they could not overcome the small lead set up by the tool makers.

"Abby" Rose was on the firing line for the winners and turned in a nice game. He had plenty of speed, and although he was a little wild at times, he managed to keep the Killenbeck gang at bay. His team mates gave him good support, and were always dangerous at bat.

Killenbeck took Stuffy Mahood's former position last night and hurled a nice game for the Brass. He also was a little wild at times but he managed to keep the nine hits registered against him, well scattered

ALL-AMERICANS NO. 1—(FOOTBALL)

ADENOIDS McNUTT: Who agreed with the experts that his alma mater had a terrible team and was downright lucky to lose but seven of its eight games.

IDA CLAIR: Who admitted before going to the game that she knew nothing about football and heroically refrained from asking why a touch down should not count more than a touchback.

RUFUS RUFFER: Quaterback of the 1905 Gilded Avalanche, who sat through three full quarters of the home-coming game this year without once criticizing a play.

COACH GRUMBLE: Who gave vent to the historic utterance, "How can you expect me to win games with the low salaries they pay my boys?"

PROFESSOR SPINACH: Who confessed that stadiums were built to be filled by cash customers and not as monuments to institutions of learning.

WALTER SCAMPUS: Who came right out and said the eleven players he picked on the All-America were just nice boys who wore their dinner jackets beautifully but otherwise were not so hot.

OLD EAGLE EYE PETE: Who turned over a 16-page report on how to beat the Swearing Generals and added a postscript saying "This business of scouting is a lot of weiner schnitzel."

J. PERCIVAL SHOWOFF: Who athough wearing a new $186.50 raccooncoat, declined to down on the field between halves and take part in the snake dance.

ALEXANDER HARDBOILED: Who told his wife he would not go to the game if he had to carry one of those silly looking pennants and who DID NOT GO.

POTSY McBIFF: Who successfully negotiated the purchase of a $3.30 ticket to the Army-Navy game from a ticket speculator for $63, paying for the same with a check, which had no more value than a snow shovel in Miami, Fla.

COL. AMBROSE PUFFINGTON '96: Who said he believed the referee was absolutely right when he called Puffington Jr. back for running out of bounds at the three-yard line with what would have been the winning touchdown.

HIGH SCHOOL HOCKEY.

OSHAWA, Nov. 26.—At a meeting of those interested in High School hockey arrangements were made for the coming season. For the purpose of getting a rink for the school itself a committee consisting of Jack Cornwall, Ed. Henry and Frank Black, were appointed to see the School Board as soon as possible. There was some discussion as to the advisability of making it necessary for every student participating in hockey to have a certain scholasitc standing, but the majority were not in favor of this. The discussion was brought up by a letter from the Rotary Club advocating such a ruling and expressing surprise that such a rule was not at present in force. It is not known at present what the final decision on this matter will be. A delegation consisting of Wilse McKay and Ed. Henry was appointed to accompany Messrs. Feguson, Stewart and Stevenson, to Port Hope, where the annual meeting of the Central Interscholastic League will be held on December 6. High hopes are entertained for a successful season in hockey.

DREAMS

Dreams of wandering through strange places are quite common.

Many pesons will see themselves inspecting old ruins, plodding through a forest or walking aimlessly around in cities.

Such visions bring a warning to beware of easy money schemes in the business world, and a further caution that in moving from your present surroundings will leave you in a locality without friends.

Interpretations.

Petty troubles will come to you if you see yourself quarreling with the janitor.

You will soon be of great assistance to a friend if you see yourself rowing a small boat.

DOWNEYVILLE COUPLE RECEIVED SEND-OFF

Mr. and Mrs. Crowley Presented With Purse By Many Friends.

DOWNEYVILLE, Nov. 25.— On Monday evening a large number of people gathered at the Parish Hall to bid farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Crowley and family and to present them with a purse as a slight token of their sincere and hearty appreciation of Mr. Crowley and family as kind neighbors and friends. The following address was read by Mr. D. M. O'Leary and the purse presented by Mr. Joseph O'Neill.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Crowley and Family: In view of your early departure from our midst, as friends [illegible] we have assembled here desiring to express our deep [illegible] prospective removal from amongst us.

You were always ready to help us in time of need, you sympathized with us in our sorrows and rejoiced with us in our good fortunes.

Before saying good-bye we wish to express our sincere and hearty appreciation of you, as good neighbors and kind friends.

Although you are leaving us, we wish you to remember that you have a warm place in our hearts and will always receive a hearty welcome whenever you come to Downeyville.

We desire that you should carry away pleasant memories of the past, and we trust that in your new home you will find as many warm friends as you leave behind.

We ask you to accept this purse as a token of our appreciation, and with it our most sincere wishes, that God may grant you many blessings and long years of happiness, in your new home.

Signed on behalf of your friends, D. Duffy, W. C. Herlihey, D. M. Costello, John Murray, Jos. O'Neill, D. M. O'Leary.

In reply Mr. Crowley in behalf of himself and family, thanked Messrs. D. Duffy, W. C. Herlihey, D. M. Costello, John Murray, Jos. O'Neill and D. M. O'Leary for their special efforts in connection with their departure from the parish. He also extended a hearty welcome to the people of the parish to his new home in Peterborough whenever any of them were in the city.

Mr. Vincent Crowley, in brief words, expressed his greatfulness to the people of the parish for their kindness shown them this evening.

Rev. Father Galvin expressed his deep regret at the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Crowley and family from his parish, as they were good citizens and always ready and willing to help in any work in which the parish might be engaged and he hoped that in their new home in Peterborough they would be as good citizens as they were in Downeyville and wished that Mr. Crowley and family would return quite often to Downeyville to visit their many friends.

Mr. D. M. Costello also expressed his regret at losing them as they were almost his closest neighbors and were always ready and willing to help at any time when called upon.

Mr. D. M. O'Leary in a few words also expressed his regret at Mr. and Mrs. Crowley and family leaving the parish as they were always kind neighbours and friends and that they might well be taken as an example of good parishioners and friends.

Mrs. L. J. Duffy of Peterborough, [illegible] O'Neill and Mrs. M. Herlihey were hostesses of the even[illegible] a dainty luncheon was served.

The remainder of the evening was spent in dancing, the music being provided by the Lucas Bros., Messrs. Joseph Piggott and Francis Costello, accompanied by Misses Carmelita and Zeta Crowley, Carmelita Morrisey and Pearl Herlihey.

POLICE RAFFLE PRIZES DONATED BY PAWNBROKER

And Donor Also Bought Two Books of Tickets—Proceeds to Cover Theft.

MONTREAL ENQUIRY.

MONTREAL, Nov. 26. — David Stier, one of the many second-hand dealers who testified at the police probe Tuesday afternoon, now proceeding under the presidency of Mr. Justic Coderre, swore than on one occasion he had once given two dollars to Detective Charette, of the city force "to buy a couple of cigars".

He identified the detective in court and stated that his generosity was inspired because the detective had signed his book, allowing him to sell a man back his own property at 75 per cent profit, within 24 hours, instead of waiting the 15 days prescribed by municipal ordinance.

Witness said that the detective had not asked for the "tip", nor had it been arranged before hand that he was to get anything.

Raffle Probed

The matter of the raffle, organized to help Captain Lamont following a theft of $1,900 from his safe at headquarters in February of 1922 took up the most of the time of the investigation. The proceeds of the raffle had amounted to $700 while Chief Belanger had taken up a subscription in the force which had better $600. The balance had been supplied by Lamont, himself. Mr. Justice Coderre commented briefly on the procedure of the raffle. The commissioner thought, if he understood the case aright, that the detective's action was open to censure. J. P. Lanctot, counsel for the petitioners, stated earlier in the proceedings that his information was that the tickets for the raffle had been sold at second-hand dealers, pawnshops, houses of ill-fame, and to gamblers. In this connection he produced a number of second-hand dealers, and S. Rose Vineberg, pawn-broker.

The latter stated that he had given jewelry valued at about $25, to help out, and had the tickets printed. The printer to whom he applies supplying them free, and had bought two book of tickets himself.

Lieutenant Drunk

Constable Robert who had served under Lieut. Trudeau for some years on traffic duty, said he had found it necessary to report the lieutenant to the chief and deputy chief for being drunk. Following that report Trudeau was removed from his position as chief of the traffic squad and was sent to another station. He had thought it better to report Lieut. Trudeau, because he was not fit to takes charge of traffic work in that condition.

Cross-examined, the witness admitted that he had made his report only after Lieut. Trudeau had reported him for absence without permission. When they went before the chief, witness said, Trudeau had been forced to admit that he was mistaken and that he had been under the influence of drink at the time and did not remember clearly. Witness was not aware of any other constable ever having had difficulty with Lieut. Trudeau or reporting him.

Asked who was now in charge of traffic officers, witness said the position had been abolished when Trudeau was removed. This led Mr. Justice Coderre to remark that it would appear that Trudeau was not punished for his offense at all. Mr. Gagon protested against this interpretation, but his lordship insisted that there was no punishment in removing a man from a position which no longer existed.

J. Monnarquette said he had been engaged for the police force last February, but had not been taken on yet. When he made inquiries from members of the force he was told, he said, that some men went to see an alderman, handed over a little money and then they did not have to wait long. He had been to see Ald. Brodeur, he said, to find out why his entry to the force had been delayed and was almost ordered out of the office. The chief had told witness that men who had been engaged later than he was were now working on the force.

Jack Rooney, owner of a club at 412 St. Lawrence boulevard, declared no intoxicating liquor was sold at the place, said he knew Capt. Sauve but had never given him anything. The captain had raided the place when gambling parties were held.

Pawnbroker Testifies

Ross Vineberg, a pawnbroker, gave evidence as to the records kept by pawnbrokers, and produced his books for thes past two years. He declared that the detectives did not bother about the names of the parties who had pawned articles because there was no verification of the names.

Lieut. Lamont, former captain of detectives, in charge of the squad which visited pawnshops, said the work had been confined to taking an accurate description of goods as a means of checking up on stolen articles. They did not bother with names and addresses because they were always fakes.

"Do you remember losing $1,900 in the detective office?" witness was then asked. "It was stolen," he replied. He did not know how. The money, which was an exhibit in a court case, had been stolen from a safe in his office in February, 1922 when he was treasurer of the police benevolent association. The doors of his office were forced, his desk broken into and the duplicate keys of the innermost door of the safe taken.

"How was this money reimbursed?" "By subscriptions from the police department totalling some $600, a further $700 taken from the proceeds of a raffle for the Model Athletic Association, and the balance I paid myself. They had got $2,400 out of the office safe in six weeks. It was the pension money they were after, not the money they got."

Pressed by counsel, witness emphatically denied that he knew anything of a raffle of a watch, a ring and a pin at Ross Vineberg's.

"What was the Model Athletic Association?" "It was nothing at all.

"What do you mean?" "It was a fictitious name—it never existed. We had to have some sort of a name to have a drawing, and some friends of mine of the outside organized the thing, headed by a man since dead, Detective Tierney. I was responsible for that money, and some of my friends who wanted to help me out started arrangements to have a tombola."

Lieutenant Lamont stated that he did not know who had donated the prizes. Mr. Lanctot suggested that it had been Vineberg, but witness still insisted that he knew nothing of it. Witness added that the $700 realized had been paid in at various times by persons who had had books for sale. "Most of the detective department had one or two books apiece," he added.

The drawing had been, he believed, for six or seven articles, but personally he had been at St. Anne de Beaupre at the time. All the detectives had sold tickets, but witness did not know who had won the prizes at the drawing.

"Do you know that they were all won by detectives?" "No."

Doesn't Know Who Won

"Do you know who won the watch and the pin and the ring?" "No, I don't know anything about it."

"It seems that every detective in the office had a book of tickets. Do you know that all the second-hand dealers had to buy them and all the houses' and all the gamblers?" "No," He added that he believed that the matter had been run by George Lumm of the Forum Garage Ross Vineberg and Detective Tierney, who was the organizer.

"And you do not know that the books were sold to the gamblers?" "I know nothing about gamblers. I don't gamble."

"And to the houses?" "I don't know, I never go to those houses."

Mr. Lanctot suggested that witness was interested in getting the money without knowing how it was raised and Lieutenant Lamont answered that all he was interested in was in finding out who had stolen it from him.

Bought a Car

Witness said he had bought a sedan car last November for $775 from a woman who had won it at the St. Gabriel's Church tombola. It was the first car he had ever had.

Witness was then instructed to bring to the probe his wife's bank-book, the receipt for the car and the bank book for his affairs from January 1918 to date. Witness replied that he would do so and added that he could show his bank books since the day he was married.

Mr. Lanctot: "Oh, we do not need that."

Witness: "Well, that was when it started." (Laughter).

Further questioned by counsel Lieut. Lamont stated that he had been on the police force for eighteen years and two months. He himself had reimbursed the money stolen right away.

Mr. Lanctot said that he was not asking for information because he suspected the witness. "Our information is that a drawing was held for a watch, pin, ring, pair of cuff links and other things and that these were stolen articles," said Mr. Lanctot. "We are also told that the tickets were sold to all the second-hand stores, gamblers and "houses" and that the prizes were all won by detectives." Witness professed his complete ignorance of the matter generally.

Mr. Lanctot: "Do you know that Detective Brooks won the watch?" "No."

Gave all the Prizes

Vineberg, recalled, stated that he knew of the raffle referred to. "I gave all the prizes myself out of my own stock," he added. "I gave a watch, chain, cuff links, and tie pin." He said they were worth about $25 in all and counsel then wanted to know what witness had paid for them. Witness replied that it would be difficult for him to look through some thirty-five thousand entries in his books for each of the articles mentioned. They had been unredeemed pledges.

Witness stated that Police Capt. Carle had come to him about a raffle and that he had offered to put up the prizes. He might also have bought two books.

LIMITS CHRISTMAS CAROLS.

English Town Bans Children Singing to Gain Shopping Money.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—The old English custom of carol singing at Christmas time has been placed under regulation in the town of Hythe, where the Kent County police have ordered that children may not sing carols before Dec. 18.

In the past, according to the Mayor of Hythe, thrifty youngsters have made themselves nuisances by starting the Christmas carol season late in November, with the idea of collecting pennies for their Christmas shopping.

Investigation of several cases showed that many children made as much as 27 shillings a week by thier singing.

WOMEN SWUNG HASTINGS VOTE DECLARES G. N. GORDON TO-DAY

Election Was Great Triumph For Independent Thinking Part of Electorate.

LOCAL HELPERS.

J. H. Burnham Says Turnover Shows Orange Disapproval of Meighen's Policy.

G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., Deputy Speaker of the House of Commons, was asked by The Examiner this morning what he thought of the West Hastings situation after spending three weeks in the riding in the interests of Charles Hanna, the ... -elect.

Mr. Gordon said that the election was a great triumph for the independent thinking part of the electorate, and particularly the women.

Mr. Porter's majority was 1,171 at the last election, and he carried the riding usually by one thousand to fifteen hundred majority; but people had come to the conclusion, Mr. Gordon said, that it was time for a change, with the result that Charles Hanna, Liberal candidate, was yesterday elected by a majority of 495, according to the last report.

Mr. Gordon said that Miss Luella Jobbitt, of Peterborough, who was organizing in Belleville for Mr. Hanna, did splendid work, and was responsible, to a large extent, for the tremendous majority piled up in Belleville.

Peterborough furnished a dozen cars, with drivers, to assist Mr. Hanna, and the organization generally was most complete on the part of Mr. Hanna's friends.

The success of the Liberal candidate is accentuated by the fact that this is only the second time since Confederation that this riding has not supported a Conservative member.

Congratulations.

Congratulations by telegraph continued to flood into Mr. Gordon's office this morning, and the telephone was continuously busy with scores calling to compliment him upon the victory.

Premier W. L. Mackenzie King sent the following telegram: "The members of the Cabinet join with me in hearty congratulations to you upon the victory achieved in West Hastings. We all deeply appreciate the splendid part you have played in bringing about this result."

Others whose felicitations arrived during the interview were Paul Mercier, member for Westmount St. Henri, Montreal; Pierre J. Casgrain, member for Charlevoix Montmorency, Westmount, and John Younge.

Mr. Gordon, in the absence of the Prime Minister, was left in charge of the election.

Conservative Comment.

J. H. Burnham, when asked by The Examiner for his impressions of West Hastings, said that: "From what I have heard, the big surprise is due to the fact that West Hastings is largely Orange and no Orangeman will stand for Mr. Meighen's alliance with that arch-traitor Lavergne."

W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., was absent from the city to-day, and could not be reached to obtain an opinion.

FROM OTTAWA.

OTTAWA, Nov. 26.—(Canadian Press).—Jubilation over the West Hastings result has not lessened today among Government supporters. The result is hailed as the most striking victory won by the Liberal forces. Unless there are further vacancies in the interval, the Government will now meet Parliament with 118 members, including the Speaker, against 117 for all Opposition parties.

"Charges made against me in the House of Commons on May 22 last, and later developments in connection therewith, also the by-election just held in West Hastings, was believed to be in May last, and is now proved to have been directly the result of an attempt at personal vindictive retaliation by the leader of the Opposition," declares Hon. James Murdock, Minister of Labor, in a written statement handed out this morning. Mr. Murdock claims that the charges made against him on the floor of the Commons resulted from differences between him and the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen when the Labor estimates were before the House last May. When the debate between the two became acrimonious, Mr. Murdock claims that Mr. Porter brought charges against him at the request of Mr. Meighen, declaring that in recent campaign speeches the leader of the Opposition had stated this to be the case.

A DOUBLE TRAGEDY.

Two Young Girls Found Dead In Shack at Fosterville, N.B.

HOULTON, Maine, Nov. 26.—(Canadian Press).—Cynthia and Neotia Foster, sisters, 14 and 10 years old were found dead last night in a shack occupied by Harry Williams in town of Fosterville, N.B., 18 miles from this town, according to a report made to the police here today. Williams, who was arrested after an all night search is being held by the towns people pending the arrival of a sheriff from Fredericton.

MANY BUILDINGS ARE CONDEMNED BY FIRE CHIEF

Supported In His Orders By Executive From Fire Marshal's Office.

MUST BE RAZED.

Citizens Complained of Chief Gimblet's Demands—Chief Is Upheld.

That five prevention rather than fire extinguishing is now the principal office of municipal fire de-partments is indicated by the presence in the city of Captain J. E. Ritchie, B.A. Sc., Fire Prevention Engineer of the Fire Marshal's Office, who is collaborating with Fire Chief George Gimblett in the removal of fire hazards.

In an interview this morning in which he outlined the scope of his work, Captain Ritchie commented on the excellent work done by the Peterborough Chief towards prevention of fire. In the course of this remedial work he had encountered a citizen or two who questioned his authority and thought his orders too drastic. These disgruntled persons wrote to the Provincial Fire Marshal complaining of the Chief's orders, and as a result the Fire Marshal sent Captain Ritchie to investigate and to give Chief Gimblett what assistance he could in other lines.

"When I arrived on Monday and looked things over," Captain Ritchie continued, "I found that the Chief had been very reasonable in his demands—more lenient, in fact, than we in the Fire Marshal's Office are inclined to be."

As a matter of fact, Captain Ritchie said, all of Chief Gimblett's orders had been confirmed and re-issued by him; others that the Chief had spared had received orders to remove hazards; and in many cases the orders already issued by Chief Gimblett were made more stringent. Instead of being relieved through their appeals against the Fire Chief's orders, many persons lost ground.

To clear up any misunderstanding that may exist as to Fire Chief Gimblett's authority in issuing orders dealing with fire prevention, Captain Ritchie pointed out that the Chief is an Assistant Fire Marshall, so constituted by the Fire Marshal's Act, and his orders must be obeyed under heavy penalty, subject to appeal to the Fire Marshal.

Tear Down Buildings.

Since his arrival, Captain Ritchie had inspected scores of buildings considered hazardous and had ordered twelve or fifteen to be torn down. Other cases had been met where the owners were quite willing to comply with the suggestion without being served with an official order. Still other buildings have been spared this time that will be condemned later by the Fire Chief or by a representative of the Fire Marshal's department. At this time, only the worst have been condemned in an effort to clear the most densely populated and heavily built locations of the hazard attending all old buildings.

City is Defective.

Commenting on conditions in general in the city pertaining to fire fighting prevention, Captain Ritchie remarked in the deficiency in by-laws governing fire control. Peterborough has practically none, he said. Gasoline and oil are so widely used and so heavy stocks are carried in so many parts of a modern city that practically every municipality has its regulations governing their use and storage, but there are none in this city.

Steps are being taken to remedy this, and a start has been made on the compilation of a by-law. A meeting with a special committee took place yesterday to commence the framing of the new measure, which will be brought before the City Council by Fire Chief Gimblett and the Building Inspector.

Need More Equipment.

Repeating almost word for word the warning issued by the leaders of the Association at the recent convention of the Fire Fighters of Ontario, Captain Ritchie advised the addition of a triple combination pumper to the equipment of the department. He remarked upon the long runs from the fire hall to some of the most important and hazardous industries, and said that in his opinion the addition of another piece of equipment to the force is almost indispensible.

The Peterborough Fire Department is remarkably well disciplined and handled by Chief Gimblett, Captain Ritchie said, and this guarantees efficiency. The Chief is doing pioneer prevention work in the city, and this is looked upon by the Fire Marshal as one of the principal duties of an up-to-date department. It is just as important to have a system of inspection and education that will result in five prevention as it is to have an efficient, highly trained, fire fighting force. All big fires start small, and the great principle is to prevent the first spark.

A.Y.P.A. MEETING.

The A.Y.P.A. of St. George's Church held their meeting on Monday night, the topic of the evening being a "Literary Night, the subject being my favorite author and why. The speakers for the evening were: Miss E. Parks, author Jean Stratton Porter; Mr. J. Lesiuf, author, Chas. Dickens; Mr. J. Dorsett, author, Nicholas Nickleby; Mr. F. Darrel, author, Zane Grey.

The evening was closed with prayer.

PETERBORO PROFITS BY EGG GRADING

Visitors at the Kiwanis Fair are finding both instruction and interest at the Canadian Packing Co.'s section, where an expert candler demonstrates in a practical manner, the process of candling eggs and government grading. By means of a powerful light the interior of eggs are made visible to the naked eye, and their quality revealed beyond question. This permits of grading them into the classes to which they properly belong, that consumers may get exactly the quality they pay for.

This expert's demonstration and lucid explanation of just what graded "firsts," "extras," and different undergrade selections mean, is proving a timely and highly appreciated revelation to visitors at the Fair.

He demonstrates that—

Government grading not only assures consumers of good quality eggs, either Firsts or Extras, but protects them against buying eggs which may be edible but of inferior size and quality, and others strictly unfit for consumption.

That the Canadian Packing Co.'s Lift Lock eggs assure one of government graded "Firsts."

Lift Lock eggs are put up in a convenient package for the house-wife to handle and carry. If the seal is unbroken, that is a C.P.C. guarantee that consumers are getting just what they expect they are buying, namely, "Firsts".

That the C.P.C.'s Rose Brand Eggs assure one of receiving government graded "Extras" and, as in the case of the Lift Locks, the unbroken seal is their guarantee.

Eggs have reached a value to-day which compels consideration of their quality, and the Canadian Packing Co.'s guarantee back of their Lift Lock and Rose Brand carton eggs should stimulate their purchase by the housewives of Peterboro, who are shrewd and careful in their buying, and are desirous of securing the protection which government grading and sealed cartons afford.

Eggs in sealed cartons are offered by Canadian Packing Co., Ltd., for the buyer who is tired of the extravagance of buying undergrades and paying top market price for them.

WOLVES MENACE DEER IN NORTH

ATTACK CATTLE, TOO.

Wolves are menacing the deer on north-country runs to such an extent that drastic measures may be necessary to combat the danger of game extinction, declares Chris. G. Graham, president of the Fish and Game Association of Peterboro. Many hunters have reported cases of deer being pulled down and eaten by the maurauders, while others have shot deer that bore marks of wolf teeth.

Mr. Graham suggests that possibly the best way to exterminate the pests would be to organize a party of a hundred or more local hunters to conduct a drive in which the packs could be fairly well decimated. As many as eight wolves have been seen hunting together very close to the boundary of civilization, and one hunter succeeded in killing two of such a pack.

In Mr. Graham's opinion, the reduction of the bounty from $40 to $15 had a lot to do with the increased numbers of prowling wolves, it not being worth while for men to go on wolf-hunting expeditions.

The wolves are also attacking domestic cattle in the vicinity of Apsley, and their presence on the outskirts of civilization, and in cases even within its bounds, forms a real menace that should be energetically met. The matter may be taken up by the Fish and Game Association, Mr. Graham suggested, but in the meantime any suggestions would be welcomed.

BYNG IN COBOURG.

Address of Welcome Presented to the Distinguished Visitor.

COBOURG, Nov. 26. — Lord Byng, accompanied by Lady Byng and his party, arrived in Cobourg yesterday afternoon at 2 p.m., and were met at the station by Mayor Boggs and the members of the town council.

From the station the Vice-Regal party procedeed to the Public schools, where the school children sang "Rule Britannia" and "O, Canada." His Excellency then addressed the children and then proceeded to the Town Hall, where an address of welcome was presented to the Governor-General by Mayor Boggs.

At 3 p.m. the party proceeded to Victoria Park, where Lord Byng placed a wreath at the foot of the Memorial Cross and then proceeded to the Cobourg General Hospital, where he presented diplomas to the gradutaing nurses and also inspected the Hospital.

THEATRES

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS IN "THE THIEF OF BAGDAD"

Douglas Fairbanks' screen sensation, "The Thief of Bagdad," will be the attraction at the Grand, December 1, 2 and 3. It has been said by the critics in every city where this picture has been shown, that happenings so extraordinary, so amazing, the thought of picturing them had not heretofore been listed among the possibilities. According to all accounts nothing like it has ever been attempted; nothing like it has ever been seen; nothing like it has ever before been accomplished. Some of the outstanding features of this highly romantic story, out of the Arabian Nights, are: The Magic Carpet of Bagdad by the use of which the Thief and the Princess fly over house-tops and away into the land of Romance; The Winged Horse, mounted on which the Thief flies up to and through the clouds; The Cloak of Invisibility which, with weird effect, shield the Thief from human sight; The Flight of a Thousand Steps leading to the Citadel of the Moon, The Spider many times bigger than a man, The Living Dragon of gigantic size, The Cavern of Enchanted Trees, the Wondrous Idol so great in size that a man can stand upon its chin and barely reach its lips, The Crystal Realm far beneath the floor of the sea, where beautiful sirens abide; The Valley of Fire, The Mountain of Dread Adventure, The Sea of Midnight, scores of other features that render this glorious fantasy of ancient Bagdad the most enthralling spectacle ever brought to the screen.

The more important members of the cast are Julanne Johnston, formerly a member of the famous Morgan Dancers, who impersonates the Princess; So-Jin Kamayama, imported from Japan where he has been the leading Shakespearean actor, who impersonates the Mongol Prince. Anna May Wong, a charming little Chinese flapper, is seen in the part of the slave. Snitz Edwards is the Thief's evil associate; Brandon Hurst, is the Caliph.

AT THE CAPITOL.

THE SEA HAWK DRAWS CAPACITY CROWDS TO CAPITOL.

Now on the second day of its run in Peterboro, "The Sea Hawk," continues to draw capacity houses at the Capitol theatre. The remarkable story, with its vivid romance, its fire of vengeance, delicate love theme and perfect acting, not to mention the grandeur of the sets, prove that it is the big picture of 1924. Thousands have become familiar with Rafael Sabatini's celebrated story of the same name—which ran for some weeks, serially, in "The Examiner" Milton Sills in the title roll, is the celebrated character of Sabatini's novel brought realistic-aaly to life. Sills has long been popular as a screen star, but his characterization of The Sea Hawk has placed him in the cinema hall of fame. Wallace Beery, Enid Beinett, Marc MacDermott and Lloyd Hughes have the supporting roles. Among the big scenes are those containing the sea battle between the galleys, the slave market at Algiers, and the raid on the English coast by the Corsairs and the sacrifice made by the Sea Hawk, that his men might escape the English fleet.

RUDOLPH VALENTINO COMING AT CAPITOL NEXT WEEK

After an absence of almost two years Rudolph Valentino will return to the Capitol screen next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, in his latest production, "Monsieur Beaucaire." This is adapted from Booth Tarkington's novel and play of the same name. Despite the fact that admission prices ranged up to $1.00 at the Regent theatre Toronto, where the picture had a run of four weeks, the Capital will offer Monsieur Beaucaire at their usual admission prices. Valentino is more attractive than ever in this romance which gives full play to his magnetic personality.

Back again! Yep! Hurricane Harold comes back in his newest and greater gale of laughter — "Hot Water." Harold Lloyd is known as the screen's cleverest comedian and "Hot Water" adds many additional laurels to the laugh-makers reputation. "Hot Water" will be shown at the Capitol, at usual prices, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week.

AT THE ROYAL.

Mae Murray is delightful as a care-free daughter of Mexico who later is forced to meet the stern actualities caused by a bandit-suitor-villian. Monte Blue, comes to the rescue and everybody is happy. This colorful, peppy, romance closes its local engagement tonight.

Benny Leonard in the first of a new series of the prize ring "Flying Fists," from all indications will be as popular as the Leather Pushers.

WES' BARRY IN SCREEN VERSION OF COHAN PLAY.

"George Washington, Jr." His Latest Starring Vehicle.

A new Wesley Barry feature is scheduled at the Royal Theatre tomorrow. It is called "George Washington Jr." and is adapted from the famous George M. Cohan stage comedy, which made such a tremendous hit in New York City. Wesley plays the title role, the same one that George M. Cohan played on the stage. This is a distinctly new characterization for him; he graduates, as it were, from "kid" roles into the young society man.

"George Washington, Jr.," is a rapidly moving comedy-drama of society life in the highest political circles of our capital. Its brilliant parties, the lavishly dressed women, the polished senators, foreign diplomats and noblemen give enough promise of a highly spiced interesting picture.

But in addition to all this there is Wesley Barry the inimitable young actor, who never fails to win his way into your heart before the picture fades off the screen.

The story deals with the long drawn out feud between Senators Belgrave and Hopkins, political enemies for many years and always opposing each other on principle. Senator Belgrave's son is George, who has styled himself "George Washington, Jr." because he follows to the letter the traditional truthfulness of our first president. George returns from prep school and spends his time studying the life and letters of his hero. He firmly decides to devote his life in carrying out the maxims and ideals of the father of our country.

His flair for telling the truth makes him leave his father's home, Junior refusing to stay in the same house with a person who prevaricates. He gets a job as taxi driver, and is able to foil a plot by which a fake count hopes to extract a secret treaty in the possession of his father. The count plots for the paper by becoming affianced to the senator's niece. The complications are interspersed with good clean comedy.

Wesley arry is ably supported by a well known cast that includes Gertrude Olmstead, Edward Phillips, William Courtwright, Leon Bary Charles Conklin and Otis Harlan. Driection was under Mal St. Clair.

AT THE REGENT.

SPARKLING COMEDY .. IN NEW FOX FILM

Have you ever had heebie jeebies; are you liable to an attack of them; what would you do if you caught 'em; would you know if you had 'em? You think it's a joke, don't you? Well, just try to find out what heebie jeebies are, and you'll discover it's a pretty serious business.

A girl suffering —if it can be called suffering —from a bad case of heebie jeebies can be seen in "The Great Diamond Mystery," Shirley Mason's new William Fox mystery drama, running at the Regent Theatre. The ailment makes her act in a very laughable manner. She shivers, uses slang and wishes for a sweetheart — all because of the heebie jeebie. The girl is Miss Jackie Saunders, and she has a very good comedy part in "The Great Diamond Mystery," which, by the way, is an entertaining a film as one finds these evenings.

The picture is quite different from the usual kind of Shirley Mason production. The little star herself enacts the role of a young writer who has just completed a mystery story based on a theory in criminology that a murderer always returns to the scene of his murder. A tragic incident occurs which gives the young author a chance not only to prove her theory but to save her sweetheart from the death-chair at the same time.

"The Great Diamond Mystery" is good entertainment, thanks to Denison Clift, director, Shannon Fife, who wrote the story, Thomas Dixon, Jr., scenario writer, and a remarkably fine cast. Supporting players include Hardee Kirtland, Jackie Saunders, Harry von Meter, Hector V. Sarno, Willie Collier, Jr., Philo McCullough and Eugenia Gilbert.

Vice-Presidents Mrs. J. F. Morrison and Mrs. W. Watt poured tea, and assistants were Mesdames K. Denoon, H. Anderson, Clifford, Norman Henry. Mrs. Roy Lang and Mrs. Jno. Anderson also assisted with refreshments. Mrs. Andrew Mackenzie had charge of a pleasant programme, which included vocal solos by Mrs. L. Spriggs and Miss Greta Clark, readings by Miss Irene Breckenridge and instrumental selections by Mr. Charles Peaker. A phonograph was also in use, kindly loaned by the Heintzman Company.

EGYPT ASSURES AN AGREEMENT

Situation In Cairo Was Quiet To-day—Order Was Observed Everywhere.

ENTER PROTEST.

CAIRO, Nov. 26.—(United Press)—Ziwar Pasha new premier of Egypt promised today to reach an agreement with England and protect foreigners. The situation in Cairo was quiet and the complete order was observed everyhere. The adjournment of the Egyptian Parliament was for the purpose of giving Ziwar Pasha an opportunity to work out a program and Lord Allenby, the British High Commissioner, has indicated he is disposed to give the new premier time in which to comply with unfilled demands in the recent ultimatum.

"Our task is most difficult," Ziwar Pasha said after a cabinet meeting," but we have decided to sacrifice our tranquility in the service of our king and country."

"We hope, with the help of King Fuad, who is the guardian of the constitution, to find a remedy for the situation and to save what may be saved and restore calm."

"We lost much recently but we hope to reach an agreement with England regarding the Nile.

"Foreigners have nothing to fear. They will be protected The Government is resolved to maintain order. We are sufficiently strong to do so and will do our duty."

Protest to League.

The secretariat of the League of Nations at Geneva, today received a wrotest from Egypt regarding that country's difficulties with England arising out of the latters demands following the assassination of Sir Lee Stack.

The protest will be communicated immediately to all nations which are members of the league.

OBITUARY.

MARGARET MILLIKEN.

The death occurred in New York on Tuesday November 25th, of Margaret, eldest daughter of the late Joseph Milliken of this city.

The funeral will be held on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence of her brother, Mr. Fred Milliken, 253 Burnham street, and will then proceed to the Little Lake Cemetery for interment.

Rev. Mr. Bousfield will officiate.

MRS. MARY YOUNG

Miss Maud Young of Toronto, formerly of Peterboro, has received word of the death in Twickerham, Middlesex, England, of her mother, Mrs. Mary Young, who has passed away in her seventy-fifth year after a lingering illness. The deceased left to mourn her loss, two sons, Thomas in Australia and James in Peterboro, and five daughters Emma, Martha and Edith in England, Annie in Australia and Maud now of Toronto.

Mr. Wm. Gatfield of Peterboro, was a nephew of the deceased and other surviving relatives are seven grandchildren.

Her death was the breaking of a second link in a family chain of fourteen children, all of whom passed the half century mark.

Mrs. Young came to Peterboro in 1913 with her daughter and while here was a member of All Saints' Church. She returned to England in 1915.

The funeral took place from All Saints' Twickenham on Friday, November 14th.

A lovely evening wrap is made of deep rose coolred velvet embroidered in silver and lined with cloth of silver.

AFFAIRS IN EGYPT ARE MUCH BETTER

LONDON, Nov. 26.—(Canadian Press). — Field Marshal Allenby, British High Commissioner in Egypt, informed the British Government to-day that the situation in Egypt was much easier as a result of respite since the resignation of the Zaghloul Cabinet. The possibility of riots in Cairo and other centres, he said, was greatly reduced. It was said Lord Allenby believes Ziwar Pasha will accept the remaining British demands or open direct negotiations with Great Britain for the settlement of the differences existing. The evacuation of the Sudan is being continued by units of the Egyptian Army.

Official despatches assert that the population seems to have become reconciled to a new state of affairs, and it is believed in Government quarters that if the Ziwar Cabinet accepts the demands they will be tolerated by even the Extremists, at least for the present. While the movement of troops towards Egypt is temporarily suspended, troops actually within the Egyptian boundaries are constantly moving towards and about concentration points at Alexandria and Cairo. Troops are being marched through Cairo daily as a deterrent to the would-be rioters. The strike of students and that of some of the public employees who strongly sympathize with Zaghloul Pasha are continuing, but it is stated they will probably be suppressed by the new Cabinet. In a despatch to a Paris correspondent of Le Matin, it states that the measures taken by Britain "are evidently not called forth by the murder of the Sirdar." He declares they would have been necessary at an early date in any case, as for the past three weeks Zaghloul Pasha, though himself animated by the wisest intentions, was completely overpowered by elements of disorder; manifestations, he says, were no longer expressions of popular sentiment but were systematically organized by a party whose excesses, government, or at least certain of its members dared not repress.

LATE MRS. M. JOBE OF PIONEER FAMILY

Her Grandfather Was Rev. George Smith, First Pioneer Missionary.

OWEN SOUND, Nov. 26.— The funeral of the late Mrs. Margaret Jane Jobe took place from the residence of her son, Wesley Jobe, Sarnwak, on Thursday, November 13th, at 12.30 to Duxbury cemetery, St. Vincent.

Although not enjoying the best of health for some time past, her death came as a great shock to her family, where the loss of a loving mother and grandmother is keenly felt.

Mrs Jobe was a grand-daughter of the first pioneer missionary, Rev. Geo. Smith, whose descendants settled on the place, afterward called Mount Pleasant, on the Irish Mountain, St. Vincent. Rev. Mr. Smith's daughter, Miss Eleanor Smith, was the first school teacher in that district and later married the now deceased Adam Long, a pioneer settler in that part.

The late Mrs. Jobe, who was born in the year 1848, was the eldest of a large family born of that union, and from her early childhood was a staunch member of the Methodist church. The church services of the early days were conducted for many years in her father's house, until Mount Pleasant church was erected.

Almost fifty years ago she was united in marriage to John Jobe, of Euphrasia, who predeceased her six years ago. She leaves to mourn her loss, one son, Wesley, and two stepsons, George of Meaford, and Andrew of Bridgenorth, a daughter, Mrs. Eleanor Jones, having died a few years ago in Vancouver. She also leaves two brothers and four sisters.

The service at the home was conducted by the Rev. M. S. Elliott, of the Union Church, Owen Sound North, who spoke very fittingly of the true Christian life the deceased had always led. Rev. Mr. Elliott was assisted by Rev. John Rodgers, a brother-in-law of the deceased, who also conducted the service at Duxbury cemetery, her father having chosen that site for this burying ground, and her grandfather, Martin Long, being the first person interred there. Since that time many of her friends have also been laid to rest in the same cemetery.

WILL BE DELEGATE.

Knox Church Minister Will Go to Washington.

Rev. M. C. Mackinnon of Knox Church, this city, has been selected as one of the fifteen Canadian ministers who are to represent the Presbyterian clergy of Canada at the great international Foreign Missions Convention, D.C., Jan 28th to Feb. 2nd 1925. Missionary leaders consider that this convention will outrank in importance any gathering ever held in North America.

Speakers from all parts of the world will address the gatherings. Among them will be President Coolidge, Secretary of State Hughes, Premier King, Sir Robert Cecil, John R. Mott, Robert Speer, Dr. Zuemer, and other Missionary Statesmen.

TRIAL OF J. F. M. STEWART

Case of Home Bank Director Will Be Concluded To-day.

TORONTO, Nov. 26.—(Canadian Press).—The trial of J. F. M. Stewart, director of the defunct Home Bank, on charges of making, using, approving and concurring in false statements of financial affairs of the bank will be concluded this afternoon. D. L. McCarthy Crown prosecutor finished his address to Judge Coatsworth this morning and I. F. Hellmuth defence counsel, got well started. Mr. Hellmuth declared that Stewart had been deliberately and successfully deceived as to the condition of the bank and that no one of the big loans made by Daly or Board of Directors for approval or disapproval Mr. McCarthy contended that Stewart must have been in a position to have known much of what was going on and that wrecked the bank, if he didn't know it was his duty as director to have known.

36TH ANNIVERSARY BANQUET OF A.O.F.

Foresters Met at W. O. W. Hall Last Evening—Mayor Turner Present.

The 36th anniversary banquet of the A. O. F. was held Tuesday evening in the W.O.W. Hall. A good number of members and friends sat down and enjoyed the supper catered in fine style by T. Hooper and Son. The evening was devoted to an excellent programme, under the chairmanship of Chief Ranger Bro. S Whittaker. The toast, "The King," was taken in hearty style by the singing of the National Anthem, after which the chairman welcomed His Worship the Mayor, Bro. Snell, District Chief Ranger of Port Hope; Dr. D. C. King, and other visitors who were present. The toast to the City of Peterboro, proposed by Bro. G. Tremain, was responded to by His Worship the Mayor, who was enthusiastically received. The Mayor spoke on different phases of the city administration, and jocularly remarked how easy it is for a city official to be, "the best man there is," one day, and within a short time, owing to something he said or done not meeting with the approval of the individual, to be "no good at all." The Mayor closed his remarks by expressing his firm approval of fraternalism. "A man who takes an interest in his court must necessarily be a good citizen." Bro. B. Fletcher then rendered a solo in fine style. The toast to the "A. O. F." was proposed by Bro. F. Snell, D.C.R., of Port Hope, and responded to by Bro. T. Hendry, P.D.C.R., who spoke on the advantages of the Order. Bro. J. C. Hamilton gave the toast to the "Companions and Ladies," which was responded to by Mrs. Stevens. Following which was a reading by Comp. Wiggins and a vocal solo by Miss Ballantyne. The toast, "Our Juveniles" was proposed by Juvenile C. R. Bro. A. Bacon, and responded to by Bro. Ward of the Juvenile Branch, in a very able manner, and by Miss Martin for the Juvenile Girls. The toast to "Court Stanley" was proposed by Bro. S. J. Mason, and responded to by Bro. A. Day, who spoke on the different branches of the Order. Bro. A. Pink, in his usual style, contributed a song, after which Bro. E. Parks proposed the toast to the "Medical Profession," to which Dr. D. C. King responded, and spoke of the early hardships of the medical profession in travelling, and on the great advancement made since. The toast, "Our Departed Brethren," was proposed by Bro. G. Mathews, and was taken in silence with bowed heads, after which Bros. Pink and P. Naish sang a duet. Community singing was heartily enjoyed. Before closing the chairman, on behalf of the committee, extended thanks to all who had helped in making the affair so successful. The evening closed with the singing of God Save the King.

WINE OF COLCHICUM NOT IPECAC DEATH POTION OF TWO SISTERS

Doctors' Report Shows Kingston Girls Drank Deadly Alkaloid Mistaking it for Port Wine—Bottle in Father's Surgery Twenty Years and Label Had Fallen Off.

DOUBLE FUNERAL THIS MORNING

KINGSTON, Ont., Nov. 27.—The following statement in connection with the deaths of Miss Mary and Miss Margaret Morrison, daughters of Dr. and Mrs. Charles A. Morrison, was given out yesteday afternoon:

"It was at first thought that the deceased Morrison girls had drunk wine of ipecac from an unlabeled bottle in their father's dispensary. Further chemical analysis of the small residue in the bottle from which the girls had partaken revealed the fact that the wine was wine of colchicum. This was confirmed by the chemical analysis of another bottle, identical in appearance and contents, found on the same shelf and also unlabeled. The reason the bottles were unlabeled was because they were purchased approximately 20 years ago and in the intervening time the labels had dropped off. The active principle of wine of colchicum is colchicin and the wine (port) contains 20 per cent. by volume of this deadly alkaloid. The therapeutic dose used in gout and rheumatism is 5 to 30 drops and it is estimated that the girls took about a wine glass each. This would represent about 32 times the maximum dose. Symptoms of poisoning by this drug are delayed but once appearing no amount of medical treatment can control them. (Signed) Wm. Gibson, M.D.; W. T. Connel, M.D.; Arthur Neish, PhD, chemist; A. P. Lothrop Ph.D., chemist."

Smuggled Bottle Upstairs

The two girls were in the usual effervescent spirits of youth on Saturday expecting a pleasant week end with their girl friend, Isobel MacDonald. It had been planned that they go to the Royal Military College Saturday afternoon dance, and other activities for Saturday evening were in the offing. Quite unknown to the older sister, the younger girl with a thought of adding to the festivities of the occasion, had smuggled what she took to be an eight ounce bottle of port wine from her fathers' surgery to the clothes closet of her bedroom on the floor above. This was early on Friday.

Next day Miss MacDonald duly arrived shortly after two o'clock. Immediately a celebration followed, with no other stimulant than the vaulting spirit of youth. Mrs. Morrison heard the three girls talking and laughing. They conducted themselves in exactly the same way as girls all over Canada do upon reunion of friends, and the prospect of a lively time. In addition to the presence of Miss MacDonald Mary Morrison's fiancee was in Kingston to escort her to the dance.

A little after three o'clock the three girls went to the washroom together, and behind her back down the hall from the bedroom to the washroom Margaret carried the bottle of what she thought to be port wine, but which, all too late, was discovered to be a 20-year-old bottle of wine of which had been kept for years unused upon the shelf of Dr. Morrison's surgery.

In the washroom Margaret produced the bottle and dared the others to drink the "port wine" as a propitious beginning to the afternoon and evening of fun. The proposal, after a slight demur, was accepted by the other girls.

Drained the Bottle.

The bottle was practically full when the girls entered the bathroom. Margaret took the first drink from the bottle. Later she stated that it was the first alcoholic drink she had ever had. Certainly she was not used to port or sherry, or she would have realized that she was drinking wine heavily medicated. She took a good sized drink. Then she handed the bottle to her sister, who likewise took a drink, she in turn passing to Miss MacDonald, who found the wine unpalatable and after taking one drink spat out as much of the liquid as possible. Margaret then took the bottle again in which there were still several ounces of wine, and drained the bottle until only a few drops were left.

Complained of Illness.

After the bottle had been emptied, Mary Morrison and Isobel MacDonald walked to a store on Princess street, a few blocks away. They were gone about three-quarters of an hour and when they came back Margaret was lying on a bed complaining of illness. The two girls cheered her and persuaded her to get ready and a little after four oclock they set out for the dance.

Before the first dance was completed a guest' found Margaret crumpled up in the cloak room at the college assembly hall, where the dance was being held. Thinking it but the effect of too much port wine on one entirely unused to it, the other girls had Margaret taken home by her escort. When she got home, Margaret still complained of sickness and was put to bed. Her mother thought nothing of her illness, until a little less than an hour later, Mary returned home in a similar condition, only apparently not so seriously affected.

"What is the matter?" Dr. Morrison questioned the girls. "We drank some port wine," replied Margaret. The girls were put to bed and treated on the assumption that their illness was caused by port wine.

Early Sunday afternoon Prof. Neish visited the Morrison home and after a conversation with him Mrs. Morrison asked the girls where they had taken the drinks and where the bottle was. Margaret told her. Quickly Mrs. Morrison got the bottle out, and Prof. Neish at once took it to Dr. Morrison, who at once recognized it.

"That is one of four bottles that I bought when I first started to practice," stated Dr.Morrison. "It has been on the shelf of my surgery for twenty years. Come and I will show you two others just like it. The other I used up in practice when wine of ipecac was commonly used as an emetic."

The discovery put a new aspect on the case and another doctor was called in. At six o'clock on Sunday evening, neither girl showing improvement, another doctor was called in consultation after which the

DEBS HAPPY AGAIN

EUGENE V. DEBS.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Nov. 27. — Eugene V. Debs is home again, looking 20 years younger than he did when he returned from prison three years ago.

Six months ago the Socialist leader was reported critically ill. Then he dropped out of sight.

Now he is back — back from the north woods. Four months he lived up there, "taking nature's cure and living like an Indian."

"Now, I'm never going to slow down," he declares. "The wrinkles are all on the outside. There are none in my heart."

He confided his newest ambition. He wants to be a prison warden.

"I would dismiss the guards," he muses. "I would reform the men through love, and teach them to be men. And I would see that they got their chance when they went out."

BANK DIRECTOR TRUSTED DALY

Not Director's Duty to Question Honesty of Bank Officials, Counsel Contend.

STEWART'S TRIAL.

TORONTO, Nov. 27.—Counsel in the case of J. F. M. Stewart, Toronto, director of the defunct Home Bank, charged with making, using and approving false statements of the bank's financial affairs had not concluded their addresses when the court adjourned yesterday afternoon.

Mr. I. F. Hellimuth for the defence declared that Stewart had been deceived by the bank management. He said that the defence took it for granted that the judge would not find that the accused had been wilfully negligent and there he would not argue the point.

Director's Responsibility.

Mr. Hellmuth said that Stewart had a right to look up to Mr. Daly as the embodiment of all that a bank president should be in the matter of character and ability. All that was necessary for Stewart to do as a director was to bring reasonable judgment to bear. Another gentleman of good repute who must have known whether these big loans were justifiable banking, said Mr. Hellmuth, was A. E. Calvert manager of the Toronto branch.

"Either Calvert was blind or deceived or he must have been willing or unwillingly a party to the deception being practised," said Mr. Hellmuth. "If he were deceived then it was much more easy that Mr. Stewart be deceived. Mr. Stewart knew that there was a watch dog to verify all vouchers and see that everything was all right.

Statement Certified.

In the annual statement that gentleman chosen as the watch dog, a gentleman of high moral standing, certified that the statement was correct as the statement itself shows. Can any one under he circumstances say that Stewart was negligent? Could he go behind the officers of

C.N.R. PREPARES BROADER PLANS OF IMMIGRATION

European Manager Recalled to Montreal as Director of Colonization.

NEW POSITION

Launch More Active Policy of Obtaining Best Type of Settlers.

MONTREAL, Nov. 27.—Indicating an even more active policy in colonization, the appointment of Dr. W. J. Black, European manager, department of colonization and development, Canadian National Railways, to the newly created position of director of colonization and development with headquarters at Montreal, was announced last evening by Mr. W. D. Robb, vice-president in charge of insurance, lands, telegraphs, colonization, development and general matters.

Dr. Black will return to Canada from London at the beginning of the new year and immediately complete the organization required for for this new post. The director will undertake the direction of all activities connected with colonization and development and will establish himself here for that purpose, it being considered that such work can better be directed from Canada.

With the transfer of Dr. Black from London to Montreal the European organization will be maintained and its activities will be continued in accordance with the present policy.

More Active Policy

The creation of the post of director comes as the result of the growth of the departmental activities It was rendered necessary by the decision of the Canadian National Railways to pursue an increasingly active policy of obtaining individuals of the best possible type from the British Isles and from certain sections of the continent of Europe to take up land in Canada. The organization which has been built up the other side now covers wide territory and is ready to invite and direct to the dominion people who are prepared to become real settlers and citizens of this country. In turn, the organization in Canada is thoroughly equipped ito receive and place these newcomers in sections most suitable to them and in localities where each will have the fullest possible opportunity. By means of this, it is intended to make a determined effort to procure for the vacant lands throughout all the provinces that population which is so essential to the advancement of Canada and the development of a great home market.

STURGEON FALLS RAID BY PROVINCIAL POLICE

STURGEON FALLS, Nov. 27. — (Canadian Press).—The answer of the Attorney-General's Department to the defiance of the Town Council, which ordered the town police not to enforce the O. T. A. became apparent Tuesday through the increased activity of the Provincial police. Provincial Constables Elliott and Robinson had a busy day. First they raided the home of Anatole Delormer and found a gallon tin of alcohol cleverly hidden in the back of the kitchen range.

Arraigned before Magistrate Cockburn, he pleaded guilty and sentence was deferred to Saturday. He previously has been convicted of B.O.T.A.

Later in the day, the officers visited the home of Elzeir Vallier and found a suspicious trunk in the bedroom. They were told it belonged to a young girl friend of the family but they decided that the gurgle it gave was not from perfume, bottles and broke it open. It contained a dozen bottles of high wines. A young man named Saya came in the admitted ownership and when arraigned before the Magistrate pleaded guilty, and was fined $300 and costs or six months. He will take the free board. On the previous night, two strangers who were suspected of being spotters got rather rough treatment and were finally escorted out of town.

LARGE FAMILIES CROWD TWO-ROOM LODGINGS

Three to Eleven Members in Each Family Near Houses of Parliament.

LONDON, Nov. 27. — (Canadian Press).—Within a short distance of the Houses of Parliament are 3,700 families, numbering from three to eleven members in each family, who are living in only two rooms per family. A statement to this effect was made at a meeting held in the London house of Lady Violet Astor, M.P., called for the purpose of considering the duty of the general body of ratepayers in the matter of housing conditions.

Sir Arthur Griffith-Boscawen, former Minister of Agriculture, remarked that in past years owners of slum properties paid more for such properties than was warrantable, but nowadays when the buildings of such properties were cleared away the owners could get only the bare value of the land.

HANNA ACCEPTS DINNER HONORS

West Hastings Victor Invited to Banquets in Montreal and Toronto.

TOURS RIDING

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Nov. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Revised figures of Mr. Hanna's majority stood at 419 last night. There will yet be some slight changes, but it will run over 400. The official count will not be made till next Monday at 10 o'clock.

So far Mr. Porter has been in retirement at his home here, and all attempts to interview him have been refused, with the announcement that he would have no statement to make.

Mr. Hanna, with his wife, started late yesterday afternoon in his car to tour the northern part of the riding. Mr. Hanna was swamped with telegrams of congratulations from Montreal and Ottawa on the east, to Regina and Edmonton on the west. Mr. Hanna's newly found position in the limelight was soon made apparent to himself. He has already accepted invitations to be the guest of honor at banquets in Montreal and Toronto.

NATIONALIST PLOT AGAINST ALLENBY

Guards Doubled at Residency —Escorts for Officers.

LONDON, Nov 27.—Egyptian Nationalists have arranged to make a desperate attempt on the life of Viscount Allenby, the British high commissioner, according to the Cairo correspondent of the Daily Mail, who says that information regarding this plan has been received from many trustworthy sources and that the danger is officially regarded as very serious.

The guards on the Residency have been roubled and increased precautions will be taken to protect Lord Allenby when driving through the streets.

civil officers henceforth shall be accompanied in public by an armed escort. Officers must carry revolvers, and, civilian officials must keep revolvers in their desks.

EGYPTIAN NOTE TO THE LEAGUE ISN'T OFFICIAL

Protest Against British Demands Forwarded by Deputies and Not by Govt.

PRECEDENT CITED

Britain Considers the Question a Domestic Affair Under Independence Agreement.

GENEVA, Nov. 27.—The Egyptian chamber of deputies has addressed a protest to the league of nations against the British demands bearing on the assassination of Sir Lee Stack, Sirdar of the Egyptian army. This protest was taken under consideration yesterday and after an hour's meeting of the department chiefs of the secretariat, under the chairmanship of Sir Eric Drummond, it was decided not to distribute to the members of the league the Egyptian protest.

The decision was based on the constitutional procedure of the secretariat which is not to circulate documents that do not emanate from governments. One precedent cited was the decision not to distribute a communication from a man who claimed to represent the Fiume parliament.

It is explained by the league officials that when documents come from private associations such as the Red Cross or parliamentary unions, a list is usually made of them and each member of the council is given a copy of the list so that he may ask for the original document if he so desires. Whether this course will be followed in the Egyptian affair does not seem to be clear as yet.

A Domestic Issue.

The Egyptian telegram to the league is identical in text to those despatched to the various world parliaments. League officials state that they understand the British government deems the question involved domestic in character because matters affecting the Sudan were expressly reserved when Great Britain declared the independence of Egypt in 1922.

Also it is said in Geneva that Britain would probably regard as an unfriendly act any intervention by other powers on a matter touching the Sudan. Nevertheless if the Egyptian dispute finds its way to the Rome session of the council, early in December either by pressure of events or because of the direct initiative of some member of the league, it is argued here that the Egyptian affair might eventually reach the world court of justice.

When the protocol of arbitration and security itself is considered at Rome, officials here forecast that Premier Branting of Sweden will make a statement to the effect that some pact of arbitration and security appears desirable, hence the necessity of reaching a definite understanding as to what will be done about the present protocol and preparations for the proposed conference on disarmament.

Officials in Geneva also declare they deem it almost certain that France and members of the Little Entente will refuse to participate in any disarmament conference which is not linked up with arbitration and security, and would probably

THREE DEAD IN WAGE DISPUTE

Two Executives Shot by Man Employee in Similar Company Years Ago.

KILLED HIMSELF

DUBOIS, Pa., Nov. 27.—(Canadian Press). — Harry W. Jackson, vice-president and manager of the Jackson Vitrified China Company, and William Darden of Chicago, the sales manager, were shot and killed at noon yesterday by John Soukup of Cleveland according to the police, who declared that Soukup then shot himself through the head, dying instantly. A dispute over wages claimed by Soukup to have been due from another company in which Jackson was interested was said to have been responsible for the tragedy.

The three bodies were found lying close together near the China plant at Falls Creek, two miles from here. Two pistols were beside the bodies. According to the police, Soukup fired from one until it had been emptied and then used the second. Jackson was shot twice in the head and Darden three times in the abdomen.

Soukup came to Dubois from Cleveland last Saturday to press his claim against the china company, according to the police, but was told at the company's office that the present concern had no connection with the company for which he claimed to have worked thirteen years ago.

DR. EDWARDS NOMINATED FOR FRONTENAC RIDING

Conservative Convention at Kingston Was Largely Attended.

KINGSTON, Ont., Nov. 27. — (Canadian Press).—Hon. Dr. J. W. Edwards, Minister of Immigration and Colonization in the late Meighen Government, was the unanimous choice of the Liberal-Conservative Association for the Federal riding of Frontenac-Addington at the next general election at a monster convention held in the Court-House here Wednesday. The large hall was utterly inadequate to hold the tremendous crowds, and the greatest of enthusiasm prevailed throughout.

Hon. Dr. Edwards, in a stirring speech, touched on the tariff and showed how the King Government has been working against the interests of the farmers. He reviewed the work he had done in the Federal House representing Frontenac for 13 years.

Other speakers were W. D. Black, M.P.P. for Addington; A. M. Rankin, M.P.P. for Frontenac; Thos. Thompson, East Hastings; F. Bowen, Durham, and A. W. Gray, M.P.P. for Leeds.

A resolution of confidence in Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen and in Premier G. Howard Ferguson was unanimously passed.

LIQUOR FINES $147,950.

REGINA, Nov. 27. — (Canadian Press).—Fines imposed under the provisions of the Saskatchewan Temperance Act during the fiscal year totalled $147,950, and the number of convictions 1,945, according to the annual report from the director of prosecutions, which was tabled in the Legislature Wednesday afternoon.

NOEL NEWTON A SUAVE VILLAIN IN RAJAH PLOT

"It Won't Help You to Bully Me," He Retorted to Lawyer's Attack.

SKETCHES SCENE

Indian Prince Gave Two Blank Cheques for Secrecy.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—A suave, immaculate villain from a melodrama of real life held the spotlight in Justice Darling's crown court yesterday and told dispassionately of the mulcting of an Indian rajah and the division of the spoils.

The bedroom scene, climax of the sensational affair, was described in detail by Montague Noel Newton, who played the role of injured husband, and was clawed and scratched realistically by the false blonde inamorata who had lured the dupe of the piece, 'Mr. A.,' to a compromising position in a Paris hotel.

So terrified of publicity was the "Mr. A.," the Indian potentate, known as "your highness," that he gave a treacherous aide de camp who was in the plot, two blank cheques. These were later filled in for $750,000 each. Payment on one was stopped.

Newton blandly admitted that after the division of the spoils in 1920 he had gone to India to see the potentate about the second cheque for $750,000 on which payment had been stopped.

"Are you a man absolutely devoid of honesty and honor?" Lord Halsbury shouted at the witness. "Have you been a blackmailer all your life?"

The witness, never batting an eye, twirled his curly black moustache as he calmly answered in the negative. "It won't help you to bully me," he replied.

Says Six in Plot.

The witness testified that six alleged participants in what he described as a conspiracy held almost daily sessions. The six were Newton, Mr. and Mrs. Robinson, Hobbs, the lawyer's clerk; a Mrs. Bevan and the rajah's Irish aide de camp.

"The aide de camp suggested that the affair be staged in Paris and everyone in the plot was consulted about nearly everything that was done," Newton said.

"I kept my appointment according to schedule," Newton went on. "I entered the hotel without any one questioning me and walked straight to the suite occupied by Mrs. Robinson and the rajah. I entered the salon, knocked on the bedroom door and entered almost immediately.

"If I remember correctly," the witness said, ruminatively, "all the lights were turned on as I entered.

"The first thing that happened, Mrs. Robinson attacked me, crying: 'Oh, oh, you brute of a husband. This is just the sort of thing you would do.'

ORIENTALS FLOCK TO SOUTH AMERICA

Rio De Janeiro Wants Speedy Action By Congress To Prevent Flood.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Nov. 27—With the recent arrival of the Japanese steamer Seattle Maru with 87 immigrants for Brazil aboard, the Brazilian press, already alarmed by mass Japanese colonization in this country, doubled its efforts to warn the country's law makers of the peril to Brazil of leaving the door open to Asiatic immigrants.

Only one paper in Rio—an afternoon daily—has come out in defence of the Japanese immigrants. The others demand speedy action by congress to prevent the country from being flooded with immigrants from the Orient.

Aided by the academies of medicine of the two principal cities of Brazil—Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo—the newspapers are attempting to force the adoption of a bill restricting the annual immigration from Japan to five per cent of the nationals of that country now residing in this country.

CANADIAN AUTHOR STRUCK BY AUTO

Sir Gilbert Parker Had Narrow Escape When Automobile Hit Him.

AIKEN, S.C., Nov. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Sir Gilbert Parker, Canadian novelist, suffered injuries here last night when he was struck and knocked to the ground by an automobile on one of the principal business streets of the city. Sir Gilbert narrowly escaped serious injury when he was thrown heavily to the ground, the wheels of the automobile passing close to his body. He was removed to a nearby inn. Physicians announced that he received several injuries about the head and severe body cruises, but that his condition was not considered serious. Sir Gilbert's attendant nurse, Miss Cashmere, also received painful bruises and lacerations when she was thrown beneath the machine. She was reported resting well but suffering from shock.

Sir Gilbert Parker, who is 62 years old, arrived in New York on Nov. 21 on his way to South Carolina to recuperate after undergoing an operation in London, and to revise a novel he has written which deals with the period of Louis XIV.

U.F.O. CO-OPERATIVE HAS RETURNED PROFIT

Directors Have Declared a Three Per Cent. Dividend.

TORONTO, November 27.—After three successive years of deficits the United Farmers Co-operative Co., Limited, has returned a profit, and the directors have declared a three per cent. dividend.

The financial statement of the organization, which has just gone out to the shareholders, and which will come up for discussion before the co-operative organization at its annual meeting on December 16th, is the most favorable for years, and the explanations offered for a turn in the tide of financial affairs of this farmer body is that they closed out their stores in time and settled down to direct business in a business-like way.

The year's profit, which has just been reported, reaches $47,386.15, and in addition it is expected that the organization will shortly return to its members the sum of $20,000 in connection with the egg pool.

The year's profit still comes far short of wiping out the deficits that acumulated during the years the chain stores were in operation, as deficits accumulated during the period reached $605,966.74.

Only a portion of this year's profits, it is understood, will be devoted to paying three per cent dividend, the balance being directed toward a reduction of the deficit.

WORLD PEACE DISCUSSED.

Peace of World Affected By Church of Jesus Christ.

TORONTO, Nov. 29.—World peace as affected by the Church of Jesus Christ, the League of Nations and the Britannic Commonwealth is the subject of a striking deliverance issued by the General Board of Evangelism and Social Service of the Methodist Church.

While not taking the pacifist position the finding of this body is such as to arraign war and probably to "outlaw" most modern wars.

Unanimously adopted, the resolution reads:

"The Church of Jesus Christ must ever have for its objective the creation of a Christian society in which all nations will find scope for the realization of essential interests and at the same time will recognize the common spiritual interests of the race as the supreme concern.

"We welcome as important contributions to that Christian society the formation of League of Nations and invite our people to become familiar with its work and difficulties which attend its efforts. We look eagerly for the time when conditions will permit the league to so widen ist membership that any semblance of being a league of victors will have vanished.

"We accept with loyal pride our place in the Britannic commonwealth of nations and urge our people to study the responsibilities which such a place involves.

"We invite our people to consider in the most serious and open-minded manner the spirit and teaching of Jesus as related to the elimination of war.

"We believe that the Christian church must view with abhorrence any policy which regards war as a normal activity of the state; any policy which deliberately promotes a program of action which looks to war as a final means of its own success; any international anarchy which regards war as the normal means of settling disputes among nations.

"We call on our people to become familiar with all the situations out of which war may arise, especially with the tendency for commercial interests to mask themselves as national interests and with the danger of religious differences being used to mask economic conflicts."

St. James' Outlives Storms.

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 29. — Unveiling of war memorial windows by Sir Arthur Currie, Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, Hon. G. P. Graham and Gen. Armstrong in St. James' Methodist Church, Montreal, recalls by contrast an earlier period when the permanence of this church was imperilled by financial difficulties and its loss to Methodism freely predicted. Valuable and permanent memorials now preserve to future generations the memories of thirty-one young men who fell and of 267 who served in the Great War of 1914-18. Freed from debt and equipped for down-town service, the great edifice remains a shrine in the shopping district.

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain—How To Treat

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestents are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

FEATHER BORDERS

Feather borders are prefered to fur bands on the delicate toned evening gowns. They give a lighter, more airy effect.

WHITE FURS SMART

White furs are smart for day and evening clothes. Ermine on black velvet is very much the vogue.

COUNTY WARDEN MAKES REPORT OF SUCCESSFUL UNDERTAKINGS AT THE LAST SESSION OF COUNCIL

Closing of 1924 Activities Shows Many Bridges Built in County.

REPORTS PRESENTED.

Peterborough Is Sound Financialy, Premium on Bonds Indicates.

Peterboro County council got away to a good start on its fall business to-day, with a full attendance.

Warden M. P. Coughlin, who was absent yesterday through illness, took his place in the chair, and presented his address, in which he lamented the calamity at the House of Refuge, and urged special attention to the decreasing of mileage on the County Roads.

The text of his address follows:

I had not intended inflicting myself upon you at this session, but this seems to me to be extraordinary year, not only from a standpoint of somewhat extensive bridge building, but also a calamito s year at the County House of Refuge.

Another matter under consideration is the lessening of mileage on the County Roads, and I would suggest your most carefully weighing of the matter. The Highway Department is anxious for a change in the mileage and a more definite County system of expenditures.

In order to meet and provide for School demands I would urge that all look into the matter so that a united intelligent knowledge of such be obtained. The government is giving evidence of the establishing of better advantages for the rural pupils, and it is up to the different counties to comply.

Sound Financially.

The substantial premium secured by the sale of debentures, namely $384.00, on a 5½ per cent $20,000.00 issue, is an evidence of the good financial standing of the county.

On all or nearly all of the bridge inspections as a result of order-in-council, I attended as well as some other inspections requested by the different Reeves. I have this to say (and I say it with a great deal of pleasure and assurance) that every action taken by the different sub-committees was taken with an eye to the best interests of the county.

The estimates brought down by your financial chairman, D. Brown, Esq., will as closely as can be determined, be sufficient to cover the requirements, judging as you only can judge so early in the year.

I will not cite anything regarding such matters, as the different chairmen will fully report.

In conclusion I would say that I bespeak the same assistance to committees and Warden in the years to come.

It is most gratifying to hear from all sides the remarks as to seady improvement of the roads, and this council will no doubt, as will succeeding councils, stand behind the Superintendent of Roads, thereby giving him encouragement in the skill and efficiency that he employs.

In conclusion let me again express my appreciation of the assistance that you have given me, without which a warden would fail.

Roads and Bridges

Deputy Reeve William Brown of Smith township, chairman of the Roads and Bridges Committee reported as follows on a year of extensive improvements and repairs.

I will be as brief as possible knowing that the different Reeves who carried the work into effect in their respective Townships or Municipalities and to whom all credit is due will at the proper time make a satisfactory explanation.

I beg to call your attention, that is, those of you who did not visit the location, to the alarming and unsafe condition of the old Lockey's Bridge in North Monaghan and I will assure you that Mr. Rye who so persistently sounded the alarm was justified in so doing.

The new bridge cost approximately $4,197.00 and being on a County Road you may expect the Government to reimburse the County to the extent of 40% or $1,678.00 making the net cost to the County $2,519.00. The Lang Bridge was attended to in as much as two new abutments were built at a nominal cost of some $575.00 and the reason of such small outlay would appear to be the system adopted as suggested by Mr. Smithson, the Reeve of the local Township.

Your Committee as before stated to comply with necessary surroundings, had a sidewalk attached to Alma Street Bridge (Norwood) thereby making it adequate for pedestrian traffic, the same as usually provided. Mr. Packenham at whose instance this work was suggested will deal further in a report, if called upon.

The abutments on two Bridges between this County and Hastings County were rebuilt and Messrs. Breckenridge and Curtis to whom this work that was started last year was deputed, in conjunction with Hastings representatives, will report minutely if called upon. As per order of Council and at the instance of Mr. Clark the members who visited Galway vested authority in Mr. Clark to expend $200.00 in repairing Reid's Bridge and authorized him to act in conjunction with the adjoining County in having the boundary bridges repaired or rebuilt if necessary. When up Mr. Clark drew our attention to the rebuilding of two joint bridges rebuilt last year between Peterboro and Haliburton Counties, we found that they are a credit to Mr. Clark and the cost is nominal.

Burleigh and Chandos Bridges were not inspected save Perry Creek Bridge but following authority vested in Messrs. D. Brown and R. Scott. I understand that all matters have been attended to and I will ask these gentlemen to kindly report verbally to the Council at some opportune time during the session.

White Eelephants

Upon assumption of McCoy's Bridge in Douro at the request of Mr. Coughlin the same has been practically rebuilt at a nominal cost of some $109,00. The Old White Elephants, namely the floating bridges required extra attention this year and Messrs. Middleton, Corkery and Wilson who have spared no efforts to maintain these in a fit condition for traffic must have the approval of the travelling public under the circumstances. What is known as Birdsall's Bridge in Asphodel has become so badly decomposed that a team went through it this season and at the request of Mr. John Scott, your Warden and Chairman and the Reeve of Otonabee inspected it. There seem to be little traffic save some school children on the line of about seven eights of a mile. In fact the grass is growing on the road with very little signs of disturbance and consequently your committee authorized Mr. Scott to provide for those children, keeping vehicle traffic off until a subsequent Council had all particulars placed before them to be dealt with as they deem advisable.

The Bridges in Smith are mostly on Boundaries and the Reeves of the adjoining townships and Mr. Middleton will state the conditions. I take this opportunity on behalf of Mr. Middleton and myself to state to you our appreciation of a new concrete bridge on the road in front of the House of Refuge that was provided by you by way of a grant to Smith and to further state that much credit is due Mr. R. Gordon for a satisfactory job.

Lakefield Bridge has now been rebuilt and Mr. Strickland the resident Reeve can show to you the deteriorated condition of the old Bridge as discovered when being taken down and any other information desired. The new bridge cost in the neighborhood of $25,000.00 provided by debenture issue with $20,000.00 debenture proceeds and $384.00 premium on the sale of the debentures. The balance came from current Bridge rate.

In conclusion I wish to thank you all for your indulgence under all occasions and I trust that the County will be fortunate in having a continuance of such representation.

House of Refuge.

Deputy Reeve, R. T. Lillico of North Monaghan, chairman of the Board of Management of the County House of Refuge, presented a report on the work of the institution which was handicapped toward the end of the season by a disastrous fire. The text of his report follows:

It is not required by Statute nor has it been customary for the Board to make an official report at this meeting, the same being compulsory at the first meeting each year, yet we think under the circumstances a report is due the Council and ratepayers, at this the last general session of the 1924 Council.

You are all aware that the heating and plumbing had outlived its day and that re-adjustment was absolutely required.

It is also known to you that Mr. Campbell had to draw water for long periods during the winter months and resort to coal oil stoves in order to keep the old people comfortable.

Since that time considerable money has been expended in an attempt to cope with the conditions, but the climax cropped up this year when not only the water supply could not be utilized, but the boiler sustained an accident that practically put it out of commission.

Since those facilities have been giving trouble, principally due to age, considerable money has been expended in an attempt to correct matters. Your board this year had arranged to renovate the inside water system and lavatories and had already incurred some $600.00 expenditures. No blame can possibly be attached to former boards and the members of the staff seem to have been doing their best under the circumstances.

The contract let by Council for the boiler and necessary attachments as you are aware means another $2,456,000 also $366.00 for a water tank of steel with air compressure sufficient to distribute water throughout the House and to bring into requisition in case of fire. The old wooden tank in the attic was practically no use in case of fire or for watering the lawn or flowers.

Your board are in hopes of having a up-to-date heating and plumbing system when all is completed.

As Chairman of the Board I have as a result of observation come to the conclusion that with such a system of heating and electric appliances for the pumping of water, it will not be in the best interests of the County to rely on anybody or everybody to operate this apparatus.

It appears to me that some party should be allotted to attend to the heating and water systems during the winter months, then he could assist in farm operations in the summer as well as making himself useful in the winter months when not busy with the heating duties.

It does not require an expert, but it should be somebody paid for his services and under control of the Superintendent, who after receiving the necessary instructions from some competent person, would then have to a certain extent a responsibility placed upon him.

Fire Was Set-back.

All public undertakings have unforseen difficulties to contend with and of course the burning of the grain and hay and cattle and horse stables put the object of the Board along that line beyond their control.

In speaking of changes in cattle and horses in order to procure something more suitable and in the long run more profitable, I will point out the dealings that were effected. Your Board purchased some $1,010.00 worth of stock and sold some $1050.00 worth of stock but there are not as many now on hand at the beginning of the year. The fire necessitated the disposing of the greater number of these that were on hand immediately prior to its occurrence. The board retained one team of horses, two stocker cattle, three new milch cows and one sow and six fat hogs. As stated the difference as to the value of those now on hand and those on hand at beginning of the year is attributable to the fire, necessitating the disposal of nine cattle and one horse by auction.

Your board appreciate the concurrence of the Council as a body taking the initiative in providing for a renewal of the heating and plumbing plant and trust that that Council will recognize such appreciation and we sincerely hope that it will be many a year before calamities as cropepd up this year will again appear.

Again thanking you for your provisions and assistance, we can only bespeak the same for future boards.

Discuss Bridges.

The principal topic of discussion yesterday afternoon was the repair and replacement of faulty bridges throughout the county and a discussion of the best methods to be adopted.

Reeve Packenham thanked the Council on behalf of the citizens of Norwood for the sidewalk and bridge constructed, and Reeve J. C. Strickland expressed the appreciation of Lakefield citizens for the splendid bridge just completed there.

OBITUARY.

JOHN ALLEN

The death occurred on Wednesday of John Allen of Mount Irwin, Galway Township.

The deceased was in his 84th year and had been in poor health for some time. His wife predeceased him sixteen years ago. One son Daniel was killed in the battle of Vimy Ridge; one daughter, Mrs. Simms of Spokana, Washington, died about a year ago and two daughters passed away some years ago.

There are left to mour his loss two daughters and three sons, namely, Mrs. Craig of Minnesota, Mrs. Pinkerton of Toronto, Robert of this city and John and Amie at home, also two sisters and one brother, Mrs. Clancy and Mrs. Callaghan of this city and Robert of Vancouver, B.C.

The funeral will be held from the family residence at Mount Irwin on Saturday morning at 9 o'clock and will proceed to St. Mary's church and thence to St. Mary's cemetery for interment. Three weeks ago Mr. Allen suffered the loss of his son Jack, who died after a few days illness.

Fittsburg Girls Are Dead on To Get Married and Settle Down.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 27.—(United Press).—Contrary to the accepted notion, the majority of women seeking higher education in our big universities are more anxious to get married than to get a job with a view to a career, according to a recent bulletin by the University of Pittsburgh.

That condition at any rate exists in Pittsburgh, and a census of the co-eds showed that there are more girls by far wanting to become simple housewives than actresses and so on. In other words, they want to get married, says Miss Helen Rush, one of the dean of women at Pitt.

Berlin Station Starts Weekly Broad cast as an Experiment

BERLIN, Nov. 27.—Broadcasting of a university course of general interest, but intended to be of particular benefit to students, has been begun by one of the Berlin stations as an experiment.

Lectures will be given two evenings each week. The subject will be summaries of questions studied by the university students during the week the lectures are given.

NEWS OF HAVELOCK.

Another Presentation to Miss Josephine McMaster—Pastor Resigns.

HAVELOCK, Nov. 26. — The members of St. John's church choir met at the rectory after service on Sunday evening last and presented their organist, Miss Josephine McMaster, with an ivory clothes brush and ivory hair brush. Speeches were given by Rev. T. H. Stanley and Mr. A. Lane.

Miss McMaster has been organist of St. John's church for the past year, having been organist of the Methodist church for a couple of years before.

A very enjoyable evening was spent and a dainty lunch was served at the close of the evening.

The following address was read:

Dear Miss McMaster,—In coming amongst us you took over a new branch of work in our Anglican church music and to-night we take this opportunity to tell you how deeply we appreciated your efficient capability during your period of service as our organist. You indeed deserve credit for the splendid way you adapted yourself to master each new feature of the work as it presented itself and you succeeded to the entire satisfaction of the choir members, which in itself is saying a great deal for what you accomplished.

We are each sorry in a truly personal way to lose you and so to show our deep appreciation of your work we, the undersigned, ask you to accept this little gift as a slight token of our affectionate regard for you. In saying good-bye we commend you to the care of Him who is able to keep you and all unite in earnest wishes for your future.

Signed on behalf, Rev. T. H. Stanley, Mrs. Pincombe, Mrs. Williams, Mrs. Roche, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Moore, Miss Post, Mrs. Davies, Mrs. Quinn, Mrs. Covert, Mr. Seabrooke, Mr. Lane.

A large number of the Methodist congregation attended the funeral of Mrs. E. O. Seymour at Belleville on Tuesday afternoon.

Rev. James McIlroy has resigned as pastor of the Presbyterian church and removed to Toronto on Tuesday to labour in a new field.

Two kinds now
WE knew there were thousands who appreciated the wonderful food value and loved the delicious flavour of Quaker Oats, but were unable to take it every morning because of limited time to prepare it.
So our milling experts perfected Quick Quaker.
Quick Quaker cooks perfectly in three to five minutes—just as quickly as eggs or toast. It is the quickest, most nourishing, most economical breakfast you can serve.
Quick Quaker has all the qualities that have made regular Quaker Oats famous. Serve either kind these chilly mornings. It will build up your family's strength against winter ills.

BETTER "CARRY ON."

As a solution for the indifference of many citizens in regard to municipal elections, the theory is being advanced by a number of newspapers that the introduction of party politics with Liberals, Conservatives and presumably Progressives nominating a party slate would put new life into civic campaigns.

The remedy, however, sounds worse than the disease.

It is better perhaps to have a dearth of candidates and only a fair turnout of electors than to have the community divided into two or three hostile camps.

There is enough politics in the Federal and Provincial arena, and the average city or town will prefer to keep partizanship out of its municipal field, realizing that such a basis of choosing a civic administration is not likely to produce any more efficient or business-like civic government, while at the same time it is certain to cause more or less ill-feeling and dissension, fatal to the development of that community consciousness without which no centre can hope to thrive and prosper.

If we cannot get citizens to interest themselves in municipal problems without dragging in the suspicion and ill-will and bitterness of party politics then we would be much better off to "carry on" under the present system, unsatisfactory although it undoubtedly is in many respects.

CENTRALIZED EXECUTIONS.

According to advices from Lindsay, there is a feeling of horror in that town because of the hanging that is to take place there early next month, and it is said that a number of citizens intend to leave Lindsay until the sentence has been carried out.

The situation merely confirms what the Examiner has long contended that communities should be spared the depressing effect of such executions, and that some central point—the Portsmouth Penitentiary, for example—be chosen as the scene of completion of death sentences.

It would be a more satisfactory and a more economical arrangement all round if prisoners were taken to such a centre immediately after being sentenced and kept there until the execution.

Under the present policy there is not only a great strain upon the public generally, but the jail staffs are overloaded with responsibility and the expense is unnecessarily great.

There is no reason why Lindsay people should have to go through the experience of having a hanging take place in their midst, or for any other community to be similarly affected, when it is quite possible to have executions centralized.

The advantages of the latter plan are so manifest that it is remarkable that the authorities have not long since decided in doing away with the present unsatisfactory method.

TOMORROW'S VISIT.

The visit of His Excellency the Governor-General of Canada tomorrow, while necessarily brief and on that account marked by no very elaborate ceremonies, should nevertheless be a gala event for Peterborough, and the Examiner hopes the citizens will respond to the appeal of the civic authorities and help by their presence to make the reception a noteworthy one.

Lord Byng of Vimy, one of Britain's war heroes and esteemed by Canadians because of the fact that he commanded the Canadian forces in France during a period when they won great fame, culminating in the wresting of the stronghold of Vimy Ridge from the enemy, should be joyfully welcomed not only because he is the representative in Canada of His Majesty King George but because of his record as a warrior and as Governor-General of Canada.

Among the veterans he will inspect here tomorrow will be many who served under him in France, and they will be among the most enthusiastic of all in their welcome to the distinguished visitor.

Citizens are asked not to forget the request that the homes and business places of the city, especially those situated on the route of the drive, should be decorated tomorrow.

The visit of a Governor-General, especially one with the war record of Lord Byng, is an event of importance and should be emphasized by a general display of flags and bunting.

THE USE OF SPOTTERS.

The charge made by an Oshawa lawyer in a letter to the Board of Police Commissioners that the Oshawa Police Department is paying and using "spotters" in connection with the enforcement of the Ontario Temperance Act has aroused much interest not only in Oshawa but throughout the Province.

How much there is in the complaint the Examiner is in no position to know, but there is no doubt of the fact that the use of "spotters" is a practice depreciated by very many citizens.

The letter declares that the "Ku Klux Klan is not as great a menace to the city of Oshawa as a combination of police and spotters."

That may be exaggerating the situation to some extent—yet the fact remains that the adoption of a "stool pigeon" policy to secure convictions is a policy that is repugnant to most people.

Such unofficial representatives of the law, of course, get in their finest work by coaxing other people to break the law, and having tempted their victims to disregard the Ontario Temperance Act, turn the case over to the police.

The Oshawa complainant wants to know whether or not the money of the ratepayers is being used to pay for the employment of men of this type.

It is a question that any taxpayer is justified in asking, for no matter how willing citizens are that the Ontario Temperance Act should be enforced by law enforcement officials, the majority of t m are not in favour of the employment of "stool pigeons" and "spotters."

It Pays to Advertise!

ELECTIVE COMMISSION.

There is still a tendency in some Ontario municipalities to secure elective Police Commissioners, says the St. Catharines Standard. In London a vote is being taken on the question of electing two members to the police board, making a personnel of five on the board, three of whom, including the Mayor, would be elected by the people. Just what is to be achieved in the way of increased police efficiency in any municipality by increasing the number of commissioners is difficult at best to show. The present system of Judge, Police Magistrate and Mayor comprising the police board of a city has been working a long while, and has worked well. Disagreement with policy may have arisen at times in various places, but these disagreements would doubtless arise with more frequency if police boards were entirely elective.

One feature about an elective or partly elective police board, the wisdom of which may be gravely questioned, is that it is following the American system. It leaves an opening for the politicians, for the protection of evil-doers and conditions approaching those which have recently been pictured in Montreal, but which if arising in Ontario, are soon eliminated as quickly as they are known to exist, by the concentrated and independent power possessed by two men of the board, the Judge and the Police Magistrate.

In American cities, a straight party vote each year elects a City Treasurer, a Clerk, a Chief of Police and other officials who are permanent fixtures on this side. They even elect at longer intervals, the judges of the courts. Statistics in all sorts of crime in the U. S. show that the Canadian system is much superior. We would do well to keep it so.

It is a matter of doubt, however, if the Ontario Legislature will validate any change in the law relating to Police Commissions. The question has been a perennial for a long time, and the proposal has been consistently voted down. It is an exercise of Provincial prerogative which, in this instance, cannot be quarrelled with.

HOW MUCH ARE YOU GETTING?

(By John Carlyle.)

All the pay that you get isn't in the pay envelope, John Siddall used to say. John Siddall, now dead, but remembered by a multitude, was the brilliant, thoughtful, constructive editor of the American Magazine.

What the cashier hands you at the window is only a part of your pay.

When you are attracted by the possibility of getting a new job, however much bigger the money-pay than you have been getting, think well. Put the spotlight of analysis on it up one side and down the other.

What is pay?

Pay is reward for service. That reward comes partly from doing the kind of work that you can put your soul into, from being associated with a concern whose policy is your personal policy.

Pay is working for and with people you like and respect.

Pay is the consciousness that you are doing something that is making the world a little better for your doing it.

Pay is having a sense of independence, the right to come and go without too cramping supervision.

Pay is the right to exercise what power of initiative you have.

Pay is the respect the community gives you for doing the kind of work you are doing.

Pay is peace.

When you got twelve dollars a week you thought you would be both prosperous and happy when you got twenty-five dollars a week. When you got twenty-five dollars you found you had been mistaken in your personal prediction. It didn't make you very prosperous—and not at all happy.

You can't buy happiness with the money in the envelope. But you can win happiness by the kind of work you do to get that money in the envelope.

Don't jump from here to there until you are quite sure just what pay is.

PROVINCIAL FINANCING.

(London Advertiser.)

With all these taxes in operation, the Treasurer of the Province admits a deficit of $8,556,039, and the statement is given at a time when it is not open to the searching and criticism of the financial experts of the opposition. The revenue is buoyant; it is time to cut expenditure.

The Finance Minister touched on the prospect of making a move toward wiping out the capital debt of the Province. Former Provincial Treasurers have advocated the same thing, but found that the rate at which money was being spent made it impossible to start it. It is the same as a man who gets into debt; he feels that he must pay his current expenses, and hopes that some time he may be able to wipe out that other obligation. He may hope to increase his revenue, but in the case of the Government that means taking more money from the people, and Governments are doing too much of that now. His surer way is to cut down his expenses until he has something left over to apply on his indebtedness. The same course is open to the Government of Ontario, and if it is capable of supplying the leadership people have a right to expect it will move in that direction, and do so fearlessly and quickly. Mr. Price should have that in mind as an objective toward which to work—paying off a certain amount of the debt of the Province each year, and doing it without increasing the amount of taxation taken from the people.

The Ferguson Government has an exceptional opportunity. It has been in power for sixteen months; it has a majority that will enable it to carry any measure that it may bring in to cut expenses and curtail proposed outlays. In the face of a rising revenue from more sources of revenue than previous Governments ever enjoyed it should get busy and show what it can do. It has things its own way and people are not particularly impressed with the present effort of blaming deficits on the Government formerly in power.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

West Hastings having decided to do without its Porter, is now definitely in the dry column.

The by-election seems to suggest there has been a big joke at somebody's expense.

Having chosen a member of Parliament, Belleville has to turn right round and elect a chief magistrate. The mayoralty campaign will seem tame after the political warfare.

St. Thomas has an aldermanic candidate who is running for office for the forty-fifth year. He must be invulnerable to criticism by this time.

Brockville has saved election expenses by returning everybody without a contest. It is a policy that has its merits—so long as the civic boards thus favoured are efficient.

Wise and Otherwise.

Well, in Cleveland, a man was jailed for spanking his own child. Just the same, others should be jaled for not spanking.

It is becoming increasingly difficult to pity the blind when half the autoists seem to be blind.

One great improvement noted in the world recently is it has about quit "Ain't gonna raining no more."

The year 1923 had a banana shortage, and 1924 a rain shortage, but we will never have a song shortage.

A THOUGHT.

MAY WE HAVE MORE OF IT.

In youth we are prone to believe that compromise in any human problem is but evidence of human weakness; only the years bring the revelation and the understanding that life at best brings the need for compromise in many situations.

Many of us are all wrong, no doubt, but few of us are all right always; there is never a matter of human relationship but that has two sides, never a problem of living that is not worthy of dispassionate and impersonal discussion.

To love much, live usefully and work successfully calls for a kindly tactfulness we sometimes call compromise.

But whatever it is, may we have more of it.

The "bitter-enders" in family misunderstanding, in neighborhood differences and business feuds belong to the dark ages when racks and screws torturously distorted human forms and solitary confinement drove wise men to madness.

"Four things a man must learn to do
If he would make his record true:
To think without confusion clearly;
To love his fellowmen sincerely;
To act from honest motives purely;
To trust in God and Heaven securely."
—VAN DYKE.

SOUTH MONAGHAN'S BARNS ARE BULGING

Plenty of Fodder for Live-stock This Winter—Still Ploughing.

BAILIEBORO, Nov. 25.—The farmers have been greatly blessed by the fall season staying open so long. Only a very few have stabled their young cattle as yet, and this means that a vast amount of hay, straw, and grain has been saved.

Throughout the township the barns are well filled with plenty of good winter feed, and there is very little chance of the stock going hungry this winter.

There is still a considerable acreage of ground to be ploughed, and during the latter part of last week and Monday of this week the majority of farmers were busily engaged turning over as many acres as possible. There has just been enough rain fallen to make the ploughing go good, and all that the farmers need is just a few more fine days to complete their ploughing for this fall.

Ladies Gave Play.

The members of the Ladies Institute put on a play entitled "The Spirit of Canada," in the basement of the Anglican church on Friday evening last, for the purpose of raising enough money to hire someone to take care of the village lighting system.

Considering the disagreeable weather that prevailed there was a good crowd present and over fifty dollars was taken in at the door.

Mr. Fred Waterman acted as chairman for the occasion, while the play was of a very high class order. About fifty members took part and everyone acted their part to perfection. The costumes were all excellent and showed to great advantage on the brilliantly lighted stage. A great amount of pains were taken in practicing and preparing to present this splendid patriotic play, so the members have decided to present it once again on Friday, November 28.

For many years the Ladies' Institute of Bailieboro have been a strong and well organized society, and the villagers can thank this society for their many modern improvements that they are now enjoying.

EGG PRICES.

OTTAWA, November 26. — A very firm feeling prevails on most Canadian markets. The supplies of fresh are very small owing to the decreased production throughout the country and in consequence storage eggs are moving very freely into domestic consumption.

Toronto steady. Jobbing specials 70; extras 60; storage extras 48, firsts 44 to 45; seconds 38 to 39.

Montreal active under good consumptive demand; jobbing fresh extras 64 to 65; firsts 49 to 50; storage extras 47 to 48; firsts 42 to 43; seconds 38 to 39.

Winsipeg receipts were very light. Retailing extras 65 to 70; firsts, 50 to 65; seconds 45 to 50.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Novemebr 26. — Owing largely to a report that the U .S. had an unsold wheat surplus of only about 46,000,000 bushels, the wheat market developed sudden new strength to-day. The closing quotations on wheat were firm at 1¼ to 2c net gain; Dec. 1.54 3-8 to 1.54½ and May 1.62½ to 1.62 5-8, with corn ¾ to ⅞c up. Oats unchanged to 3-8c higher, and provisions varying from 10c decline to a rise of 40c.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, November 26. — There was a much better enquiry from the English importers for Canadian grain here to-day and the prices bid for Manitoba spring wheat showed an advance, but they were still below a working basis, while business was reported in all grades of Canadian western barley for December loading. There was also some demand on spot for all grades of wheat for immediate shipment from this port, and sales of No. 1 northern were reported at 16c per bushel over the Winnipeg November options c.i.f. here, and some barley changed hands on c.i.f. bay ports, but the volume of business was not large.

There was no improvement in the car lot trade, the demand from buyers generally being reported quiet, but the tone was steady, with Ontario No. 3 extra malting quoted at $1.08 and No. 3 grade at $1.07 per bush., ex-track, while odd cars of Ontario No. 2 white oats sold at 62c, No. 3 grade at 60c, and No. 4 grade at 58c per bushel.

There was no development in the local egg situation. The prices ruled steady for all grades under a steady demand. The feature of the butter trade was the report that a sale of 3000 packages of creamery was made for shipment to the United States, and that other sales of fair-sized quantities were put through in other directions.

There was no change in the condition of the market for cheese.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, November 26.—There was but a light run for the midweek market, and consisting mostly of cows and store cattle. A few baby beeves sold readily from $8 to $10, but outside of these there was nothing choice in the butcher line. There was a fairly good outlet for cows and the canners and cutters at steady prices, the canners being if anything a little firmer.

There was a good market for store cattle for export, and for stockers and feeders at steady prices.

Lambs and calves holding steady. Good ewe lambs selling up to $8.50.

Prices in the various sections were as follows:

Export cattle, choice, and heavy steers, $6.50 to $7.25; bulls, $4.50 to $5; cows $4.25 to $5.

Choice butchers, $5.75 to $6; medium, $5.25 to $6.75; fair $5.25 to $5.50; common, $3.50 to $4; baby beeves, $8.50 to $9.

Choice fat cows, $3.50 to $4.50.

Stockers and feeders—Choice short keep feeders, 1000 to 1200 lbs., $5.50 to $6.25; stores, 900 to 1000 lbs., $5 to $5.50; choice stockers, 830 to 950, $4.25 to $4.75; light western stock, $3.50 to $3.75; choice western, $4.50 to $5.

Calves steady.

Sheep and lambs, 50c higher.

Hogs easier at $9.75 to $10, off cars.

EGYPTIAN NOTE

Steps In Arbitration.

It is explained that if the Egyptian dispute were taken up by the council at the Rome meeting, Great Britain undoubtedly would maintain that the question falls exclusively within democratic jurisdiction. The next logical step would be for the council to ask the world court for a juridical opinion whether, in fact, the questions in conflict are democratic in nature.

From the standpoint of general interest, it is realized here that the protocol for the pacific settlement of international disputes, which Britain has asked additional time to study, provides that when the world court rules that a question is democratic in character this decision shall not prevent consideration of the situation by the council or assembly of the league, under article XI., of the covenant. This clause, it will be remembered, was inserted at the request of Japan.

Calmness Cautioned.

CAIRO, Nov. 27.—Former Premier Zagloul's last words before departing for the pyramids yesterday were an exhortation to the striking students to return to the schools and remain calm. The former premier was the recipient of an ovation from the students and other citizens. In a brief speech he asked the students why they were striking and said he could not too strongly urge them to set a good example to others by resuming their duties and ceasing their demonstrations. It was a most critical hour in the country's destinies, he declared, but the nation's interests would best be served by remaining calm.

"What's the matter, little boy?" said the kind-hearted man. "Are you lost?" "No," was the manful answer; "I ain't lost; I'm here. But I would like to know where father and mother have wandered to."

NOEL NEWTON

"She mauled me about, and scratched me, and so on, until I had to whisper to her to stop or she would have torn the clothes from my back.

"'Mr. A.' endeavored to calm her. He said: 'After all, this is your husband.'

Rajah Turned Green.

"I told 'Mr. A.' 'I've got the evidence I wanted. I'll bid you good morning, sir.'"

"How did 'Mr. A.' take it?" Sir John Simon asked the witness.

"Well," replied Newton, "if it's possible for a colored man to turn green, he did.

So great was the interest in Newton's testimony that a queue formed outside the law courts shortly after midnight. By the early morning there werer several women waiting in the line, some of them engaged in their Christmas knitting.

girls were removed to the hospital. Although Miss MacDonald was at no time very ill, she complained of slight sickness Saturday night and Sunday she was also taken to Hotel Dieu as a precautionary measure, there she remained until Tuesday morning.

Margaret Morrison was one of the most popular girls of the city. She reached her fifteenth birthday in June last. She was a member of the Florence Hudson dancing class and had often been on programs at concerts where her dancing was a great delight to those who saw her. She starred in an amateur production, "All aboard," at the Grand Opera House only last Tuesday night. She was a very talented young girl and had a very large number of friends.

Mary Morrison, who was a charming singer, had often taken part in concerts and entertainments and in this way she became well known and highly thought of by many.

Besides the parents, the girls are survived by two sisters, Frances and Barbara, and two brothers, Charles and Hubert.

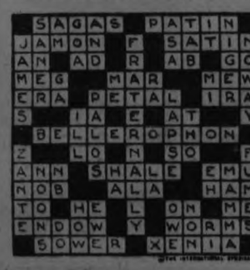
Heartrending scenes surrounded the passing of both girls. At first when told of her condition, Margaret would not believe she was going to die. Later, however, she was persuaded that her condition was hopeless and that she had not long to live. She then asked for a priest, and responded in clear, firm childish tones to the prayers for the dying.

A Pathetic Plea.

When she knew she was going to die, she said: "Please don't let my going interfere with the plans of Mary and Isobel, I would like them to go to the parties they have been invited to. I hope they won't stay at home because of what has happened me." She little thought that within 48 hours her sister, too, would have passed on also into the great beyond.

All Monday night, with ear pressed against the door of her hospital room, the young fiance of Mary Morrison stood, hoping and praying for her recovery. He is a graduate of Royal Military College here, and is now living in Beamsville. The two young people, who were destined to be parted under such harrowing circumstances, met while he was attending college here.

When Mary took a sudden and hopeless relapse Tuesday the young man was released from his vigil, which had lasted all night and morning, and was admitted into the room. He was present when Mary passed away, and with a suppressed moan placed a candle beside her as her spirit fled. Her chum, Isobel MacDonald, was also present when death came, entering the room from her own hospital quarters just before Mary passed away.



SOLUTION OF YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE.

Jones was walking along when it began to rain. In front he thought he saw his friend Brown with an umbrella. He slapped him on the back and said jokingly: "Hello! Give me that umbrella!" When Jones realized the man was an utter stranger he nearly collapsed. But the other nervously handed over the umbrella. "I beg your pardon," he apologized. "I—I—didn't know it belonged to you."

OSHAWA'S BRAND NEW UTILITIES SHOWN TO BYNG

Chimes, School Church, Rink, Water Tower Presented as Evidences of Cityhood.

FORMAL VISIT

New Memorial Inspected — Crowd of 10,000 Greet Viceroy at Armory.

OSHAWA, Nov. 27.—Oshawa in its first year of citynood as the baby city of Canada was yesterday honored by an official visit of His Excellency, Lord Byng, Governor General of Canada, Lady Byng and their staff, and from the moment the royal party steamed into the Canadian National Railway Station—to step off the private car "Cornwall" and be welcomed by Mayor W. J. Trick, members of the city council, board of trade and board of education to receive the royal salute by members of the 34th Regiment under Capt. A. Ridge won his way into the good as he won his way into the hearts of Canadian soldiers.

Factories Visited.

He spoke to those who greeted him and to the regimental boys, whom he inspected, with such magnetism that all were drawn to him. After the formalities of the reception at the station, the party headed by chief of police, O. D. Friend with two of his stalwarts led the procession of cars around to the different industrial establishments and then made their first stop at the new Oshawa curling rink at which His Excellency and party were received by president W. E. Clarke and his committee of curlers. After inspection the rink was officially declared open. From there they drove to the new water tower on Simcoe street north, where ex-Mayor, G. D. Conant and the members of the waterworks commission were in attendance and by a turn of the valve the Governor General declared the largest water tower in the Dominion ready for service. The Oshawa general hospital was next and president J. D. Storie, vice-president Mrs. R. S. McLaughlin, other members of the hospital board and staff conducted the visitors through the building, and Lord Byng shook hands with two little tots who are patients and then declared the new addition open.

Church and Chimes.

The new St George's Anglican church for which his predecessor, the Duke of Devonshire turned the first sod in June, 1919 was inspected and the new Carswell memorial chimes played the Coronation hymn. At the centre street school, H. S. Smith, with members of the board of education and over four thousand children were stationed outside where "O Canada" was sung and a large bouquet was presented to Lady Byng.

"The garden of the unforgotten," Oshawa's war memorial was the central point of the afternoon where over 10,000 people assembled to greet the royal guests, and, after Lord Byng had inspected a guard of honor composed of war veterans, under Capt. J. A. McGibbon, the party advanced to the foot of the memorial where they were received the war memorial committee, Mrs. Kiaser, Mrs. F. W. Cowan, Geo. W. McLaughlin and T. B Mitchell. The final scene of the afternoon was staged in the local armouries when an illustrated address from the city of Oshawa was presented to Lord Byng to which the Governor General J. Trick with a photo of himself and shook hands with those who wished to personally meet him.

the bank in whom he trusted? I submit that it was no duty of his to question the honesty of the bank officials and that he was justified in concurring in the report bearing the approval of these officers. If not where does the bank director's duty end. Take the pulp limits security as an example. Was it his duty to have an independent cruise made of these limits to see if they were worth the value placed upon them. Not until August 1923 was this man's suspicion aroused. Then Calvert brought in a report. If Calvert knew about what was in the report before the time he made it then he was derelict in his duty. Daly and Mason must have known about it and would say Calvert also. I submit that no one would act as a bank director if he be held individually responsible for bank policy," conclue Mr Hellmuth.

Separate Case.

Mr. N. D Rowell also defence counsel said that the judge must try this case separate from the others and try to divorce his mind from the post mortem of the last eleven weeks. He said that if Stewart had had any reason to doubt the bank he would never have become a director in 1922. Then no one had any doubt. He had reason to assume as a director that any loans which were not reported to the board were all right and he had a right to have confidence in Mr. Daly as the government of the day had when they gave him an important position "As a matter of fact," said Mr. Rowell, "the destiny of the ank was fixed before Mr. Stewart became a director."

"It was very greedy of you to eat your little sister's share of cake." "But you said, Ma, that I was always to take her part!"

THE PLEASURES OF MEMORY

There are some persons so constituted that they cannot bear to be reminded of events that happened in the halcyon days of their youth. These are usually of the male persuasion. There are others who are extremely sensitive on the subject of the ages of their children, especially when those children have passed their first decade. These are usually of the female variety. I have known men, fine, big, able-bodied fellows, who seemed to deem it almost an insult to be slapped on the back, and hailed with the exclamation, "Why, old chap, I haven't seen you for forty years"; and I have known women to be driven to the verge of tears when complimented on the rapidity with which their boys and girls were advancing towards manhood and womanhood. It never seems to soften the blow if the mother is told she looks remarkably young to possess such a fine, grown-up looking family.

Well, to show that there is at least one in the community who is above such a weakness, I intend in this article to hark back many years, and recount one or two incidents connected with my early career.

I have been led to this through having read within the past few weeks two very interesting autobiographies, the one by the late Lord Brampton, better known as Judge Hawkins, and the other by Lady Battersea. In both these volumes I came upon names of people of whom through exigencies of circumstance I at one time happened to have some knowledge.

In 1871 I was passing my summer holidays at Boulogne. The Franco-Prussian War was in its closing phases but only the faintest echoes seemed to reach us and not the remotest sign of worry or trepidation showed on the faces of the inhabitants of that well-known watering place. French and English alike seemed to be enjoying life as if there was no such thing as war, although the guns could be still heard booming fitfully in the direction of Paris. Boulogne is or was a place largely patronized by English people not only on account of its cheapness and proximity to England, but also because it afforded a safe asylum for delinquents who had accumulated large sums on the wrong side of the ledger. Debtors made for Boulogne as naturally as a duck makes for the water, and the consequence was that one was always certain to come across a large number of individuals whose antecedents were not altogether unknown at Scotland Yard, and other juridical centres.

I was only a small boy at the time, and my chief enjoyment consisted in joining with other youths of my own age in resisting the onslaughts of the French gamins who used to congregate at certain spots for the express purpose of making raids on the young English visitors. With thirty or forty a side the battles were generally fierce, and sticks and even stones were very much favored instruments in our juvenile warfare. I remember, on one occasion, being driven in my extremity to the use of a yard loaf, which I used as a battle-axe on the head of an urchin who had applied to me the offensive epithet of "fat little English pig." When I returned home with the mutilated portion that had remained in my hands, I was given a severe lecture, mitigated somewhat by the humour of a maiden aunt who remarked that I at least deserved credit for having found an entirely novel use for "the staff of life."

In my jaunts through the town I used to meet a very peculiar-looking individual named Lord Capel. I believe he really was a member of the aristocracy, but that for reasons best known to himself, he had chosen Boulogne as his permanent abiding-place. He was a well-known character in the town, and in him one witnessed the very embodiment of the Dandyism of the early days of the 19th century. He was a man of quite eighty years of age, but he strove to carry himself as erect as a young man of thirty, and he tripped along the street, twirling a tasselled cane, and casting arch glances at all the pretty girls he happened to meet. It was only at close range that one recognized that here was a most pitiful example of senile conceit and vanity. A complete coating of enamel covered his features, but neither the paint nor the powder that he used to assist the enamel sufficed to hide the inroads that time had made. Try as he might to keep his figure erect his knees quivered as he walked, and the smile that occasionally broke through his lips was ghastly to witness.. His costume consisted of a black velvet jacket, knee-breeches of the same material, black silk stockings and low shoes ornamented with magnificent silver buckles. His shirt was a wonderful affair, with long frills of the finest cambric floating over the coat lapels, and extending so high as almost to hide the broad stock that encircled his throat. On his head he wore a glossy beaver of the shape common to the gay young blades of the Regency.

It was really an affecting spectacle to gaze upon that peripatetic skeleton, waging such a senseless fight against the ravages of Time. Whenever I think of him now I am reminded of examples of architecture whose originally splendid proportions, fallen into decay, have been mended up bit by bit till the effect presented to the sightseer has become incongruous and fantastic to a degree.

Another memory connected with Boulogne, was the sight vouchsafed to me of thousands of people trudging down to the Capecure Pier and sands to be eye-witnesses of the destruction of the world. Dr. Cumming, a well known preacher and prophet of those days, had foretold that the world was to be struck by a comet, and that all mankind was to perish. When fateful day dawned the town was astir, and as the hours wore on most of the inhabitants forsook the streets to be witnesses of the tremendous spectacle. But when evening came, and it was evident that there had been some serious miscalculation in Dr. Cumming's prophecy, there were a few of the crabbed variety, who felt that they had been imposed upon. They appeared to be quite indignant at having been robbed of a sight for which they had been waiting eagerly for hours. Dr. Cumming was quite a prolific writer and has the honor of figuring in the Dictionary of National Biography.—F.M.D.

ADVERTISING CODE

Department Stores Adopt Furniture Advertising Code.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27. — The board of directors of the National Dry Goods Association has adopted a code for the truthful advertising of furniture, according to Lew Hahn, managing director of the association.

The code is in accordance with the "Name the Woods" campaign, carried on by National Vigilance Committee of the Associated Advertising Club of the World, Mr. Hahn said. The same code has been put in effect by the Furniture Manufacturers' Association of Grand Rapids, Mich.

Before determining its course, the boardof directors of the Dry Goods Association made a comprehensive study of conditions throughout the furniture advertising field to prove its practicability.

The code consists of two rules which set forth that, in advertising furniture in which exposed surfaces are of one wood shall be designated by the name of that wood, and where the exposed surfaces are of more than one wood, the principal wood used shall designate the furniture.

DREAMS

It has been generally believed that dreams of burials always forecast a coming marriage.

However, close study of this class of dreams has led to the conclusions that such visions mean several things. For instance, if the burial is being made while the sun is shining and everything is bright, worries you had will vanish and you will be happy again.

If, however, the burial takes place in rain, or the sky is dark and dreary, sickness of loved ones may be looked for.

Interpretations.

To be knitting is a warning that your peace of mind may be destroyed by idle gossip.

A priest or clergyman appears in your visions to remind you that a change of actions on your part is quite necessary.

Should you awaken from a dream to find yourself weeping, be careful of offending a friend, or being untrue to one who trusts you.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Farm Property Changes Hands—Social Events in Town.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 27.—Mrs. Joseph Malin, Balclava street, had the misfortune to sprain her ankle badly on Saturday night. As she was going to cross the street she was at the place where the street was dug out for a sewer and fell into the ditch as it was dark, though she was carrying a lantern. She is suffering a lot from the sprain.

The concert given on Tuesday night in the Sunday School room of the Methodist church by the first company of Rangers, Girl Guides and Brownies was pronounced by all to be one of the best concerts given. Most of the items on the program were new and different from most programs. There were about thirty Rangers and Guides and as many more Brownies.

Miss Grace Payne is the captain of the Rangers and Guides and Miss Helen Wood (Brown Owl) and Miss Evelyn Irwin (Tawny Owl) have charge of the Brownies.

The programme was varied and as follows:

Opening chorus—Guide Song, given by the Rangers and Guides, after which the Brownies appeared and gave their Grand Salute.

The 19th Psalm was repeated by the Guides and the 24th Psalm by the Brownies. While all were on the platform some of the Brownies gave recitations: "Polly Brown", by Florence Bibby; "The New Brownie", Iona McPherson. A soprano and alto duet "Stars of the Summer Night" was beautifully sung by the Guides. Recitation, "Lookin' Blue" by Grace Irwin. The next item, "A good day's work," by eight girls telling by singing what they had done during the day. Some of the day's work done was very humorous.

The Story of "Pandora" was then told splendidly by Miss N. M. Hoover. A play "Pandora" then followed carrying out the story just told. Corinne Cassan acted the part of Pandora. Miss Helen Thomas, with her company of evil spirits, enticed Pandora from the right path and she finds herself in the hands of the evil spirits when Miss Hazel Mason, as Hope comes to her rescue and between them Pandora and Hope change the evil spirits to good ones.

Cherrie Turner sang a solo "The little hut on the hill." She also responded to an encore. Follow the Gleam (the Holy Grail) was sung by several of the older girls, Miss Helen Wood taking the solo part.

The Brownies then had a good play followed by a Freak Drill, which caused much merriment. A dialogue where some girls were wishing to be brownies and while they were working the Brownies came and helped them. A very pretty scene with a camp fire ceremony followed and the beautiful guide law chant was sung.

A lesson on cookery where King Alfred of old was stopping (incognito) at a place and he was left to bake some cakes and burned them, for which he got a severe scolding from the dame of the house. When she found he was King she was filled with remorse. The fireplace added to the charm of the picture. Miss Verna Sanders, Miss Rose Hollenby and Miss Ethel Horseman had this part of the programme.

The Guides and Rangers looked very pretty in their suits of dark blue with bright blue ties and large hats and the wee Brownies in their suits of brown.

Miss Cherrie Turner played two instrumental solos while the Guides were preparing for their plays.

The Sunday School room was filled and all present could not help but enjoy the program. The proceeds amounted to sixty dollars.

Captain Payne of the Guides and Brown Owl of the Brownies and others who helped deserve great credit for the splendid program and the way the girls were trained as each one did her part well.

Mr. Roy Bell's father and sister, Mrs. W. Bush of Frankford, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Bell, Balaclava street.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard McKelvie and Mr. Craig Beattie of Seymour, spent the week-end with friends in Toronto.

Miss Edith Stillman of Queen's University, spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elsee Stillman in Seymour. While home she attended the "At Home" in the High School on Friday night.

Mrs. Harry Free of Queens', Kingston, spent the week-end with his mother, Mrs. Henry Free, in Seymour.

Mrs. S. J. West, Sebastapool street is ill this week and under the care of a nurse.

Mrs. I. Bassett, of Rochester, who has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ezekiel Hubble, Front street, and other friends for over a week, returned to her home on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Shanfield, Grand Road, who had an auction sale of their household goods last week, left for Detroit where they will reside, on Tuesday.

Mr. J. R. Cooke of Kingston made a business trip to Campbellford and spent Tuesday in town.

Mrs. J. Dodmill of Rawdon, has purchased the farm situated in the east quarter of lot four in the ninth concession of Rawdon. She, with her two sons, intend moving onto the farm soon.

Mr. W. Diamond of Toronto motored to Campbellford on Tuesday. Mr. and Mrs. John Haig, who were married in Toronto last Thursday, motored to Campbellford with Mr. Diamond and will reside in Seymour.

INCREASE THEIR FLEET

Germans Add More Ships to South American Service.

HAMBURG, Nov. 27.—Ocean travel between South America and Germany will be given a new impetus by the addition of three steamers to the South American fleets of the North German Lloyd and the Hamburg-South American lines.

These vessels are the Sierra Morena, the Monte Sarmiento and the Monte Oliva. The first mentioned left for Buenos Aires late in October, and the others wil begin service shortly. Two of the ships will carry third class and steerage passengers only, an indication of the interest in emigrant trade.

"Look here," said one irate clubman to another, "did you say my wife had a face like a bull-terrier?" "I did," answered the other; "what about it?" "Take off your coat," shouted the irate one. "Nobody's going to say things against that dog and get away with it."

CHRISTMAS TREATS COMING FROM JAPAN

Special Train, Loaded With Japanese Oranges For Eastern Ontario.

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 27. — (Canadian Press). — Special silk trains zig-zagging their way across the Canadian prairies are ordinary sights, but last evening the Canadian Pacific Railway inaugurated a new special train service, when a train on special time left here with Japanese oranges for points as far east as Montreal.

Every car in the long line of forty-six cars is fitted with refrigerator service, and the oranges will be kept at the right temperature until delivered. On this train there are 156,000 boxes of little oranges from the Orient, which arrived on the Empress of Canada this week in preparation for the Christmas trade. Besides this big shipment for the Canadian trade east of here, Victoria got 4,400 boxes and Seattle 7,850 boxes from the big liner's cargo. Another Christmas treat to come in on the big liner was a shipment of 5,350 sacks of Japanese walnuts in shell and 2,286 cases of shelled walnuts.

LIFE IMPRISONMENT.

Nagging of Wife Who Was Murdered, Saved Husband From Execution.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 27. — (United Press). — Governor Vic. Donaghey gave official recognition to a nagging wife as mitigation in a case of first degree murder and ordered the death penalty imposed on James Brady, of Sandusky, commuted to life imprisonment.

It is believed to be the first time in history that the goading of a wife ever re-acted to save from execution the husband who murdered her.

MR. CLIFF MISKA

Salesman For Skin Cream Learns How To Clear Up Pimply Complexion

Mr. Cliff Miska, of 595 Ninth Avenue, Astoria, L. I., writes: "I was a salesman of creams for healing pimples, blemishes, etc., but when my face broke out with blotches, pimples, and blackheads I tried one salve after another with no permanent results. I found it as impossible to sell skin cream as a bald headed man finds selling hair tonic. Finally I decided I would have to get at the cause—the blood. I was amazed to find that within a few days after taking Carter's Little Liver Pills, my skin took on a new healthful look, blemishes started to disappear, and I felt like a new person all around. Now I know what to do when I have a pimply skin, you bet." This old reliable remedy treats such complaints in a safe way. It has been used all over the world for 67 years. 25c at all good drug stores.

FABLES ON HEALTH

"Did you hear about the Jones child?" Mrs. Mann asked excitedly of her husband when he returned from work. "The poor little thing got into the medicine closet some way or other and all but poisoned herself to death."

Many such accidents occur in many places daily and should be a sermon to parents.

Or have the cabinet separated into two sections, one of which would contain lysol, carbolic acid, or whatever there is in the poison line and the other to contain the medicines.

A good selection of medical supplies to have on hand are: castor oil, quinine, bicarbonate of soda, adhesive plaster, peroxide of hydrogen, iodine, camphorated oil, alcohol, rhubarb, turpentine, alum and possibly some sort of salts.

Never put any precription of unknown content into the chest and don't let precription medicine stand a year or so and then try to use it.

Some of the contents may have deteriorated in strength.

DEPART WITH BONDS.

NEW LAMP BURN 94% AIR

Beats Electric or Gas

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U.S. Government, and 35 leading uniersities, and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up; is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coil oil).

The inventor, F. S. Johnson, 246 Craig Street W., Montreal, is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him to-day for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.

NEWS OF KEENE AND DISTRICT

Lighting System Gives Village a New Status.

KEENE, Nov. 27—Mr. Wm. Plunkett has been successful in getting his lighting system working this week. The village street has been lighted along with the houses and places of business that have their wiring done. Mr. Plunkett has gone to a big expense and a lot of work to give the village a most essential asset to the home and business life. It is hoped that the village people will not fail to appreciate the efforts which he has put forth for the benefit of the community and get behind him to the extent of wiring their homes and making it a financial success for Mr. Plunkett and a great convenience and comfort to themselves.

A petition was largely signed and presented to the Township Council, petitioning them to stand the cost of lighting the streets by taking a certain amount of the village taxes usually spent in the village on roads improvement, etc.

In consideration of the largely signed petition, the Township Council should not fail to consider some degree of action. Mr. Plunkett can guarantee his patrons lots of power. He has installed a largeg gasoline eng ne as an emergency for driving the plant, should the water power at any period of the year fail. The lights so far have been fine, and Hydro officials have given their opinions that the plant should be an unqualified success.

A W. M. S. Meeting.

The W. M. S. of the Methodist Church met at the home of Mrs. Gilbert Howson on Thursday. A large number was in attendance and a good time indulged in. A large quilt was quilted and sent to the W.M.S. at Oshawa. Refreshments were served, following the quilting.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Adamson held a large party at their home on Tuesday evening. A large crowd was in attendance, about 80 young people. The evening was spent in dancing, card playing, etc. A bounteous supper was served afterwards.

Music was supplied by Messrs. Francis, Grahame and Davidson.

Methodist Church Anniversary.

The Keene Methodist Church will hold their annual anniversary services on Sunday, Nov. 30th. Special services will be held on Sunday morning and evening. The Rev. Mr. Barnult, of Stirling, will be the speaker. The choir is preparing special music for the occasion.

On Tuesday, December 2, a fowl supper and concert will be held in the Town Hall, Keene. Following the supper, Cunningham's 30-piece orchestra will give a concert, augmented by local talent. A good time can be depended on.

The Rev. Andrew McLaughlin, B.A., B.D., assisted by the ladies of the congregation, are sparing no pains to make this the outstanding event of the season here.

Miss Jean Knowles is now on the operating staff of the Municipal Telephone.

Messrs. Parnell and Scott, of Niagara, returned home on Sunday, after spending the past week hunting in this vicinity.

Mr. Shering, of Lakefield, was in the village on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Montgomery, of Hastings, was visiting friends here this week.

Mr. Herb. McKay and party removed their cattle from Sugar Island on Friday. The task was made more difficult than usual on account of the lake being frozen in some places.

Miss Fairfield, of Toronto, is visiting at the home of Mrs. Wm. Nelson.

Rev. Andrew McLaughlin was a visitor to Belleville on Tuesday, attending the Kiwanian luncheon.

Mr. David Tucker is busy putting the finishing touches on his new residence before the severe weather sets in.

Quite a number of people are getting the radio fever here. Dr. Walsh has installed one at his office.

We are glad to report the improvement in the condition of the sick folks of this community.

Mr. Jas. Ashburn is steadily improving at St. Joseph's Hospital.

Mr. Robt. Eason is holding his own.

Mrs. Archibald's condition is still improving.

Mrs. Benjamin Kindred has recovered from her recent illness.

Mrs. Wilbert Fife is expecting to come home from Nicholls Hospital, where she underwent a very serious operation.

We are sorry to report the illness of Mrs. Wm. McFarlane, of Keene.

Mrs. Pat. Roache is slowly improving after her recent illness.

Mr. Joseph Taylor had a narrow escape from what may have been a very serious accident. The radius rods on a truck which he was driving broke, the truck running into the ditch.

The duck shooters have practically all left the lake. There are still some ducks on the lake.

SAYS PRETTY GIRLS MAKE YOUTHS ATTEND CHURCH

Beauties in Pews, Best Plan, Says Minister, Recalling Youth.

PHILADELPHIA, November 27. —A few pews filled with good looking girls will draw more young men to church than any other agency, the Rev. Cyrus T. Glessner, of Christ Reformed Church, Norristown, told pastors at the Reformed Ministers' weekly meeting.

"The young ladies will attract the young men to church," said the minister. "They used to when I was a youth, and I don't think that human nature has changed."

The Rev. E. G. Snyder, of Tabor Reformed Church agreed, but she called for some "good, old-fashioned sermons" to help the girls along.

Social Events in Town—Play Repeated—Personal Mention.

HAVELOCK, Nov. 27.—The southern play, entitled "Because I Love You," given in the Town Hall on Monday evening by the Amateur Dramatic Club of Tweed, under the auspices of Our Lady of Mount Carmel Parish, Havelock, attracted a large crowd. Many from the surrounding country and other towns were present to enjoy the splendid programme.

Mrs. J. Black, of Tweed, delighted the audience with two readings between acts.

The proceeds amounted to $135.

Farewell Sermon.

Rev. J. McIlroy of Knox Church preached his farewell sermon to a large congregation on Sunday evening. Mr. McIlroy took his message from the last part of the historical life of the Apostle Paul, as recorded in the 28th chapter of Acts, and stated that when the curtain fell at the close of the Apostle's career it found him full of Jesus and pressing Jesus on everyone, and he too at the close of his ministry here and also at the close of his life's work would like to be found doing the same as the Apostle, and as he might not have another opportunity of addressing them on this side of eternity urged everyone to accept salvation now and not wait as Felix did for a more convenient season, which never came.

Special music was provided by the choir, and included a solo by Mrs. McIlroy.

Mr. McIlroy leaves this week for Toronto, where he has received a call from Roger Street Presbyterian Church.

Rev. Mr. Wesley, of Norwood, who has been appointed Moderator by the Presbytery, will conduct the services next Sunday and declare the pulpit vacant.

Was Repeated.

The entertainment given by the Young Women's Auxiliary of Knox Church on Thursday last was a decided success, and by special request was repeated last evening.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Haig, Mr. and Mrs. P. Haig, Mr. and Mrs. C. Roberts, Mr. and Mrs. H. Cook and Mrs. J. Cochrane motored to Belleville on Tuesday to attend the funeral of the late Mrs. Seymour, whose death occurred on Saturday at the home of her parents of that place.

The deceased was the wife of the Rev. E. O. Seymour, pastor of the Methodist Church here.

EGYPT IS ANGERED AT BRITISH DEMAND

World War Is In Everybody's Mouth To-day—Trouble May Occur.

ROME, Nov. 27. — (United Press.)—The word "war" is in everybody's mouth, a special despatch from Alexandria said to-day, declaring the British demands for satisfaction for the death of Sir Lee Stack, had aroused all Egypt to a fury of hatred against all things English.

There have been no outward incidents in Alexandria, the despatch says, but the people are excited and trouble may occur at any moment. The Nationalist hot heads are fanning the populace with inflammatory speeches and propaganda.

"It is realized, however, that a mass action against the British is impossible," the despatch concluded.

LARGE BARN BURNED.

MOOSEJAW, Nov. 27—(Canadian Press).—Fire on Tuesday night destroyed the large barn of Frank Colenut, two miles north of Caron. In addition to the barn and loss of considerable grain, thirty head of cattle, eight horses, three hogs and three valuable wolf hounds were burned to death.

"Eczema on My Face Completely Relieved"

Miss Winifred Ernest, Box 46, Blockhouse, N. S., writes:

"Ever since I was a little child, I suffered with eczema on my face. At times my face was completely covered with large sores, and I tried nearly every kind of medicine that I heard of with no results. This lasted for over twenty years, until one day I asked the advice of my druggist, who bade me give Dr. Chase's Ointment a trial. After using the Ointment for a few days, the sores began to heal, and soon I was completely relieved of the disease."

SIR ADAM BECK IS READY TO RESIGN

Hydro Chieftain Will Not Stand For Attacks Made Against Him.

TORONTO, Nov. 27.—(Canadian Press.)— If Sir Adam Beck's presence on the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission is to result in continued attacks on and investigations of that commission, Sir Adam will resign. So he informed members of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association at their autumn meeting, in the city hall yesterday.

This declaration by the Hydro chieftain, adoption by the Association of a resolution expressing the utmost confidence in his integrity and ability and airing of vigorous protests against the attitude of the Federal government toward the Hydro's plan for development of the St. Lawrence river powers at Morrisburg, occupied the attention of delegates from practically all larger centres of the province.

Representatives of the Central and Eastern Ontario municipalities led in voicing a demand for St. Lawrence power, but when it came to adoption of a resolution asking the Dominion authorities to grant immediate approval of the Morrisburg scheme the Association was a unit, there being not a single dissenting vote.

OLD TESTAMENT IN NEW PHRASING

Translation Made in Simple Language Child Can Understand

SOME EXAMPLES

For Man-in-Street, Says Author Not Scholar

An Old Testament stripped of its picturesque metaphor and poetic phrase, and reduced to language so simple that a child can understand it, has been introduced to the world.

It represents an attempt by Dr. James Moffat, of Glasgow, the Church historian, to make the Old Testament a "real live book" by clarifying the complexities and obscurities of the authorized version through a translation into modern English, simple almost to the point of starkness, of a half-million or so words that compose the book. The translation is the result of eight years' work.

The first volume (Genesis to Esther) has been published by Hodder and Stoughton, and the second volume will appear early in December.

The bold prosaic simplicity of Dr. Moffat's translation is exemplified in the following interpretations of God's injunction to Noah.

The word "barge" is substituted for "ark":—

Old Translation.—Make thee an ark of gopher wood; rooms shalt thou make in the ark, and shalt pitch it within and without with pitch.

Dr. Moffat's translation.—Build a barge of cypress wood; build cabins inside the barge and cover it with pitch inside and out.

Old Translation.—And the King and his men went to Jerusalem unto the Jebusites, the inhabitants of the land, which spoke unto David, saying, "Except thou take away the blind and the lame thou shalt not come in hither," thinking David cannot come in hither. Nevertheless David took the stronghold of Zion, the same is the City of David . . . . . So David dwelt in the fort and called it the City of David.

Dr. Moffat's translation.—And the King and his men went to Jersulem against the Jebusites, the natives of the country. They told David, "You will never get in here, blind men and cripples could drive you off." They thought David would never get in.... David took up his residence in the stronghold; he called it Davidsburg.

"Dr. Moffat's interpretation is going to make the Old Testament a real live book; it should give it a new lease of life," said Arthur Hird, head of the theological department of Hodder and Stoughton.

"It will be welcomed by theological students throughout the world for its lucid interpretation of the Old Testament, although it may be criticized by some as too stark, bold and prosaic.

"Dr. Moffat, however, has not written it so much for students as for the man-in-the-street."

No one man has ever before translated the whole of the Bible into modern English as Dr. Moffat has done. In 1913 he published a translation of the New Testament, and he is the first to translate the Old Testament into modern English.

FIFTY YEARS' WORK WITHOUT WEEK OFF

Old Miner Refuses Pension of Shilling Weekly Offered Him

An old man who worked more than fifty years in a coal mine and has never had a week's holiday, has refused a pension of 1s. a week offered to him by the Wigan Pensions Committee.

The town clerk explained to the committee that the old man's income, from investments totalling £1,084, had been worked out at 487 under the rules governing old-age pensions.

One of his sons, in protesting against the offer of 1s a week, said that a large part of the capital had been given to his father at various times by himself and his brothers to make ends meet.

The committee decided to complain to the Prime Minister, the Minister of Health, and the local M.P., Mr. Parkinson, the retiring Comptroller of the King's Household, about the method of assessment of property under the Pensons Acts.

BISHOP'S NEPHEW WEDS CHOIR GIRL

When the Rev. E. F. Winnington Ingram, son of the Prebendary of Hereford Cathedral, and a nephew of the Bishop of London, was married to Miss Gladys Armstrong, a member of his choir, and daughter of a Tenbury gardener, the bride was presented at Tenbury church door by members of the choir with a silver horseshoe.

Until recently the Rev. E. F. Winnington-Ingram was vicar of Tenbury, but after the announcement of the engagement he exchanged his vicarage for that of St. Michael's Chirbury, Salop. The bridegroom is 42 years of age, and the bride, who had been employed as clerk at a local hardware store, is 21.

The marriage service was conducted by the bridegroom's father, along with the Rev. J. A. Chesterton and the Rev. P. Sylvester. The couple afterwards left for London in a car that the bridegroom had presented to the bride.

BANS TELEPHONES.

Constant ringing of telephone bells disturbs office efficiency, according to Walter Brown, of London, toy manufacturer. Brown has entirely dispensed with telephones in his office and employs a large fleet of boys to carry messages to different parts of the city.

NOT TOO OLD AT 70.

When he retires from West London Police Court on January 31, his 70th birthday, Mr. E. Forbes Lankester, the magistrate, intends to take up again the work of a barrister.

He says that he does not believe that men should retire because they are 70.

Shoe "Menagerie" Latest For Women In London Town

The up to date woman in London has a regular "menagerie" in her shoe cup-board. To dainty footgear—including those made of crocodile, lizard, alligator, shark and sea leopard—she must now add a pair made of ostrich skin.

This is a new departure, and shoes composed of it look smart and promise to wear well. It is brown, and the holes out of which feathers have been plucked show a deeper tone and make an effective decoration.

A shoemaker who has introduced these shoes is also making models in walrus skin, and is experimenting with the skin of the rayfish, which he thinks will be very successful for footwear.

IRISHWOMAN RUNS PIRATE BUS FLEET

Helen Kelly Makes London Sit Up and Take Notice

Miss Helen Jane O'Farrell Kelly is the first woman in London to own a fleet of omnibuses.

Though she is only 26, she has an ambitious scheme of getting together a really big "pirate" fleet. She told a press representative that she has three buses running, and three more on order.

"Our 'buses are painted green and called the 'Shamrock' fleet. So far we have done very well. The only difficulty we experience is finding a garage."

Miss Kelly is herself an experienced motor driver of commercal vehicles, and during the war drove a heavy motor lorry. "I should run one of my own buses if the regulations permitted," she added. "As it is, I am exclusively on the business side of the firm."

Explaining how she came to establish the enterprise, the youthful manageress said the family interests were at one time in house property, but they considered the bus business would prove more interesting and lucrative, and they made a start with one.

"I shall have as many buses built as the business warrants," she said, "and I am quite satisfied up to the present."

Big Thread Firm Increased Profits and Pays Big Dividends

Net profits of £3,107,000 for the year ended June 30 are reported by J. and P. Coats, Ltd., the great cotton-thread combine, as compared with £2,889,000 in the previous year.

Dividends and bonus will be made up to 17½ per cent. for the year, as before. This, on the company's ordinary share capital of £14,750,000, will call for more than two-and-a-half millions, and payments on the Preference shares will raise the total dividend payment to more than two-and-three-quarter millions.

In addition the company places £200,000 to dividend reserve, which received nothing last year. The fund was then £2,100,000, so that it will now be £2,300,000.

CORK CORPORATION FIRED BY LETTER

Irish Free State Removes Officials for Alleged Inefficiency

As members of Cork Corporation were about to assemble the town clerk informed them that he had just been handed a sealed order from the Minister for Local Government dissolving the corporation.

The announcement came as a bombshell in the midst of the assembly. The order stated that as the result of an inquiry into the council's performance of its duties the Minister for Local Government was satisfied that these duties were not duly and effectually discharged.

In a further communication received from the Ministry it was stated that the health of the citizens was gravely imperilled by laxity in sanitary administration and delay in providing a pure water supply. The general financial position had become most unsatisfactory and the rating burden was abnormally high.

The commissioner appointed to carry on the affairs of the town is Philip Monahan, ex-mayor of Drogheda, who took over the duties of Kerry County Council when it was dissolved.

The corporation was largely composed of Republicans.

FATHER BRANDS HIS SONS AS WARNING

A father's method of teaching his three little sons not to play with fire was described at Mansfield, when William Pell was charged with ill-treating the boys, whose ages are six, four, and three years respectively.

It was stated that the children had been caught playing with fire at home, and that their father took the children to the fire and deliberately burned their knuckles against the bars. Their hands were branded with three-inch burns that only healed after three weeks.

Pell admitted burning the children's hands and said he had no intention of being cruel. He thought it would be a warning to them.

In view of the father's poor circumstances the Bench let him off with a fine of 20s., saying that his conduct was inexcusable.

SEARCH FOR BODY OF SAXON HAROLD

Demolition of Southwark Church Gives Rise to Move

WATCH FOR RELICS

King's Remains Disinterred Were Recovered Later in Thames

The headless body of Harold the First —"Harold Harefoot"—King of England from 1035 to 1040, is to be sought for during the demolition of St. Olave's Church, Southwark.

Other relics, too, of the same and later periods, are expected to be found, and the most careful scrutiny is to be made.

"There is a tradition," said the Rev. T. P. Stevens, "that Harold the First was buried in St. Olave's, and weight is given to this view by no less an authority than Professor Oman, of Oxford.

"Every effort is being made to secure that any relics shall not be overlooked or destroyed, and appropriate steps have been taken by the London County Council and the Bermondsey Borough Council.

"In addition, Woolwich Antiquarian Society and Greenwich Antiquarian Society have petitioned the Society of Antiquaries on the subject, and the Guildhall Museum authorities have been asked to exert all their influence to save the relics that may be brought to light.

"The first church on the site of St. Olave's was built in 1020 A.D., on or near an old Danish burial ground. And the story of Harold's burial there—based on an old record—is most interesting.

"Harold died at Oxford, and was buried in Westminster Abbey. But later the body was disinterred by order of Hardicanute, beheaded, and flung contemptuously into the Thames.

"The headless body was swept down the river, and discovered by a fisherman near the spot where St. Olave's now stands, and given decent but secret burial.

HULL SHIPOWNER HAD BIG FORTUNE

Lord Nunburnholme Provides for Soldier Son's Upkeep in Will

The late Baron Nunburnholme, the famous Hull shipowner, of the family owning the Wilson Line, formerly Liberal M.P., for West Hull, left £365,327.

He left to his wife £46,000, his residence, 41, Berkeley square, and stabling in Earm street, his household and personal effects, consumable stores, etc., at Berkeley square, his motor cars, an annuity of £2,000 (in addition to a similar annuity already settled upon her), and one year's gross income from all his trusts and property, and, for the maintenance of herself and his family, the income from his estate and trusts until his eldest son attains the age of 26 years.

He left £5,000 to his wife for legacies in her discretion, stating that he made no gifts or bequests by his will in favor of charities or servants or other strangers in blood as he had already made, or intended to make, such gifts in his lifetime:

£4,000 to his son, the present Baron, "for his upkeep and equipment in the Army," until he shall attain the age of 26 years.

Subject to the above conditions he left:

His unsettled real estate at or near Hunmanby, and his household and personal effects not otherwise bequeathed to his eldest son on attaining the agеof 26 years.

£50,000 from the Nunburnholme trust to his wife for life, with remainder to his younger son on attaining majority.

£20,000 from that trust upon trust for his daughter, Lady Wintertoni and from his late father's trust he left the shares in Thomas Wilson, Sons, and Co., to his eldest son on attaining the age of 26 years, subject to £100,000 part thereof being held for the benefit of his younger son.

SCOTTISH PEERS - ARE RE-ELECTED

The Duke of Montrose, K.T., Lord Clerk Register of Scotland, presided, and a guard of honor was provided by Holyrood High Constables, under the command of the Moderator, Colonel Robert Clark.

At the Dissolution of the last Parliament the 16 Representative Scottish Peers were:—

Baron Forbes, Baron Saltoun, Baron Sinclair, the Earl of Calthness, the Earl of Morton, Baron Sempil, the Earl of Mar and Kellie, Baron Balfour of Burleigh, the Earl of Haddington, Viscount Falkland, Baron Fairfax, the Earl of Lindsay, the Earl of Airlie, the Earl of Leven and Melville, Baron Elphaven and Stenton, and the Marquess of Queensberry.

As the result of the election the Earl of Breadalbane takes the place of Baron Forbes. The other 15 Peers were re-elected.

SWEETEST SINGERS FOUND IN SLIGO

The most beautiful singing he had heard was not in England or Scotland, but by the "kiddies" of Sligo, Ireland, said H. S. Robertson, Glasgow, at the annual conference of the British Federation of Musical Competition Festivals, at Central Hall, Westminster.

It was estimated that during 1923 upwards of 250,000 amateur musicians sang at musical competition festivals.

SCOUT AND GUIDE CHIEFS

Drama of Death Premonition Enacted In Court at Swansea

Elizabeth Seth, a widow of 58 years, appeared, accompanied by her son, to ask that another person should be bound over to keep the peace towards her.

"I am not afraid of this person in a physical sense," said Mrs. Seth, "but I am afraid I may drop dead at any moment."

Mrs. Seth then stood down, and her son spoke to the Bench on her behalf, also expressing the fear that his mother might drop dead.

The son had scarcely spoken the words when his mother, who was standing close to him, fell down and died within a few minutes.

There was a painful sensation in the court at this realization of the widow's premonition.

Her son was overcome with grief, and as several people ran to his mother's assistance he cried out to the Bench:

"There, sir! It is about time she had justice!"

The dead woman was then carried out of court.

YORKSHIRE JURYMEN DISREGARD EXPERTS

A Pontefract, Yorkshire, jury declined to convict on finger-print evidence alone Milson Whitworth, 19, who was charged with shopbreaking.

Expert evidence was that 13 points in Whitworth's finger-prints exactly resembled those on the window by which the shop was entered and that the chance of any two sets of prints being alike was one in 56,000,000. Four like points were considered strong, and where there were ten it was stated there should not be the slightest doubt.

The defence was an alibi, and the jury found Whitworth not guilty.

BISHOP AND THE RECENT ELECTION

The Bishop of Birmingham, in a letter to the Birmingham Mail, says:

Let us (in our sermons) avoid rhetoric, such as an overthrow of a Government ready to embrace those whose hands are red with the blood of hundreds of bishops and thousands of priests. An Executive which contains men like Lord Parmoor and Sir Henry Slesser has no need of anti-Christian bias.

Its international policy has not been determined by disregard of Christian standards. Labor is out; but Labor will return in one of those strong reactions which are to be expected in our post-war political history, and it would be disastrous to the welfare of the Church if, owing to injudicious sermons at the present time, some future Labor victory should be regarded popularly as a rebuff to Christianity.

PICKS MOTOR-CAR TO BEAT BOLSHEVISM

"I, like Lord Ashfield, have just returned from a long tour in the United States," writes Lord Bledisloe to the Evening Standard, "and should like warmly to endorse his view as to the value of the working man's 'automobile' as an antidote to Bolshevism in that country.

"There are, however, two great antidotes. One is the ownership by the workman of his own motor car, and the other is the ownership by the cultivator of his own land."

HUSBAND WANTED BY WIDOW AGED 106

Mrs. Betsy Pennick, of Tiptree, Essex, who has just celebrated her 106th birthday, declares that when she has completely recovered from her illness due to shock on finding her employer dead recently, she intends looking out for a husband who would provide for her for the rest of her days.

Mrs. Pennick, who is believed to be the oldest woman in England, was married 86 years ago, and has been a widow for 40 years.

She remembers the coronation of Queen Victoria.

Graveside Riots Seen at Glasnevin; Troops Charge Crowd

Wild scenes occurred at Glasnevin, the great Dublin cemetery, when the bodies of seventeen men executed in Dublin and handed over to the relatives were reinterred.

When the cortege arrived at the cemetery they found troops in possession.

The bodies having been interred, the "Last Post" was sounded, and a firing party took up positions on each side of the graves.

The firing party had fired three rounds when the troops approached. Pandemonium followed, the crowd rushing for safety. Wreaths were smashed underfoot in the stampede and several women were knocked to the ground and trampled on. Further shooting added to the excitement.

One arrest was made.

A sharp exchange of firing occurred between Republican and Free State troops in St. Patrick's Cemetery, Dundalk, Louth, following the reinterment of six young men executed in Dundalk on January 21, 1923.

The military made seven or eight arrests.

GHOST FILM AND THE NERVOUS BOY

When a 17-year-old boy was charged at Old street, London, with begging, his mother said he had suffered in health since he saw a film, "The Haunted Bedroom," about three years ago. He dreamed and woke up thinking ghosts were coming.

The magistrate, Mr. Clarke Hall, putting the boy on probation, said he should think the pictures had a bad effect on nervous boys.

PROLIFIC PEOPLE IN LEICESTERSHIRE

Two Leicestershire couples who have recently celebrated their golden weddings — Mr. and Mrs. Hines, of Packington, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Morley, of Pegg's Green — have between them 97 descendants living.

Mr. and Mrs. Hines had ten children, of whom seven are living, 33 grandchildren, and one great-grandchild—a total of 41 living.

Mr. and Mrs. Morley have 10 children, 42 grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren, a total of 56.

The grandchildren of the latter include two well-known footballers — J. Bradford, of Birmingham, an International, and W. Bradford, of Brighton.

CHURCHILL MEDALS FOR HIS WORKERS

Mr. Winston Churchill, addressing his first meeting as the member for Epping at Chingford, said he intended to commemorate his success by presenting a little medal to each of his workers. He stated: "I am very happy to feel that after some ups and downs—quite as many downs as ups, and many vicissitudes, I have at length found myself with a large, powerful, and intelligent community of citizens, with whom I am in the most natural and hearty accord.

"We must hope that we are in for a quiet time, at any rate for a little while. I think we are entitled to look forward to a period of tranquility so far as politics are concerned."

RENTS SOAR UPWARD IN CENTRAL LONDON

Rents in the City of London, especially in favored quarters, are still upward in trend.

The City Corporation has just obtained an increase from £285 to £520 on the renewal of a lease of a suite of offices in Laurence Pountney Hill.

Rents in the City are twice as high as they were before the war, and rather than pay them many business people are leaving the "square mile."

HIS PRIVILEGE.

A Liverpool man who was taking pet shots with a revolver at the picture of a former sweetheart on his bureau was arrested for intoxication. When he told in court the story of how mercilessly the girl had betrayed him, he was released without punishment. Women in the audience took up a collection to buy him a bouquet of flowers before he left the court.

JAILED FOR LIFE AS STATE DEBTORS

Men Mulcted for Gun-Running Cannot Pay Cash

OLD LAW WORKS

Must Stay Locked Up While Their Families Starve

Captain F. G. Firmin, R.N.R., one of the defendants in the recent gun-running case, against whom the King's Bench Division recently awarded penalties amounting to £65,000, was arrested and lodged in Maidstone Goal.

Police officers, instructed by the High Sheriff of Kent, visited his house in Langley Road, Beckenham, and took him away.

The other two men concerned in the case—C. H. Attfield and C. P. Hinman—are imprisoned at Brixton.

An interesting situation is created by the imprisonment of these three men.

They all owe large sums of money to the State, and as they cannot pay them they are imprisoned for life as State debtors.

They were found guilty of illegally exporting machine-guns, and the jury ordered the following payments:—

C. H. Attfield	£26,676
C. P. Hinman	£15,960
Capt. Firmin	£15,960

The machine-guns, according to the prosecuting counsel, went to Leningrad.

S. L. Myers, who acted as solicitor to the defendant, says that "a most extraordinary situation has arisen."

"Here we have three men," he said, "who are actually imprisoned for life under an out-of-date Act of Parliament.

"They are not exactly imprisoned like convicts, as they wear their ordinary clothes, but they have prison food, and obey the prison regulations.

"They cannot communicate freely with people outside, and they cannot work like a bankrupt to discharge their obligations. In these cases, of course, it is highly improbable that they would be in a position to do so if they were free.

"All they can do now is to make sacks and so on and earn about 5s. a week.

"It appears to be the modern counterpart of the imprisonment for debt, against which Dickens worked so hard."

TEN MEN ENTOMBED IN MINE RESCUED

Roof Fell in Iron Ore Pit Caught Miners Unawares

"We are alive, and we are all uninjured."

This message from ten men entombed by a roof-fall 360 feet below the ground in Lord Leconfield's iron ore mine at Bigrigg, near Whitehaven, inspired rescuers to dig feverishly all day in the hope of reaching the entombed men alive.

Twelve men went down the pit and were going to work when the fall occurred at a junction of two roads.

Two of them were luckily lagging behind. The roof fell, with a noise like a great explosion, created a current of air which blew them off their feet and temporarily stunned them. They were able afterwards to make their way to another shaft 400 yards away and reached the surface in safety. The others found themselves cut off from the world by a barrier of earth many yards in thickness.

But all through the night rescuers dug on, tearing the earth away with superhuman strength. Then they were startled to hear human voices coming faintly from behind the barrier.

At first the sounds were indistinguishable. The rescuers could not tell whether the party was safe or whether some had been killed. Then, as the rescuers came nearer, they were able to exchange remarks with the imprisoned men.

On both sides of the wall cheers went up. Then the dramatic news came from the tomb, "We are safe!" The first concern of the imprisoned miners was for the safety of their two comrades. When they learned that these two men were safe they raised another cheer.

Lizard With Beard Discovered in Suburb Of London, is Rare

As the locality is in the dock area, it is supposed that the mysterious stranger landed in this country as a stowaway and was engaged on a tour of exploration.

The lizard has beneath the chin, a fold of skin which, unnoticeable when the reptile is in repose, can be expanded into a conspicuous bristly frill, suggestive of a beard, for the purpose of frightening enemies.

If this fails, it has a very effective weapon in its spiny tail, with which it can inflict serious wounds.

IMPORTED BRIDE FOR THIS CANADIAN

A man of 40, with a good Government position and a comfortable home in Canada, wants a bride from the Potteries.

He is a Staffordshire man, and wants a life partner who was born in his own country.

He has written to the Mayor of the Potteries, Alderman Frank Collis, who has consented to act as matrimonial agent.

The applicant is an abstainer and non-smoker and is fond of amusements, and the wife he desires must be about 30, fond of home life, and a good cook.

DIVORCE OVER HAT.

Mrs. Winslow Hart, of Hull, Yorkshire, bought a new hat with cherries decorating the right side. Mr. Hart thought the cherries should be on the left side. They disagreed so violently upon the matter that they separated and were later granted a divorce.

Waited 18 Years For Drink and Then Found Taste Gone

A curious experience has befallen one member of the election dinner party who had decided to drink at the Savoy Hotel wine reserved since 1906.

A party of six men in 1906 decided to keep a bin of port wine until an election occurred at which a majority of 150 was secured.

But, as the wine threatened to overmature, it was decided to drink it after the election which has just taken place.

Four survivors of the 1906 party and a son of one of those who have died accordingly gathered at the Savoy Hotel.

One of the five, however, Mr. Connolly, has lost his taste for port, and he had to leave almost untouched the wine for which he had waited so long.

DIPLOMATS FIGURE IN CHURCH HOAX

Distinguished People Brought to St. Paul's Cathedral

NONE THE WISER

Listened to Ordinary Service—Dean Inge's Statement

When the American Ambassador, the Colombian Minister, the Estonian Minister, the First and Second Secretaries of the German Embassy, the Italian Air and Military Attaches, and other distinguished people arrived at St. Paul's Cathedral recently for a service "In Remembrance of the Brave of All Nations" they found that no such service had been arranged by the authorities.

Hundreds of people, among them a number of Chelsea pensioners in uniform, came for what they thought would be a service on a national scale, with cards that read:

In Remembrance of the Brave of All Nations.
The honor of your attendance is requested at St. Paul's Cathedral on Sunday, November 2nd, 1924, for Evensong, 3.15 p.m.

Entrance at South Door at 3 o'clock.

To their surprise many of them found that no one was at the south door to collect tickets. A reporter who presented a ticket to the policeman on duty at the door was told that the ticket "had no meaning to him."

Dean Inge said no arrangements of a special service had been made by the cathedral authorities.

An official of the cathedral said:

It was not a special service in any way, and we are not responsible for the issue of a single ticket in connection with it.

All we know is that an application was made for permission to put a wreath at the choir rail and believing it to be an ordinary wreath, we raised no objection. No permission, however, was given for the plaque to be retained for ever in the cathedral, and we most certainly keep it.

After the service the wreath was removed from the choir rails. It is understood that the Circle of Hope will be asked to take charge of it again. Many of the diplomats who attended left without learning that they had been invited to an ordinary evensong, although they must have wondered at the inappropriateness of the service.

Wife Borrows But Hubby Not Liable, Says House of Lords

A husband is not liable for money borrowed by his wife on the false representation that it is for his use.

This was the decision of the House of Lords.

The question came before the House on the appeal of two Mile End women, who said that Mrs. Porter, wife of a builder's foreman, who owns houses in East London, represented that her husband required money to repair his property.

On the faith of these representations they lent sums which totalled £335, but none of the money was handed over to the husband, all being used by Mrs. Porter for her own purposes.

Mr. Justice Bailhache decided that the husband was not liable. The Court of Appeal agreed, and the House of Lords took the same view.

Viscount Cave said in his view the Married Women's Property Act swept away the old common law rule under which a husband could be sued with his wife for her post nuptial torts (liabilities after marriage).

Lords Birkenhead, Finlay, Summer and Atkinson concurred.

Police Draw Batons In Defence of Street Lamps at Cambridge

In a Fifth of November rag at Cambridge, when an effigy of Zinovieff took the place of Guy Fawkes, the police had to draw their truncheons. Eight undergraduates were arrested.

A crowd of 500 started to turn out the street lamps in the market place which were guarded by police. Each time a lamp went out a cheer was raised.

At the local police court five undergraduates were fined £1 each for putting out the lamps, and a sixth was fined £1 for wilful damage.

One undergraduate failed to answer to his ball, which was estreated and a warrant was issued for his arrest. He wrote that he was unable to appear, having an urgent engagement in London.

A military candidate who was fined £1 for assaulting a constable pleaded guilty under provocation.

FATAL ACCIDENT TO PILION RIDER

A motor cycle accident, involving the death of a young Wiltshire policeconstable and a Devizes young lady, occurred on a hill in Bath Road, near the town.

Police constable Timbrell and Miss Matthews, who was riding pilion, were returning to Devizes between 7 and 8 o'clock when the motor cycle came into collision, head on, with a charabanc, which was returning with a party of anglers.

The constable was killed instantly, but Miss Matthews lingered in the Devizes Cottage Hospital for a day. Timbrell's father is an ex-metropolitan policeman.

RADIO BEAM HAS 12,000 MILE SPAN

Use of Short Wave-lengths Will Greatly Reduce Costs

CHEAPER MESSAGES

Tests Carried Out by Marconi Reported Consistently Successful

As a result of Senator Marconi's recent experiments, long-distance wireless telegraphy and telephony by means of beams of short waves will soon be in regular operation.

A year or so ago most wireless experts dismissed short wave-lengths as useless, and concentrated on wave-lengths between 10,000 and 20,000 metres and correspondingly high generating power.

Senator Marconi was almost alone in believing the problem of long-distance wireless, as well as the more important one of controlling the direction of the waves, would be solved by experiments with short waves and small radiated energy, and he erected a station at Poldhu, in Cornwall, for the emission of waves of only 100 metres.

From this station he has received messages on his yacht Elettra during the night at distances exceeding 2,000 miles, and by means of reflectors, concentrating the radiated beam, signals were received all the night near the Cape Verde Islands, and after sunrise and before sunset, with an energy of only nine kilowatts.

ATMOSPHERICS CUT.

The reflectors very considerably increased the range and strength of the signals and eliminated almost completely all atmospheric and other disturbances.

Recently Senator Marconi carried out special tests in the Atlantic on board the Cedric, on which he had installed a short-wave receiver. On these tests Poldhu used 100-metre waves and a power of 20 kilowatts, but no reflectors.

The signals from Poldhu were received throughout the trip as far as New York, and an amateur in Sydney, Australia, reported having received, on a small, home-made receiver, every word stronger than he had ever received any signals from the Carnarvon station, which used high power and very long waves.

The 100-metre signals were also received in Canada, and variations in the strength during the day and night suggests that in the morning the waves travel from Poldhu to Australia westward, across the Atlantic and Pacific, a distance of over 12,000 miles, and in the evening eastward, across Asia, some 3,000 miles shorter.

These experiments have been so consistently successful that there is no doubt that before long wireless telegraphy and telephony to any part of the earth will be in operation by means of quite small waves and power of only a few kilowatts. And that will mean a big reduction in the cost of wireless communication.

HOT WATER FLOOD STRIKES VILLAGE

Men Boring Well Come Upon Spring and Overflow Resulted

The villagers of Stroude, who live under the shadow of the Holloway Sanatorium, Virginia Water, had a novel experience when, as a result of boring operations by the sanatorium authorities, a hot water spring was struck and great quantities of steaming water overflowed from the well.

Men at work boring the well had reached about 1400 feet when there was a tremendous rush of water at an estimated volume of 150 gallons a minute. The boring parties had to scatter quickly, for the water was hot and clouds of vapor arose from it, the heat of the spring at its source being 97 degrees Fahrenheit.

The water rushed down an embankment n a huge stream on to the main Virginia Water to Egham road, carrying with it tons of silt and sand, and spreading out into meadows and gardens. The continued for hours until the supply of water was got under control.

Motorists, cyclists, and pedestrians on the road had to make a hurried retreat before the oncoming rush.

The sight after the disappearance of the water was remarkable, and many tons of sand and earth had to be carted from the road.

The sanatorium stands on a hill so the water had a clear run to the village of Stroude.

CANADA IS BEST, SAYS GEN. BOOTH

Interviewed on his arrival at Southampton, General Booth said he had had a very useful visit to Canada, both Eastern and Western, and was very pleased with the reports upon the people the Army had sent out. On the whole, they were doing very well indeed. "I am confirmed in my view," continued the General, "that of all parts of the Empire open to emigrants Canada is the most promising. For the men coming just now a certain amount of 'roughing it' is, of course, to be expected, and no one who does not like work should go; but the Dominion affords a great opportunity to tens of thousands of those in the old land who are waging a stern battle with misfortune. I find a great opening on the farms for lads. Some of those we have sent out recently are already shaping to become farmers themselves. There were openings for 400 in Ontario alone. I am arranging, with the assistance of the Government, to set up some farm schools to teach mixed farming to the most promising of these young men."

NEARLY EIGHT HUNDRED PEOPLE TOOK IN THE FAIR LAST NIGHT

To-night Will Be Belmont Night — New Features Provided — Heavy Run of Prizes To-night.

BACHELOR'S CAKE.

The crowd at the Kiwanis Winter Fair last night was bigger than ever. Nearly eight hundred people were in attendance to patronize the various attractions and join in the fun which was emphasized by the presence of a large number of the members of the Rotary and Rotary-Annes organizations. The Kiwanians are intensely appreciative of the support and co-operation afforded last evening by the Rotary members, who came in and helped out in every section, in a manner that put the evening over in splendid fashion.

To-night in the last night of the Big Fair, and the Kiwanians are hoping that the attendance will surpass that of any of the previous evenings. It will be Belmont Night, when the Belmont Club will co-operate in support of the evening's entertainment.

A lamentable occurrence that cast a shadow over an otherwise joyful evening was the failure of the special Bachelors' cake in the home-made cooking booth to stand up under the strain of supporting the five-dollar gold piece that has a home in its centre. Although nothing definite has been ascertained as to the cause of the sinking of the cake, it is rumored that Stewart Gordon and Ed. Taylor have been going around for some time seeking advice as to the best methods of cake-baking, and Stewart was heard to observe last night that he knew he hadn't put enough baking-powder in it. However, another attempt will be made to-day, and the Bachelors' cake will be raffled for to-night, without fail.

So far, entries in the "largest family" competition, also in the "oldest lady and gentleman" contest have been quite numerous. To-night will decide the winners in both. The largest famile that has patronized the Fair in a body so far has had ten members. The oldest gentleman was 94 years and 6 months of age, and the oldest lady 85 years. Whether these figures will be surpassed remains to be seen.

Several prizes at door and raffle still remain unclaimed. The second and third door prizes for Tuesday night, a 24-lb. bag of flour, donated by Lloyd Hamilton, and the cook book, donated by F. H. Dawson, still remain in the hands of J. MacNabb, chairman of the Attendance Committee, from whom they may be claimed, along with last night's awards. Winning tickets for these two prizes were Nos. 2935 and 2941 respectively. It is honed that the prizes will be reclaimed as quickly as possible.

Last night's door prizes, with Levi Bond in charge, were as follows: 1st, $5, donated by D. Stewart Gordon, won by ticket No. 3677 (unclaimed); 2nd, 24-lb. bag of flour, donated by I. W. Meyers, won by ticket No. 3284 (unclaimed); 3rd, cook book, donated by F. H. Dawson, won by ticket No. 3407 (unclaimed).

Raffle prizes were also unclaimed. A 5-lb. box of chocolates, donated by W. M. Lang, of the Customs House staff, was won by ticket No. 294, and the lady's vanity set, donated by Percy Bond, by ticket No. 1268.

Prizes Unclaimed.

The following prizes still remain unclaimed for Kiwanis Fair door and raffle awards, and J. A. McNabb, chairman of the Attendance Committee, would like them claimed as quickly as possible: Tuesday night door prizes: 2nd, 24-lb. bag of flour, won by ticket No. 2935; 3rd, cook book, won by ticket No. 2941.

Wednesday night door prizes: 1st, $5, won by ticket No. 3677; 2nd, 24-lb. bag of flour, won by ticket No. 3284; 3rd, cook book, won by ticket No. 3407. Raffle prizes: 1st, 5-lb. box of chocolates, won by ticket No. 294; 2nd, lady's vanity set, won by ticket No. 1268.

EXAMINER WANT ADS GET RESULTS

That there is a timeliness in advertising is exemplified by the thirty-one responses received by the lady who recently advertised in The Examiner that she had a doll carriage for sale. Possibly such an advt. in the hot weather months would not bring so many answers. Doubtless just at this season of the year there are thirty-one mothers who have little girls writing earnestly to Santa Claus and despatching their missives via the stove-pipe route, all of whom are anxious to have a "doll carriage" included in their Christmas stocking outfit.

U. S. HOLIDAY TO-DAY.

Thanksgiving Day Being Celebrated Throughout States.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.— (Canadian Press.)—To-day is Thanksgiving Day in the United States and is a legal holiday throughout the country, practically all places of business being closed.

The celebration in this country is similar to the Canadian Thanksgiving in that it is a "home" holiday. Family re-unions centering on Thanksgiving Day spread with turkey as the main item of the menu, were held throughout the country.

All markets were closed for the day. The weather was fine throughout the greater part of the country.

TEKRASHY BEY ARRESTED

Bey Is One of Zaghloul's Closest Political Assistants.

CAIRO, Nov. 27. — (Canadian Press).—British Military authorities early today arrested Tekrashy Bay, secretary of ministry of interior and Abdul Rahman Fahey, one of Zaghloul's closest political assistants together with prominent member of Nationalist delegation who visited London with former premier. Men it is understood were surprised in their beds and were taken to an unknown destination. According to exchange telegraph despatch sent from here, Barakat Pasha minister of interior in Zaghloul's ministry has been arrested by British authorities.

PRIZES PRESENTED.

Tennis Club Held Social Evening at Belmont Club Rooms.

The Peterborough Tennis Club presented the prizes won at the annual city tournament last night, and made the occasion an excuse for a very delightful frolic and dance at the Belmont Club rooms.

The early part of the evening was devoted to cards and conversation. The first prizes at cards were won by Mrs. (Dr.) Hewett and Walter Perks, while Mrs. Walter Jackson and Roy Hillman took home the consolation awards.

One of the most pleasing features of the evening was the presentation to H. A. Cranfield, the energetic secretary of the club, of a tennis racquet and case, from the playing members. George Scott made the presentation and in a short speech eulogized Mr. Cranfield's good work for the club, and the assembled players and their friends showed their appreciation in no uncertain manner.

The music was by the Evans Melody Six and was so good that the floor was filled with dancers till away in the wee sma' hours.

GREATER WHEAT MARKET

Canadian Grain Will Find a Greater Demand in Great Britain.

LONDON, Nov. 27. — (Canadian Press).—It is very probable that as the result of the adoption of a resolution by the British Empire Producers' organization yesterday, Canadian wheat will find a much greater market in Great Britain. The resolution stated it was desirable, on economic grounds, that the home production of wheat should be materially increased and strongly urged that wheat which must still be imported after the home supply has been absorbed should be purchased from the wheat-growing centres of the Empire.

BY ACHMED ABDULLAH

CHAPTER V.

Ten miles to the East of Bagdad was the oasis of Terek el Bey. Greenly and peacefully, in the shadow of an immense, dun-colored limestone rock that seemed as if tossed there by a Titan's playful fist, it squatted athwart the yellow swash of the desert, stippled with the bayt es-shaar, the nomad's felt tents black as the tents of Kedar in Hebrew Scripture. Here, with a stirrup cup and courtly words, the three Princes said farewell to each other—"we shall meet again at the end of the seventh moon"—for here the overland road to Bagda split in three directions.

One branch stretched East, straight East as flies the crow, crossing the great desert of Arabistan where the sands spawned their golden, cosmic, eternal centuries, and debouching at the Cape of the Ras Mussendom that dropped with a rocky avalanche into the Persian Gulf where swift, square-rigged Arab sailing craft connected with Karachi, the Indian port. Thence a narrow trail, coiling like a shimmering silver snake over the ochre loam of the plains, led to Puri, the ancient capital founded by the gods themselves, and there the Prince of India intended taking counsel with the Swami Haridat Rashiq Lall, a learned Brahmin priest who was reputed to be in the odor of sanctity, a man of wisdom as wide as the shoreless seas.

To quote a contemporary and-less truthful Hindu account:

"The Swami was the father and mother of all knowledge. He wrote a learned tome anent the metaphysical differences between Substance and Unsubstance when his mother's milk was not yet dry on his lips; on his fourth birthday he surprised and delighted his parents, and made other Brahmin boys' parents envious by memorizing and reciting the ninety-nine thousand verses of the Holy Vedas; he was familiar with the innermost secrets of eternal and infinite principles before he was eleven; when he was twelve he had written a critical study about the leadfug Hindu critics' commentaries that dealt with Buddhist critics of the Shintoist critical school; and he was considered the equal of the eleven hundred and seventeen minor gods before his mustache had begun to sprout."

Small wonder, therefore, that the Prince of India, riding his elephant to the East, smiled ironically as he thought how foolish the other two Princes were in endeavoring to compete with him in the quest for the greatest rarity on earth.

The Prince of Persia took the second road, North over the snow-topped fastness of the Caucasus, then south-east into the foot hills of Luristan where, beneath a tropical sun, the rocks seemed like glowing heaps of topaz and the scorched, flayed ridges, like carved masses of amethyst and ruddy quartz. Here the road dipped East, skirting the yellow fields and crimson rose gardens of Kerman, to find its goal in Shiraz. At the latter place, in the far-flung Bazaar of the Badakshani merchants, everything precious and incredible that had ever come out of Asia as well as out of the lands of the European barbarians, was for sale. There a display of phoenix eggs, dragon teeth and green diamonds from the Mountains of the Moon was an every-day occurrence that did not create even the slightest ripple of excitement.

There, too, lived a certain Hakim Ali who was reputed to be the son of a union between the Archangel Ishrafil and a female desert vampire from Kurdistan. None knew how old he was: some said a thousand years, while more conservative people put his age at seven centuries. But all the world agreed that, though preferring the garb and mode of life of a beggar, nothing under the sun was hidden from his eyes.

Him the Prince of Persia had decided to consult; and, like his brother of India, he laughed maliciously as his litter bore him on his way.

The Prince of the Mongols took the third road, the long, the cold, the hard road to the North-east; travelling by swift relays of Bactrian camels and shaggy Tartar ponies and white reindeer through the bleak, inhospitable steppes of Turkestan and Siberia; slashing rapidly through the frozen, black slush of Outer Mongolia; mounting and descending the hard-baked shimmering snow of the Salt Range, that seemed hooded and grim like the gigantic eyebrows of some ancient heathen god; finally after a short halt at his capital of Kahn Baligh—the Tartar town which the Chinese call Pekin—wending on toward the far, mysterious Island of Wak that, separated from the Manchurian coast by a narrow channel, glimmered like a jewel of smoky purple and dull orange.

He, too, was sure of his quest. For in an underground temple at Wak lived a Tunguz medicineman who had discovered—others said, had made with his own hands—a certain dread fruit which held in its evil heart instantaneous power over life and death . . . without doubt a treasure so extraordinary and exotic that, compared to it, anything the other two Princes might find, would seem like a child's brittle, useless toy.

So the Prince of the Mongols smiled—as smiled the other two. But there was a better, sounder reason for his sardonic amusement. For he was an intensely practical man. He believed in making assurance doubly sure; even trebly sure. Thus, not satisfied with the treasure of the Island of Wak, nor yet satisfied with his plan of sending Mongol warriors disguised as peaceful traders to Bagdad in case anything should go wrong, he furthermore gave orders to his spies to follow and shadow the Princes of India and Persia and to report to him by swift messengers whatever they might find out.

He wasted never a thought on the self-styled Prince of the Isles, the Thief of Bagdad.

He imagined that by this time the latter had been thoroughly killed, thoroughly eaten, and thoroughly digested by the Caliph's gorilla. And even had he known of Ahmed's escape, he would not have worried: Ahmed, the lonely man, the thief, the outcast, with every man's hand against his—with nothing but his sword, his small bag of provisions and, perhaps, a faint hope—out on the bitter, thorny path—out to conquer, first himself, and then the greatest treasure on earth!

Hard, hard was the beginning of Ahmed's road.

For it led him through the Valley of the Seven Temptations, where not even his sword was of help to him, and where he had no weapon nor shield except his own heart.

This valley was inhabited by the spirits of those who had died by giving way to one of the seven temptations, the seven deadly sins of man. These spirits crawled like worms along the ground or flew on black wings amongst the trees, white skeletons, whose moldy, yellow bones were held together by bits of charred sinew, followed them as the murderer does his victim. The air was filled with their shrill and pitiful cries; and, occasionally, by a heartbreaking sob of relief when a spirit, his period of punishment over, was reincarnated by Allah into a new body, to return once more to earthly existence, to be faced once more by the seven temptations, perhaps to win out on his next road through life. Here, too, malignant dwarfs and witches with shrivelled, bluish-phosphorescent skin and ruby-red eyes leaped about like hobgoblins, yelling at the heavens with the hooting of the owl, the bark of the hyena, and the jackal's long, wild, lonely cry. For they were the spirits who have been twice born, had twice succumbed to temptation, and were doomed to live in the valley for the length of three hundred and seven eternities.

There were, furthermore, many other dreadfulsights and sounds which the ancient Arab chronicler refuses to describe . . . "for fear," he says, "that I might cause the reader's heart to stop from beating with the black horror of it!"

But Ahmed passed unharmed right through the Valley of the Seven Temptations, with the help of prayer and faith: faith in Allah, the One, that was slowly growing in his inmost soul. And by the time he had left the valley and was climbing up toward the Hill of Eternal Fire, the Hill of Pride, he had sloughed his old lawless passions as snakes slough their skin in spring and had begun to admit that there was a Master greater than his own will, finer and nobler than his own desires.

Thus, when he reached the outer, red-glowing wall of the Hill of Eternal Fire, the Hill of Pride, he gave thanks to the Creator, crying: "Allahu akbar—God is great!" and "Subhan 'llah—I sing the praises of God!", and he gave a solemn vow that, should he pass unscathed through the perils of his journey, he would hereafter obey the five cardinal ordinances of the Prophet Mohammed's teaching: he would repeat his daily prayers to Allah; he would observe the month of Ramazzan with scrupulous care, fasting during thirty days from sunrise to sunset; he would give the prescribed alms to the poor; he would live a clean life; and he would make the Haj, the pilgrimage to Mecca.

He smiled, just a little sheepishly, a little self-consciously, as he remembered his former boast that Allah was only a myth and that a man who was worth his salt took what he wished without asking leave from anyone.

"Allahu akbar—God is great!" he repeated, as the Hill of Eternal Fire and the Hill of Pride rose before him like a gigantic flame.

By this time the Prince of Persia was drawing near to Shiraz, leaning back, as was his habit, on the heaped, silken pillows of his litter; helping himself liberally to sweetmeats and sugared pistache nuts; listening drowsily to a little slave girl curled at his feet, who was crooning him to sleep with a lilting Afghan love song:

"Since my sight fell on those dark eyes of thine,
Never can I forget those lovely eyes of thine,
Of the hawk's are they? The peacock's or the falcon's?
Or of the soft-eyed antelope? The glances of thine eyes?
As the lambs crouch hidden in the pasture,
From the shade of thy tresses look those gentle eyes of thine.
As the armed trooper stands, his lance in hand beside him,
Thus stand the long lashes round those warring eyes of thine.
As one who has drunk wine, thus intoxicated is my being,
Whether they be Priests or Dervishes or even Hermits,
On each one's heart they feed, those cruel eyes of thine.
Yet whatever thou wouldst gaze on, look well upon me,
O Fatma! while there is power of seeing in thine eyes . . . ."

So the litter—with the Prince by this time sound asleep and snoring loudly through his nose, like a guttural and raucous accompaniment to the little slave girl's dulcet piping—reached the Bazaar of the Badakshani Merchants: and the Prince kept on sleeping and snoring although there was a great cheering and huzzaing, and although the stalwart soldiers who preceded the litter made the air ring with defiant and rude shouts as they cleared the way with:

"O thy right!"—yelling as they brought down their long, brass-tipped staves with full force. "O thy left! O thy face! O thy ear! O thy heel!" suiting the swing of their sticks to the part of Asian anatomy which they were striking—"O thy back, thy back, thy back! Give way, ignoble and unmentionable ones! Give way, sellers of unclean filth! Give way, leprous one of burnt fathers!"

But, in spite of the soldiers' abuse, the merchants, knowing of old the Prince to be an extravagant spender, crowded about the litter, pushing and jostling each other, heaping their treasures of jewels and brocades and embroideries and perfumes and costly rarities about the snoring potentate's small, fat feet, vociferously clamoring that he should look, touch, buy:

"Behold, Protector of the Pitiful! Only a thousand Persian gold pieces for this priceless emerald! See! It is flawless and cut in the form of a Kashmiri parrot! Only a thousand gold pieces—and I am losing money on the transaction—may I be father to my sons!"

"Behold, O Heaven-Born! A pink turmaline from Tartary as big as my head! Its touch is guaranteed to cure fever, dyspepsia, whitlows, and the pain of sorrowing hearts! Call me a Jew, a Christian, a bath servant, a cut-off one, if I lie!"

"Look, look, look, O Great and Exquisite Moon! Look, O Holder of the Scales of Benevolence with the Strength of Thy Hands! This brocade—look, look—it was woven by the daughter of the King of Germany as a ransom for her father, captured in battle. The diamonds with which it is encrusted—look, look—they are the tears, crystalized by the will of Allah, which she shed while weaving the extraordinary fabric!"

"Look!" "Buy!" "Look!" "Buy!"

"SO BIG" LEADS BEST SELLERS

Sidney Howard, Young Newspaper Graduate, Displays Technic of Drama.

BRIEF REVIEWS

It is not recorded that Sidney Howard, the up-coming young writer from California, was ever either a dressmaker or a seamstress.

How he could have obtained so intimate a picture of a small town dressmaker's life as is contained in "Mrs. Veitch: A Segment of Bio graphy" without first-hand experience will continue to baffle this surveyor until he finds out.

This is far and away the best of the stories in "Three Flights Up" (Scribners)). All of them are well done, for Howard is a young man who has learned his dramatic mechanics and craftsmanship in the school of playwriting and newspapering.

A quite versatile person, this Howard. Out in Berkeley, Cal., he had the first-class schooling of Sam Hume. In the newspaper world he found himself with drug traffic campaigns, labor spy exposes and crooked stock manipulations to cover.

And, incongruous as it may seem, out of such background came two plays of quite poetic flavor: "Swords," which flivvered on Broadway a season ago and "Bewitched," which is now on the boards. "They Knew What They Wanted" will be a forthcoming production of the Theater Guild. In addition, Howard translated "S. S. Tenacity" and "Casanova," served in France and Albania, both as aviator and ambulance man; married Clare Eames, the charming actress; did a pageant for the 150th anniversary of the Battle of Lexington; and is but 30 years of age.

Of the six best sellers "So Big," by Edna Ferber, and "The Little French Girl," by Anne Sedgwick, strike the survey as being the only two with any real merit. A brief summary of the six follows:

"So Big" (Doubleday, Page)— a mother and son, with vivid and contrasting personalities thrown upon the screen of a pioneer struggle.

"Little French Girl" (Houghton, Mifflin)—a French girl and an Englishman, both possessing the best traits of their countries, are placed in a pleasant romance, streaked with tearful moments and heart interest.

"A Gentleman of Courage" (Cosmopolitan), James Oliver Curwood —the sub-arctic is once more penetrated, a triangle is drawn melodramatically and the "big, strong, silent men" punch their way through the pages.

"Rose of the World" (Doubleday, Page), Kathleen Norris —another Cinderella story reviewed by the survey some time back without great enthusiasm.

"The Coming of Amos" (Dodd, Mead), Wm. J. Locke— the Locke formula is unvaried, but such is the skill of this man's prose that he weaves his spell whatever the monotony of the tale.

"Peacock Feathers" (Penn), Temple Bailey—in which pride goeth to a sure fall, as per the old adage. A gentle tale withal.

It has been said that "everybody likes a good murder."

Surely the newspaper readers seem to follow avidly upon the trail of unwinding murder mystery events and detective stories are hardly perennials.

F. Tennyson Jesse has reduced the topic of murder to a most interesting analytical study in "Murder and Its Motives" (Knopf), taking the various causes of murders — jealousy, revenge and the rest and, in each case, using a celebrated crime to tell the stories. Here is an evening's reading, thrilling enough to stave off sleep for several hours.

There is more than a bit of drama in the fact that Arthur Hildebrand's fine biography of the explorer "Magellan" (Harcourt, Brace) ispublished jus tas Hildebrand seems to have "gone over the horizon" with the Nutting expedition, which sought to resail the Brace) is published just as Hildebrand was a Yale man with the sea urge and, if it should happen that he has been lost, it is fitting that he should have prefaced his passing with this first complete biography of the world's greatest adventurer.

TERRORISTS PREPARE TO TAKE PART IN GERMAN ELECTIONS

Hardest Elements in Red Party Organize Big Shock Troop Group.

LIVELY TIMES

Large Forces of Police Are Keeping the Reds on the Run.

By CARL D. GROAT.

BERLIN, Nov. 26—(United Press) — Terror is to play a role in the German elections, December 7, if the Communists have their way.

They have just completed organization of a big shock troop group known as the "Roter Frontkaempferbund," composed of the hardest elements in the Red party. Most of the members of this organization have seen service in the trenches and many of them were formerly incorporated in the so-called "Hundertschaften" or "Companies of one hundred" dissolved a year ago by governmental order. A sub-division of the "R. F. B." as the organization is known for short, is "Der Rote Jungsturm" or "Red Youth Storm."

The terror activity of this new organization will be directed chiefly against the new republican organization, "Reichsbanner schwarz-rot-gold," but some attention will also be paid to the Fascisti storm troops of Hitler and Ludendorff.

Organization of the Red group is in line with open instruction of Sinowjew and others in Moscow for organization of workers' troips to be used against "the enslavement of the German proletarist through the slave chains of the Dawes regime."

The police and Reichswehr are keeping a specially sharp eye on the Red organizations, fearing that they will attempt labor uprisings in Saxony, Berlin and other industrial centres. The police everywhere are under special alarm measures which require redoubled watchfulness until the campaign is over. This is also true of the Reichswehr, which in many garrisons is constructing "Spanish riders," as barbed wire entanglements have come to be known. All garrisons are now at full strength, all detached groups having been recalled to home stations.

Leaders of the police and army do not exactly anticipate any putsch, as a result of the election campaign, but are known to have shaped their plans for every eventuality. Their programme hence includes preparations for a possible outbreak directly after the elections on the part of some disappointed group. Since the Nationalists and Fascisti are the most likely to suffer reverses, it is assumed that this calculation is directed against the chance of a Fascisti or pan-German putsch.

The Fascisti at the moment, however, are suffering from internal dissension. They have always been more or less discordant amongst themselves, but the breach now appears to be broader than ever. Big industrialists are hesitating to throw any more money into the Fascisti cause and this is taking some of the fight out of the alleged fighters. At the same time, the Communist coffers appear to be completely empty. Moscow, hitherto credited with pouring golden floods into the Reds' treasuries in Germany, is apparently not so lavish as heretofore. Moscow, however, keeps a hand in the Red movement here and gives it such direction as it has.

The Reds, except for their new terror organization, are badly adrift. Their leaders are hunted and hounded by the police, who started immediately after dissolution of the Reichstag to make a clean-up of the leading Red deputies, including the stormy Ruth Fischer.

This police search has succeeded so far in keeping the Communist campaigners off the stump and confined solely to word of mouth campaigning in the factories and in the columns of the Communistic paper "Rote Fahne."

The Communists are destined considerable losses to the Socialists in the elections. However, they still muster a surprisingly large number of voters, despite the fact the movement itself has lost "punch," since as long ago as 1921.

Meantime, the middle parties express confidence in the outcome of the campaign. They say that the Radical parties on the right and left will lose, to the advantage of the middle group.

FIVE YEARS IN PRISON FOR AUTOMOBILE THEFT

Winnipeg Prisoner Confessed Robbery of $4,000 Last April.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 27.—Convicted of theft by violence of an automobile, Eli Romaniuk was sentenced to five years' imprisonment in Stony Mountain penitentiary in court of King's Bench yesterday.He wept as judgment was pronounced.

Just before sentence was passed, Romaniuk confessed through his counsel to the robbery of the P. and B. Cash store last April in which two employees of the firm were relieved of approximately $4,000. On trial for this charge the jury had previously disagreed.

U. S. GOVERNMENT IS OPPOSED TO CHICAGO'S DIVERSION OF WATER

Control of the Water of the Great Lakes Rests Solely With the Federal Governme nt, and the Rights of Other States and Canada Must be Protected.

WITHDRAWAL TO BE CURTAILED

WASHINGTON, November 27. — Attorney General Stone filed in the United States Supreme Court yesterday a brief of more than 300 pages setting forth the government's insistence that the Chicago Sanitary District be restricted to the withdrawal of 4157 cubic feet of water per second from Lake Micigan, for diversion through the Chicago and Calumet rivers in the removal of sewage.

It expressed willingness however to agree to a temporary arrangement for Chicago's relief, pending action by Congress on a permanent relief programme.

All states on the Great Lakes with the exception of Illinois, and the Lake Carriers' Association, have joined the government in the contention that the present withdrawal of approximately 10,000 feet of water per second is impairing navigation on the lakes and connecting waterways. The practice also has brought protests from Canada.

Missouri, Tennessee, Louisiana and commercial organizations in the Mississippi Valley on the other hand have joined the sanitary district in representing that the present withdrawal is essential for sanitary purposes, and for maintaining navigation on the Mississippi River.

The efforts which the sanitary district made to obtain the permission of the Federal government for the withdrawal of water, the government contends, show that there was no foundation to the claim of the sanitary district that the government acquiesced in the withdrawal.

Legal Points Established.

The government states that while the far reaching consequences involved in the case "affect vitally the interests of a whole nation, and are of a magnitude not easily exaggerated," the questions of law presented are "comparatively insignificant," so firmly are the law points established. The government said, that it was to be regretted that the parties to the controversy had expended so much time, money and effort in a "protracted and unnecessary litigation."

It was an unpleasant, duty, the government declared, to insist in this case upon its paramount and exclusive control over the waters of the great lakes, but it would betray a trust if it permitted the sanitary district's challenge to pass unnoticed," particularly when other states and a foreign government, were complaining.

The Federal government, not the states, is entrusted with exclusive control of the nation's relations with foreign government's, the brief asserted, and no state or municipal corporation can be permitted to deal with its international problems.

Chicago Problem Serious.

The government expresses the view that Chicago's problem in this matter is a serious and perplexing one in which the entire nation should take a sympathetic interest. The solution of the question is through congress, the government declared, and not through the courts. When the courts have declared that the withdrawal must be restricted to the amount allowed by the Secretary of War, the brief stated. Chicago can then go to Congress for relief.

The Federal government throughout the litigation has not been unmindful of the welfare of the people of Chicago and vicinity, it asserted, but it must also have regard for the rights and interests of the other states and cities, which have equal rights in the waters of Lake Michigan.

As time would be required by Chicago to adjust itself to a decreased withdrawal, the brief stated, the government would not object to a modification by the Secretary of War of the present permit, pending action by congress, to allow withdrawal of a volume in excess of 4,167 cubic feet per second. The court, it was suggested, could provide for some such arrangement in entering its decree.

NEWS OR NORWOOD.

Well Known Resident of Village Pasesd Away—Personals.

NORWOOD, Nov. 27.—Mr. W. Harper of Toronto was the guest of friends in the village during the week.

Mr. J. Griffith, of Havelock, was in the village on Friday.

Mrs. A A. McRoberts of North Bay arrived in the village on Saturday to see her mother, Mrs. B. Moffatt who was seriously injured on Wednesday last by falling down cellar.

Misses Barbara Foote and Mildred Youmans were in Peterboro on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas King, of Wellington, were week-end guests at the home of the latter's brother, Mr. Bert Scott.

Mr Bruce Scott, of Lindsay, spent Sunday with his brother, Mr. B. Scott.

Mr. and Mrs. Cooper of Cherry Valley spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Albert Webster.

Mrs. T J. Carley (nee Grace Sangster, B.A.) of Fenelon Falls, spent the wek-end with Mr. J. Alf. Finlay. On Saturday Mrs. Finlay held a reception in honor of her guests when a large number of ladies availed themselves of the opportunity of again meeting Mrs. Carley

Mrs. W. P. Rogers was in Peterboro on Wednesday.

Mr. Carr, of Apsley, is visiting his sister, Miss H. Carr, King Street.

Mr. John Weir has moved into his new home on Colborne street.

Mr. W. Griffin moved on Wednesday into the house on Queen street, which he recently purchased from Mr. J. Weir.

OBITUARY.

The death occurred on Wednesday morning, of one of Norwood's oldest residents in the person of Mrs. J. Vandervort. The deceased, who was a daughter of the late Mr and Mrs. Peter Pearce, was eighty-seven years of age. The funeral will be held on Friday afternoon from her late residence, Queen street, place of interment the Norwood cemetery.

NEW SENSATIONS.

Liquor Seizure on the St. Lawrence Promises Further Developments.

QUEBEC, Nov. 27. — That the last seizure of liquor operated at St. Sulpice by the Quebec Liquor Commission inspectors, will result in startling developments is the rumor in well informed circles, where it is also stated that prominent people may be involved in that transaction, in which a loss of over half a million dollars will have to be sustained by certain interests.

Among the sensations promised is one to the effect that when the investigation now on comes to a close there will be revelations made which will show that in the course of the last summer large cargoes of liquor have passed up the St. Lawrence and have been directed to the United States through the canals.

The same information is to the effect that the leak may have meant that several million dollars worth of the precious liquor has found its way through that medium to the United States and that in many cases the liquor was bottled in receptacles bearing forged labels of the Quebec liquor commission.

That the whole plot has now been unearthed in the claim of the informants who also add that before a few days the whole story will be out.

In connection with the tracing of the $500,000 cargo, a few days ago, it is claimed that this was rendered possible through conversations overheard on board one of the trains operating between the maritime provinces and Montreal. One of the waiters on board the train would have incidentally heard the Americans discuss the scheme through which they were to be enriched and would have notified the Quebec liquor commission office in Quebec.

If such is the case the young man referred to is expected to get as a reward, according to regulations of the commission, of between $50,000 to $75,000.

REGAINS CIVIL RIGHTS.

Adelard Delorme Will Be Allowed to Adminster Estate.

MONTREAL, November 27.—Rev. Father Adelard Delorme was relieved of the interdiction pronounced by the superior court, following the verdict of the jury which found that he was unfit to stand trial for the murder of his half brother, Raoul, by a judgment handed down yesterday afternoon by Mr. Justice Cousineau, in the practice division of the Superior Court.

Rev. Father Delorme now regains his civil rights and the administration of his estate, but he will be assisted in all important acts connected therewith by Rev. Father Albert Benoit, whom the court appointed judicial adviser, to replace Adelard Tetreault; the curator, who, until now has had full charge of the priest's estate.

Father Delorme was not in court but he was represented by Alban Germain, K.C., who stated after judgment had been given, that the appointment of a judicial adviser, was in agreement with his client's wishes.

ANCIENT SHRINES OF HEALING

KIRK PROHIBITED.

The ancient Druids worshipped fire—evidently a relic of the pagan worship of the sun—and they held water in great reverence also. It is probably on this account that venerable superstitions lingered tenaciously about wells, and that frequently they were dedicated to saints and were believed to possess remarkable powers of healing. At all events, although the General Assembly of the Kirk of Scotland sternly prohibited "well worship," together with witchcraft, so late as 1638, particular cases were dealt with by the Church at a considerably later date, showing how persistently the early supersition about wells clung to the popular mind. Old customs proverbially die hard.

In the Middle Ages, manifold advantages were ascribed to sacred wells. The cure of insanity was credited to some; while others were devoutly believed to restore sight to the blind. Pilgrimages—sometimes from long distances—were made to the particular well suited to the complaints of patients, and valuable votive offerings were given to propitiate the special saint to whom the well was dedicated.

St. Fillans.

St. Fillans and Strathill, both in Perthshire, Scotland, possessed wells believed to cure insanity. About three miles from Crianlarich was a chapel said to have been dedicated to St. Fillan by Robert the Bruce as a thank-offering for victory at Bannockburn. Lunatics were brought to it on the evening of the first day of each quarter, bound hand and foot, and were thrust, just before sunset, into the "Holy Pool of Fillan." A square-shaped bell of cast bronze, still to be seen in an Edinburgh museum, was solemnly tolled during this ceremony. On its completion the supplicants were taken to the so-called Tomb of St. Fillan within the chapel, and were laid at the foot of it, upon what was known as "St. Fillan's Bed." Here they passed the night, and if a patient's bonds were loose in the morning a miracle was supposed to have been wrought by the saint, and the suppliant was declared to have been cured. If the bonds were as firm in the morning as on the previous evening, it was inferred that the pilgrim was condemned to perpetual insanity.

At Doune there is a well called Christ's Well, which was supposed to cure ill-health, if the waters were drunk on any Sunday in May. St. Mary's Well at Culsalmond was also visited by large numbers of pilgrims on the first Sunday of May, in the firm belief that they would gain cures. Money was flung into the well as a thankoffering, and it varied in value according to the gratitude of patients, or to their ability to pay. Many years after the fame of the well had died down, a gold piece of James I. was recovered from a sewer in the immediate vicinity of the well.

A Magic Stone.

In a churchyard on the shores of Loch Torridon there is a well in which three pebbles are said to have kept up a ceaseless motion in a circle. If one of these stones was carried in a bucket of the well water to a bedridden sufferer, who should touch the stone, a cure was believed to be immediately wrought. The stone was, of course, always restored punctiliously to the well, where it began to revolve again at once.

King Robert the Bruce is said to have suffered from a skin disease—then called leprosy—and to have been healed by the waters of a well near Ayr. In gratitude for his cure he founded a priory of monks and built houses for the accommodation of eight lepers, entitled "The King's Ease." The lepers were also granted eight boils of meal and twenty-five shillings (Scots money) per annum. An adjoining farm was commanded to supply on demand straw for the lepers' beds.

There is in Sutherlandshire a loch to which many people at one time repaired for cures. The healing virtue, however, could only be received if patients walked backwards into the water. They had then to immerse their bodies. Taking care not to turn or look, behind them, they had to walk out again and hurry from the loch as quickly as possible.

In the island of Lewis a well dedicated to St. Andrew had the peculiar quality that it could foretell the result of any dangerous illness. A tubful of the water was borne to the sick room, and a saucer was set floating on its surface. If the small dish moved in the direction of the sun, the patient was to recover. If it floated against the sun, the patient would die.

At Dunkeld there was a well particularly celebrated for curing childish ailments, and called the Grenge Well. In old times, pieces of clothing, coins, pins, and needles were frequently cast into it as votive offerings. The Rumbling Well in Galloway used to be visited by crowds of people in search of health, and they were accustomed to pass the night—which was always the Saturday night before the first Sunday of May—in the open, near the well, in order that they might drink the waters before sunrise.

St. Corbet's Well.

Near Stirling there is a well of crystal clear water which also had to be drunk before sunrise on the first Sunday of May, so as to enjoy its beneficent effects. It was named St. Corbet's Well, and if the conditions were observed, it insured the life of him—or her—who drank of its contents, for the period of one year.

Close to a chapel dedicated to Our Lady of Loretto at Musselburgh, there was a well which was the scene in many mediaeval pilgrimages. Expectant mothers used to send the baby linen to have it consecrated and sprinkled with the holy water, and money gifts were frequently flung into the well, in order to ensure safe birth and convalescence. Mothers used also to dip their babies three times in the water of St. John's Well at Balmanno, in Kincardineshire, to cure them of many troubles. This was held in high veneration.

One of the three holy virgins who are said to have voyaged with St. Regulus when he brought St. Andrew's bones to Scotland, was St. Triduana. At Restalrig, near Edinburgh, a church was erected in her honor. This church has recently been examined and restored in a partial way; and a covered well has been discovered which seems to have been a very popular object of pilgrimages in the Middle Ages. Sir David Lindsay speaks of it as a spot to which folk repaired "to mend their ene." The tradition is that Triduana was a beautiful maiden who was courted by an ardent lover for the sake of her fascinating eyes. Her soul was set on heavenly things, so, to thwart his attentions, she fled from him, sending him as a gift her two eyes impaled on a thorn. The tears which flowed from the empty sockets formed the well to which her name was given and which had the power—according to current belief—of healing all the affections of the eye.

A Girl's Sacrifice.

An interesting companion tale is that of the Sacred Well at Kirkmaiden, in Glasserton, which had its origin in much the same way. The story is that a certain Irish maiden, Medana by name, took a vow of chastity. She was bothered, however, by a most persistent suitor, who "would not take 'no' for an answer." Accordingly she left her native land and sailed across to Scotland for refuge. Langing in the Rhinns of Galloway, she thought to have found peace; but her lover followed hot-foot, and the maiden was compelled to fly for safety to a rocky island. In answer to her earnest prayers, this rock became a boat in which she was wafted a distance of thirty miles to Kirkmaiden. Again the knight followed, and the unfortunate fugitive awakened in the morning to find her ubiquitous suitor at the door. Taking refuge in a lofty tree, she addressed the persistent swain. "What do you see in me?" she exclaimed, "to excite your passion?" "Your face and eyes," he rejoined. Immediately she tore out her eyes and flung them at his feet. At length the knight, in an access of penitence, departed. When she descended from the tree and searched for water to wash her wounds, a fountain miraculously sprang from the roots of the tree, forming the sacred well.

WHERE AND HOW TO SEE ECLIPSE OF SUN

By PROF. E. W. BROWN, Of Yale University.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 27.—(United Press).—The eclipse of the sun which will be total on January 24, 1925, over Connecticut and parts of the States of New York, Michigan and Wisconsin, will be studied at the observatories within the zone and other observatories will send expeditions into the zone bringing their own instruments.

But anyone can do some observing on his own account without anything to assist him except a bit of smoked glass and perhaps a pair of binoculars. One or two of the things he can do may be of service to astronomy.

For hundreds of years we have been trying to find out the exact path of the moon in the sky. Indeed the first records go back more than 2,500 years when the Chaldeans found out a rule about the occurrence of eclipses. With every year this knowledge increases and an eclipse is a particularly favorable occasion to improve it because the edges of the shadow cast by the moon on the earth can be easily seen. And the exact time that the shadow passes can be obtained within a fraction of a second by a good observer.

The astronomer can predict the positions of these edges within a mile or so, but it can be observed much more closely than this. It is very easy for anyone near the edge to say whether the sun was totally eclipsed or not at the place where he happens to be. There are several ways in which this can be done. As the moon creeps over the face of the sun and covers up more and more of it, there will finally be left a narrow crescent of the shape of the new moon, but, of course, very much brighter. If this narrow crescent completely disappears, even for less than a second, the eclipse is total at the place where the observer is stationed. It may be that before it has totally disappeared a bright point of the sun will appear at another part of the edge, and if this happens, the eclipse is not total. A difference in position of the observer of even a hundred yards may make the difference between a total eclipse and one which is not quite total.

A Fringe of Light.

When the sun is very nearly obscured a fringe of light will begin to be visible on the side farthest away from the bright crescent. As the crescent lessens this fringe will appear to spread round the edge, and, finally, when the crescent of bright light has totally disappeared, the fringe will be seen all round. Hence another test for totality is for the observer to say whether he saw this fringe of light the whole way round at any moment.

Even before the crescent of the sun has disappeared, stars will begin to be visible to those who are on the lookout for them, but it is not until the sun is totally obscured that any but the brightest stars are seen.

Huge Black Shadow.

But perhaps the most impressive sight of the whole eclipse for those who are in the region where the sun is totally obscured is the moment before the face of the sun is quite blotted out. If he keeps his eyes fixed on the earth he will see a black shadow approaching from the west and covering up sky and earth as though some huge monster were closing his jaws. It travels with enormous velocity, rushes over the observer's head, and passes off to the east. Even if one misses everything else in the eclipse this sight should not be missed.

Another curious appearance can be seen just before the eclipse becomes total and before the black shadow comes up. The light is diminishing rapidly, and if one looks at any white surface such as the side of a house or on a sheet laid on the ground, he will often see a number of parallel bands going by. These bands are usually about a foot apart and are alternately light and dark. It is generally thought that they are due to some peculiarity in our own atmosphere because it is difficult to explain them in any other way. As they can never be seen except just before and just after a total eclipse the chance to find something out about them should not be neglected.

A map showing the places within the band of territory where the eclipse is total has been published by the Naval Observatory at Washington and they have calculated the position of the edges of the band as exactly as possible. Some towns, for exampie, Duluth, Menominee, Frankfort, London, Dunkirk and Wilks-Barre, are only just inside the southern edge, while Syracuse, Springfield and Providence are just outside the northern edge. New York City, north of the northern end of Central Park, is inside; the rest of the city is outside. It is hoped that for those who are near the edges but outside arrangements can be made with the transportation companies to run special cars or trains to take them within the region, so that they may see the sun totally eclipsed. For those who have automobiles the problem should not be difficult.

Always, however, we get back to the eternal question, will the weather be clear?

FEES

Are the doctors' fees to become standardized? In some districts the medical societies work out a scale of maximum and minimum fees for nearly every ailment under the sun.

Basing medical charges on ability to pay, rather than on services rendered, sometimes comes in for criticism and debate. Applied to services and commodities in general, it would keep wealth more fairly distributed. A loaf of bread worth 10 cents to a ditch-digger is worth hundreds of dollars to the rich, theoretically. Cutting out an appendix may cost $100 to $5000, a wide range.

CHANGES HIS NAME TO INHERIT FORTUNE

Board of Trade President Will Be Cunliffe-Lister.

LONDON, Nov. 27. — Sir Philip Lloyd - Greame, President of the Board of Trade, is going to do away with both of his names but keep the hyphen.

He will need to link up the two new names he has decided to adopt.

Hereafter he will be known as Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister.

The change will mean many thousands of pounds to Sir Philip. His mother-in-law, second daughter of the first Lord Masham, inherited a large part of his lordship's £1,350,000 fortune and in turn she willed it largely to the Lloyd-Greames, but she stipulated in her will that the recipients must adopt the name Cunliffe-Lister, the family name of Lord Masham.

Usually in change of names due to a legacy the recipient merely adds the new name to his own with a hyphen, but in Lloyd-Greame's case that would have meant four surnames and two or three hyphens. Apparently he decided it would be better to do away with his original name altogether, than to be bothered with this flock of appellatives.

MENUS FOR A FAMILY.

Breakfast—Baked pears, boiled rice, top milk, crisp broiled bacon, whole wheat toast, cornmeal griddle cakes, maple syrup, coffee, milk.

Luncheon—Creamed celery on toast, caramel custard, graham crackers, tea, milk.

Dinner—Lamb stew with vegetables corn on the cob, head lettuce salad, apple snow, sponge cake, coffee, milk, bread and butter.

After older children have eaten their cereal they may have one or two carefully baked pancakes with syrup, but a child under six or seven should not be permitted to eat griddle cakes or waffles.

When the man of the family is not at home for luncheon, the meal can be planned exclusively for the children. A busy mother will find the food quite as nourishing and helpful to her as the children. A woman "raising" a family has a real job on her hands and must be "fit" if she would do it well. She can't live on the wings and back-bones of the chicken and the tough tails of the steaks, do her work and have the best of herself to give to her family.

The lamb stew with vegetables, apple snow, sponge cake and milk are planned for the children's dinner, but will be equally acceptable to grown-ups.

Creamed Celery.

Two cups diced stalks celery, 2 tablespoons butter, 1½ tablespoons flour, ½ teaspoon salt, .. teaspoon pepper, ½ teaspoon sugar, 1 cup milk, 2 tablespoons celery stock.

Use the outer stalks of celery for stewing. Put in stewpan, pour over boiling water to cover and boil until tender. Replenish water as necessary to prevent burning but do not use more water than will boil away while cooking. Melt butter, stir in flour and slowly add milk, stirring constantly. Season with salt and pepper and add celery. There will be about 2 tablespoons water cling to the celery if it is cooked in little enough water not to need draining. When thoroughly heated but not boiling, pour overbuttered toast.

Caramel Custard.

Two-thirds cup brown sugar, 3 eggs 2 cups milk, ½ teaspoon salt.

Melt 6 tablespoons sugar over a slow fire. Warm custard cups and an equal amount of the caramel in each cup. Beat eggs well with salt and remaining sugar. Add milk heated in top of double boiler until "blood" heat. Beat into egg mixture and pour into cups. Bake in a pan of hot water in a moderate oven until firm to the touch. Do not let the water boil during the baking. It will take about 40 minutes to bake. Remove from cups while warm and serve cold.

Where shall we go this evening?

FREQUENTLY you decide to spend the evening in town with some friend. The first part is easy. Dinner at a pleasant restaurant. But afterwards . . . What will you do to carry on this business of having a good time?

FASTING TESTS ARE NOW MADE PUBLIC

Abstinence from Food Makes Tissues of Man 40 Comparable to Those of Boy 15.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—The first scientific data on some of the after effects of prolonged fasting, when not carried to the point of organ injury, were revealed to-day at the University of Chicago. Three years of investigation on human beings and animals have shown that fasting both facilitates digestion and brings bodily tissues back to more youthful conditions.

While scientists at the University of Chicago do not claim that the studies have thrown new light on rejuvenation in old age, they have proved, according to Prof. A. J. Carison, chairman of the department of physiology, that fifteen days of fasting increases the metabolic rate or the ability of bodily tissues to consume food and thus produce energy.

Cut from 40 to 15.

This process is most rapid in human beings at the age of 12 to 14, Dr. Carison explains. As a person grows older the power of the tissues lessens and the basal metabolic rate is lowered. Three adult persons in the physiological laboratory were found to have increased this rate after a long fast. When they resumed eating, their tissues consumed about as much a those of a youth of 15. As far as basal metabolism went they were nearer 12 than 40.

The experiments considered the most important in the field, have proved in addition, that prolonged fasting increases the secretion of gastric juice after eating is resumed and the body has regained its normal weight. This means that food is digested more readily after fasting than before.

Commenting on the physiological factors involved in fasting, Dr. Carison, who has himself submitted to the experiment, says that fasting is not painful. The only disadvantage, he states, comes from the gradual weakening it produces. The notion of pain has come from the fear of people who have been forced to go without food by poverty and who have been terrorized by the fear of death.

"Strikes" Not So Bad.

Hunger strikes have not been the terrible ordeals that they have been pictured, Dr. Carison maintains.

"The precise mechanism by which prolonged fasting induces changes of gastric secretion and metabolic rate in the body is as yet unknown," says Dr. Carison. "A certain number of body cells may be destroyed by the fast and replaced with new or young cells when eating is resumed. Or this may occur in some glands as the thyroids and adrenals that have a special relation as stimuli to metabolism. This problem is still under investigation.

"We are sure, however, that fasting brings the tissues back to a more youthful condition as measured by the basal metabolism."

AFTER THE WORK'S DONE

When Aristotle, long ago, said that the right use of leisure was the chief end in education, he little dreamed that in our day this idea would be used in support of a plea for a change in education.

In an article in the current number of one of our magazines, the writer contends that the students who go into business and industry through the doors of a college training get only the technical education required for the work. They get no training in the right use of their leisure after the routine work of the day. For the vast majority of our boys and girls, college doors never open at all, and only a relatively small number finishes even the high school In an age when most work is done by machinery, when even a good share of the remainder is mechanical and routine, it is pointed out, these children should be given training which, in later years, would help them to make better use of their leisure time.

Most parents and teachers will agree that this suggestion is worthy of consideration. We can ill afford to neglect the fact that what use people make of their leisure time is very important, both as a matter of social welfare and business efficiency. While it is not proposed to restrict the individual in his pleasures, the community should aim to make these pleasures as wholesome as possible for the individual and society.

Look ahead to the cold mornings. What a luxury and comfort it is to slip into a warm, soft suit of JAEGER pure wool underwear. How cosy this feels when the wind steals into your overcoat and around your ankles, and in the heated office it is never uncomfortable. That is the beauty of pure wool.

JAEGER pure wool underwear need not be heavy to be warm. In fact it yields the very maximum of bodily heat with the minimum of actual weight. You have only to try pure wool next the skin to realize that it produces warmth only when needed.

Pure wool is Nature's own covering with which she clothes many of her children. And to man she yields the knowledge that allows him to clothe himself in pure wool.

POLISH PEASANT LIFE IS BACKGROUND OF NOBEL PRIZ WINNER'S EPIC OF SOIL

Ladislas St. Reymont Has Had Active, Varied Career and Waited Long Before Recognition—Books Translated into English.

Announcement that Wladislaw St. Reymont (Wladislaw Reymont) had won the 1924 Nobel prize in literature comes within a few weeks of the appearance of the first American translation of any of his writings.

"Autumn," first of four volumes that make up a soil epic, "The Peasants," was published by Alfred A. Knopf. For nine years, Knopf admits he had been advised to publish this work—which gives some indication of the time Reymont must have waited for world recognition.

In colorful background Reymont, a Pole, recalls Knut Hamsun who lived a most varied life, including that of being a street car motorman in Chicago.

Reymont had been variously an actor in a cheap, wandering stock company; a railroad clerk, telegraph operator; farmer and store clerk. He even went into a monastery for Paulist Fathers. He spent but a few months there and, his troubled soul seeming to have found some solace, he set himself to writing, devoting himself to poetry until "Death," a short story, was written.

He was the son of very poor parents and one of 12 children. His youthful days were spent in the country. His father was a fervid patriot, being a leader in the Polish insurrection against Russia. Inheriting this spirit of rebellion Reymont refused to give up his native Polish tongue in a Russian school and was expelled.

Reymont, in "The Peasants," seems to have covered in elaborate and starkly real detail, the toils, pleasures, customs loves, desires and hates, passions, conflicts and social life of the residents of a Polish village under Russian rule.

If "Autumn" be a criterion of the others of the quartet this is indeed an encyclopedic task done in story guise with a heroine reminiscent of the tragic "Tess" of Thomas Hardy.

* * *

The early American scene is getting a most varied picturing this season. Hergesheimer's "Balisand" dug into inside politics and made a point to the effect that the entrance of Jefferson on the stage met with some such welcome as recently greeted Mr. La Follette.

Now comes Mary Johnstone who loves to revive an era if for no other reason than its glamor. But in "The Slave Ship" (Little, Brown) she also goes in for "inside history." Here early Virginia is pictured, with slave trading and bondsmen as figures moving through a picture in which David Scott, an escaped slave, is the center. The personal mysticism of the man shares equally with the carefully collected background both of Virginia and Africa. It is a remarkably good historical narrative. "Balisand," this surveyor thinks, is a bit better one.

Harvey O'Higgins, it may not be generally known, is no mean psycho-analyst, in addition to a writing man whose facility is short of delightful. As psycho-analyst he wrote "The Hidden Springs" and as psycho-analyst plus writing man of facility he has turned out "Julie Cane" (Harpers), one of the books that should be marked down for reading before the winter ends.

No laboratorial psycho stuff is this, but real character in an absorbing, swift moving tale. This capacity for mind and soul penetration, coupled with his artistic ability, gives O'Higgins no mean handicap over the field.

In "Julie Cane" the grocer, his repressed wife and Julie, their daughter, as well as the combined hero-villain are people, not types.

O'Higgins can play at being a sort of literary God and actually create the people he employs in his pages.

The Survey places "Julie Cane" well up in the list of the best books the season has produced.

Sax Rohmer puts thrills in books as a pharmacist puts capsules in a box, next to each other and all loaded. "Gray Face," his latest (Doubelday, Page), is a real thrillfest. Anton de Trepniak, a master German physiologist regenerated by glandular treatment, sets out to become Emperor of the World by using jultra-hypnotism. The scene is set in London with glimpses of Scotland Yard, bizarre luxury, Limehouse, and courtly society. A delightful love match is almost frustrated by being sucked into the intrigue. Rohmer succeeds in getting movement and suspense into his story.

A long drift into the Polar seas furnishes the back ground of "Ship of Destiny" (Houghton, Mifflin), by Marshall Goold, a sea tale with many a thrill and with potential tragedy tracking the pages.

"The Man in the Brown Suit" (Dodd, Mead) is the latest detective tale from Agatha Christie who wrote "The Murder on the Links" and several others. A slip of paper, picked up by chance by a pretty maid furnishes the clue to a murder mystery.

GET ACQUAINTED WITH W. L. W.

(CINCINNATI, OH IO—423 METERS).

By WILLIAM J. FAGAN.

With the advantages of Crosleys technical force such as is passed by the Crosley Radio Corporation, and having recently moved into beautiful new studio building, one would naturally expect a high type of radio artistry and a varied programme to be heard when WLW is tuned in.

This is not meant in a sense derogatory to the efforts of WLW. It is merely an expression of disappointment that with the facilities at its command, WLW has often failed to exhibit that type of initiative which has characterized the efforts of other broadcasters.

To be sure, some of the most notable musical and public events held in Cincinnati have come to the outside world through WLW. The summer opera, the political meetings, orchestral concerts, etc., have been sufficient to demonstrate that all is not somnolent in the Crosley studio and that one may hope for better in the future.

Neither has WLW been remiss in availing itself of the opportunities for good music which the Cincinnati Conservatory offers, for both pupils and faculty have had recitals on numerous occasions. Classical and popular music are about evenly divided and the Doherty Melody Boys and other dance orchestras have gained a large following among radio fans through their syncopated performances.

As this article is being written, word comes that WLW has instituted a late programme, beginning at 11:30 p.m. each night but Friday, and entitled "Arabian Nights." This will undoubtedly prove to be a most attractive feature for late listeners and probably enable WLW to hang up a new distance record for itself. However, distance doesn't mean everything in radio. Some broadcasters are more interested in the number of miles its waves have travelled than in the quality of the programme carried by those waves.

Several manufacturing companies in Cincinnati have been sending quartets, trios, etc., to WLW recently. This is unfortunate, for once the paid advertisers have to be catered to, no radio station can call its soul its own. As has been repeated over and over again, where a broadcaster is selling space on his programme, he cannot render disinterested service to the multitude of listeners who, by purchasing radio equipment, have made possible not only the station's operation, but a full pocket-book for the manufacturer of the radio equipment.

WLW has some commendable distance records, having been heard in practically every part of the United States. It recently secured license for a 423-meter wave length, the three Cincinnati stations formerly having shared 309 meters. However, this has not materially affected WLW's broadcasting hours, except that the recent addition of the "Arabian Nights" is a new departure.

SECOND-HAND.

Auto dealers' association reports that the number of used cars sold so far this year is almost exactly the same as the number of new cars placed on the market. Three hundred thousand second-hand machines a month are sold, the country over.

The average used car now sels for $297.80. In 70 out of 100 new-car sales, a used car is traded in.

The junkman doesn't get all our discarded cars. A lot are shipped abroad, where novelty still eclipses ancient vintage.

Livestock Producers of Canada

Limited

HEAD OFFICE - TORONTO, CANADA

Incorporated under the Dominion Companies Act.

CAPITAL:

5,000 7% Cumulative Preference Shares—par value $500,000
5,000 Common Shares—par value $500,000

BOARD OF DIRECTORS:

H. P. KENNEDY, President, Livestock Dealer ..... Toronto, Canada
T. J. IRWIN, 1st Vice-Pres., Livestock and Dressed Meat Merchant .... Glasgow, Scotland
HENRY WEILLER, 2nd Vice-Pres., Livestock Dealer ..... St. Paul, Minn.
CHARLES BAUCKHAM, Secretary, Trust Co. Manager ..... Toronto, Canada
WALTER M. DUNLAP, Livestock Dealer ..... Lancaster, Pa.
JOHN POELS, Livestock Dealer ..... Antwerp, Belgium
W. H. ADAMSON, Insurance Adjuster ..... Toronto, Canada
JOHN L. JUHLIN, Stock Yards Manager ..... Edmonton, Alta.
NORMAN SOMMERVILLE, K.C., Barrister ..... Toronto, Canada

AT certain seasons of every year in Canada the livestock market reacts to unusually heavy runs of cattle. At such times large quantities of unfinished cattle can be purchased at bedrock prices. Alberta provides the cheapest grain and coarse feed, and also the best quality of feeding steers obtainable in Canada. The climatic conditions for outdoor feeding are excellent. Experience justifies the statement that 50 pounds per month may be regarded as a reasonable increase and 75 pounds as the maximum gain per month in weight in feeding such cattle.

THE OBJECTS OF COMPANY

To provide proper facilities for feeding several thousand head of cattle adjacent to the Edmonton Stock Yards: to buy cattle, to place all classes in their proper grades and when in a finished condition, to offer them as short-keep feeders or fat cattle to be sold direct in the final market. This assures the largest possible net return to the Company, and also provides a continuous outlet to the farmers of Alberta for their surplus choice cattle and coarse grains, hay, etc.

To have all livestock graded and properly classified as purchased, and to be able to fill at the shortest possible notice any class of order, whether for home consumption, feeding purposes or export. The concentration of such a large number of cattle gives to the Company a decided advantage in meeting the market conditions that are most suitable to their interests.

To stimulate the production of the best types of feeding cattle and to develop and cultivate world markets for the permanent advantage of the cattle producers of Western Canada.

Since the removal of the embargo on Canadian cattle, the position in Great Britain has become stabilized and there now exists a steady and increasing demand for particular types of Canadian steers. The most efficient and comprehensive organization is required to cultivate and develop this new market to its full capacity.

PRESENT POSITION OF COMPANY

Ample capital has already been provided by the Directors of the Company to make certain its successful operation, so that the investor can immediately participate in a profitable business, the expansion of which is governed alone by the volume of capital invested. The Directors contemplate a turnover of approximately 10,000 head of cattle before June 30th, 1925.

In view of the character of the Company's operations, a large proportion of its assets is liquid, and it is estimated at about 80 per cent. of the cash invested in the Company will always be in assets of this character.

By actual experience, during the winter of 1923 and 1924, covering the purchase and feeding of 400 head of cattle at Edmonton, there was a profit of 20 1-2 per cent. made on the turnover, while the money invested in the cattle was only in use for a period of six months.

CATTLE RAISING IN THE WEST

Impressive growth in exports of Canadian cattle to the United Kingdom and Continental Europe, and the unprecedented opportunities afforded Canadian producers by the constantly increasing demands for beef in thickly populated countries have induced a group of capitalists long identified with the industry and trade in Europe, the United States and Canada, to organize a company known as Live Stock Producers of the United States and Canada, to organize a company known as Live Stock Producers of Canada, Limited, which operates in Edmonton, Alberta, adjacent to the Edmonton Stock Yards. There, the company has acquired a 320-acre property, fully equipped for carrying on the enterprise on a grand commercial scale. It has as its executive head Mr. H. P. Kennedy, Toronto, one of the best known cattle operators in the Dominion, with an experience extending over 35 years. Mr. Kennedy has built up strong trade connections on two continents.

Live Stock Producers of Canada, Limited, incorporated for the purpose of carrying on the business of buying, feeding, selling, importing and exporting live stock, and all other enterprises incidental thereto, including farming, ranching, stock raising and operation of warehouses, elevators and mills, has a capitalization of $1,000,000 of $100 par value, divided into 5,000 7% preference shares and 5,000 common shares.

Breeding and feeding of live stock in Canada has entered upon anew and prosperous phase. The lifting of the embargo against Canadian cattle entering the United Kingdom was a landmark in the development of the industry in this country. Depletion of the herds of Continental Europe, resulting from the ravages of the Great War, has afforded opportunities to Canadian producers never experienced before.

Western Canada is being drawn upon now for supplies in a big way. The Province of Alberta is destined to become one of the main sources of supply for consuming markets, because its climatic conditions for raising and feeding cattle are ideal, and because feed and pasturage are cheaper than in any other territory in North America. Alberta's herds have been built up by careful selection of parent stock over a period of years, with the result that the finest types of beef cattle in the world have been developed. From these herds the company draws its raw material.

The secret of success in the live stock industry (as in all other industries) is production of a good strain of cattle, on a large scale, at the minimum cost. The organization established by Live Stock Producers of Canada, Limited, eminently fulfils all these essential conditions. Located adjacent to one of Western Canada's largest stock yards, in the midst of a vast grain growing area and in an important elevator centre, low feeding and transportation costs will enable the company to meet all competition.

Due to seasonal conditions, heavy runs of cattle at stock yards occur at certain periods of each year, when feeding cattle can be purchased at bedrock prices, put in feed lots, properly graded, according to weight and age and finished in the open at a minimum cost of production. By a standardized grading system, orders from buyers at home and abroad may be filled promptly and satisfactorily. The enterprise thus becomes a constant factor in consuming markets and by a scientific development of these markets will stimulate production of the best types of feeding cattle for the permanent advantage of cattle producers of Western Canada.

No better indication of the earning-power of Live Stock Producers of Canada, Limited, can be obtained than the demonstrated fact that 50 to as high as 75 pounds per month can be added to the weight of cattle, under the conditions controlled by the company.

A favorable feature of the business is that the turnover is rapid. By actual experience, during the winter of 1923 and 1924, covering the purchase and feeding of 400 cattle at Edmonton, a profit accrued of 21½%, while the money invested in the cattle was in use only for a period of six months.

Ample capital has already been provided by the directors of the company to make certain the success of the enterprise, with the result that the investor can immediately participate in a profitable business, the expansion of which is governed by the volume of capital invested. The directors contemplate a turnover of approximately 10,000 head of cattle before June 30th, 1925, and a substantial proportion of these have already been procured for the future operations of the company.

The directorate is composed of men long and favorably known in the live stock trade in the principal consuming centres of both continents. The Board is as follows: President, H. P. Kennedy, Toronto, Canada; 1st Vice-President, T. J. Irwin, Scotland; 2nd Vice-President, Henry Weiller, St. Paul, Minn.; Secretary, Charles Bauckham, Toronto, Canada. Walter M. Dunlap, Lancaster, Pa.; John Poels, Antwerp, Belgium; W. H. Adamson, Toronto, Canada; John L. Juhlin, Edmonton, Alta.; Norman Sommerville, K.C., Toronto, Canada.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

LOSE WEIGHT.

Four tablespoons stewed rhubarb, ½ cup cottage cheese, 1 head lettuce, 8 clams on half shell, broiled lamb kidneys, 1 cup new cooked cabbage, 1 whole canned pear, 1 slice bran toast, 2 slices gluten bread, 1 pint skimmed milk.

Total calories, 1006. Protein, 352; fat, 124; carbohydrate, 530. Iron, .0216 gram.

Broiled Lamb Kidneys.

Six lamb kidneys, 2 large onions, 2 tablespoons butter, salt and pepper, 2 tablespoons lemon juice.

Soak kidneys in cold salt water for two hours. Pare, trim and cut in thin slices. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Melt butter in frying pan, add slices of kidney and brown quickly on one side and then on the other. Remove to a hot platter and keep hot. Peel and slice onions and cook in melted butter until tender. The pan should be covered to prevent the steam from escaping. This cooks the onions. Sprinkle lemon juice over kidneys and surround with onions. This recipe will serve four persons.

GAIN WEIGHT.

Four tablespoons well-sweetened stewed rhubarb, 4 corn meal pancakes, 2 tablespoons fish hash, ½ cup cottage cheese, 4 tablespoons chopped nuts, 2 tablespoons chopped ripe olives, 3 tablespoons cream, 1 head lettuce, green pepper, 1 plate noodle soup, 8 clams on half shell, 3 table spoons scalloped potatoes, 1 cup new cooked cabbage with cream, 1 whole canned pear on 1 slice of sponge cake with 4 tablespoons hot chocolate sauce over whole, 4 tablespoons butter, 4 tablespoons maple sirup, 1 slice bran toast, 2 slices whole wheat bread, 2 tablespoons square croutons, 2 slices graham nut bread, 1 tablespoon marmalade, 1 Parker House roll, 1 eggnog, 2 cups cocoa, 1 cup hot milk, 2 tablespoons French dressing.

The cheese, nuts, olives, green pepper and cream are suggested for the making of a salad. The pepper can be used as a garnish for the reducing menu and may be welcomed with the cheese.

The eggnog may be needed at midmorning as the breakfast is lacking in a food rich in protein.

Cocoa adds some fat and carbohydre to the milk and increases the number of calories, but the cocoa must be made entirely of milk, not half water and half milk, if the same amount of good is derived from it as from plain milk.

TROUBLE BREWING MINERS ASSURED

Great Struggle Between Workers and Owners Is Predicted.

LONDON, Nov. 27.— (Canadian Press Cable).—A great struggle between the miners and the mine owners in the near future is predicted by A. J. Cook, general secretary of the miner's federation. Secretary Cook says the struggle will come either in connection with the mine owners' demand for a reversion to the eight hour day or on the definite refusal of the mine workers to ratify further agreements unless a living wage is assured thereby.

The present agreements between the mine owners and the workers will not expire until next June, but two weeks hence the mine owners will meet for their periodical business and it is anticipated that the occasion will not be allowed to pass without some talk concerning the trouble that is undoubtedly brewing.

The miners propose demanding a minimum wage of 12 shillings a day for the lowest grade of workers.

PARCELS NEED GOOD PACKING

Christmas Will Be More Pleasant If Gifts Are Delivered In Good Condition.

SOME HINTS.

With the pre-Christmas shopping crowds thronging the streets and the usual rush to mail parcels of Christmas gifts just beginning, the following hints from the Post Office will be interesting and helpful.

Acting-Postmaster C. Lacheur is specially anxious that no parcels from Peterborough shall be lost through careless wrapping or the omission of the necessary directions, and it is to the best interests of citizens that the regulations of the Post Office, all looking toward the better handling of mail, be carried out.

Strong wrapping paper and stout string are the first requisites to the successful transportation of gifts, however light or heavy they may be. It is pointed out that the flimsy Christmas tissue can be wrapped on the gift first, and then covered with the stout paper that will protect it, presenting a more pleasing appearance on unwrapping and preserving the gift from scratches or even breakage.

Heavy articles of a fragile nature should be surrounded with excelsior or some other shock-absorbent material, placed in well-made wooden boxes, and labelled "Fragile-with care." These labels will be gladly supplied by the Post Office. Light articles of a fragile nature, such as cake, candy, jewellery, toys, and so forth, should be packed in double-faced corrugated cardboard containers and labelled in the same way. Ordinary cardboard boxes are not found to be satisfactory containers for shoes or other goods sent by mail, and when used should be surrounded by several layers of stout paper and be well tied with cord.

Hats and similar articles should be packed in rigid boxes of wood or other material, or in stout "leatherwood" boxes with lids extending about two-thirds the depth of the box, or in boxes protected on all sides by light crossbars of wood. These packages should also be labelled "Fragile."

Pictures in frames should be protected front and back by wooden boards a little larger than the frame, and soft packing should be placed firmly between the corners of the frame and the boards, care being taken that it does not press on the glass. Drawings and paintings mailed flat should be protected by layers of corrugated cardboard. Canes, fishing rods, umbrellas and gold sticks should be protected by two stout pieces of wood, a little longer and wider than the article to be protected. Sharp pointed or sharp edged tools must have the points or edges so well protected that they cannot cut through their coverings.

Butter, lard, grease and other liquifiable substances must be packed in strong leak-proof containers and labelled "Keep from heat." Liquids and oils must be enclosed in glass bottles, hermetically sealed and carefully packed in special wooden boxes or strong corrugated cardboard boxes, containing sawdust, cotton or other spongy material in sufficient quantity to absorb the liquid in the event of the bottle being broken.

All parcels should be addressed plainly, the address being marked on the package itself and not only on an attached tag. The sender's name and address should also appear. It is a good plan to write the address on the box or container, inside the outer wrapping, so that in the event of the wrapping paper becoming torn the parcel may still be delivered without delay.

UNITED FARM WOMEN.

Fourteen Delegates Present from the Various Country Clubs.

A convention of the clubs of the United Farm Women of Ontario of Peterborough County was held in the U.F.O. rooms on Simcoe street. Seventeen delegates were present from the various county clubs. Miss Pearl Petrie occupied the chair. Very satisfatcory reports from the affiliated clubs were presented.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: County Director, Mrs. E. Hamlin, of Dummer; President (re-elected) Miss Pearl Petrie, of Otonabee; Vice-President, Mrs. Wallace Anderson, of Warsaw; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. S. F. Redmond, of Otonabee. Township Directors, Mrs. A. E. Higgins for Douro, Mrs. S. Comrie for Otonabee, Mrs. ads. Long for Dummer, Mrs. Jas. McMillan for Belmont, Mrs. Thos. Buck for Asphodel, and Mrs. Bruce Reid of Harvey, for the northern portion of the county.

The meeting decided to do a certain amount of visiting among the different clubs during the winter season and to provide local speakers when outside speakers cannot be arranged for.

ARTICLE No. 8

There have been many books written on auction, telling the player what to bid or what to play under almost every conceivable situation. As a result, the reader is generally left in a most confused state of mind and applies the wrong principle at the wrong time. As one of my correspondents expresses it, "after reading all the authorities on auction, I have concluded that the only safe thing to do with a big hand is to pass it." Such a state of affairs is, of course, a reflection on the present style and complexity of the books on auction and the way they handle the various problems of the game. That is one reason why articles such as these are so popular. They handle only one principle at a time and in a manner that is easily understood. "What not to do" is really a better slogan than those adopted by the writers of the solemn and heavy books on the game. It will at least give concrete examples of "what not to do" and therefore help a little when the same situations arise.

The other night the following hand was dealt at one of the well-known New York Clubs and was the cause of more or less acrimonious discussion:

Hearts — A, J, 9
Clubs — J, 7, 6
Diamonds — Q, 8, 4
Spades — 8, 7, 5, 3

Hearts — 5, 4
Clubs — K, 4, 3
Diamonds — 10, 7, 6, 5
Spades — A, J, 10, 6

: Y :
: A B :
: Z :

Hearts — K, Q, 10, 8, 2
Clubs — A, 8
Diamonds — K, J, 9, 2
Spades — 9, 2

Hearts — 7, 6, 3
Clubs — Q, 10, 9, 5, 2
Diamonds — A, 3
Spades — K, Q, 4

No score, first game. Z dealt and bid one no-trump, A and Y passed and B bid two hearts. Z and A passed and Y also should have passed but forgetting that he had only one stopper in the heart suit, bid two no-trump. All passed and Z went down four tricks undoubled, a net loss of 200 points. If Y had passed as he should have done, Z would have opened the ace of diamonds and then followed with the trey. When Y obtained the lead, he could have returned the diamond and allowed Z to trump. In this way, Y-Z could have saved game and A-B would have scored three odd in hearts, with simple honors, a net score of 40 points. This hand and Y's bidding is a fine example of "what not to do" after partner has bid one no-trump and has been overbid. Don't bid two no-trump unless you have a double stopper in the suit bid against you, unless you should happen to have an exceptionally big outside hand with your single stopper.

Hearts — 9, 7, 6
Clubs — K, 8, 2
Diamonds — K, J, 9
Spades — J, 8, 4, 2

: Y :
: A B :
: Z :

Rubber game, no score, Z dealt and bid one spade, A and Y passed and B bid two diamonds. Z and A passed and Y now decided that two no-trump was a good bid, instead of bidding two spades. He didn't stop to realize that his K, J, 9 of diamonds were in the wrong position to act as a double stopper. The bid was very bad and a fine example of "what not to do." The bid was doubled and defeated 300 points. If Y had bid two spades, it would not have been doubled and Z could have just made it. Quite a difference between scoring two odd in spades and four honors, or 54 points, and losing 300 points.

Answer to Problem No. 4

Hearts — J, 10, 8, 4
Clubs — Q
Diamonds — K, Q, 10, 2
Spades — Q, 8, 7, 4

Hearts — 3
Clubs — A, J, 9, 7, 2
Diamonds — 9, 8, 6, 5, 3
Spades — 9, 2

: Y :
: A B :
: Z :

Hearts — A, 7, 6, 5
Clubs — K, 10, 6, 5, 4
Diamonds — None
Spades — A, J, 5, 3

Hearts — K, Q, 9, 2
Clubs — 8, 3
Diamonds — A, J, 7, 4
Spades — K, 10, 6

No score, first game. Z dealt and bid one heart and all passed. A opened the ace of clubs and then played the nine of spades. B won the trick with the ace of spades and then led the five of hearts. How should Z now play the hand so that he can make four odd against any defense? The point of play in this problem is for Z not to trump his losing club in dummy. On the lead of the five of hearts by B he should win the trick and continue the heart lead for three rounds or until B plays his ace. If B refuses to play his ace on the third round, Z should stop the heart lead. No matter what B then does, he cannot save game. Z can obtain a discard of his losing club on the good spade and all of his other tricks are good. Played in this way Y-Z lose only one club, one spade and one heart trick. Suppose, however, that Z wins the first heart trick and trumps his losing club in Y's hand. If he does, he loses game for B can now make two trump tricks by refusing to win the second round of trumps. This is a pretty problem and should be played over several times until thoroughly understood. The play of a club at trick four is a fine example of "what not to do" in the play of a hand.

POSTAGE RATE XMAS PARCELS

Handy Reference For Senders of Christmas Presents —Rates of Insurance.

ENGLISH MAIL.

Rates on parcels mailed to various parts of the Dominion vary according to the distance over which they must be transported, and the following table will be of use in determining the approximate cost of transmission.

The Peterborough parcel post zone extends for a radius of twenty miles, taking in the following places:—Alderville, Baillieboro', Bethany, Bewdley, Birdsalls, Bobcaygeon, Bridgenorth, Burleigh Falls, Burnley, Camborne, Campbellcroft, Cavan, Centre Dummer, Claraday, Cold Springs, Crawford's Grove, Curve Lake, Dartford, Douro, Downeyville, Dunsford, Ennismore, Fenella, Fowler's Corners, Franklin, Frazerville, Garden Hill, Glamorgan, Gore's Landing, Hall's Bridge, Hall's Glen, Harwood, Hastings, Ida, Indian River, Juniper Island, Kawartha Park, Keene, Lakefield, Lakehurst, Lang, Mill Brook, Morrow, Mount Julian, McCracken's Landing (S.O.), Norwood, Omemee, Plainville, Reaboro', Roseneath, Ross Mount, Selwyn, South Monaghan, Thurstonia Park (S.O.), Warsaw, Westwood, Young's Point.

Within this zone the rates are:—1 pound, 5 cents; 2 pounds, 6 cents; 3 pounds, 7 cents; 4 pounds, 8 cents; 5 pounds, 10 cents; 6 pounds, 12 cents; 7 pounds, 14 cents; 8 pounds, 16 cents; 9 pounds, 18 cents; 10 pounds, 20 cents; and 11 pounds, 22 cents.

Parcels to any point in Canada or United States may be insured for indemnity up to $100, at rates varying from 3 cents to 30 cents, and the Post Office Department recommends this system to all senders of Christmas gifts. There are many people who insure all their parcels throughout the year, having acquired the "safety first" habit since the inauguration of the system. The rates are:—Value not exceeding $5, insurance 3 cents; value between $5 and $25, insurance 6 cents; value between $25 and $50, insurance 12 cents; and value between $50 and $100, insurance cost 30 cents.

Foreign Postage.

Rates on parcels to foreign countries must be ascertained at the Post Office. The rate to the United Kingdom is 24 cents for the first pound, and 18 cents for each additional pound up to the limit of 11 pounds. Insurance on parcels to England costs 12 cents for value not exceeding $50, and 30 cents for value between $50 and $100.

The last Christmas mail for Old Country points closes in Peterborough on December 5.

RITE WEIMAN MARRIED.

Stayed Single Until Article, "I Am Single Because" Had Been Printed.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—(United Press).—Rite Weiman, author and playwright, recently wrote a magazine article called "I am still single because—" and signed an agreement with her publishers that she would not marry until it was printed.

The story appeared a month ago with the author still single but today she becomes the wife of Maurice E. Banks, a New York advertising man.

"But I am keeping my maiden name," Miss Weiman said a few hours before the ceremony. "And with the emphatic approval of Mr. Banks, who as an advertising man realizes the value of trade mark."

TAXICAB RACING BECOMES LATEST PARIS THRILLER

It is a Sport Inspired by the Traffic Difficulties of Paris.

MANY ACCIDENTS.

By MINOTT SAUNDERS

PARIS, Nov. 27.—(United Press). The bons vivants of Paris have evolved a new sport. It should be understood, and might be played, in any traffic-congested city in the world. It is thrilling because it is hazardous and offers a wide range of gambling possibilities.

When "the dansant" gets dull or the cocktails come too fast in the late afternoon a gay party will suggest a taxicab race. Participants agree to leave the place at the same time and separate at the door. Each hails the first available taxicab and directs the driver to an identical and pre-arranged destination outside the busy sections of the city. Each keeps his cab and returns as quickly as possible and the first person back into the cafe takes first place money.

It is a sport inspired by the traffic difficulties of Paris, and at the same time affords some fresh air. It is a pure sporting gamble because a Paris taxi driver, making all possible speed, will take amazing chances to the thrilling risk of life and limb. Members of the party remaining behind can quietly make a book on the order in which their friends will finish, and horse-racing is a dull sport compared to this. Probably no two drivers will take the same course to the objective, and all are subject to monetary persuasion, so the science of the game may readily be imagined.

Down Town Congestion.

It is a fair commentary on prevailing traffic conditions. Downtown congestion at busy hours has reached an alarming state and public works officials seem unable adequately to cope with it. The problem is one of the most serious of civic life here.

The motorization of Paris has come within a very few years with the result that facilities, and the community discipline, and the public temper, are quite unprepared for it. Every day hundreds of accidents occur, and while most of them are simple cases of automobiles bumping each other, the growing list of traffic mortality has become alarming.

As recently as 1920, Paris had practically no system of traffic control. The traffic passed at such corners as the Place de l'Opera without police guidance. Finally traffic policemen were posted, but the hardy pioneers lived lives of extreme hazard, and only relentless prosecution brought a semblance of discipline on the part of the drivers. Then the city spent a tidy sum on the installation of safety zones, which consisted of red strips of pavement as passageways across streets at corners, but within the course of a few hours traffic obliterated the color scheme and trustful pedestrians had to step as lively as ever. Mounted police were installed, but the horses have never been able to catch up with the offending motorists. Now progressive measures of American cities are being studied and one method, a modified system of New York's signalling plan, has been adopted. It is operating on the main boulevards with indifferent success, and officials realize that it must speedily be supplemented by further drastic reforms.

C'etait la Guerre

It must be remembered that for nearly five years when the war was on Paris was in an abnormal state, and the post-war increase on motor vehicles has become formidable. There are now 70,000 cars of all descriptions on the registers of the Seine department, besides a great number of horse vehicles, and the big contingent to be attributed to visitors. In the first six months of the present year 40,000 car licenses were issued by the prefecture of police, whereas in the same period of 1914 there were but 8,000 applied for and granted. A single cab company has just put 1,000 new vehicles on the streets. To cope with this amount of rapid wheel traffic, out of all proportion to the width of the average thoroughfares of the city, a commission of forty experts exists, and they have to devise remedies adapted to the case without injuring public or private interests. This is a difficult task.

Various reforms are under consideration. It is widely believed that tram cars will have to be suppressed within the center of the city. New Yorks' measures for controlling horse traffic will probably be adopted soon, although this will be a drastic measure because horse traffic in Paris is greater by ratio than in any large American city. Traffic here is also abnormally clogged by the existence of handcarts, presenting a serious conflict between sixteenth century and twentieth century methods of transportation. A couple of men can drag a two wheeled cart down the main boulevards, and naturally motor traffic can move no faster than these carts can at a walk.

Reforms.

Among other reforms suggested are the construction of subways and bridges for motor traffic, the designation of one-way streets, of which comparatively few now exist, and laws governing pedestrians crossing thoroughfares. The proposal to widen the main streets is hopeless, because this step would not be importantly effective and happily the French will not sacrifice the atmosphere of their famous streets for a doubtful and, at best, passing utility.

In the meantime, the mad rush goes on and traffic policemen are kept busy taking names and addresses of drivers who have crashed. Bus traffic is slowing down daily, and the recent installation of express buses has been almost futile because steady movement is impossible. Of course, that old myth that pedestrians in Paris are liable if they get in the way of wheel traffic is quite unfounded, and every day finds a formidable list of actions brought against careless drivers. Much publicity has been given to New York's novelty of warning by signs in the streets pedestrians and drivers against carelessness, and Paris may soon adopt measures of moral reform.

BANK CLEARINGS.

This Week's Total Shows a Decrease of $103,395.

Bank clearings for the week ending to-day, as given out by the Peterboro clearing house, was $818,188, or $103,395 less than last week's total, which was $921,583. The total for the same week one month ago was low at $747,018, and for the same week in November, 1923, the total was $789,790.

Y.M.C.A. CONVENTION.

Total Membership This Year In Canada is 46,822.

PRESTON, Nov. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Total membership this year in Canada of 46,822 total property valuation of $6,419,000 and annual operating epenses of $1,774,000 were some of statistical facts brought to the attention of the fourth national conventon of Young Men's Christian Associations of Canada opening here to-morrow by national council of organization. This is the first national gathering of the movement since January 1920. Officers of the national council of the Y.M.C.A. are as follows: Chairman, R. F. McWilliams, of Winnipeg, Man; Vice-Chairman, C. S. Mahard, Vancouver, B.C., J. J. Gartshor Toronto, G. E. Barbour, St. ohn N.B. Chairman of Executive, E. G. Baker, Toronto; General Secretary Harry Ballantyne, Toronto. While report of national council indicate progress in many directions, to make clear that period of four years under review has presentoed many difficulties which had to be met by reduced personnel and smaller financial resources.

TORONTO, Nov. 27.—(Canadian Press).—J. M. Gardhouse's yearling steer, Merry Monarch, was sold by auction to-day and went for the record price in Canada of $1.60 per pound. Merry Monarch was the grand champion of the Royal Winter Fair, which concluded last night, and weighed more than twelve hundred pounds.

Hospital for Sick Children

67 COLLEGE ST., TORONTO

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Your readers have probably had their appetite for statistics satiated during the past few months. Still they will, no doubt, want to know something of the work accomplished by the hospital to which they have so generously contributed in the past. They are shareholders in a Mission of Mercy. Their dividends are not paid in coin of the realm. May I trespass upon your space to outline what those dividends are?

Firstly, the daily average of children occupying cots in the Hospital for Sick Children was 255. The total cared for as in-patients was 6,297. That is equivalent to the population of a good-sized Ontario town.

And secondly, the out-patient department. This is a wing of offices given over to consultation and minor operations. On an average there were 190 young callers a day.

That is where the dividends are earned—in the difference made in the lives of thousands of children through the voluntary contributions which render it possible to maintain an institution where pallid cheeks become rosy and twisted limbs are made straight.

If that were not dividend enough, one might try to estimate the enormous salvage of child-life in Ontario which has taken place since "Sick Kids" doctors and "Sick Kids" nurses have been going out through this province equipped with a knowledge of children's diseases, which they could not get except in some such highly specialized and pre-eminently efficient institution as the Hospital for Sick Children.

On this year's service the Hospital expended $345,125 and finds itself in the hole to the extent of $134,284. What comes in around Christmas-time keeps the Hospital going. So long as the word "Christmas" retains its original significance could any charity possibly enlist more of the sympathy of your readers or entitle itself to more of their support?

Faithfully yours,

I. E. ROBERTSON,
Chairman Appeal Committee

TOO MANY GIRLS GO TO NEW YORK

25,000 Girls Adrift in City—Keep Them on the Farms.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—A nation-wide movement to keep girls away from the great cities was urged on the Association to Provide Proper Housing for Girls at its annual convention at the Hotel Pennsylvania by the Rev. Edward Roberts Moore, director of Social Action for the Catholic Charities of New York. He said:

"We must stem the tide of migration of young country girls to the city. It is all right to discuss remedies for meeting the present situation, but we must also consider the future. This migration is a national menace. We must carry our campaign from the city into the country. We must portray to the young women and men on the farm the disadvantages of forsaking the farm for the city and make them realize how fortunate they are on the farm.

"A nation-wide study of this subject by the National Councils of Catholic Women has revealed there are many more young women between the ages of fifteen and twenty four than there are young men of the same ages, and in states having large cities there are more girls between these ages living in the congested cities than in all the rest of the state."

25,000 Girls Adrift in City.

The Rev. Henry Mottet, pastor of the Holy Communion Church, presented the report of a committee of clergymen, who were asked by the association last spring to study the girl housing problem. He pointed out that of 126,000 working girls in the city between the ages of fifteen and twenty-five, 25,000 are economically adrift, victims of the room shortage and the temptations which beset the unhappily housed.

The clergymen reported that "the heart of the matter lies in the unstandardized condition of the rooming and boarding house business." There should be municipal regulations concerning fire egress, adequate space per occupant of each room, proper light and ventilation and character of operators of rooming houses, he said.

Dr. Mottet suggested further that a committee be appointed to study the whole matter more thoroughly. Miss Mary Van Kleck, chairman of the conference, then appointed the following: Mrs. V. G. Simkhovitch, chairman; Miss Cornelia E. Marshall, vice-chairman; Mrs. Percy Jackson, Mrs. Delancey Kane, Miss Stella Miner, the Rev. Dr. Moore, Mrs. Henry Moskowitz, the Rev. Henry Mottet, John T. Murphy, the Rev. A. Jay Petty, the Rev. Harold Rambo, the Rev. Ralph Stockman, Lawrence Veiller and Dr. Stephen S. Wise.

Decent Rooms Out of Reach.

Miss Cornelia Marshall, president of the association, said that it was economically impossible for thousands of girls to pay more than $5 or $6 a week for their rooms.

"The theatre district is impossible," she said. "Not only are the room rent exhorbitantly high, but the rooms are filthy, unsanitary and in most cases in the care of slovenly people. The girl who comes to New York from the country cannot find a decent place to live for less than $10 a week, and when she earns only from $10 to $18 she cannot pay that. What becomes of the hungry, homeless girl? She begins to frequent the dance halls and we finally become aware of her only when she is arraigned in a police court."

Mrs. R. B. Ettlinger, president of the Hostess Club Association, told the convention how to be a perfect landlady, and Professor Benjamin B. Andrews, of the Department of Economics at Teachers College, advised them about budgetting their incomes.

LONELY, O, NO, NOT LONELY.

Lonely, O, no, not lonely, although skies are leaden grey,
And I tread, 'mid gathering shadows, a solitary way.
Perhaps the friends I cherish, are far in a foreign clime,
Or finished before me the journey, across the sands of time.

Lonely, O, no, not lonely, for a Heavenly Friend is near,
Who walks unseen beside me, and whispers words of cheer,
And the One who deigns, so kindly, to walk and talk with me,
Is He who stilled the tempest on the Lake of Galilee.

Lonely, O, no, not lonely, although earthly friends be few,
Or prove of trust unworthy, still this Friend is always true,
To Him my heart's deep longings, I need not fear to tell,
For all my wants and weaknesses He knoweth very well.

Lonely, O no, not lonely, while so lovingly He shares
E'en my most trifling troubles, as well as greatest cares;
He bids me when I'm weary, wayworn or toil-oppressed
To cast on Him my burden, and just lean upon His breast.

Lonely, O no, not lonely, at last my battered barque
Must brave the boisterous billows of Jordan, deep and dark;
For the Pilot at the helm has passed that way before,
And I know that He will bear me in safety to the shore.

Lonely, O, no, not lonely, for I shall be with my own,
Who will come with smiles to greet me and we'll know as we are known;
And I'll still be with the Faithful Friend, that led me all the way,
And brought me to His mansion home, to dwell with Him for aye.

BYNG OF VIMY TO VIEW CITY IN TWO HOURS

Programme Mapped Out For Distinguished Visitor Requires Co-operation.

CITIZENS TO HELP.

Traffic Regulations Formulated By Chief Newhall—All In Readiness.

If the Governor General, Peterborough's distinguished visitor of tomorrow, does not see all of the city, it will not be the fault of the Reception Committee of the City Council or His Worship, Mayor Turner, and if there is any jarring note in the procession that accompanies him it will not be through any omission of Police Chief Samuel Newhall. Every contingency, apparently has been provided for, and it is desired to make this visit which is in itself an honor to the city, one of the smoothest that the ingenuity of the officials can devise.

With this object in view, Chief Newhall yesterday made a round of the route mapped out for His Excellency, noting the traffic requirements, and again today, with His Worship the Mayor, to arrange the details. From these observations have come a complete code of regulations that will, if lived up to by citizens, as indeed they must observe it, avoid breaking the procession and provide the clear route that it necessary if the schedule is to be respected.

All citizens with automobiles who desire to join in the procession will assemble on the east side of Aylmer street south of Charlotte street, facing north, and will follow the rear of the official cars as they come from the Canadian National Station at 10 o'clock. No cars except official cars will be allowed on the Canadian National property in rear of the station, and it is expected that King street will be blocked at Bethune.

At Stopping Places.

On arrival at the various stopping places, automobiles will stop on the right hand side of the street, or where directed by the constable on traffic duty, in every case taking care not to block intersections of streets. It is desirable that all drivers be ready to leave each stopping place promptly so that the procession may remain intact throughout. If any motorist has difficulty in starting, it will be his duty to drop out of his place and join the rear of the procession.

Must Not Break Line.

No one who is not in the parade will be permitted to break through the line, and even where there is no constable on duty at an intersection it is hoped that drivers of vehicles will respect this rule, since nothing is more disheartening to those in charge of a parade than to have it broken in several parts. The procession will move quickly from point to point, Chief Newhall setting the pace at its head.

Care at Turn.

At the dam in the north end of the city, where the procession will turn, care must be taken by drivers: The widest portion of Water street has been chosen, just beyond the street car tracks, and here all cars will make a complete turn. As the procession approaches, the leading cars will speed up slightly in order to stretch out the line, and those in rear are requested to slaken speed. A constable will be stationed in the centre of the road, and the turn must be made around him. If any driver finds himself unable to make the turn he should go straight ahead, turn farther along, and take his place at the rear of the procession, so that the line may not be broken. On making the turn, the leading cars will slow down to enable the parade to re-form.

For Spectaters.

The best place to see the Governor General is in the Armouries, where he will receive citizens at 11.30. At Victoria Park, where the children from Central and Queen Alexandria schools will be assembled, is another good location. Other stopping places are King Edward School; Prince of Wales' School; St. Peter's School, King George School, and Chamberlain street and Monaghan road intersection, where the 300 children from May's School will be assembled.

At King George school, drivers who do not care to test their cars on the hill may go to Rogers street and there await the return of the procession from the Lift Lock. Turning from Armour road west on Douro street and south on Rogers street, they should turn at St. Luke's street or Robinson street, line up on the east side of Rogers street south of Charlotte, and join the procession as it goes north on Rogers and west on Charlotte.

Parking Prohibited.

No cars are allowed to park on Murray street, between Water and Aylmer street, and this prohibition applied to all cars, whatever their business, and whoever their owners.

Parking of cars is also prohibited on the east side of Water street, at Victoria Park, from 10.30 a.m., until after His Excellency has visited the park.

Cars are also forbidden to park along the boulevards at the schools, where the procession will draw up.

When the procession leaves Charlotte street to go north on George to Argyle, all traffic east and west, must halt to allow the procession to pass.

Teamsters and truckers are requested to keep close to the curb on the right hand side of the road to allow free passage of His Excellency's party.

COBOURG AND THE DISTRICT

Barn of Michael O'Brien Destroyed By Fire.

COBOURG, November 27. — The village of Grafton, Haldimand township, was visited by a serious fire today. While threshing was in progress at Mr. Michael O'Brien's barns, on the provincial highway, a little east of the village, it was noticed that sparks were issuing from the blower. They caught in the straw, and the barn was soon a mass of flames. I was burned, with its contents of hay and grain, and several pigs were burned also. The threshing outfit, which belonged to Mr. James Smith, was got out in safety. Grafton has a fire Department and they were promptly on the scene and nearly every citizen who could do so turned out to help. They kept the fire from spreading to Mr. O'Brien's home and to other buildings near.

It is not known here what insurance Mr. O'Brien had. He has the sympathy of the citizens in his loss.

Owing to the high wind the village had a fortunate escape in confining the fire to the one building.

4 Hockey--News.

Out on the concession lines they are becoming enthusiastic over hockey and some of the rural clubs have already chosen their teams for the season. It is proposed to form a rural league of Eddystone, "The Gully," in Haldimand Township, Hull's Corners, and probably Grafton or Vernonville, should the latter organize.

The Eddystone and Hull's Corners teams had some interesting hockey last winter, playing some of their games at the rink here, and are going at it with vim this year again.

Cheque for Hospital.

Mr. J. D. Hayden, president of the Board of the Cobourg General Hospital, received a cheque a few days ago from the executors of the estate of the late Willis McCook, for $4500. Mr. McCook left a legacy of $5000 to the hospital but 10 per cent. was deducted by the state of Pennsylvania. Mr. McCook has been a very good friend to the Cobourg Hospital. He subscribed to the elevator fund, presented an ambulance to the Cobourg hospital, and a splendid sterilizer. The late Mr. McCook was for many years president of one of the hospitals in Pittsburg.

Traffic In Polar Bears Picks Up And Pays Well

HAMBURG, Germany, Nov. 27. — There has been an unusual and profitable demand for polar bears of late, owing to the fact that the zoos of the world neglected their stocks during the war and are now endeavoring to replace them.

Most polar bears comes from Spitzbergen. The hunters are sent out by a local company in the wild animal business and the bears are brought to Hamburg, where they are kept until until they get accustomed to civilization. A party of hunters recently returned with 40 polar bears all of which had been ordered in advance of capture. Another previous expedition brought 86 bears, most of which by this time have been scattered to various parts of the world, and taken their places in the cages which will be their homes until the end.

COMPRESSED AIR MOTORS

Latest Device Finding Favor With Drivers Who Want Speed.

BERLIN, Nov. 27.— (Associated Press.)—Compressor motors on automobiles are finding favor in Germany with drivers who want speed. This compressor attachment is similar to the supercharger as used for high altitude airplanes; compressed air is forced into the intake manifold and results in a supercharged fuel air feeding the cylinders.

The result of the compressor's action is an instant additional power impulse, amounting to more than fifty per cent. of the normal motor performance. For instance, climbing a steep hill with full power and motor slowly decreasing in revolutions, a compressor-equipped car will suddenly leap forward with a roar and pick up new speed, after the normal maximum limit has been reached.

SIR BERTRAM WINDLE.

Interesting Lecturer Here on Friday Evening of This Week.

The Women's Canadian Club are to be congratulated upon their enterprise in giving the citizens of Peterboro the opportunity of hearing the celebrated lecturer, Sir Bertram Windle, in the Great War Veterans' Hall, on Friday evening of this week. He is a most entertaining, instructive and scholarly lecturer. Those who hear him once never miss the opportunity of hearing him again.

Sir Bertram Windle was born in Lincolnshire, Eng. He holds the degrees of M.A., B.A., M.D., and D.Sc. from the University of Dublin, M.Sc. and LL.D., from the University of Birmingham, and LL.D. from the Royal University of Ireland.

He was for some years an examiner for the Royal College of Physicians and for Royal College of Surgeons. He was Dean of the Medical Faculty and professor of Anatomy in Birmingham, and later Principal of the University College Cork, and Professor of Archaeology.

He is at present on the staff of St. Michael's College. He is a Fellow of the Royal Society and a Knight of St. Gregory the Great.

Among his publications are many books on the Anatomy of the Human Body, Life in Early Britain, Shakespeare's Country, The Malvern Country, The Wessex of Thomas Hardy, etc.

TO CONDEMN DEMANDS.

Labor Members Intend to Challenge Government's Egyptian Policy.

LONDON, November 27. — Canadian Press. — When Parliament meets on December 9th, some of the Labor members, who openly condemn some of the British demands in the Government's note to Egypt, consequent on the assassination of the Sirdar, Sir Lee Stack, intend to challenge the government's Egyptian policy by a direct amendment to the address in reply to the speech from the throne.

The Liberal policy with regard to Egyptian matter has not yet been defined but it is reported that Mr. Asquith, who is in the East at predorsing the steps token by the Baldsent, has cabled to his colleagues enwin administration.

Certain anti-Imperialistic Liberals however criticize the Government's methods in connection with the Egyptian troubles.

HAMILTON NEXT FOR PETERBORO

Collegiate Play Sudden Death Final in Hamilton on Saturday.

H.C.I. ARE STRONG

The P.C.I. rugby team will play Hamilton Collegiate in Hamilton on Saturday a sudden-death game for the championship of the Inter-Scholastic O.R.F.U. The winner of this game will be drawn against the champion of the Western Secondary Schools which will be Sarnia C.I. or St. Thomas C.I., likely Sarnia as they have an eleven point lead for the return game in St. Thomas also to take place Saturday.

Hamilton Collegiate which always seems to have a team in the finals has beaten U.T.S. and have a team that is classed in the Ambitious City and now around the Queen City, as the best outfit in junior rugby this season. They have three players who have played in senior company. These three played for Tigers in an exhibition game with Balmy Beach in the first of the season. Hunter, their half, is heralded as real rugby find and is the chief yard gainer on the Hamilton squad. The Hamilton team are a pretty hefty crew and they pack some smooth plays.

The local squad is practicing busily and eagerly for the battle with this unknown but much-tooted team to be staged on the enemy's gridiron. Coach Browne called the team out for a snappy drill on Monday afternoon and some new plays were tried out. Yeterday afternoon the squad was again out in Central Park for a work out.

The garnet and gray are fully aware that Hamilton has a real team, experienced in every trick of the game. But P.C.I. are certain that they will make the Hamilton boys step to win and they are going out on Saturday to play their best game of the year. They are not going to rest on the laurels without a grand effort and if they taste their first and final defeat of the season in Hamilton theydo not intend to lay their uniforms away without one big struggle.

DUNN RELENTS ON MODIFIED DRAFT

Will Not Oppose It If Other International Teams Desire It.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 27.—If the modified draft will help the League to build up their clubs and furnish the rooters with better baseball, I will not fight against it," owner of the Baltimore International League Club, the man who started the battle against the draft in baseball years ago and kept at it until victory perched upon his banners yesterday put himself on record in regard to an adoption by the International League of the modified form of draft now in operation in the American Association and the Pacific Coast League, the other big minors.

"I am still in favor of operating independently of the majors." Dunn added, "but if Toronto, Buffalo and the other clubs feel they can build up stronger nines by accepting players from the big league I will not organize a fight against them."

He said, however, that it was not a sure thing that the ther owners want a return of the draft, even in its modified form. Before deciding how he would vote if the matter comes up, he wanted to talk to the other owners at the annual meeting of the league.

LEWIS LOT TITLE.

EDINBURGH, Scotland, Nov. 27.—Ted "Kid" Lewis, former welterweight champion of the world last night lost his title as champion of Europe to Tommy Milligan, the Scottish champion, on points in a twenty round bout.

Milligan hails from Hamilton, Scotland.

ZEV IS RETIRED

Great Four-Year-Old Won More Than $300,000.

NEW YORK, November 26.—Zev, the champion three year old of 1923, conqueror of Papyrus, and the greatest money winner of all time, has been retired to the stud, together with his eight year old stable mate, Mad Hatter.

Zev's four year old record over the last season, except for a few flashes, failed to reock the brilliancy marking the performances of the Rancocas Stable, the year before. He ran impressively at Kentucky, however, in the fall and ran his total winnings well over $300,000 as a mark for future efforts. Zev's winnings at the close of 1923 were $296,673.

HE'S A PRINCE

PRINCE OLAF.

Princes are still good for something in this world. For example, Prince Olaf, of Norway, is an oarsman, and a jolly fine one, we are told. The prince rows No. 3 in the Oxford shell, in England.

FULTON FLOPPED

Boxer Alleged to Have Thrown Fight to Fuente.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Nov. 27.—Fred Fulton and Tony Fuente, heavyweight, prize fighters and their managers, J. E. Reddy and Fred Winson, all were held to answer in justice court here late yesterday on charges of violating the state boxing low.

Two days before he met Fuente, Mexican heavyweight, in a boxing bout at Culver City, November 17, Fred Fulton, Minneapolis plasterer-fighter, said that he was not in condition and that he had agreed to "lay-down" with the consent of his manager, John E Reddy, according to testimony in court.

RED PEPPERS END RHEUMATIC PAIN IN FEW MINUTES

When you are suffering with rheumatism so you can hardly get around just try Red Pepper Rub and you will have the quickest relief known.

In three minutes it warms the sore spot through and through. Frees the blood circulation, breaks up the congestion—and the old rheumatism torture is gone.

Rowles Red Pepper Rub, made from red peppers, costs little at any drug store. Get a jar at once. Use it for lumbago, neuritis, backache, stiff neck, sore muscles, colds in chest. Almost instant relief awaits you. Be sure to get the genuine, with the name Rowles on each package.

HEALTH FABLES.

This is the season of the year when the average housewife begins to ask herself: What about vegetables?

Most of the seasonable fresh vegetables are off the market and yet a vegetable is desired with the meal.

Of course, had she been a thirfty housewife like Mrs. Mann of Anytown she might have had a supply of canned things on hand, and home-canned articles are likely to hit the right spot when the winter days arrive.

Now, from the standpoint of canned vegetables, there can be no choice between the fresh and the canned variety so far as health values are concerned. Tomatoes are the only vegetables known to retain vitamines when thoroughly cooked.

Most towns, however, can supply parsnips, carrots and turnips through out the winter months as these vegetables lend themselves best to cold storage.

Also they are high in vitamines, Artichokes, well supplied with iron, can be obtained in most west coast territories and metropolises. Of the canned varieties spinach is considered about the best best with green peas, sugar corn and beets next in line.

BIG SCORES FOR ARENA WINNERS

Quakers, Belmonts and Brass Had Light Evening in Scheduled Games.

ROTARY WEAKENED

Last night's games in the softball league were all runaway affairs. In the first game the Quakers slammed Scotty Galbraith's shoots for 22 hits and 12 runs. The De Laval boys were able to collect only 7 hits off Carruthers, two of them homers. Dyer made the feature play of the evening when he made a sparkling shoe string catch of Ralph's looper back of second.

QUART OF WATER CLEANS KIDNEYS

Take a Little Salts If Your Back Hurts, or Bladder Is Troubling You.

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Eating too much rich food creates acids, which excite the kidneys. They become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood. Then we get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin drinking a quart of water each day, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, and in a few days your kidneys may act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush and stimulate the kidneys; also to help neutralize the acids in the system, so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

The most dangerous place to be is in an auto, claims a prominent insurance expert. Thirty per cent. of the accidents he investigates occur in autos.

Almost as many accidents (25 per cent. of the total) happen in homes. Commonest home accidents are cuts, falling down stairs, slipping from ladders.

However, regardless of where you are, safety is largely a matter of personal caution. Develop the safety first habit in your children. Worth more than a large cash legacy.

C.P.C. WIN THREE STRAIGHT IN LADIES' MERCANTILE

The C.P.C. Ladies took three straight from the Richard Hall Ladies, in a well contested series in the Ladies' Mercantile League at the Water Street Alleys. Some extra good rolling was featured in last night's games, the C.P.C. girls rolling exceptionally well while the Richard Hall Ladies could not seem to hit 'em right.

Miss J. Eagleson turned in one of the best high three games to date in the Ladies' Mercantile, when she rolled a great score of 518. Miss Eagleson also had a peach of a high single game with a score of 220, which is great rollling. Miss O. Fontaine had the second best high three games with 472, a good score. High singles besides Miss Eagleson's were: Miss Fontaine, 177 and Miss K. O'Keefe 149.

Following are the scores:

MARMORA ECHOED HANNA'S VICTORY

Procession With Band Celebrated Liberal Triumph in West Hastings.

MARMORA, Nov. 27.—"There was a hot time in the old town last night."

The excitiment which has been stirring the town for the past few weeks, due to the West Hastings bye-election, reached its climax last night when the news arrived that Charles Hanna had won the victory.

A large crowd gathered in the Town Hall to get returns which were thrown on the screen. Between times a movie picture entertained the crowd.

The returns came in early in the evening, but unfortunately, later on the returns failed to appear and many went home not knowing which side had won.

Down town some of the citizens had got the latest returns by private phoning and the news was heralded that Hanna was elected by 485 majority.

A procession was formed, headed by a jazz band, which paraded the streets, serenaded some of the citizens, put off firecrackers and greatly enjoyed themselves.

As this is the first time a Liberal candidate has been elected in West Hastings it was a special time of rejoicing. As one man was overheard to say, "A night in a lifetime."

A number of cars from town travelled to Trenton on Monday night to hear Premier King speak in Trenton. Among those who went from Marmora were Dr. Thompson, Mr. Aunger, James Hughes, Vincent Lynch.

Many Moving.

An epidemic of moving seems to have struck Marmora.

Mr. Leonard who has occupied the house beside Kerr's Garage since he was burnt out last winter moved into the front of Mr. Reynold's house.

Mrs. Rylie moved into the house of the late Mr. Scarlett and Mr. Short moved into the house she left.

Mr. B. C. Hubble moved his store into the building vacated by Mr. Leonard. Mr. Warren Hickey bought the store and house of Mr. Hubble.

Banker Grant moved into the Inster house occupied by Mr. Warren Hickey.

Mr. Banter Sr., and Mr. Lumas' family moved into their own house which had been occupied by Mr. Grant.

Then Mr. Richard Bonter of Beaver Creek moved into the Bonter home.

Mr. Harry Conner and family moved into the home they bought recently from Mr. Stanbey.

Mrs. Meighen and family moved from the country into the house vacated by Mr. Graham.

There are rumors of other moves which have not taken place yet.

BACKING FOR JOHNSON

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—Financial backing sufficient to purchase the St. Paul American Association Club can be obtained by Walter Johnson within 24 hours in St. Paul, President Thomas Hickey said last night, in discussing reports that the star pitcher of the Washington Americans may become interested in the club.

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

Annual Meeting of the Millbrook Curling Club.

MILLBROOK, Nov. 26.—The annual meeting of the Millbrook Curling Club was held in the town hall, the retiring president, W. E. Ball, taking the chair. The attendance was exceptionally good and considerable enthusiasm was manifested throughout.

The treasurer, H. J Grassett, reportted the club in good standing financially, all debts paid and a small balance left in the bank.

The following officers were elected for 1924-25.

Honorary Presidents—R. Waddell, Peterborough; J. Steele, Millbrook; President, L. C. Russell.

Vice-Pres.—J. A. Vance.

Secretary-Treas.—H. J. Grassett.

Managing Committee—The officers of the Club and D. Sheppard, J. E. Allen, Ronald Hutchison.

The president-elect then took charge for the remainder of the meeting. Before vacating the chair, Mr. Ball was congratulated upon the success of the Club last season, and the thanks of the members extended for his faithful discharge of the duties of his position while in office.

Those present on Monday evening were: A. A. Smith, L. C. Russell, W. E. Ball, H. J. Grassett, W. T Wood, V Lambert, G. W. Sayles, J. A. Vance, R. Hutchison, J. Lancashire, W. White, E. C. Richards, [illegible] Edmunds, J. N. McGill, J. E Allen, J. Thorne, D Sheppard; [illegible] J. Steele.

The skips will be appointed, and the rinks chosen, at a later date. It is expected that the season will formally open, as usual, on New Year's Day, the President and Vice-President having their annual competition.

The Allen Cup, which has been won the past two seasons by the rink skipped by Reeve W T. Wood, will again be competed for this winter.

Rev. Chas. Clarke, who is taking a post-graduate course at Victoria University this season, spent the week-end in town the guest of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Eakins, and Mrs. A. Ferguson. Mr. Clarke's last charge was at Maple Ridge, B.C. and he will return to the West next spring and pastoral duties at whatever station the Conference may give him appointment. His wife, and two boys are remaining with friends in British Columbia while Mr. Clarke takes his post-graduate work.

Campaigning for the privilege of representing Durham County at the annual Older Boys' Parliament which meets Christmas week in Queen's Park, Toronto, is in active progress in this district, Archie Stinson, of Janetville, speaking in Millbrook before the combined C.S.E.T organizations on Monday evening. Jim Larmer, the local candidate, spoke at Gravanville Tupesday evening, and goes to Orono on Wednesday night, and will visit other centres before voting takes place on Saturday. Rev. G. S. Gervan is deputy-returning officer for this ward.

Mr and Mrs. William Mullen, who have been visiting their daughter, Mrs. B. R. Raper, in Toronto, for the past three weeks, returned home on Thursday.

Miss Stella Delaree, of Owen Sound, was the guest of Miss A. Hampton, and Mrs. L. Rea, recently, on her way to Cannington where she has charge of a millinery business for the season. Rev. S. T. Tucker, and Mrs. Tucker accompanied Miss eLaree, who is the latter's sister, here from Orono.

In the Seed Awards at the Royal Winter Fair, George Bonner, Millbrook, won 9th place in alsike; and in Timothy, Wesley Brown, Millbrook has 8th place, with George Brown, Millbrook, coming next to him.

On account of the heavy rain last Friday evening, the "Sunshine" Mission Band meeting was postponed until Wednesday of this week, at 7 p.m. Mrs. Offa Williamson will be in charge. The Band will have a period in the Day of Prayer, under the auspices of the W.M.S.S., on Thursday afternoon.

NEWS FROM CAVAN AND THE DISTRICT

CAVAN, Nov. 27.—Mr. Housee, a student of Albert College, preached in Cavan Methodist church on Sunday night. Mr. Housee is quite young, but his hearers were much pleased with his sermon. He spoke very well indeed. His home is in Newfoundland.

The Rev. H. T. Richards preached anniversary sermons at Thomasburg on a fomer circuit.

Mrs. Richards and baby Miriam accompanied him. They went on Saturday, remained for the fowl dinner and entertainment on Monday evening returning on Tuesday.

The death of Velma, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Sanderson, which occurred on Monday morning was a great shock to the community. Although she had been ailing for about three weeks and confined to bed for a week, it had not been anticipated that her illness would cause her death. Until Sunday her friends had been hopeful. Her only brother, Donald, arrived home from Toronto University on the midnight train on Monday.

Miss A. Kelly, with her sister, Mrs. S. Fisher, Peterboor, is visiting in Toronto, having motored up on Friday.

Mr. John Thompson went to Toronto on Friday, intending to remain a few days.

Mr. Jas. Paul attended the Conservative Convention in Toronto last week, also the Winter Fair. He is still in the city.

Mrs. E. Buenham, Peterboro visited her mother, Mrs. J. Staples, over the week-end.

Mr. D. J. Hunter is veneering his house with brick. Mr. J. Walker, Janetville is doing the mason work.

Mrs. Williams, Toronto, and Mr. and Mrs. Stutt and daughter of Orono attended the funeral of the late John McNeil.

The Stark Bros. are intending rebuilding their barns next summer. They will get the timbers, etc., required out of their own woods, and will find it quite convenient having W. H. Codys' saw-mill so near. It is expected that Mr. Cody will have a shingle mill in operation this winter as well as the lumber mill.

Mr. Archie Stinson of the Tuxis Boys, Janetville, addressed the "Hearts of Oak", Tuxis Boys of Cavan on Monday evening. He was canvassing votes, as he is running for membership in the Boys' Parliament.

The Misses Christiana Armstrong, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Armstrong, and Vina Hutchison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Miles Hutchison are among the graduating nurses at Cobourg on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs J. G. Armstrong, Miss Eva and Messrs. Ed and Bert Armstrong attended the graduating exercises at Cobourg Hospital on Tuesday; also Mr. and Mrs. Miles Hutchison.

LAST TIME TONIGHT

ROMANCE! Vivid, dashing, daring, is the romance in this great drama of love and vengeance!

Yes! This is the story you read in The Examiner!

BENEFIT GAMES ARENA TO-NIGHT

Proceeds To Go To Art Primeau of the Tool Room Team.

To-night, in the Brock Street Arena, three softball games will be played, the proceeds of the evening to go towards helping to pay the expenses of Arthur Primeau, who had his leg broken while taking part in a League game with the Tool-Room team of the Canadian General Electric Company.

On account of it being a League game, the Executive are endeavoring to raise some funds for Primeau. Much interest has been taken in to-night's games, and the 700 tickets which were printed at the cost of the League are now mostly sold, and a large crowd is expected to be on hand for the games.

Six of the best teams in the League have been selected to provide some snappy games for the fans, and three of the fastest games this season will be run off to-night.

At 7 o'clock the De Laval play the Tool-Room at 8 the Kiwanis will tear into the L.O.L., and at 9 the Bowlers, who always draw a good crowd, will tackle the fast Teacher aggregation. All these teams hold a high position in the League standing, and three fast games are assured the many fans who are interested in this line of sport.

LEADLEY WITH HAMILTON.

Queen's Back Field Star Will Play With Tigers Next Year.

HAMILTON, Nov. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Frank ("Pep") Leadley, backfield star, is not for the Argos or Queen's next year, but for Hamilton Tigers, according to his own statement made yesterday. When spoken to regarding the report that he would be in Toronto when the next football season opens, "Pep" said: "There is absolutely no truth in the report, and nothing in the Kingston despatch sent out yesterday that I would take a post graduate course. There is a position awaiting me in Hamilton, and I will be there in the summer to take it."

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Voters in the Election for the Fourth Older Boys' Parliament.

As the election of Peterboro's representative for the Fourth Older Boys' Parliament will take place next Saturday, I would like to say a few words to the voters of the city.

The most important thing, I believe, in the coming election is that you turn out to the polls and cast your vote, and in this way show your interest in the work of the Parliament and the C. S. C. T. movement. Which way you vote, although important, is not so important as this, for the Boys' Provincial Parliament cannot survive, nor the Boys' Dominion Parliament even come into existence, unless the voters of every community throughout Ontario and all other parts of Canada take an active and enthusiastic interest in the splendid work which these bodies carry on.

The campaign fight has been a clean one, and I consider that I have indeed been fortunate to have such a fair opponent as Mr. Martin. The memory of the elections will last long in my mind. There have been none of those petty strategies and insults so common in election campaigns, and no matter which of us you elect, the loser will, I am sure, be the first to congratulate the victor on his success.

The polling booths at the Y.M.C.A. and Park Street Church will be open between 4 and 8 p.m. on Saturday. You can find out if your name is on the voting list from Mr. Tom Dutton, returning officer, Mr. Martin or myself.

As I mentioned before, which way you vote is also important. I believe that my past experience and my interest in boys' work, especially along the lines of C.S.C.T., should stand me in good stead, and that I can capably fill this honored position as your representative to the House. Therefore, I respectfully solicit your support and your vote on Saturday, Nov. 29.—Yours sincerely,

ALLAN NEAL.

182 Sophia Street, Peterboro,
November 26, 1924.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—I read with interest the article appearing in The Examiner of November 25 relating to conditions for fighting fire as given by Capt. J. E. Richie. He remarked upon the long runs from the Fire Hall to some of the most important and hazardous industries.

In one section of East City there is a group of twelve houses. They are within close range of hydrants but a long distance from the Fire Hall. None of these houses can boast the simple convenience of city water. Should fire break out these citizens are handicapped in helping combat fire simply because the Commissioners refuse to give them water requests for the latter covering a period of three years.

Why cannot these people have water? Ten out of twelve of the houses have applied for it. One householder was promised water on condition that he pay $15.75 a year to cover the cost of laying pipes and the service of water. The householder agreed to this, but for some reason the Commissioners backed out.

What chances have these people of helping combat fire until the Fire Chief arrives if there is no water at hand?—Very truly yours,

FRED. LEGON.

To the Voters of Peterborough:

I take this opportunity of placing before you the reasons as to why you should vote for me in the coming election in connection with the fourth older boys' parliament of Ontario:

1. I stand for closer relation between the church and the social side of the work of the Tuxis Boys, because I believe if this were done the church would play a greater part in the four-square programme of the Tuxis Boys.

2. As a member of the Y.M.C.A., as a leader at last year's Rotary camp, and as pretor of Knox church "Invincibles" Tuxis Square, which position I now hold, I have learned many things which would be of great assistance to me in helping to forward the boys' work in Parliament, so vote for Orville (Spider) Martin to represent you in the fourth older boys' parliament of Ontario.

TRICK PLAY AGAINST P.C.I.

Hamilton Collegiate Preparing New Stuff For Petes' Benefit.

HAMILTON, Nov. 27.—There has been something going on under cover in the vicinity of the Hunter street school of learning which annually dumps a load of championship gridiron material overboard.

The practices with which the Central Collegiate football squad is preparing to greet Peterboro Collegiate have not been dark secrets, such as have become habitual all over the country, but its common knowledge that Coach Hunter Finlayson has been preaching something more than straight football and if rumors can be taken for anything, the "Petes" are going to bump into something surprising on Saturday, when they clash the Red and Black in the semi-final for the interscholastic title.

The fact that the game will be a sudden-death affair has influenced the local squad to a great extent. They figure that surprise and trick plays, if pulled properly, will go a long way towards defeating the easterners, and at the same time the absence of heavy line work will save the members of the team for the stern battles to come later on in the finals.

With the team at full strength again, and with added experience to assist them. The Red and Black should be at their best against the "Petes." Bill Lord, who has been missed from the wing line, is ready to get back into harness, and the minor injuries and ailments of the members are negative. Neil and McIlroy, who were missing from the semifinal fixture with the Delta collegiate a week ago, are up around again and will be in top form.

Coach Finlayson is not holding the Peterboro squad in contempt. On the contrary, the fact that they went through their district with so much ease, and that they showed no hesitation in offering to make the series into a sudden-death affair, has convinced him that there must be something behind them, and he is preparing in every possible way to guard against any surprises.

The game is scheduled to start at 2.15 sharp, and, according to Captain Cornelius, there will be no delay in getting away. An early start is essential if the teams are to conclude their afternoon's work while daylight still hangs on, and every precaution will be taken to guard against the team having to play in semi-darkness. The H. A. A. A. ground will be in splendid shape for this game, so there should be no excuses for either team.

NEWS OF BETHANY.

Piano Recital at Home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Fallis.

BETHANY, Nov. 27.—Miss Olga Fowler, A.T.C.M., of Peterborough Conservatory of Music, held a very successful piano recital at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Fallis on Tuesday evening. The large sitting room was filled to capacity with senior and junior pupils, together with their escorts. The pupils, who demonstrated their skill, did very well and while some junior pupils present were not far enough advanced to take part, they will be on the list to do so at the next recital. Those who took part are as follows: Harold Jackson, Eric Porteous, Emery Grandy, Robert Sisson, Helen Crerar, Hazel Fallis, Loreen Page, Helen Byers, Kari Monk, Hazel Swanson, Francis Fallis, Winnie Dawe, Doris Driver, Helen McKinnon, Helen Patton.

Mr. Fred Dawe was a business visitor to Toronto on Monday.

Mr. Herbert Reynolds met with a painful accident on Sunday evening while visiting Mr. Calvin Reynolds. When he was leaving the house he slipped on the verandah and broke one of the small bones in his ankle. Mr. Reynolds will be confined to the house for several weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Galbraith of Port Hope, visited friends in the village this week.

MONTHLY MEETING OF LOCAL W.C.T.U.

Inspiring Christmas Message Given By Mrs. A. J. Langford.

The regular monthly meeting of the W.C.T.U. was held yesterday afternoon in the green room of the Y. W.C.A., the president, Mrs. A. B. Cunningham, in the chair. There was a splendid attendance of members. The meeting was featured by an inspiring Christmas message given by Mrs. A. J. Langford. In the absence of Mrs. R. J. Weir through illness, her paper on "Citizenship" was not given. Mrs. M. A. Morrison spoke briefly in her place, emphasizing the responsibility of the members in using their franchise in municipal electoins as well as in other questions that require a vote. Mrs. Morrison referred to the request made to the City Council by the Local Council of Women that the date of elections be changed, and hoped that this would be done, to give the ladies a better opportunity of recording their vote than is now afforded them in the busy holiday season. Mrs. Morrison asked the members to watch the papers and acquaint themselves of the exact date when the elections will be held, so that they may be sure to record their vote.

SOCIETY DIVORCE CASE.

Wealthy New Yorker Wants Divorce From Half Breed Wife.

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y., Nov. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Alice B. Jones Rhinelander to-day is defendant in a suit brought by her husband, Leonard Kip Rhinelander, member of one of New York's oldest and wealthiest families, for annulment of their marriage. The action is based on the contention that the wife fraudulently represented herself to be white and denied she had any negro blood. Shortly after being served with papers in New Rochelle yesterday, Mrs. Rhinelander engaged counsel. Her family announced she would fight to retain her status as Rhinelander's wife. Rhinelander, according to his counsel and legal representative of his father, Philip Rhinelander, acted entirely on his own initiative in bringing the suit. His family, these spokesmen said, had no foreknowledge of the legal step, but would be delighted to hear he had "come to his senses."

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS IN "THE THIEF OF BAGDAD"

Douglas Fairbanks will, in "The Thief of Bagdad", at the Grand December 1, 2 and 3, transport his audience to the land of mystery and romance, where all things are possible and dreams come true. This "Thief of Bagdad" is, according to all accounts, a glorious fantasy of the Arabian Nights. In it the agile Doug leads the way through the winding streets of Bagdad, past the far-famed bazaaars, stopping long enough to pick up a string of pearls or a gorgeous robe; down into the den of thieves and then over the palace walls into the boudoir of the beautiful Princess of Bagdad; a journey to the Old Man of the Sea, a descent to the bottom of the sea, and then up to the Citadel of the Moon. A Winged Horse, a Silver Wishing Box,a Golden Apple with the secret of life in its core, and then to the Caliph's palace again. Greatest of all is the adventure which lies in the Magic Carpet on which the Thief and the Princess soars over the house-tops. The glamour and thrills that came with a childhood reading of the "Arabian Nights", are doubled in "The Thief of Bagdad". It is said to be a remarkable visualization of the glories of Old Bagdad, with nothing to mar the beauty or to weaken the intensity of the fantasy. The fantastic spirit of the thing is carried out to the smallest detail. The vases, urns, stairways, walls and even the rose bush in the Princess' garden have all been touched with a wand of magic. The illusion is complete. It is a land of dreams and romance,—where humor, however, is not unknown and where "happiness must be earned." Douglas Fairbanks is said to have selected a splendid role, the greatest of his career. It is, then, Fairbanks at his best,—the Fairbanks who scales walls, drops into rose bushes, leaps over anything that obstructs his way and rides prancing horses through to the clouds, and soars over the housetops on a magic carpet. He is supported by an excellent cast. The part of the Princess is delightfully played by the attractive Julanne Johnston. "The Thief of Bagdad" will positively not be shown in any other theatre in this city this year.

Cohan Touch and Barry Cleverness.

The Cohan touch!
The Barry cleverness!
These, cojoined in a single offering, must of necessity be a winning attraction. The combination is offered to-day by the Royal Theatre management in "George Washington Jr."

This picture is a screen adaptation of the George M. Cohan stage play of the same name, and Wesley Barry, of freckles and fun fame, plays in the same role to which Mr. Cohan lent such distinction and superb zipp.

It is about a lad who got into bales of difficulties, oodles of trouble because of a little weakness—his feeling that he must tell the truth, no matter how much it hurt other people. And hurt it does—his father especially suffering after trying to achieve social prestige by having his niece wed a bogus count.

The picture is filled with comical episodes with Barry as hero.

"HEARTS OF OAK" SCREEN VERSION STRONGER EVEN THAN THE PLAY

Hobart Bosworth Essays Role Created by the Author, James A. Herne.

In "Hearts of Oak," which comes to the Regent Theatre to-day, William Fox has created a motion picture version of one of the greatest stage melodramas ever written. Played for years with its author, James A. Herne, in the leading role, this stage play has been seen by millions all over America in cities and towns of every size. Its potent drama and heart interest, according to critics, has been transferred to the screen in a manner that will appeal to picture-goers just as the stage masterpiece did to two generations.

Hobart Bosworth, well known for his characterizations of seafaring men, plays the leading role of Terry Dunnivan in the screen version. Theadore Von Eltz plays Ned Fairweather, his adopted son and Pauline Starke, is seen as Chrystal, the adopted daughter of the mariner. Others in the splendid supporting cast are James Gordon, Francis Powers, Jennie Lee, Frances Teague and Francis Ford. The picture was directed by John Ford, who has been credited with many Fox successes.

"Hearts of Oak" is a story of the New England coast and the Arctic wastes. Terry Dunnivan, a seaman, has adopted two children—a boy and a girl. He has seen them grow up, Chrystal to be a beautiful young woman, and Ned to be a strong man o the sea. Terry realizes that his lov for Chrystal has ropened into the lov of a man for a woman and she tells her. Although she loves Ned, the young couple agree to sacrifice thei love for the happiness of their bene factor.

Ned, on the pretence of shippin to sea, leaves the coast town and goe to the bad. It is not until it is almos too late that Terry learns the tragedy of his adopted children's love, an the method he employs to right wha he believes to be a wrong, makes heart-stirring drama such as deserve the long success of "Hearts of Oak."

TWO MISSIONARIES FROM U. S. MISSING

Town of Juchow Was To-day Captured By Chinese Bandits.

SHANGHAI, November 27. — Misses Elizabeth Berglund and Ingeborg Nystul, from Minnesota, U.S.A. attached to the mission of Juchow, Honan province, were missing to-day, after the capture of the town by Chinese bandits, according to a message from Hankow. All other foreigners escaped to Kiahsien, 25 miles away.

The bandits are holding Rev. Arne Anda for a hundred thousand dollars and two hundred rifles ransom, since his capture at Sichwan, Honan, according to a message to the Norwegian consulate.

Mr. Anda was reported missing on November 21. Sichwan is 130 miles southwest of Juchow.

According to a Sichwan correspondent of Central China Post, Rev. Arne Anda is being held until a mission school girl is surrendered to the bandits. The bandits have ordered the British missionary at Kingstekwan, 35 miles north west of Sichwan, to pay ten thousand dollars under penalty of death and the burning of the settlement.

Jean Carpentier Sentenced For Aiding in Serafini's Attempted Escape.

MONTREAL, Nov. 27. — (Canadian Press).—For aiding Guiseppe Serafini in the latter's attempted escape from Bordeaux Jail prior to his execution for the murder of the Hochelaga Bank chauffeur, Jean Carpentier, aged 27, was this morning sentenced by Justice Demers to two years in prison. Pronouncing the sentence, Justice Demers said he would be failing in his duty to society if he was lenient, that the position of trust the prisoner held at at the jail made the crime all the more revolting and he was even more to be condemned because he came of a good family and had a good upbringing. Carpentier pleaded guilty.

STEWART'S TRIAL NEARING AN END

R. P. Gough's Trial Will Be Commenced Immediately After Stewart's.

TORONTO, Nov. 27.—(Canadian Press.)— N. W. Rowell, K.C., defence counsel for F. M. Stewart, Home Bank director on trial here, resumed his address to-day before Judge Coatsworth. He declared that Stewart was in no way responsible for loans made in British Columbia. He had tried to get these loans in better shape and had made investigation of timber limits and other securities. The counsel also contended that it was unreasonable to say that Stewart should have challenged statements of bank officials in whom he had confidence.

It is expected that the trial of Stewart will be concluded this afternoon and that of R. P. Gough, another director, will be commenced immediately.

KING'S SPEECH DEC. 9.

Forecasts Indicate That Effort Will Be Made to Solve Housing Problems.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Forecasts of King's speech at opening of parliament on December 9, indicate that bold effort will be made by the Baldwin Government to solve the housing problem. A revision of the Governments insurance scheme will be in the forefront of legislation to be enacted. Governments agricultural policy will be guided by hoped-for agreement at a conference to be held which will be attended by representatives of landowners, farmers, and farm laborers.

ROBBED SECOND TIME.

U. S. Consulate In Rega-Esthonia Was Unlucky Victim.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—(Canadian Press).—United States consulate in Riga-Esthonia, has been robbed the second time this year, says despatch to daily mail from Riga.

Despatches add that diplomatic cipher code and largely quantity of diplomatic correspondence was stolen. According to correspondent, agents of Russian Soviet Government are suspected.

ECONOMY IS NEEDED.

Country Has Not Yet Returned to Normal Times.

LONDON, November 27. — Winston Churchill, the new chancellor of the Exchequer, has lost no time in making his presence felt among the spending departments of the treasury. He has issued a circular in which he stresses the need for economy, as is usual on such occasions, and he points out that the country has now returned practically to normal times.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer appears determined to bring to an end the budgets which for a number of years have provided vast surpluses of revenue over expenditure.

ALL SAINTS' CHOIR ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual business meeting of All Saints' choir took place on Wednesday, November 26th, and Mr. W. Willis was elected chairman for the evening. Mr. Willis spoke briefly on the work done by the choir during the past year, and the high grade of efficiency which the choir had attained.

Mr. Willis then proposed a vote of thanks and confidence to Mr. G. Chandler, the choir leader, and the organist, Mrs. W. A. Logan, which was responded to with enthusiasm.

The secretary's report was read by Mr. H. Boddy and the treasurer's report by Miss H. Maconomy.

It was moved by Mr. Raybould and seconded by Mr. Hurst that a vote of thanks be tendered the retiring officers.—Carried.

The business of electing new officers was then attended to. It was proposed by Mr. Chandler, and seconded by Mrs. Tucker that Miss Howarth be appointed secretary, with Mr. Boddy as assistant secretary.—Carried.

Miss Maconomy was re-elected treasurer by acclamation.

It was proposed by Mr. Boddy and seconded by Mr. Brawn that Mr. Raybould be appointed librarian.—Carried.

Mr. Chandler moved a vote of thanks to Mr. S. Willis for efficiency as librarian for the past year.

The meeting then adjourned.

IN MEMORIAM.

SHAMBO.—In loving memory of my dear brother, Fred. Shambo, who died November 26, 1918.

"A precious one from us is gone,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.

All is dark within our home,
Lonely is our life to-day,
For the one who smiled to cheer us
Has forever passed away.

CHURCH STANDS BEHIND PASTOR IN WIFE'S DEATH

Rev. C. V. Sheatsley Gives Interview and Promises All Aid to Clear Mystery.

HIS SON'S ACTION.

Boy Tried to Disbelieve His Senses at Sight of Mother in Furnace.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 28. — The Rev. C. V. Sheatsley will do everything in his power to aid the authorities in solving the mystery of whether his wife, Addie, was murdered and her body placed by the slayer in the furnace of their Bexley home, where it was discovered a week ago Monday, or was a suicide.

The pastor said:

"I am willing to do everything in my power to aid the prosecuting attorney. Some people think that I have been insisting on the theory that my wife committed suicide. I am not ready to say whether she killed herself or was murdered until the final report of the chemists.

"I would rather a thousand times believe that my wife was murdered, as foul a deed as that might have been, than to think that she killed herself in that manner."

Sheatsley is a gaunt man of about fifty. He wears glasses, is clean shaven, has high cheek bones and a firm jaw. His speech is deliberate, his voice clear. There was never a tremor in it. He was completely at ease. The reporters story follows:

I asked him about the carbolic acid fumes that he said he had detected just before the discovery of the incineration of his wife. No one else noticed this odor. He said:

"When I first entered the house that afternoon I noticed that it was unusually warm and asked one of the girls if the drafts of the furnace had been looked after. I did not then notice the odor from the furnace.

"I went to a nearby shop to get something for supper. Coming back the wind blew some smoke down the chimney and I got the smell of fumes that seemed to me to be carbolic acid and burning flesh. In the house again, I went to the furnace and, opening it, knew that the body of my wife was within.

"I believed she had committed suicide. There was no other thing to believe."

Clarence's Story

Sheatsley's eyes a yellowish brown, intelligent, looked straight into mine as he talked. I asked:

"Will you tell me about the story Clarence told "

"Yes; he looked in the furnace and he held a dark object burning. His mother was not upstairs. He thought it was his mother, but did not want to think it was her. That is why he said nothing to any one. He went to his room and lay down for awhile and then went over to the university field.

"He wanted to drive the thought that his mother was burning in the furnace out of his head. That is why he acted in that man- "

"Will you go voluntarily to the office of the prosecuting attorney to be further examined."

"I am ready to respond to any request that he may make. The mat-

RITA WEIMAN IS WED TO "IDEAL"

Authoress Who Abhorred Even Thought of Marriage Has New Story To Tell.

YEAR'S PROBATION.

NEW YORK, November 28. — "Marriage!"

"Bondage! Monotony!"

"Three hundred and sixty-five days a year! Twenty-four hours each day! Appalling to one who has been free as the air and happy as a bird in her freedom!"

Thus, with dramatic emphasis, Miss Rita Weiman, author and playwright, in the Cosmopolitan Magazine for November, conveyed the glory of her feelings as a bachelor maid.

Did she ever intend to marry? Well, the title of her story is "I'm Still Single—because——"

Now everything has been changed. Miss Weiman has found her ideal. She became the bride of Maurice Marks yesterday. He is an advertising man. Her old prejudice concerning wedding bands that look like "rheumatism rings" has been removed. She once ran from a jewelry store when she saw a tray of wedding rings. Mr. Marks has provided a special ring in the shape of a crown for his bride. But she will retain her maiden name.

Miss Weiman says that although she loves Mr. Marks enough to live under the same roof with him and eat seven breakfasts a week with him she will not be known as Mrs. Marks —she has established a wide reputation as a writer under her maiden name.

Her husband agrees heartily with the decision that his bride remain a "Lucy Stoner."

Miss Weiman is young and beautiful. She has achieved great success in the literary and dramatic fields. Her stories have regularly appeared in the Cosmopolitan, Saturday Evening Post and the Red Book. Her play, "The Acquittal," concerning the activities of a reporter-detective, had a long Broadway run. It was later produced in motion pictures. Her second play, "Moon Magic," is now in rehearsal, and will be produced this season by Lewis and Gordon.

"John" in her Story.

Mr. Marks admitted on Wednesday night that he was the "John" referred to by Miss Weiman in her Cosmopolitan story. The story relates how some time ago when they contemplated marriage, "John" took her to a jeweller's for the wedding ring. The clerk produced a tray of platinum rings of popular design. John selected one that appealed to him and slipped it on her finger. The band recalled to her mind the "rheumatism ring" her grandfather wore.

Miss Weiman, in discussing how she finally consented to become the bride of Mr. Marks, said:

"We decided to try a year of friendship and happiness. At the end of that time we found our friendship had endured. We think that marriage based on this sort of test will give us a fine start."

HOBBS IN RAJAH ACTION CALLED CROWD BABOONS

Asked for Seat in Witness Box—Angered By Tittering From Audience.

CASE CONCLUDED.

Sir John Simon Begins Argument For Defence—Prince Consulted Lawyer.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—The hearing of the evidence in the sensational court case of Robinson vs. the Midland Bank for the recovery of £125,000 in which it has been stated that six persons were implicated in a scheme whereby a rich Indian rajah, whose name has been withheld from the public for state reasons and is given as "Mr. A," was blackmailed to the tune of £125,000 by reason of his having been found in a Paris hotel with Mrs. Charles Robinson, wife of a bookmaker, the plaintiff in the case, was concluded Thursday.

The persons alleged to have been in the plot, besides Robinson and his wife, were Montague Noel Newton, who, posing as the "injured husband," surprised the rajah in company with Mrs. Robinson in the hotel; the rajah's aide-de-camp, a Mrs. Bevan, and William Cooper Hobbs.

The £125,000 was deposited in the Midland Bank to the credit of Robinson. The latter says he did not get it, but that his name was forged to a cheque on which the bank paid out the money. Hence he sued the bank for it.

Justice Halsbury called evidence regarding Mrs. Charles Robinson's movements between her return from Paris on December 27, 1919, and January 15, 1920.

Only One Dinner.

A clerk at the Adelphi Hotel, Liverpool, handed in a bill showing that Mrs. Robinson and Mrs. Bevan had stayed at the Adelphi from December 31 to January 9.

Sir John Simon, counsel for the bank, said the accounts showed that a dinner for the two ladies the first night of their stay at the Adelphi cost 45 shillings, and afterwards they apparently dined out.

Lord Darling, one of the justices trying the case, remarked: "I should think they didn't want dinner for two or three days after that."

Mark Francis Waters, a partner in a firm of solicitors, said the rajah's aide-de-camp called on him on December 29, 1919, and told him about the Paris incident. The witness advised him to do nothing until there was a petition for divorce. The aide-de-camp, accompanied by "Mr. A," called on him on January 14, 1920, and said they had settled the matter and were giving a cheque for £150,000, and another cheque for a similar amount which was being kept back until such time as it could be met.

Waters said he expressed amazement at the situation. Both "Mr. A" and the aide-de-camp gave him to understand that this huge amount was paid under pressure in order to avoid a scandal. They also told the witness the names of the other parties in the case.

Sir John Simon—This immense sum had been paid before you saw "Mr. A?"

Witness—"Yes, the mischief had been done."

Second Cheque Stopped.

Waters added that the first cheque was cleared but the second cheque was stopped on his advice.

The witness thereupon related an interview he had with Hobbs, one of the alleged conspirators. Hobbs professed to represent a reputable firm of lawyers and acquiesced quite readily in the stoppage of payment on the second cheque. He said he should advise his client to put the cheque in the fire. Waters said he told Hobbs that it was a regular blackmailing plot. He knew nothing definite about Hobbs. He had not met him at the Law Society very often.

This last remark evoked laughter.

Hobbs Annoyed.

Hobbs, called to the witness box, asked for a seat.

A few spectators tittered.

The clerk glowered and laughter became general.

Temper snapped.

"What are you laughing at, you baboons?" he shouted, and, as in afterthought, "baboons because you laugh at my agony."

Hobbs was sternly rebuked by the bench and was ordered to leave the dock.

In a voice shaking with anger, the clerk reiterated:

"You baboons! You baboons! I cannot stand! Give me a chair! I'm in terrible agony! You can ask my doctors!"

Almost hysterical, he was taken from the stand.

Sir John Simon, representing the Midland Bank in the action brought by the bookmaker, Robinson, for £125,000, on the grounds of forgery, announced that the bank's evidence was concluded, and began his argument for the defence.

Settled Election Bet By Jumping Off Bridge

BELLEVILLE, Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press).—There have been several freak election bets paid or which are about to be pad in Belleville in which wheelbarrows, baby carriages and such things enter, but the best election story comes from Frankford.

Mr. George Rose and Mr. Albert Munn, good friends, though the former was a Porter man and the latter a Hanna man, made a bet. The loser was to jump off the bridge at Frankford into the river. Mr. Porter did not win. There on Wednesday, with many witnesses Mr. Rose wearing the average amount of clothes which this weather calls for ,jumped 18 feet from the floor of the bridge into the water.

The village enjoyed the spectacle. Mr. Rose is a good fellow and sportsman and all was happy.

GERMAN RAILS RECEIVE LOAN

British and American Bankers Provide Credit of Fifteen Millions.

PRIVATE CONTROL.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28. — First steps in financing Germany's railways, as reconstituted under the Dawes plan, were taken yesterday by British and United States bankers who placed a credit of $15,000,000 at the disposal of the German State Railway Company.

One-third of the loan will be in pounds sterling and will be underwritten by a London banking group headed by J. Henry Schroder and Company. The New York banking syndicate, headed by Speyer and Company, includes the Equitable Trust Company, the Chase Securities Corporation, Blair and Company, the Bank of the Manhattan Company and the Henry Schroder Banking Corporation.

Organized in accordance with the Dawes plan to take over the operation of German railroads under private management, the German state railway company constitutes what is said to be the largest railway system in the world, having 33,000 miles of road. Two-thirds of the equipment, consisting of 31,000 locomotives, 70,000 passenger cars and 750,000 freight cars, is less than ten years old.

The original cost of the system, whose lines extend into every part of Germany, was $6,200,000,000. Present capitalization consists of $3,095,000,000 common stock, issued to the German government or the German states and $2,620,000,000 first mortgage reparation bonds, guaranteed by the German government which have been issued to a trustee appointed by the reparations commission .The company is also authorized to issue $476,000,000 in preferred stock and $22,500,000 second mortgage bonds which will be pledged as security for the $15,000,000 credit.

WORLD'S HOTTEST TOWN.

Azizia, North Africa, With 136.4 Degrees, Beats Death Valley.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Until recently Death Valley, Cal., where a temperature of 134.1 degrees in the shade was registered at Greenland Ranch on July 10, 1913, was considered the hottest place on the earth's surface.

According to the quarterly journal of the Royal Meteorological Society, this record has been broken at the Italian settlement of Azizia, in the semi-desert region of North Africa, about twenty-five miles south of Tripoli, where a properly sheltered thermometer rose to 136.4 degrees.

BRITISH ARREST FOUR PLOTTERS AS PRECAUTION

Prominent Egyptian Nationalists Handed Over to the Cairo Government—Are Forestalling Trouble.

CALM PREVAILS.

Withdrawal of the Egyptian Units From Sudan Completed in Few Days.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press).—The British authorities in Cairo have taken into their own hands drastic measures to suppress possible nationalistic plottings by the arrest of four prominent members of the party organization headed by former Premier Zagloul Pasha.

Those arrested were ,Nekrashy Bey, a secretary in the ministry of the interior in Zagloul's cabinet; Abdul Rahman Fahny, one of Zagloul's closest political assistants; William Makram Obeid, a prominent Coptic member of the Nationalist delegation and Barakat Pasha, who was Zagloul's minister of the interior

According to statements in official quarters in London last night the men arrested were leaders in an underground conspiracy against British interest which probably was partly responsible for the murder of Sidar Stack and which might, if left unhampered in its activities, result in further unfortunate incidents

Ministry Continues.

There was fear that this prompt action on the part of the British might result in an Egyptian ministerial crisis; but according to the latest Cairo advices, it was announced there, following a hastily called cabinet council, that there would be no ministerial resignations as the British authorities had accepted Premier Ziwar's proposal that the men taken into custody should be handed over to the Egyptians to be dealt with.

Apparently the arrest of these Nationalists is regarded as merely a preventive measure and that they will only be placed under observation and control. No manifestations or disorders have followed the arrest and throughout Egypt calm still prevails. There is no hint of any active opposition to the withdrawal of the Egyptian units from the Sudan. The withdrawal is expected to be completed by the end of the week.

No Plot Reported.

Nothing is known in London of an alleged plot against the life of Field Marshal Viscount Allenby, the British high commissioner. There has been no further active step on the part of the Egyptians toward bringing the Egyptian affair to the official cognizance of the league of nations.

Opinion in official quarters here remains optimistic that a solution of the situation will be reached by means of direct negotiations between Ziwar and Viscount Allenby before the Egyptian parliament meets again.

SEEK METHODS FOR BOTH CAREERS AND HUSBANDS

NEW YORK, (United Press).—The first practical, serious and intensive study of the actual experiences of a selected number of women who have husbands, homes and children and are carrying on professional work, will be undetaken by the Bureau of Vocational Information, a national educational and research organization, established to study the opportunities for training and for professional employment for the benefit of women of the country, according to an announcement made public today by Miss Emma P. Hirth, director.

Accepting the promise that a woman may be married and carry on outside work the purpose of the study which the Bureau is initiating is to determine the condition under which the combined career is possible. The practical result of such a study, according to the bureau, will be "to bring together what is so badly needed for clear and constructive thinking on this subject, namely, a sufficient body of reliable facts drawn from actual experience."

POPULATION OF VANCOUVER.

PARIS GREEN ON GIRL'S SANDWICH

Jealous Act of Another Little Girl at School Near Woodstock.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Nov. 28. — When Margaret Hart, a 10-year-old student at an, East Zorra school went to eat her noon-day lunch Wednesday she found that someone had sprinkled paris green on her sandwich. She at once reported the affair to her teacher and following an investigation suspicion pointed to another pupil. Questioned, the girl is said to have admitted placing the paris green on the sandwich and to have declared that jealousy prompted her in her act.

A quantity of arsenate of lead was found scattered about the pump in the school yard and the girl is said also to admit placing it there.

High Constable Hill investigated the affair and as a result the girl was brought to Woodstock and is detained at the children's shelter.

HORTHY'S SON IN DUEL

BUDA PESTH, Nov .27.—(Canadian Press).— Stephen Horthey, son of Admiral Horthy the Hungarian regent, a student in the Polytechnic school, has been sentenced by the criminal court to four days imprisonment for dueling. Young Horthys' adversary was given a sentence of two days. The duel was the result of an argument.

GREATEST CLOTHING VALUES IN PETERBORO

Offered By The Peterboro Tailoring Co.

We are still having the wonderful bargains of last week's special sale, which gives you another chance to save money. At the same time, we are giving you the biggest values possible, and which cannot be duplicated in the city or in the city of Toronto.

We have just received a large shipment of 18-ounce blue serges, worsteds and tweeds from England, and are offering these at practically cost price, made to measure. These are values that only come once in a season. So don't turn them down.

You should examine our large assortment of ready-made Suits and Overocats, well tailored with the best of trimmings, which will go at slashing reductions Saturday only.

A fine line of Overcoatings, including Meltons, Irish Frieze, Beavers and others, which will also go at big reductions.

So come in and see for yourself. Everybody is welcome. You are not forced to buy. We have something to suit every man's pocket.

Don't forget where we are, as we are here to stay. Right across from Heintzman Piano Co.

TROTSKY RULED OUT OF SOVIET INNER COUNCIL

Accused of Aspiring to Seize Lenin's Mantle for Himself and of Abandoning Bolshevism.

ENEMIES' ATTACK.

Russian War Minister Silent Under Condemnation Echoed From the Provinces.

MOSCOW, Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press).—The full text of the reports of Leo Kameneff and M. Stalin, attacking War Minister Trotsky have been just published. The reports heretofore have been confined to the inner circle of the Communist party.

Trotsky's career, prior to the 1917 revolution and during and after the Bolshevik coup-d'etat is carefully surveyed in forty columns of printed matter. Both Kameneff and Stalin, the Soviet leaders strive to show that Trotsky always has acted as a "Menshevik" and now has departed from pure bolshevism and party idealism.

Kameneff explains that the central committee of the party was compelled to inaugurate a campaign against Trotsky because his recent book, "Lssons of the 1917 Revolution" was being published under the ostensible protection of the Communist party, and coming from a member of the party's political bureau, which directs the work of the Communist International, the book creates a danger for the party.

Trotsky's "Heresy"

It cannot, therefore Kamenoff says, be allowed to pass unchallenged. If no exception is taken to the book, he added it might be accepted as a manual for young Communists and members of the Communist internationale. While Kameneff confined his general criticism of Trotsky to his own slf-defence, Stalin, who is a member of the executive committe of the Communist party, dwells unsparingly on the war minister's "heresy" and his alleged abandonent of orthodox Bolshevik principles. He accuses Trotsky of attempting to take Lenine's mantle for himself. He also urges members of the party to wage a relentless war against the military leader, as "otherwise Trotsky's ideas may become the concentration point for all non-proletarian elements who strive to disintegrate the proletarian dictatorship."

Although Trotsky's friends believe that the present movement is intended to render him politically innocuous, Stalin says he does not favor reprisals or harsh treatment of party opponents. He declares there is no danger in the present controversy of splitting the party.

GIRL WHO CAN COOK AND KEEP HOUSE CAN MAKE HER HOME HAPPY

Bride Who Can Beat Up Panful of Fluffy Biscuits is as Rare as a White Peacock and Worth Her Weight In Platinum.

BY CYNTHIA GREY

When a man asks a woman to marry him, this is what he's really saying to her:

"Will you love me always, and mend my clothes, and have my meals on time, and bring up my children, and live within my income, and be cheerful through it all?"

And the woman, who usually young and heedless and terribly in love, answers "Yes" as a matter of course. For she's obeying a law of nature when she marries.

Old Mother Nature, who is an incorrigible match-maker, doesn't care a fig whether a girl is prepared to be a good home-maker or not. Her job is finished when the minister finishes his—at the altar.

Of the thousands of autumn brides this year, not many are trained for their job. The bride who can beat up a panful of fluffy biscuits and broil and inch-thick steak is as rare as a white peacock....and worth her weight in platinum as well.

A a matter of fact, mothers don't train their daughters for the work ahead of them as wives. Girls are taught to dance and play the piano, to typewrite and teach school and a hundred other very fine and useful things.

But not one in fifty ever goes into the kitchen and the sewing room with her mother to learn the all-important profession of housekeeping.

A girl gets much advice about being sweet and "bagging" her man but not much about caring for him afterward.

Almost every young couple has been told that the first year is hardest —that it's the difficult time of adjusting and adapting yourselves to each other's ways.

And so it is. But much of the trouble could be avoided if the bride knew a little more about making up a household budget or sewing on buttons.

The girl who knows how to run her house right from the start has twice the chance of having a happy one than the girl who is just learning.

For example, there's the problem of entertaining. It doesn't cost much to make a bowl of salad some rolls and coffee and have a few friends in for Sunday night supper. And a dozen of such evenings will add more color and fun to life.

For a group of friends in common is one of the strongest ties married people have. No matter how much in love with each other a man and his wife are there's something lacking in their lives if they don't know other couples to visit occasionally.

For all of us are grown-up children, more or less, and the most serious-minded man in the world needs to relax and forget his cares in an evening of one-stepping or mah-jongging now and then.

Home-making in its best sense isn't drudgery, but art. It takes the eye of an artist to know than an orange coolred cushion and a bowl of yellow nasturtiums would brighten up the gloomiest corner of the house. And then if you can go ahead and make the cusion and grow the nasturtions in a window-box you're not only an artist but an economist besides.

Theres' undoubtedly a lot for a girl to learn if she is going to keep her home the place of comfort and charm that it can be

And it's ever so much better if she starts out knowing even half as much about the work ahead of her as her husband knows about his job of providing the money to keep the house going.

We wouldn't think of letting our daughters marry men who didn't have a job or weren't able to support a home of some sort, would we?

Then why in the world don't we think more seriously of getting our daughters ready for the Real Adventure, as well?

YOUTH KILLED BY HI-JACKER BULLET

Son of Captain W. G. Gillis Shot to Death, While Father Was Mortally Wounded.

VICTORIA, B.C., Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press).—Captain W. G. Gillis and his young son, believed by the police to have been murdered when a raid was made on their launch, the Boyle G., were held up on the guise of the law by a hi-jacker in a police uniform, according to a statement made by authorities working on the case here.

The Boyle G. took on 350 cases of liquor, more than half of which was transferred to another vessel before the raid was made on her, off Sidney Island.

From evidence pieced together, it is said, the actual boarding was accomplished by three men who rowed across San Juan De Fuca Straits in a boat which put out from a vessel alleged to have been operated by seven men, five of whom are now under arrest.

As the three men, one in a police uniform, boarded the launch a shot rang out, and Captain Gillis fell mortally wounded. Soon afterwards there was a second shot and the son was killed, according to the police. Then the bandits' launch was brought alongside for transhipment of the cargo, after which it is asserted the two bodies were handcuffed together and dropped overboard.

THE GUMPS—BLUE BLOOD

EGYPTIAN TROOPS DECLINED TO LEAVE SUDAN WITHOUT ORDERS

Enuiry to Cairo and Receipt of Official Instructions Relayed Through Khartum.

WERE SURROUNDED.

Resistance Would Result Only in Useless Bloodshed, Egyptian Minister Replied.

CAIRO, Nov. 28. — (Canadian Press).—An official communication says that when the acting Sirdar gave orders for the Egyptian officers and troops to leave the Sudan they declined to do so and offered resistance.

They informed the acting Sirdar that they would not leave unless they received orders from the Egyptian government. British troops thereupon surrounded the Egyptians and the Khartum government wired to Cairo asking that orders be transmitted instructing the troops to depart.

On receipt of this message the Egyptian ministry met and decided that the war minister should send the required orders with a view to preventing bloodshed.

Message From Troops.

It appears that the message from the surrounded Egyptian troops to the Egyptian government was allowed to be transmitted to Cairo. The message said:—

"We are surrounded by British troops and have only twenty rounds of ammunition per man, which is insufficient for resistance, as the British have unlimited supplies.

"Will the Egyptian government send us orders to leave so as to avoid bloodshed?"

Official Order.

The war minister thereupon addressed the following message to the Egyptian officers and troops at Khartum:—

"Animated by courage and loyalty, there is no doubt you are ready to shed the last drop of blood for the King and country. However, I order you to cease resistance, which can only result in useless bloodshed Morover, the Egyptian government having strongly protested against this measure by a superior force, your return will be in no wise prejudice the county's rights or your military honor."

HENDERSON'S POWERS

Cairo Paper Understands British Plenipotentiary Has Authority To Make Treaty.

CAIRO, Nov. 28.—Ahmed Zulfikar Pasha, Egyptian minister to Rome, who was offered the portfolio of foreign affairs in the new cabinet of Ziwar Pasha, has declined the post. The premier will temporarily retain it himself. Ahmed Moussa Pasha, judge of the court of appeals, has been named minister of justice.

Commenting on the appointment of Neville Henderson as British minister, plenipotentiary in Cairo, the newspaper Ahrem a Zaglonist organ, says, it understands Mr. Henderson comes to Cairo with full authority to negotiate a treaty before the re-assembling of parliament.

Demands Attacked.

The newspaper, attacking Great Britain's insistence on the widening of the Sudan irrigation projects, said it would require many years to cultivate the nearly 500,000 acres of land in the Sudan involved, even if the necessary labor were available, and it concludes the provision was merely inserted in the British demands with the intention of dropping it later to impress the Egyptian people.

The Ahram says it understands the cabinet ministers are sounding out individual senators and deputies in an effort to learn the situation of the new ministry in regard to the new parliament. The cabinet, it asserts, will doubtless recommend dissolution of parliament if a majority for the ministry does not appear to be forthcoming. Considerable anxiety is being manifested in cabinet circles in this respect, it declares.

MAY SUMMONS EGYPTIANS

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, Nov. 28. —(Canadian Press).—A deputation from Damanhur, south of Alexandria, visited Prince Tousson, of the Egyptian royal family yesterday and suggested the convening of a national conference representing all parties, to discuss the situation. The Prince, it was stated, promised he would call such a conference.

OBITUARY.

MRS. JOHN MURDUFF

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 28.— The sudden death of Mrs. John Murduff at her home on Oxford street Wednesday night was a shock to her family and to the entire village. She had been out on Wednesday and although she had not been well for some time there were no premonitory signs that death was so near.

Mrs. Murduff was 65 years old. She is survived by her husband, two sons Arthur of Hamilton and Wilfred of Lakefield, two daughters Mrs. Lorne Lonsborough of Dummer and Mrs. J. R. Robinson of Lakefield. Her surviving sisters are Mrs. R. Thompson, Mrs. Nathan Payne of Lakefield, Mrs. Clark of Saskatoon, Mrs. Luther Payne of Harwood, and Mrs. W. Carveth of Warsaw, and by four brothers Joseph Little of Swift Current, Sask., Robert Little of Douro, David Little and W. J. Little of Lakefield. Mrs. Murduff was a faithful member of the Methodist church. The funeral was held this afternoon to the Lakefield cemetery.

LISTEN TO ROAR OF AN ELECTRON

Scientists Are Now Able To Listen to the Movement of Electrons.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 28.—(United Press).—Experiments by which scientists are able to listen to the movement of electrons, the smallest particles of all matter, were described here today by Dr. A. W. Hall of the research laboratory of the General Electric Company, at the annual meeting of the American Physical Society.

The vacuum tube amplifier in which the amplification is carried to a hundred-thousand fold, and with which a million fold can be reached, makes this possible, Dr. Hull stated. The sound produced by the electrons is caused by bombardment of the plate by electrons, released from the hot filament. It is these electrons which carry the current and which make the operation of the tube possible. The noise is therefore a fundamental property of electron emission, a characteristic of the electron, according to Dr. Hull.

The experiments have been conducted jointly by Dr. Hull and Dr. H. H. Williams of the University of Michigan at the university.

The noise, due to the electrical oscillation which is set up by the impacts of the individual electrons on the plate, is known as the Schrot effect and was predicted on theoretical grounds by Dr. Schottky of Berlin. The energy of each blow is extremely minute, but, like rain drops, the energies of the many individual impacts add, and their sum becomes very large. With sufficient amplification, Dr. Hull stated, the blows may produce a roar like that of Niagara.

The electron is the unit charge of electricity and the determination of its value is of the utmost importance.

It was not such a long time ago that the electron was unknown. First scientists had the molecule, itself so small that man's ability ever to see even one of the largest may seriously be doubted. Then came the atom, the minute integral part of the molecule. For a long time the atom was considered as the ultimate particle of matter. But each element presents a different atom. Science was not content to rest. It sought to connect all phenomena, and the electron was the result.

It was discovered that all matter is composed of electrons, the different substances resulting from the different properties possessed by the atoms according to the number and arrangement of the electrons they contain.

Mysterious Points In Mrs. Sheatsley's Death

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 28.—Here are a few of the more important points in the mystery of the death of Mrs. A. Sheatsley in the furnace of her home that Prosecutor King will endeavor to clear when he renews his questioning of the Rev. C. V. Sheatsley, the woman's husband, and the children of the family.

1.—Why the minister reported having discovered an odor of carbolic acid coming from the furnace in which the body of his wife was being consumed, when tests since have shown that no odor was given off when acid was thrown into the heater

2.—Why no effort was made by any member of the family to extinguish the fire in the furnace, after it had been established beyond a doubt that Mrs. Sheatsley's body was in it.

3.—Why members of the family, after raising the question of the disappearance of a bottle of carbolic acid, were unable to find the bottle, although detectives Monday found it in its accustomed place in the medicine cabinet.

4—Why no mention was made by any member of the family in their previous stories of the presence at their home on the day of the tragedy of Mrs. Gladys Redelfs, wife of the Lutheran pastor at Lithopolis, a village eighteen miles southeast of Columbus.

WINTER FASHIONS IN FUR EXHIBITED

National Sealskin Coat Trimmed With Skunk Was Sensation at Longchamps.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—Autumn's first chill wind has brought out the winter furs of the 1925 season.

A fornight ago fur was a trimming, something women wore because it was fashionable, but at Longchamp recently they had become an essential part of dress and were put on for warmth.

A natural sealskin coat trimmed with skunk, worn by one of the models, was the sensation of the day. Paris had never seen such a seal coat before. Usually the sealskin as prepared by Paris furriers and worn by Paisiennes is of brownish color, the result of clever handling by the fur experts This seal had undergone no tranformation since its capture on the banks of Newfoundland or Behring Sea. It was grey, silky, shiny, in spots shading from grey to white, the seal in its natural state.

Otter skin was one of the favorites. By some unusual process of the furrier a golden tint has been given to the fur, which promises to be very popular. Fox furs, squirrel, badger, skunk and astrakan also were shown.

Ermine is the chosen fur for evening wraps when chincilla is not used. Both these furs are popular for theatre cloaks and coats. Stone martin, sable and mink are being used for scarves, which are wide and long.

Alderman J. W. Meyers Resumes Council Seat

Alderman J. W. Meyers, who has been ill for some months, was last night welcomed back to the deliberations of City Council Committees. The warmth of the greeting extended by his colleagues on the Council showed the degree to which he had been missed and their great pleasure in his return.

TROTSKY RULED OUT

adding "we have only to struggle against Trotsky and eliminate his Menshevik ideas."

Trotsky Deserted.

The whole campaign has been introduced, it is said, to avoid renewed dissension within the Communist ranks. Unlike last year's controversy however, when Trotsky found support in many quarters, especially among the young Communists and military cadets, the war minister this time is almost deserted. There are few even of his avowedly outspoken supporter who dare to take up his defense in view of the all powerful elements in the Communist party which are arrayed against him.

Numerous resolutions are coming in daily from the provincial branches of the Communist party pledging the fullest support to the Central committee's attitude toward Trotsky. Following his tactics of last year the war minister maintains a discreet silnce, he has not yet uttered a single word, either in speeches or in the press, and there are indications that he does not even attend to the ordinary routine of business in his office. The executive work of the war council is now directed by M. Frunze, Trotsky's assistant.

Avoid Reaction

Political observers seem to think that Trotsky's adversaries have scored a complete victory over the war chief, but they believe that the party leaders will not attempt to dethrone him altogether, for such a measure would undoubtedly have been found a profound reaction among the rank and file of the army who regard their leader very highly. Also deep resentment could be looked for among certain sections of the population which consider the war minister the most able members of the present government.

SON OF GODS LOSES

He lost. Prince Sumi, fourth son of the Emperor Yoshihito of Japan, dashed in third and panting in the annual autumn track and field meet at the Peers School in Tokio. The eight-year-old descendant of the gods causes his attendants great alarm by playing so much at strenuous foreign sports.

BUSINESS GIRLS MET WEDNESDAY

Banquet Held at Tiffin Tea Rooms on Charlotte Street.

On Wednesday evening the annual meeting of the Business Girls' Club took the form of a banquet, held at the Tiffin Tea Rooms on Charlotte street, and attended by about fifty members of the Club. The evening was a very enjoyable one. The chicken dinner provided by Mrs. McDonald was an exceptionally fine one and the service was excellent During the evening, the members were addressed briefly by His Worship, Mayor Turner, and the honorary president, Mrs. W. R. Morris, who gave a short address on 'Education." A musical programme included vocal solos by Mrs. L. Spriggs and Miss Helen Lytle and Hawaiian guitar selection by Mr. Harry Wagner. The retiring president, Miss Grace Evans, who has held office for the past two years, was presented with a boquet of flowers and made an appropriate acknowledgment.

Officers elected for the ensuing year were as follows: Honorary president, Mrs. W. R. Morris; President, Miss Aleitha Davidson; 1st vice President, Miss Grace Evans; 2nd vice President, Miss Jennie Saunders; 3rd vice President, Miss Jennie Gillespie; Sec., Miss Winnie Soon; Treasurer, Miss Annie Deyell; Executive Committee: Mrs. A. W. Clysdale and the Misses Thressa Taylor, Marjorie Evans, Leitha Johnson, Mary Eason.

CDURCH STANDS

any time and to do anything we can to help him."

Appeared Sane, he says.

I asked the minister if his wife appeared sane when he left her the day of the tragedy. He replied:

"She did."

"Did she kiss you good-by when you left?"

"No. You see, I am in and out of the house so often. It would be rather—rather——"

He seemd lost for the proper expression, broke off the sentence and added:

"When we separated for some length of time we would kiss goodbye."

Asked as to his stoicism when he discovered that his wife was in the furnace, his lack of emotional outbreak, such as a rush to quench the flames, he said:

"The Lutheran faith teaches us to control ourselves!"

Mr. Sheatsley also commented on the newspaper reports. He said that insinuations were being made and that he wanted to deny that any member of his family knew how his wife got into the furnace.

I asked him about the report that he had offended natives of India while a missionary in that country and that two of them had threatened him. He explained that this was probably the result of a lecture he delivered in Detroit soon after his return from India.

After the lecture he had engaged in an argument with a Hindoo who had been in the audience, but he was sure that nothing had arisen that would cause hatred.

The few mementoes of his Oriental days were still on the mantel shelf. They were not sacred objects.

Given Vacation

Pastor Sheatsley was at Thanksgiving service yesterday. He has been given a month or as long as he chooses in which to rest from his pastoral duties. Vestrymen and congregation stand back of him staunchly. They are, seemingly more worried about the notoriety brought to Bexley than he is. His pulpit will be filled by divinity students from Capital University where he is professor.

He said in parting:

"The children will return to school Monday morning"

With the young ones back at their studies, the pastor again on his calls and at his duties as professor of religion, I believe that his baffling mystery will begin to fade into the past to join the other strange crimes that have never been solved.

So far as I could learn in almost a week of daily and nightly effort in behalf of the readers of the New York American, there is not a single tangible trace of evidence upon which a motive for the murder and incineration of Mrs. Addie Sheatsley can be based.

There is not a real promising clue.

There is not a thing upon which an arrest could be based.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1924.

A GRATEFUL WINNER.

Charles Hanna, M.P., the winner of the battle of West Hastings, is showing something new in politics.

Of candidates who are willing to visit every pole and corner of a constituency before an election there is no end; the candidate who is willing to tour every portion of the riding after an election is a much rarer bird.

It is the usual custom of a victorious political aspirant to thank his supporters on election night "for what we have done—the "we" often turns into an "I" before many weeks have passed—but Mr. Hanna is the first the Examiner has heard of to take the trouble to motor from one end of a constituency to the other merely to tell his supporters how grateful he is for their assistance.

West Hastings is a riding that covers much territory, and there are more enjoyable periods of the year than late November for motoring, but Mr. Hanna has been devoting his time since Tuesday in a tour of the whole constituency.

Many a politician longer in the game than the West Hastings victor has never given much thought to the electors—after polling day.

The public will appreciate the new methods.

DOING HIS DUTY.

It is becoming more and more generally realized that an ounce of fire prevention is worth a pound of fire fighting, and that the old-fashioned idea that the only duty of a fire department was to sit around and wait until the bell rang for a fire and then do its best to extinguish the blaze, is thoroughly exploded.

A fire chief, worth his salt, does not wait for fires to accur; he tries to see to it that the chances of them occurring are reduced to a minimum.

He tries to educate the public to eliminate fire hazards from the homes, and where conditions call for a clean-up he does not hesitate to use the authority that is rested in him.

Thus Fire Chief Gimblett has been conducting a campaign designed to remove the menace represented by a number of flimsy, inflammable, tumble-down wooden buildings that would burn like torches dipped in coal-oil.

He is merely doing what he is being paid by the people to do—making Peterborough safer from a fire point-of-view.

It is a sane policy, and carried outjudiciously, will be approved by the great mass of citizens, eventually even by those whose pocket-books are affected by it.

The presence of fire risks in sections where an outbreak of fire might easily cause a serious conflagration is an enemy to the general welfare, and any effort to drive out such hazards should be supported by the public.

Chief Gimblett deserves credit for doing his duty in a field where it is much the easier course for a civic official to keep his eyes closed.

THE SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

The splendid programme given by the Peterborough Symphony Orchestra last night at its complimentary concert to the citizens demonstrated that this organization, just a year old, is making constant and notable progress.

It is a musical unit of which Peterborough can well be proud, and is bound to develop and improve.

But an organization of this kind cannot operate on complimentary concerts.

Funds are needed and will be needed to take care of the cost of new instruments and music and of the many other expenses that creep into the operation of a large orchestra.

Those citizens who enjoyed the hospitality of the Symphony Orchestra last evening and were delighted with the programme should not overlook the fact that the task of financing the organization is by no means a light one.

It is possible that there will be other concerts during the winter on a different basis to last night's affair, and the proceeds of which will be devoted toward the maintenance of the orchestra.

When these are held there will be an opportunity to show appreciation not only of the kindness of the orchestra in playing a complimentary concert but also of the splendid qualities of the organization, and it is to be hoped that all those who realize what an asset the Symphony Orchestra is to the musical life of Peterborough will not fail to indicate their approval in a form that can be cashed in at the box office.

As was announced last evening, a number of new instruments are required at once, and the appeal made by Mr. Crane for subscriptions toward the cost of these will no doubt be answered by the music-lovers of the city, not only those who heard the concert but others who were unable to be present.

It is a worth-while cause, for the Symphony Orchestra is putting Peterborough firmly on the musical map.

GOOD SERVICE—OR APATHY?

Whether the return without an election of a number of municipal boards in different Ontario centres is a healthy development or not is a debatable question.

It may be accepted as proof of satisfactory service and efficient government by these civic bodies.

If that should be the case then the communities in question are to be congratulated upon the type of men in the public service and upon their wisdom in retaining their services.

On the other hand, there is the inference to be drawn that the lack of opposition to the present municipal boards is due to lack of interest in municipal affairs and to a dearth of candidates.

In that event the congratulations must be withheld.

Continuity of service is a good thing—when the service itself is good.

A Council composed of members who have been in office for some years know all the ropes and are familar with civic problems obviously is an asset, provided, of course, that the Aldermen have been reasonably alert and efficient and have steered a sane middle course between the alternatives of extravagance and parsimony.

Where the general results have been as good as could fairly be expected there is something to be said for the return by acclamation of such a Council, for, although there may be a weak member or two, the Council as a unit perhaps has done good work.

In the general interest let us hope that this has been the case in Brockville, Lindsay and other centres that have chosen to be governed next year by the Council of 1924.

It would be disconcerting to think, after the general newspaper campaign to awaken citizens to a sense of their responsibility as voters, that the chief reason for there being no municipal election in many places is the indifference of the community toward civic affairs.

THE COWARD WHO RAN AWAY.

Rev. Peter Bryce, Chairman of the Mothers' Allowance Commission, told the Middlesex board that wife desertion was the most serious problem facing those engaged in this work, says the London Advertiser.

It would probably not be to the point to inquire why there are so many of these cases; the law is more interested in the fact that they do occur and with finding a punishment to meet the situation.

This business of analyzing reasons offered for wife desertion is about as futile as trying to determine whether the man who accepts graft is a lesser sinner than the man who gives it. The man who deserts his wife is, in nine cases out of ten, an adept at presenting plausible reasons for so doing.

When he marries he accepts certain responsibilities; these are not thrust on him; he knows what they are before he enters the marriage tie. When he tires of these his attitude is that of the man who is quite willing to throw all these obligations overboard, and allow society at large to take on the duties he himself had promised to discharge. He may leave a wife or a mother and children; it is all the same to him—the larger the responsibility has become, the greater the burden he escapes when he decides to get out and care for no one but himself.

The law cannot temporize with these people—it cannot even waste much time listening to their excuses. Law is interested primarily in bringing them to the point where they must face the obligations they promised to meet.

When a man of the experience and tolerance of Rev. Peter Bryce says wife desertion has reached alarming proportions, there is no room for argument; the community believes it to be so. Likewise when Mr. Bryce says punishment for this crime must be more severe and more vigorously enforced, his advice can be accepted as sound by those who make the laws.

The first duty of the law is to bring the wife deserters to time; after that, if it feels so disposed, it can listen to their sob stories.

CANADIAN IMMIGRATION CRITICIZED.

the then existing Labor Government of Great Britain who came quite frankly to spy out the land as a proper over their shoulders to show how fat this much-adver- place to which British emigrants might come. But they did not go home carrying great bunches of grapes tised "promised land" had been found to be. They rather seemed to have eaten the grapes and so put their teeth on edge.

At all events, they have been filling Great Britain with their lamentations over the sad plight of their misled fellow-countrymen who have dared "the great adventure" and come out to Canada instead of staying docilely at home and voting for the Labor party. If they are believed by the British people who are still at home—and still out-of-work in spite of a year of miracle-working Labor rule—the flow of immigrants to Canada will be considerably reduced; for they paint a picture of cold horror when they describe the sort of reception that a British emigrant may expect in this stony-hearted, deceptively-advertised, workless and wintry Dominion.

* * * *

We are not concerned for the moment to debate with these critics the correctness of their impressions. They charge our railway and shipping companies with "inveigling" men and women from the Old Country to Canada—"not to find them work, for there is none—but to swell their banking accounts at the expense of these poor dupes." Our railway and shipping companies are quite capable of dealing with this charge—and they ought to do so. Misrepresentation of the real state of things in Canada would be a crime so cruel, so mean and so damaging to the Dominion that no Canadian institution can rest quiet under an accusation from even semi-responsible persons that has committed such a crime.

But what we art concerned to do is to state plainly and unmistakeably what we believe to be the proper immigration policy for Canada and what we have always understood to be the basis of all official immigration effort in the Motherland. Our complaints against that effort have not been that it was badly defined, but that it was feebly and inefficiently carried out.

Let us set down some first principles:—

Canada does not want immigrants for whom she has no work.

Canada cannot guarantee work in her cities or for skilled workmen. Mechanics who come, must come at their own risk.

Canada has an abundance of work on the land.

This does not mean only that she has plenty of vacant land in the West on which farmers can settle, but that the East is full of farms which are sadly crippled in their output because their owners cannot get help to work them. In the Eastern Townships alone, an army of young men could be absorbed in jobs which would learn farming under Canadian conditions—which are quite different from British conditions.

As Canada fills her vacant lands, she automatically creates a larger home market for her manufactured products and so provides more jobs for skilled workmen.

But outside of men willing to work on the land and domestic servants, THERE IS NO OFFICIAL INVITATION OUT FOR EMIGRANTS TO COME TO CANADA. If others come here and suffer, they have no more ground for complaint against us than they would have if they went to France and failed to get employment.—Montreal Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The only regret about Lord Byng's visit today was that the vice-regal's party's sojourn in Peterborough was necessarily brief.

Mr. Porter, ex-M.P., had nothing to say the day after the West Hastings by-election, and must be regretting that he said too much before that event.

Does the result in West Hastings presage an early election, possibly immediately after the next session? More than one political sharp declares the answer to be yes.

Passing Of Old Hotel Recalls Prominent Men Who Visited Peterboro

The re-modelling of the Maple Leaf Hotel in East City, which is being made into an apartment block by its owner George Lipsett, recalls the famous election in Peterborough 38 years ago when J. Stevenson, Conservative, defeated George A. Cox, Liberal by 16 votes.

During the strenuous campaign that preceded the voting, Sir John A. Macdonald; Hon. Chapleau, afterwards Lieut. Governor of Quebec, and Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper were guests of James Stevenson at his home, now the club room of the Knights of Columbus. Taking the three statesmen for a tour of the town and district, Stevenson called at the Maple Leaf Hotel, then a frame structure, for Elias Thompson, a prominent lumberman and one of his strongest supporters.

The old hotel, which is now disappearing, was honored, therefore, by a call from some of the greatest statesmen who have visited Peterborough.

A THOUGHT.

GREED—A DISHONEST SIGN.

Aesop tells of a monkey that put his hand in the neck of a jar and grabbed so many nuts that he (the monkey) couldn't get his paw out without dropping most of the nuts.

How well this fable gets over a moral, and it is this: If you want to sell something worthless, pick out the greedy man. Dangle in front of the tightwad the story of great profits, and show the greedy man how he can take advantage of someone else—how he can buy the stock that belongs to a neighbor while the neighbor knows nothing of its worth.

Do this, and the greedy man will take the hook like a hungry bullfrog jumping at a piece of red-flannel shirt. All of which illustrates that greed is dishonest.

The "high-power" stock salesman will tell you that the hardest prospect to sell is the generous man—that the greedy man is the easiest mark in the market.

The sharpshooter stock schemer may (in confidence) tell you that the close-fisted avaricious man only saves and skimps until he gets together a snug sum, and then when some rainbow painted prospectus appeals to his greed, the tightwad will give up his gold for a brass brick without much persuasion.

Latest sales reported are as follows: A few hundred cases of Ontario storage extras and firsts were sold at 45 delivered Toronto, also a car of ungraded storage, 200 cases extras 45½; 200 cases seconds 38½ f.o.b. Winnipeg.

Toronto steady; jobbing fresh specials 70; extras 60; storage extras 48; firsts 44 to 45; seconds 38 to 39.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, Nov. 27.—There was nothing but a few cows and stockers in today's offering, and these were cleaned up at steady prices. The winter cattle fair sale was the attraction for buyers today, and the regular market environs were practically deserted. Cattle quotations for the various grades are unchanged. Lambs and sheep were a little easier, with tops at $12.50. Calves steady, with tops at $10.

Hogs steadied at the week's opening price, $10 off cars, but packers are bidding a quarter lower for over week-end deliveries.

Prices in the various sections are as follows.

Export cattle, choice and heavy steers, $6.50 to $7.25; bulls, $4.50 to $5; cows, $4.25 to $5.

Choice butchers, $5.75 to $6; medium $5.25 to $5.75, fair, $5.25 to $5.50; common, $3.50 to $4; baby beeves, $8.50 to $9.

Choice fat cows, $3.50 to $4.50.

Stockers and feeders — Choice shortkeep feeders, 1,000 to 1,200 lbs., $5.50 to $6.25; stores, 900 to 1,000 lbs., $5 to $5.50; choice stockers, 830 to 950, $4.25 to $4.75; light western stock, $3.50 to $3.75; choice western, $4.50 to $5.

Calves steady.

Sheep and lambs easier.

Hogs steady at $10 off cars.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press).—There were some demands from local buyers for wheat here yesterday on spot and sales of No. 2 Northern were made at 10 cents per bushel over the Winnipeg November option, No. 3 Northern at 4½ cents per bushel over, and No. 4 wheat at 2¾ cents per bushel under the December option, c.i.f. Montreal. The trade in car lots of coarse grains on spot was again reported quiet, the demand from all sources being slow, but the undertone was steady. Ontario No. 3 extra malting barley was quoted at $1.08, and No. 3 grade at $1.07 per bushel, ex-track, with Ontario No. 2 white oats at 62 cents, No. 3 grade at 60 cents, and No. 4 grade at 58 cents per bushel, ex-store.

Owing to the light supplies of eggs coming forward and the steady reduction in stocks on spot, a firm feeling continues to prevail in this direction but prices showed no further change. A stronger feeling developed in the butter situation and prices were advanced ¼ cent per pound and the volume of business was large. The export trade in cheese showed no improvement owing to the indifferent attitude of English importers for supplies.

Crop beans were quoted at $2.75 and $2.80 per bushel for one and three-pound pickers.

OLD CRADLE AWAITS BABY.

One, 100 Years Old, Given to Mrs. Alice R. Longworth Ten Years Ago.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—There is a cradle more than 100 years old waiting for the baby expected in the home of the Nicholas Longworths in February. The cradle was the gift of Miss Katherine Elkins to Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth some ten years ago. The Longworths had been married eight years when the gift was made. Miss Elkins, now Mrs. William Hitt, personally selected the cradle in an antique store here.

The cradle has sentiment and history in its favor. It is of mahogany and has a half hood. K. Nicolaides, local expert of antiques, believes it to be of English origin. In which Colonial house it first was used he cannot tell. The fad for early American furniture has extended to cradles no less than to other pieces.

NEWS OF HASTINGS.

Overseas Broadcasting Stations Heard in the Village.

HASTINGS, November 27. — Very few of the American broadcasting stations were heard by local radio fans on Tuesday evening. European stations were heard quite distinctly. Mr. T. A. Coughlan heard stations from England, and also heard the Belgian broadcasting station. One item of the Belgian programme was a vocal solo, which was heard very distinctly.

The meeting held in the Council Chamber on Tuesday evening to discuss the possibilities of the forming of a Choral society, was fairly well attended. Many more are expected to attend next Tuesday evening when a practice will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Stevenson, Front street.

It has been decided by the local hockey club that they send representatives to the Trent Valley League meeting which convenes in Marmora on Friday afternoon.

The Ormond cheese factory at Hastings has been closed for another season, which has been very successful. The report of the same will be given at a later date.

Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Greenlay have moved to Trent River to their home on the Havelock Road. Mr. Greenly has procured a blacksmith's shop in Havelock, and intends doing business in the latter place in the future.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Bonds and family are visiting friends in Norwood.

Mr. G. B. Stevenson was a business visitor in Peterboro this week.

Mrs. G. B. Steevnson was a business vistior in Peterboro this week.

Mrs. Scott Fife spent Monday in Campbellford.

A social evening was spent at the Young People's meeting of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Monday evening.

Mr. W. E. Tate and Mr. R. Johnson were in Haliburton on Tuesday.

Mr. M. O'Brien of Kingston, spent a day here recently.

Mr. L. E. Stevens of Peterboro was in the village on Wednesday.

Mr. R. B. Nicholl of Roseneath, accompanied by his mother, spent Wednesday in Hastings.

Mrs. John Thomas was a visitor in Peterboro on Tuesday.

LAKEFIELD CORRESPONDENCE

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 27. — Mr. Gustar, of the Canadian National Institue for the Blind, gave an illustrated address in the Queen street theatre on Tuesday evening, under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Great War Veterans' Association. Rev. Walter Cox presided as chairman.

Miss Gwendoline Simpson gave a pianoforte solo which was much enjoyed, after which Mrs. S. W. Sutton sang very sweetly "The Barefoot Trail."

Mr. Gustar announced that he had organized the first branch of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the G.W.V.A. in Canada. The ladies have always stood behind the returned men and in spite of the many knocks which these men have received, the ladies have remained loyal and helpful. The G.W.V.A. has always stood for a square deal to the soldiers.

The late Sir Arthur Pearson, of England, who was blind himself, did a tremendous work for the blinded soldiers and gave his residence, St. Dunstan's, for a home for these men where each could learn a useful trade or craft by which he could be self-supporting and not allowed to live out his life realizing that he was only a helpless burden.

In Canada the work is being carried on by the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, with its centres of work which extends from Halifax to Victoria. The Toronto work was particularly spoken of as being most interesting to Lakefield people because of being the nearest centre. The lecture was entitled "The Helping Hand" and very clearly showed the various ways which men and women are assisted in becoming self-supporting, in spite of the terrible handicap of sightlessness. The library work of the C.N. Institute is wonderful and hundreds of volumes in Braille are provided for the use of the blind. Another feature [illegible] ome teaching department which home teac... has a splendid record and has done a great deal to assist those whose only outlook had been that of being hopeless dependents.

Residences are provided for women and also for men. Capt. Baker, a blind Canadian "Original" is in charge of the Toronto work and is a young man who has done wonders for himself and hundreds of others.

Revenues Increase.

The amount of money earned by blind workers in the past three years shows a great increase from year to year. The whitewear factory which is operated by blind workers is the only one of its kind in the world. Partly sighted overseers are employed, but women and girls work on high powered machines making porch aprons and house dresses. There is a broom factory for men where the "Hope" brand brooms are made. Basketry is one of the industries at which the blind excell and wonderfully beautiful articles are made.

Mr. Guster spoke feelingly on the prevention of blindness as something which should be everyone's duty.. Children in schools often show evidences of defective vision, which the teacher or school nurse should report to the parent, who should attend to the matter at once as very often a little prevention in the form of glasses saves the sight. A larger type in text books should be advocated as a means of preventing blindness. In Toronto In Toronto there are several sight-saving classes in the schools for childrenwith sub-normal vision. Social diseases are responsible for hundreds of blind infants and now the government gives free drops which should be put in the eyes of every baby within forty-eight hours of birth. Unfortunately if the doctor neglects this precaution there is no penalty, but it is hoped that a penalty which is proportionate to the crime (for neglect in this matter is a hideous crime) will be inflicted by law in the near future.

Brantford School.

The Ontario School for the Blind at Brantford has done a great work in teaching the sightless to read and write and acquire a commercial education. The cost of this work is divided, the government of Ontario and the municipalities provide 50 per cent. of it and the remainder is derived from the general public.

At the close of the address Mrs. McMillan sang very sweetly, "My Ain Folk."

A vote of thanks was proposed by Mr. O. A. Langley to Mr. Gustar and Mr. R. J. Webster, president of the G.W.V.A. branch in Lakefield, seconded it, adding a word of personal thanks and appreciation.

At the close of the lecture the audience was given an opportunity to view the exhibit of basketry which had been provided and also to purchase any articles desired.

Spanish Retreat and Egyptian Crisis Serve to Comlicate Situation.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—The question of Morocco is causing much concern at the Quai D'Orsay, while that of Egypt still occupies the press. And in this country, where every man has opinion, it is curious to remark that unofficial approbation is given in all Government and Foreign Ministry circles to the British action and attitude in Egypt.

All commentators who are not of a radical and Socialist opinion declare that the British action, if not pushed too far, will be the most salutory thing that has happened in Colonial and Near Eastern politics since the war. The pretention of the Egyptians to complete independence and self-government finds support only among those who are deeply enamored of the theory of self-determination or are for one reason or another antagonistic to Britain.

When here recently on his return from his unsatisfactory conferences with Ramsay MacDonald, Zaghlul Pasha industriously made friends in the French press and the fruit of his efforts has been seen plainly during the past few days, especially in the Communist press. But the general tendency of the independent newspapers is now to regard the British action as justified in so far as an indemnity, apologies and punishment of the guilty are concerned and reasonable with respect to ordering Egyptian troops out of the Sudan and the further development of the Gezira irrigation system.

Apart from the fact that the peace and prosperity of Egypt and the Sudan under British administration have meant quiet along the whole of North Africa, the French are not prepared to admit the Egyptian claim to the Sudan. Their eyes are beginning to turn to Riff, where the Spanish evacuation progresses painfully but without any doubt as to the final issue.

French Uncertain How to Act.

From Madrid there is still no clear indication of the Spanish final intention, and without that word the French are distinctly embarrassed as to how to act. Technically they hold a protectorate right over the whole country from the Sultan of Morocco, and the Spanish zone, in which Riff is included, was only in the nature of a sub-lease. If the Spanish definitely evacuate the territory they have tried so long to hold, the French are quite within their right, they believe, in retaking control in the interests of peace and order.

Naturally, they would prefer that Abdel-Krim and the Riffians should submit to the authority of the Sultan and so to French authority. But all indications seem to be that the Riffians, who have lived so long by war, are not prepared to accept the same tutelage as others and will try to continue against France their war of independence.

The Spanish evacuation has, therefore, placed the French in an embarrassing position. They would have much preferred that they had beaten Abd-el-Krim and retained control of the zone which was retroceded to them. At almost any cost they are anxious that the Spaniards should retain a firm hold of the coast line, as they are quite aware that Britain would look with considerable suspicion on the establishment of a French protectorate on the coast.

It seems, therefore, not unlikely that should the Spanish retreat degenerate into a rout, that the French would be prepared to help them with a diversion against Riff from the interior. For French troops the task at which the Spanish failed is considered not a difficult one, and Marshal Lyautey is quoted as having said that it will not need a soldier or a cent more to clean up the whole country.

Abd-el-Krim Might Negotiate.

Several times recently Abd-el-Krim has shown through his British aid, Captain Gardiner, a disposition to talk peace with France. But so long as the Spanish situation is not clear it is very difficult for the French authorities to know on what grounds to begin negotiations. Premier Herriot's Government is, for internal reasons, most anxious to avoid any military expedition, and above all any military expenditure, but for the moment it is being kept in uncertainty.

It is a curious comment on the whole affair that during nearly three months last summer a large barge was moored on the Seine bank just outside the Quai d'Orsay offices. One morning it disappeared and, some suspicion having attached to it, it was stopped at the locks lower down the river. There it was found to have been discreetly filled with arms and ammunition destined for Riff. The loading operations had been carried out within a stone's throw of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

GARAGE LOCATION UP TO ENGINEER

Mr. Parsons May Withold Permit Where Situation Is Undesirable.

At a meeting of the Property Committee of the City Council last night tenders for the collection of garbage in 1925 were opened and a new building rule was adopted.

The building of unsightly frame garages extending to the street on line in front of residences was discussed in all its phases, and Mayor Turner brought in a resolution that all application for building garages be refered by the building inspector to the city council with his recommendations and that no permit be issued without sanction of the council.

This was amended to read that the city engineer must approve of the location of garages before issuing the permits, and this carried, the chairman dissenting.

Garbage Collection.

After a discussion of the garbage situation Alderman Morrison moved that the contract be given to Anglesea and Withers, who did the work in 1924 for $8,200 and this year tendered $8,800. The work had been well done, Alderman Morrison said, and no complaints had been made.

No other proposal was made, and the committee recommends that Anglesay and Withers receive the contract.

Tenders were submitted as follows:

Walter McGregor	$8,000
Edgar Millen	8,800
J. L. Young	9,000
P. Anglesea and H. Withers	8,800
Justice Blodgett	8,500

There were present the chairman, Alderman J. O. Fife; Mayor J. J. Turner; Aldermen M. McIntyre; J. W. Meyers; M. J. Maher; R Morrison.

FIERY, ITCHY SKIN QUICKLY SOOTHED WITH SULPHUR

Mentho-Sulphur, a pleasant cream, will soothe and heal skin that is irritated or broken out with eczema; that is covered with ugly rash or pimples, or is rough or dry. Nothing subdues fiery skin eruptions so quickly, says a noted skin specialist.

The moment this sulphur preparation is applied the itching stops and after two or three application, the eczema is gone and the skin is delightfully clear and smooth. Sulphur is so precious as a skin remedy because it destroys the parasites that cause the burning, itching or disfigurement. Mentho-Sulphur always heals eczema right up.

A small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur may be had at any good drug store.

Draft, $833.41; livery account, $39.15; caboose, $60.86; Commissioners attendance, $264.48; Ex. onvention, Ad. Board, etc. $139.-65; Buckhorn bridge building, $1,438.-95. Grand total to November 22, 1924, $24,085.31.

The above is approximately the expenditures to date

We sincerely trust that the mileage will be reduced so that some construction can be carried out.

We are pleased to note, however, the marked improvement in roads throughout the county and we bespeak a continuance of the encouragement that the Road Superintendent has received and which he honestly deserves.

LIBEL ACTION BY OWNER OF HOTEL

Rev. J. F. Knight's Letter In Prohibition Campaign Alleged Defamatory.

LACOMBE, Alta., Nov. 28.—Suit for $5,000 damages against Rev. J. F. Knight, of Edmonton, has been filed by J. C. Cormick of Lacombe on behalf of A. T. Inkskip, proprietor of the Adelphi Hotel, Lacombe, following dismissal of the action brought by the Alberta Liquor Commissioner's department on November 21 against Inskip, for alleged breaches of the Alberta Liquor Act.

Evidence for the prosecution hinged on a letter written by Mr. Knight to his sister at St. Mary's Ont., and published in the local press at that place during the recent Ontario Liquor plebiscite campaign and also quoted by Rev. Mr. Graham of Brantford, Ont., in a letter to the Brantford Expositor.

Mr. McKnight's letter treated of alleged drunkeness witnessed by him on July 1 last, when passing through Lacombe. The Adelphi Hotel at that time was the only hotel in Lacombe holding a beer license. The charge against Inskip was dismissed and the present action against Mr. McKnight will be one of defamatory libel for the publication of statements which plaintiff claims were not in accordance with the facts.

DREAMS.

Each has its Own Meaning.

To be lonely and unhappy in a dream means that you wil be happy and quite contented in wakened hours.

Dream records show that visions of unhappiness nearly always are followed by much happiness for the dreamer.

Bad fortune is due for the dreamer who sees himself falling from a boat.

He laughed at Kellogg's Bran!

Now read this letter of thanks from Mr. Kane. It speaks for itself. Remember, it is because Kellogg's Bran is ALL bran that it was so effective in his case—just as it has been in thousands of others. Only ALL bran can produce 100 per cent results.

My dear friends:

Imagine a young man weighing 165 pounds in the course of a few months parked in bed, a weakling weighing 94 pounds. An elderly lady whom I knew since I was a kid paid me what she thought was a last visit. Upon being told of my plight she immediately mentioned your product for such an ailment. Maybe some of us didn't look upon her views very lightly . . . it was to laugh!

My dear friend, I am still laughing . . . not at your product, but because I am able to. I am telling you and the world at large, "Eat Kellogg's Krumbled Bran!" It should be called "Constipation's worst enemy." I owe you my heartfelt gratitude. I can talk, and whenever the opportunity presents itself, my mouth is alwaye full of bran—Kellogg's Krumbled. Wishing you countless days of progress, I am

Yours for success,
John M. Kane,

DON'T KICK, LOOK AT GERMANY FIRST

German Commercial, Industrial and Agrarian Pursuits Taxed For 50 Per Cent of Income.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(United Press).—Taxation bordering in some cases on the point of confiscation, prevails in Germany under the present system, according to a survey made by R. E. Schoenfeld, United States Consul at Berlin, made public here by the Department of Commerce.

Collectively German commercial, industrial and agrarian pursuits are taxed more than fifty per cent. of their net income. In certain commercial and industrial enterprises, the tax imposed reaches a high point of 73.55, and ranges downward to 44.10 per cent. of net income. Agricultural pursuits are taxed approximately 58 per cent. of the net income.

The tax laws of Germany have become so involved through the many changes necessitated by the rapid depreciation of the mark that accurate figures as to the values of taxes collected have been almost undeterminable, the report points out. Previous to the stabilization of Germany in 1923, the value of levies are negligible, although the levy was seemingly heavy when imposed. Since that period, however, the general situation has undergone a profound change.

Practically all direct taxes are imposed not upon net receipts, but on a basis of turnover plus property value.

The Federal income tax levied upon incomes of individuals differs widely from the corresponding American tax. The tax is assessed at the end of the calendar year, but quarterly payments must be made in advance. The tax graduates from 10 to 60 per cent. of the income, after deduction has been made of a lump sum to conduct a profession and the interest on personal indebtedness.

The tax is deducted by the employer from the total wage of salaried employees and turned over to the Government. If married, the tax is reduced at the rate of one per cent. for the wife and each child. The tax averages approximately ten per cent. of incomes below 8,000 gold marks and 20 per cent. of incomes above that figure. Incomes derived from investments must pay in addition to the income tax a proportionate property tax.

Corporation taxes, including joint stock companies, limited liability companies and mining concerns, are assessed in the same manner regarding advance payments as the income tax. The rate is fixed at 20 per cent. on net incomes plus 25 per cent. of profits distributed. In certain cases a percentage of profits from liquidation or fusion are added.

The advance payment feature of the tax system is a complex problem and resultant of much difficulty. Yet, it has been considered necessar yto maintain the value of levies because of the instability of the currency. This phase of the law will be changed shortly.

Illustrative of the tax in general is the automobile tax ranging from 20 to 80 per cent. per horse power; tobacco, 20 to 40 per cent. of valuation; matches, 60 per cent. of factory sale price; bonds, from 2 to 27 per cent.; building tax, 22 per cent. of rental value, and transportation, 10 to 16 per cent.

Superimposed on these basic taxes are numerous municipal and other taxes.

MENUS FOR A FAMILY.

TESTED BY SISTER MARY.

Breakfast—Apple sauce, cereal cooked with raisins, thin cream, creamed eggs with spinach on toast, whole wheat pop-overs, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Baked macaroni with vegetables, hearts of celery, rye bread and peanut butter sandwiches, oatmeal macaroons, milk, tea.

Dinner—Cream of tomato soup, baked fillet of sole, shoestring potatoes, beets in orange sauce, grape sponge, plain cake, whole wheat bread, milk, coffee.

Needless to say the shoestring potatoes mentioned in the dinner menu are not for the junior members of the family. Since the oven must be heated for the fish why not bake some potatoes for the children? And, unless the man of the family is particularly fond of shoestring potatoes, bake his potatoes, too. They are much better for him than the fried ones.

The fish served to children should be baked or boiled, but you will like the fillet of sole baked quite as well as when fried, and it is much easier to cook.

Baked Macaroni With Vegetables.

One and one-half cups macaroni broken in small pieces, 4 tablespoons butter, 2 large onions, ½ cup diced carrots, 1 cup diced celery, 1 cup canned peas, 1 cup canned tomatoes, ½ cup diced cheese, 1 scant teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper.

Melt butter, add onions sliced, celery and carrots. Cover and simmer over a low fire until tender. Stir with a fork to prevent sticking. Cook macaroni in boiling salted water for 10 minutes. Drain and blanch. Add peas and tomatoes to the other vegetables and simmer five minutes. Add macaroni and season with salt and pepper. Turn into a well-buttered baking dish, cover with cheese and bake in a moderately hot oven until cheese is melted and the tomato juice is absorbed.

Oatmeal Macaroons.

Two tablespoons butter, 4 tablespoons corn sirup, 4 tablespoons sugar, 1 egg, 1½ cups oatmeal, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon baking powder, 1 teaspoon almond extract, ½ cup shredded almonds.

Melt butter and stir in sugar and sirup. Add egg well beaten. Mix salt and baking powder with oatmeal and stir into first mixture. Add flavoring and nuts and mix thoroughly. Drop from a small spoon onto buttered and floured pans and bake 15 minutes in a moderate oven.

Baked Fillet of Sole.

One pound fillet of sole, 2 tablespoons butter, ½ lemon, ½ teaspoon salt, dash pepper.

Wipe fish with a cheesecloth wrung out of cold water. Put in a well-buttered baking pan, spread with butter and sprinkle with lemon juice, salt and pepper. Bake 20 minutes in a hot oven.

One pound of fish will serve three persons generously.

DRIVERS SAFETY TO BE PROTECTED

All Vehicles on Highways After Dark Are to Carry a Light.

TORONTO, Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press).—Licensing af all drivers of motor vehicles, lights upon all vehicles upon public highways after dark, educational campaigns by the provinces upon dangers of level rail way crossings, and federal aid toward roads construction, were propositions upon which delegates to interprovincial roads conference reported favorably yesterday at parliament buildings prior to the adjoining of their sessions. The matter had been thoroughly discussed during the three days deliberations of the gathering, and the intention is that where they come within scope of provincial legislation or regulations, uniform laws upon them will be sought from all provincial governments.

Delegates to meeting which reached these conclusons where the highway ministers, deputy ministers, highway engineers, and other highway and motor vehicle officials of provincial governments together with the executive officers of the Canadian Good Roads Association. They gave exhaustive study to various highway and motor vehicle problems with the view to securing uniformity of legislation throughout the country with a view also to serving interests of pedestrian, motor vehicle and transportation interests.

FABLES ON HEALTH

DIET FOR THE BABY.

Diet for baby? A much asked question and one that has an answer dependent largely upon the child.

But if the baby is normal, this diet applied in the second year has been found by health experts to produce robust, healthy lads and lassies:

For breakfast give the child from three to four big spoonfuls of well-cooked cereal. Put emphasis on the "well-cooked." One glass of milk, a slice of bread that is a day old.

About 10 or 11 in the morning serve a luncheon which consists of fruit juice, either orange or prune pulp or apple sauce.

Then from 12 to 1, have lunch. A cereal again may be served, or some broth with cereal in it or potato soup. After the fourteenth month eggs may be fed the child, a cup of milk, a slice of slightly stale bread and a well-strained vegetable.

A glass of milk and bread at 3.30 and a light supper of cereal, milk and fruit.

WASH BREAD BOX

Wash out the bread box at least twice a week and dry out in the air.

LOSE WEIGHT.

One baked apple, ¾ cup rolled oats, 4 ounces broiled salt codfish, ½ cup cooked string beans, 1 cup shredded cabbage, 1 cottage cheese sandwich, 2 tablespoons canned red raspberries, 1 pint skimmed milk, 1 cup weak tea, ½ cup black coffee, 1 gluten roll.

Total calories, 1093. Protein, 277; fat, 299; carbohydrate, 517. Iron, .0169 gram.

Cottage Cheese Sandwich.

Two tablespoons cottage cheese, 1 tablespoon chopped pecans or almonds, 1 teaspoon chopped olives, 4 tablespoons grated carrot, 4 tablespoons minced celery, ½ teaspoon grated onion, salt and pepper, ½ lemon (juice), 4 leaves head lettuce, 2 whole slices whole wheat bread.

Mix cheese, nuts, olives, carrot, celery, grated onion, salt and pepper with lemon juice to make moist. Put well crisped and dried lettuce leaves on unbuttered bread and add cheese mixture. Serve as open or closed sandwich. The bread is of course cut very thin.

Total calories (exclusive of bread), 209. Protein, 35; fat, 119; carbohydrate, 55. Iron, .001 gram.

These calories are figured using almonds and ripe olives.

GAIN WEIGHT.

One baked apple, 1 cup rolled oats, 1 soft boiled egg, 4 ounces broiled salt codfish with 1 tablespoon lemon butter, 4 tablespoons creamed potatoes, ½ cup cooked string beans with cream, 1 cup shredded cabbage with 2 tablespoons oil and ½ tablespoon lemon juice and 1 teaspoon sugar, 1 cottage cheese sandwich, 1 cup cream of corn soup, 2 tablespoons fig pudding, 1 tablespoon whipped cream, 2 tablespoons banana cream pudding with 4 tablesugar, ½ cup table cream, 2 slices toast, 4 toasted crackers for soup, two 2-inch squares corn bread, 3 tablespoons butter, 1 tablespoon currant jelly, 1 pint whole milk, 1 apple.

The sandwich for this menu is moistened with cream more nuts used and the whole filling of lettuce and cheese mixture is masked with 3 tablespoons oil mayonnaise. Any kind of nuts can be chosen.

Any kind of jelly, apple, quince or whatever is at hand, can be used in place of the currant.

The cream is added to the string beans after the beans are "taken up" for the rest of the family.

The extra oil is added to the shredded cabbage after the cabbage is served.

DO YOU ENJOY MEALS OUTSIDE?

Every Woman in the Affirmative, Man in the Negative.

If a referendum were to be taken of the whole of, Britain and Canada and the question asked, "Are you in favor of having meals out of doors in fine weather?" it would be found that nearly every woman would answer in the affirmative, and practically every man in the negative.

I have asked men often why they object to meals out of doors.

"I hate my coffee lukewarm," grumbles one.

"Who wants his food mixed up with insects that blow into his soup, or caterpillars that suddenly fall from the trees overhead into his pudding?" queried another.

"Just as you are settled at a meal, down comes the rain, or up springs a wind and overturns glasses or the gravy," complains a third.

Now all these objections are understandable, but they do not explain the masculine hatred for outdoor meals. For all these difficulties can be, and are, overcome by good housewives, while women are no more fond than men of lukewarm meals, insects in their food, or messy tablecloths.

If meals outside are to be comfortable the most important choice is that of a suitable site.

"Let's have the table under the trees," is the suggestion of a novice who forgets that trees are rarely close to the house, and that hot dishes will cool in the transit.

Earwigs and spiders have their homes in trees, too, while there is always the possibility of a caterpillar descending to see what is going on.

So if you mind these little occurrences, do not put your table under a tree.

If you are fortunate enough to have a covered verandah which is in shade part of the day, you have an ideal place for outdoor meals. Otherwise, the shade of a wall is not to be despised, even though it is not so picturesque as a leafy, and therefore insect-haunted bower.

As to having your meals served hot, there are such things as hot-water plates, and if you do not possess these, a casserole keeps the food hot out of doors as well as in the house.

At breakfast or tea a spirit lamp overcomes the difficulty of lukewarm beverages.

A high wind will not do much damage if you have clips to hold down your tablecloth. Dinner mats are rather a nuisance out of doors, as quite a light breeze is apt to blow them away directly a plate is removed.

A glass lid for cups and tumblers keeps out roving flies and gnats, and old photographic plates after cleansing answer this purpose very well.

As to the picnic meal, some people show so little discrimination in choosing a site. Then they are annoyed to find they are lunching where an ant colony evidently dwells, or that the mosquitoes from the river, on the bank of which they gaily sat down to feed, are also having an outdoor meal off their exposed flesh.

When deciding where to eat lunch, don't be in too much of a hurry.

Avoid sitting too close to a river or pond, especially in the shade.

Regard any bumps in the ground with suspicion, and if you see a single wasp hovering about, go elsewhere. He will bring up battalions directly you have unpacked the food.

If you must sit under a tree, choose a beech, but not an oak, unless you are fond of caterpillars.

Hardened picnickers never waste precious moments in cutting up sandwiches beforehand. They rapidly become dry, uninteresting food.

A supply of cardboard plates and paper tablecloths and napkins will enable the housewife to transport the meal from home in its entirety.

Along goes the joint of beef, a loaf of bread, pat of butter, pieces of cheese, and all the incidentals, not forgetting the mustard.

Jelly or blanc-mange goes along in the mould in which it was made.

Fresh fruit and salad can be bought en route.

And when the meal is over, every good picnicker removes all traces of it.

Refuse is either brought home to the family dustbin or buried on the spot.

All remember the fury with which they beheld an eligible site littered with egg-shells, orange peel, and, banana skins, and forbear to disfigure the country side themselves and so spoil it for the enjoyment of others.

FISHING SCHOONER LOST IN BAD FOG

Captain John Beck and Crew Believed to Have Been Drowned.

DUNKIRK, N.Y., Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press).—Grave fears are entertained here for the safety of the fishing tug Harold G. Beck, her master, Captain John Beck, of Buffalo, and three members of his crew. Two of the deckhands were picked up by the freighter Belgian and taken to Buffalo.

The tug was returning to the harbor from the fishing grounds last night, when the shaft on the propeller broke. She was then in midlake, about 25 miles off this port, and a fierce storm was raging.

Flares were sent up which were sighted by the master of the Belgian, en route to Buffalo. The Belgian was put about to attempt a rescue. Three hawsers were put on the tug, rolling in the trough of the heavy seas, but they all snapped like threads. In manoeuvring with lines, two members of the deck crew of the tug succeeded in scrambling aboard the Belgian. After the third line parted the Beck drifted away in the fog. The master of the Belgian stood by for two hours, trying to locate the tug, but did not sight her again. He then proceeded to Buffalo.

SCOTCH BROWNIES

This is a simple delicious candy that the children could make. Of course hot sirup is a dangerous thing for small hands to manipulate, but the boys and girls who have not the muscle to stir fudge and fondant, or the patience, will love to make the brownies.

One and one-fourth cups brown sugar, 6 teaspoons vinegar, 2 tablespoons butter.

Mix sugar, vinegar and butter thoroughly in a smooth sauce pan. Put over a low fire and bring slowly to the boiling point. Boil gently over a low fire until brittle when a few drops are tried in cold water. Do not stir while cooking.

The sirup must snap when tried in cold water.

Drop from the tip of a spoon onto a marble slab or oiled paper to make thin wafers.

Toronto, Ont.—"Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the greatest help in motherhood of any medicine I have ever known. I am the mother of six children and I suffered greatly each time except the last one, when I was advised to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which I did, and I got along just fine; felt well and strong and had practically no suffering, and had a grand baby, that has always been healthy. I regained my strength very quickly afterward. I was so thankful to have been advised of this medicine, it gave me such wonderful help."—Mrs. Henry McDonald, 3 Wilmot Avenue.

WAR KILLED FOREIGNERS' TRADE THROUGHOUT CHINA

Poor Are Unable to Buy and Rich Won't Until Trouble is Over.

BUSINESS STOPPED

Only Flour Business Flourishes, as Soldiers Must Be Fed.

By RAY G. MARSHALL.

PEKING, China, Nov. 27. — (United Press).—What will the war do to the foreigner's business in China?

Don't ask the business man. He is probably predjudiced and anyway he never did have quite enough business, whether he heads the firm with a palace on the Shanghai bund or has a little godown on a side street.

Ask the captain of foreign ships or ask the little Chinese merchant who sells cotton goods by the square inch mostly to serve as patches and occasionally sells a bolt when the sweet potatoes come in. Ask the Chinese employee of a foreign firm.

Captains of foreign vessels are homeward bound without cargo. Cargoes for America and England comes down the rivers, from the Yangtze valley largely—cotton for Japan's mills, wood nut oil for American varnishes and raw materials by the thousand junkloads for Chinese industries, large and small.

The junks are hauling soldiers or lying along shore now, idle and earning nothing. The same is true of the small Chinese steamers. Stevedores are handling war supplies. Except for the foreign craft, traffic is at a standstill on the great waterway and foreign craft can not gather by mere handfuls the commodities that go down in junks. Nor can foreign craft stop at the village of a dozen houses and throw off five gallons of kerosene and two bolts of cotton cloth from Osaka or Manchester.

At a Standstill.

The piece goods trade, the business that probably more than any other built the Shanghai bund, is at a standstill. Ships may bring it in, but trains and junks can not take out the cotton print. The Chinese want the cotton print and some of them can still buy it. Others can't. The soldier of the Republic has called and taken the rice and the mule.

There will be many family gatherings at the coming New Year with the hard working Chinese housewife wearing last year's trousers. British piece goods go up the river as far as they can go by craft of any size, then by mule and on into the mountains on poles toted by coolies. That is in normal times. Just now the gay prints are in Shanghai and Tientsin godowns.

There is normally a good American automobile business in China. Today there is none. The prospective purchaser has his money in foreign banks that are not likely to be looted by defeated soldiers or molested by a Government that is put out too much strain on the eyes. ting down a rebellion.

No Chinese is going to buy a car and have it commandeered. Cars are being commandeered in every northern city every day. The militarist must go to the train in a car and his messages must be carried by motors.

Still Smoking.

Cigarettes and tobacco as yet have suffered little. The soldier must smoke and the suttler follows the army.

Kerosene suffers from lack of transportation facilities, as do other staple lines, while business has for the time ceased in those thousands of unimportant but saleable things that the Chinese have been taught are modern and quite the thing. The stores of the port cities are stocked with these, but buying has fallen off.

Your Chinese has learned to use canned goods and to buy can openers. He buys foreign dolls for his babies and if he is a little reckless, he buys the boy an electric torch and carries it himself. Chinese women wear men's garters made in America, while thousands prize dearly that American marvel, the knife with a corkscrew, screwdriver, ice pick and whatnot.

Just now these things are not gazed upon in the bazaars. Rice is going to be higher.

When America went to war, great and costly organizations were formed to persuade the people not to buy white flour or sugar and to get along without this and that.

Can't or Won't Buy.

No such organization is needed in China. When a condition like that now resting over China comes along, the majority of the Chinese can't buy and those who can won't. The latter put their money in a bank, all but enough to buy necessities and a ticket to a foreign concession and then wait very watchfully for the militarist cats to jump.

The average Chinese long ago lost interest in any particular tuchun (leader) and when he lost interest he lost faith. His one idea now is to get his stuff underground somewhere without the tuchun finding it out.

Chinese business, of course, has been hit, especially Government business. Salt isn't moving and public funds come from the salt tax. Trains are used by the military and there is no income. The military doesn't pay passenger and freight bills. The immense parcel post and money order business between Manchuria and China proper, the heaviest in all China, is shut off.

There is now just one business that is good for both Chinese and foreigner. That is the flour business. The Chinese soldier of today is fed mainly bread, for bread keeps well and needs no chopsticks for the stuffing process.

Some mighty fine flour contracts for flour delivery were made in Manchuria. The flour was delivered and paid for on the dot. Much of it was foreign flour.

REBEL INFLUENCE WEAKER IN IRELAND

Free State Gained in Recent By-election—Republicans Have Funds.

DUBLIN, Nov. 28.—The Dail has assembled again after a short adjournment, which has altered the political complexion in the Free State far more than was expected. The unexpected triumph of the government in the by-election in Cork, the stronghold of the republicans, seems to have turned the tide that was fast ebbing away from the Free State. Five by-elections have been held, and the writs have been issued for the eight seats vacated by members of the National party.

Loyal to Free State.

Of the five by-elections, the Free State won three. Cork was the great surprise, but in addition the government was sustained in East Cork and Donegal. The De Valera party were successful in North Mayo and South Dublin. The total poll for the government was 99,795, while the anti-treaty forces polled 77,398. Freemans Journal in a recent issue says that none of these five constituencies did the anti Free forces secure more than a fourth of the voters and that on the whole the people are firm for the treaty and the Free State.

The Republicans seen to be well supplied with funds for carrying on their campaign. In the constituency in which the by elections were fought agents convassed the electors thoroughly, telling them that everything from the farming community suffered today is due to their acceptance of the Free State.

Stolen Funds.

A Republican candidate in the Mayo by-election boasted that he had the funds, amounting to several thousands pounds, stolen from the Bank of Ireland with which to pay the irregular troops. The government is handicapped by the fact that trade is exceedingly bad, and a country of small farmers is naturally quick to feel the pinch. Taxation is high, and as soon as the government makes any serious effort to balance the budget there is an outcry from all parts of the country at the curtailed postal service. The cutting down of the old-age pensions by a shilling a week is also very unpopular.

The present session is likely to be a hard struggle, although prospects are certainly brighter than they were before the by-elections were declared.

Th boundary dispute may produce a crisis in the government at any moment, and the chief issue of the next election will certainly be the treaty. De Valera many manage to get yet another round in his fight for a republic for the entire country.

Meantime the much discussed boundary commission has been at work for more than two weeks trying to find a satisfactory dividing line between Northern Ireland and the Free State, and De Valera is ready for the fray with renewed strength after his quiet sojourn in Belfast jail.

TELLS WHY HE FAILED TO CATCH ROBBER GANG

Had Assumed That Proprietor of Store Was in League With Them.

POLICE CAR SKIDDED.

Quarry Escaped by Making a Quick Turn Into Cadieux Street.

MONTREAL, Nov. 28.—Further evidence as to the robbery which was attempted at Vachon's fur store near the corner of St. Denis and Demontigny Streets in November, 1922, was heard at the police inquiry from Constables Payette, Bissonnette and Emond, but the only new point brought out was given by Constable Bissonnette, who told how he had seen ex-Constable Brophy driving a car on St. Catherine Street after the incident and had since heard that it was the car used for the hold-up. Witness thought that Brophy was taking the auto to the municipal garage.

Lieut. Belodeau, who was in charge of the squad which failed to catch the robbers, said a big car had been placed at their disposal by the Chief. After the squad had posted itself they saw the robbers' car drive up to Vachon's store where two men got out. The policemen waited with the intention of catching the whole gang inside the store, but to his surprise the two men returned in a few minutes to the car which then drove off.

The police car immediately followed and it had been planned that when the two cars drew level, two men from the police car were to step on to the running board of the other car and stop it. The car they were chasing made a quick turn down Cadieux Street and the police car, when they attempted to make the same turn, skidded past the corner so they went on a block and thence to Cadieux, but the quarry had disappeared. The police car, he said, had been hampered by a broken skid chain.

Thought There Was Accomplice.

Asked why he did not put men inside the Vachon store, witness said his information was that the packets were all ready made up to be loaded on the car. That implied, if it were true, that someone in the store was an accomplice of the robbers, and therefore it was of no use trying to put men in the store, as the accomplice would have seen it.

Asked why he did not hand over his information to Capt. Sauve, in charge of the district, and let him go after the robbers, witness said he was at liberty to proceed to an arrest anywhere in the city. He made many arrests, probably an average of 500 to 600 a year.

"If you had so much experience, why did you not think of informing Mr. Vachon of what was about to happen?" "It was not for me to tell Mr. Vachon about it."

"Why did you not telephone to Mr. Vachon and find out whether his goods were wrapped up in packets or not?" "I did not know who it was that had wrapped them up, whether it was Mr. Vachon himself or one of his employees, or if they had been wrapped up at all."

The Judge—"Did you think that the proprietor of the store might have been an accomplice?" "That is generally the presumption when goods are packed up ready to be stolen."

Witness said his plan failed because there was a night watchman at the store who drove the robbers away.

Chief Asked to Explain.

Chief Belanger was asked to explain how it happened that Lieutenant Bilodeau had the right to go all over the city making arrests without consulting the captains in the different districts. The Chief explained that being in charge of the chauffeurs and cars there was no special district assigned to him. Bilodeau had brought the information and when an officer had unearthed a prospective crime, he usually liked to get the credit of making the arrest.

Questions by the Judge elicited the fact that Lieut. Bilodeau had not informed the Chief whose store was to be robbed. If the Chief had known it was Vachon's, the Chief would have known that there was not much likelihood of the proprietor being an accomplice and might have caused the plan of action to be changed accordingly.

"It seems to me," his Jordship concluded, "that the principal error seems to have arisen from Bilodeau thinking that Vachon might have been an accomplice with the thieves."

All Fat People Should Know This

Fat people owe a debt of gratitude to the discoverer of the now famous Marmola Prescription. STONES HURLED AT J. STEWART

License Inspector Attacked—Mrs. Stewart Was Also Victim of Outrage.

NO CAPTURES YET.

No trace has yet been found of the miscreant who hurled a stone through License Inspector Joseph Stewart's kitchen window on Saturday night, narrowly missing Mrs. Stewart who was working there at the time. The stone, which is as large as a man's fist, is in possession of the police force.

During the Inspector's absence from home about 8.30 on Saturday, the stone came hurling through the window past Mrs. Stewart, struck a match box on the east wall and rebounded against the south wall, knocking off some plaster. It lay on the floor until Detective William Meagher and Detective William Carey appeared to investigate.

The Inspector is reticent regarding the outrage, declining to state on whom he places the blame, but there is no doubt that the stone was intended for him Another stone was thrown without doing any damage.

As J. A. Loucks, chairman was absent, Major Bygott took the chair. The report of the High School was sent in by the Inspector. He said he had visited a good many High Schools in Ontario and very few, if any are as well equipped and show so good a standing. The number of Students had increased from one hundred and eighty to two hundred and one. The report of the Punblic School was read. There is an average of four hundred and eighty-eight pupils. The Inspector made special mention of the work of Mr. Hall, on the High School grounds. He named Mr. Hall the expert.

The board granted permission to Mr. Massie to purchase a wheelbarrow for the High School. J. L. Hoover gave a report that the seats which the board intended buying were ordered and would be here in three weeks. The contract for the screens for the gymnasium was given to J. C. Birmingham. J. R. Wilkinson, Truant officer, gave his report. He had visited a (number of homes where children were staying away from school. He found some had a doctor's certificate—saying that the children were not in a state of health to attend school. dollars were cleared at the "At Home" last Friday night. This was used to buy blinds for the windows and twelve dozen stainless spoons. The board moved a vote of thanks to the High School

One hundred and seventy-Principal and staff for this present to the High School. The Inspector or Examiner had called on the Principal and had been taken through the school and he said he was delighted with the finish and appearance of the School.

Morrison and Son Helped.

Keene Lighting System Was Helped to Success by Local Men.

It was reported from Keene yesterday that the lighting system installed by William Plunkett had been put in working order and was giving the village unaccustomed and much welcomed illumination.

Alderman Robert Morrison and his son, doing business as Morrison and Son, had a great deal to do with the successful opening of the lighting service, Mr. Morrison's electrical skill being of considerable assistance to Mr. Plunkett.

TELEPHONE COMPANIES MAY HAVE JOINT BOARD

Annual Convention of Independent Telephone Association Concluded Yesterday.

TORONTO, Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press.)—The Canadian Independent Telephone Association, at the concluding session of its annual convention yesterday, passed a resolution instructing its executive to meet representatives of the Bell Telephone Company to consider the advisability of the appointment of a joint board to deal with telephone matters in the province. The executive will also consider the appointment of a field man for all Ontario companies to assist local telephone systems in the administration of their affairs.

Various speakers stated that telephone companies were finding themselves in such a poor financial condition that they were unable to meet the expense of improved equipment and in some cases even of replacement.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: Hon. President, F. E. Webster, Creemore; President, J. M. Govenlock, Seaforth; Vice-President, S. R. Forbes, Waterdown; Secretary, A. Hoover, Green River; Treasurer, F. D. Mackay, Toronto. Anson Grop, Preston, was added to the executive.

RUSSIAN PROPOSAL.

LONDON, Nov. 28. — (United Press).—Two notes from Russia were received here to-day. The first, it is understood by the United Press, is extremely brief and merely acknowledges a recent communication from the Baldwin Government, and expresses regret at the latter's decision not to submit the Anglo-Russian treaties to Parliament. The Soviet note points out the advantages of these treaties offered. The second note repeats the Russian proposal for arbitration of the question of the authenticity of the Zinoviev.

HE DREAMT OF ADVENTURE FOR OVER 40 YEARS

Found God's Footprints and Took Up Chase Through Arizona.

14-INCH TRACK

Tracks Are Probably the Most Numerous and Interesting Group Ever Found.

By GEORGE BRITT.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—"God's footprints" or "yetso beta" is the Navajo name for the dinosaur tracks which Charles L. Bernheimer found imprinted on the hardened floor of Neskla-nizadi Canon, in Arizona.

And following these tracks of God, searching for them over jagged cliffs, through cactus, scorpions and heat, was a divine quest for this 60-year-old city business man. The greenish, tepid water seeping out in desert shadows were bubbling fountains of youth.

As to the tracks themselves, Dr. Clark Wissler of the American Museum of Natural History says they are probably the most numerous and interesting group ever found. Thirty footprints are uncovered, and others can be found simply by removing a cliff a quarter of a mile high which arises as one wall of the canon.

14-Inch Track.

The cracks were left by at least four animals, wading once in the spudgy mud which hardened into stone. The largest track is 14 inches from heel to tip of claw, and the stride was about 40 inches.

After the imprints were made, according to scientists, they were entirely covered over during some earth convulsions. Then the stream cutting a canon in the course of thousands of centuries bared them again. Undoubtedly other tracks exist in the same stratum, shelved within the adjacent canon wall.

For 40 years, Bernheimer had wanted to ride bronchos, meet Indians, get acquainted with coyotes and sagebrush and plunge into the map's blank spaces on adventurous explorations.

The dreams he had as an office boy in a wholesale dry goods house did not wear off as he prospered in the marts of civilization and became president of his own textile manufacturing company.

He had been to California a few years ago and was coming home across the Arizona desert country. He had been there before and felt the same longings. This time he got off the train. He was a tenderfoot and getting old, but he struck the gold-hued trail of romance into the forbidden unknown. Since then he has been going back every year, growing younger and more enthusiastic.

Last summer he not only found the dinosaur tracks and mapped the supposedly impassable Navajo Canon in north-eastern Arizona, but he performed a feat of physical grit and endurance which any young athlete might admire.

He made the trip of 20 days on foot and horseback with five of his lower vertebræ cracked and broken. This over terrain that made the well-known Bright Angel Trail of the Grand Canon look like a boulevard.

Five Vertebræ Broken.

"My horse threw me the second day out," says Bernheimer. "It hurt, all right, but I picked myself up, caught the horse and went ahead. After a few days the pain eased. I thought the exercise was 'limbering up' my soreness. I couldn't have done it when I first started making desert trips, of course, but I got through all right. After I returned home I had an X-ray examination, and it showed the little projections or spines on fine vertebræ were broken."

Bernheimer on an earlier trip discovered a new and shorter trail around Navajo Mountain to the famous Rainbow Bridge. He has written a book about the wonderful bridge. Another time he found in superimposed strata the prehistoric remains of four different types of early civilization, from nomadic to cliff dweller, providing an important key to their chronological development.

Roughing it in the desert, according to Bernheimer, has taught him to "fry ham or eggs." It taught him when his camera was smashed to improvise a shutter with a black sock and make good pictures. It gave his life an intensified vitality and velocity which reversed the rate of what were supposed to be his "declining years."

ABOUT BELLS

From very early times cymbals and handbells were employed in religious ceremonial, but they do not seem to have been used in Christian churches till about 400 A.D. The sixth century saw their introduction into France, and by the ninth century they had become common through Europe.

Among the most ancient which survive is St. Patrick's bell, which was given to the Church of St. Armagh by St. Columba, and is now preserved in a case richly gemmed. A fine example of the Celtic bells, it is quadrangular in form, six inches high, five inches by four at the mouth, diminishing in size as it goes upwards, and with a loop at the top for the hand.

In this connection it may be noted that, while Celtic bells were treasured as relics jealously down to the Reformation, from that date they ceased to be objects of veneration, and sometimes lay for centuries in odd corners of graveyards, utterly neglected. It is said that many were sold for old metal or carried off by tinkers. Remarkable stories of how they have been recovered are told. The approach of the Norsemen probably led to the hasty burial of some which have turned up.

When the railway was being made at Banchory a workman unearthed a fine specimen. Another was found wedged between the walls and the eaves of a cathedral in Clonfrom. Its handle is gone, the name of the saint to whom it was dedicated is blurred, but the bell is still in good condition.

The bells hung in steeples and church towers were for a long time of small size. Not until the fifteenth century did they attain large dimensions. The biggest bell in the world is the Great Bell, or "Monarch," of Moscow. Then there are the Great Bell at Pekin, "Great Peter" of York, and "Big Ben" and "Great Paul" of London. There are eighth century records of the consecration of bells, which describe how each was given a sponsor, was washed with salt and water, was touched with oil, was covered with a white garment of chrism, then was addressed with "God be with you" and other prayers to the effect that it might receive power to scare away ghosts and evil spirits and quell storms. Finally the bell was blessed and christened with the name of a saint, a Pope, the donor, or some worldly authority perhaps. In parts of France to this day bells are rung to ward off lightning, and the custom of ringing bells to avert a thunderstorm seems to be of considerable antiquity in England.

The accounts of many old English churches have entries of bread, cheese, and beer provided for the ringers on such occasions. The object appears to have always been to dissipate the thunder and to summon people to pray for the preservation of the parish. It is said that as recently as in 1852 the Bishop of Malta ordered all the church bells on the island to be rung for the purpose of quelling a violent gale.

The ancient inscriptions engraven on bells frequently referred to the mysterious powers they were supposed to possess to disperse storms, extinguish fires, and scatter hostile invaders. Celtic bells have had upon them inscriptions such as these:—"I call the living, I mourn the dead, I break the lightning." "I do honour to feasts, I proclaim peace after bloodshed." Such bells were even carried into battle, and they were also used at funerals, being borne in front of the procession to the graveyard.

In mediæval times there were many weird stories about bells. In Madrid it is told that all the bells of the city rang spontaneously when the body of St. Isodore was removed from the graveyard to the church after the saint was canonised. Similar traditions were rife in Italy, and in France it is said that in the thirteenth century a bell in Avignon rang of its own accord for a whole day in jubilation when a certain ecclesiastical interdict had been removed. Coming nearer home, it is related that when Henry VIII. demolished the monasteries of England some of their bells sank the vessels which tried to transport them. In Scotland the bell on the Inchcape Rock was long believed to have spontaneously rung the knell of the pirate who in earlier years had cut it from its time-honoured ledge. And John Knox was thought to have firmly believed that a certain bell would rend itself in twain if any one should rest his hand upon it and take an oath which was false.

KEROSENE USEFUL.

A little kerosene rubbed on to iron cooking utensils occasionally keeps them in good condition.

PETERBORO MEN SHARE ESTATE

George and Abraham Ball Included in Division of Large Estate.

BROOKLYN, N.Y., Nov. 27.—Edward E. Ball, who was a brother of Abraham and George Ball, of 391 Smith Street, Peterborough, Ont., left a net estate of $166,300 when he died on July 15, 1923, according to a transfer tax State appraisal of his property, on file here to-day in the Surrogates' Court.

Under his will, executed on April 17, 1923, over which there was a threatened probate contest by his two Canadian brothers, who charged fraud, undue influence, lack of sound mind and memory, and who demanded trial of the issues raised by them before a jury, this passes over as follows:—

Alice J. Hunter, friend, of No. 430 Sixth Street, $58,971.48, which consists of interest in realty at No. 170 St. John's Place, $12,250; furniture, $1,273; fur coat and cap, $275; jewellery, $2,981; cash, $522.75; cash, on deposit, with Kings County Trust Company, $5,635.31; United States Liberty Loan bonds, $29,000, with dividends, $918, and bond and mortgage, $6,000, with accrued interest, $116.42.

Alice Flanagan, housekeeper, of No. 430 Sixth Street, $10,000.

John Koenig, John Koenig, jun., the former of No. 308 Twelfth Street, the latter of No. 600 Park Place, and Jacob Koenig, of No. 128 St. Marks Place, business partners, each $5,000.

Rose Carroll, of No. 398 Butler Street, Marcella O'Hara, of No. 263 Fifteenth Street, and Theresa A. Keenan, of No. 652 Forty-ninth Street, cashiers in decedent's butcher business, each $2,000.

John Ball, of No. 85 St. Joseph Avenue, Mary A. Murty, of No. 553 Walden Avenue, both of Buffalo, N.Y., William Ball, of No. 267 Ravine Avenue, Rochester, N.Y., Abraham and George Ball, brothers and sister, each $15,265.71.

The gross value of the estate left by Mr. Ball amounted to $184,871.14, and consisted of the following:—

Interest in realty at Nos. 159-61 Fifth Avenue, $67,200; at Nos. 556-558 Fifth avenue, $43,120; at No. 170 St. John's Place, $12,250; cash on hand, $522.75; cash with the Kings County Trust Company, $5,635.31; furniture, $1,273; Hudson seal fur coat, $250; Hudson seal cap, $25; bond and mortgage, $6,000, with accrued interest, $116.42; Liberty Loan bonds, $29,000, with dividends, $918; half interset in butcher shop (being only one-third interest) at No. 553 Fifth Avenue, $9,545.25.

According to the appraisal, the profits of the butcher business at No. 161 Fifth Avenue, during the last five years of the decedent's life, were as follows:—

In 1918, $1,085.17; 1919, $4,939.46; 1920, $3,745.24; 1921, $4,664.44; 1922, $3,038.71; and 1923, $929.89.

In 1918, $6,219.05; 1919, $9,829.38; 1920, $11,972.60; 1921, $11,350.79; 1922, $3,190.46; and 1923, $2,617.08.

The expenses, $18,571.14, as charged up against the gross value of the decedent's estate, are for the funeral, $2,995.40; administration, $1,847.50; attorneys, $6,500; executor's commissions, $2,537.99; and creditors, $4,690.25.

William Danaher, friend, of No. 9 Park Place, without bonds, was named and qualified as the executor of the estate.

VOLCANOES— GOOD AND BAD

We are, indeed, fortunate who do not live under the dark menace of nature. A heavy snowstorm of a flood in spring is unpleasant and frequently full of danger. But it is a visitation common to mankind.

It is a little difficult for us to comprehend the terror, the abject and gripping feeling of panic that is upon the Mexican population which lives at the foot of Popocatapetl—that monstrous volcano.

The successive catastrophes that have issued from the lava fountains of Vesuvious are in danger, it is feared, of repetition by the active Mexican crator. Engineers, caught in the possibility of an eruption in the near future, are at a loss for means to prevent a wholesale wastage of life and property. All that the world can hope is that Popocatapetl will hold to its fiery stream.

Not all volcanoes, happily, are sources of destruction. In Hawaii, the extinct crater of Palolo has just been tapped, and is now supplying the city of Honolulu with a water supply of 2,000,000 gallons a day. The town of Hilo is raising a fund to conquer the active volcano Kilauoa, and utilize the tremendous volume of gasses there for industrail and other purposes.

Those gasses, according to scientists, may be a source not only of practically unlimited motive power, but also contain all the food elements necessary to sustain the human body—carbon, nitrogen, hydrogen and lime.

USE CAUTION.

Do not dry flannels by the fire or use too hot an iron on them.

THE THIEF OF BAGDAD

BY ACHMED ABDULLAH

The pulling, bartering symphony rose ever more shrilly until the Prince, at last awakened by the tumult, sat up, opened his eyes, rubbed them, and dismissed the merchants with a promise to look at their wares some other time. To-day he could not. For he was awaiting Hakim Ali, that descendant of the Archangel Ishrafil and the Kurdish vampire, who had been notified of the Prince's coming by a swift messenger galloping ahead of the caravan.

Hakim Ali, in spite of his—to say the least—peculiar, mixed ancestry, was a good, one hundred per cent Persian patriot and eager to do all in his unhallowed power so as to help his sovereign lord. He came now, crippled, naked but for a beggar's loin cloth, and carried in the arms of two slaves. His was not a very prepossessing exterior. His eyes were yellow flecked with green, his hair was red, and his face brown—unpleasantly so, resembling in color, texture and outlines an over-dried cocoanut. His body was emaciated and ribbed like a bamboo frame, and from his mother, the Kurdish vampire, he had inherited birds' claws that took the place of hands and feet. From her, too, he had inherited the neat, furry little tail, very much like a goat's, that he whisked from side to side to drive away the flies and mosquitoes and that he used to gesture with as mere humans use their hands.

And violently he gestured with his tail when the Prince told him about Zobeid and his overwhelming love for her.

"Bah!" exclaimed Hakim Ali. "Your words are as wind in my ears! Personally, I disapprove of women. The Lord God created them only so as to prevent life from being as charming and agreeable as it might otherwise be."

"You dislike women?"

"I do not care for them. These seven centuries or so have I been a confirmed bachelor."

"But"—objected the Prince—"I love her."

"Did not the Prophet Mohammed—on Him the salute!—say that Allah has not left any calamity more hurtful to man than woman?" came the other's pious quotation.

"Doubtless the Prophet—on Him the blessings!—was right. But still—I love Zobeid. For the sake of one of her precious eyelashes would I commit the many sins. And so I want her to be my wife."

"By my tail! Almost a woman's reason!" exclaimed Hakim Ali impatiently, scratching his nose with his left hind claw—"that is to say, no reason at all!"

But the Prince of India was stubborn in his resolve. He implored the other to help him find the greatest treasure, the most exotic rarity on earth, adding: "There is no price I would not be willing to pay for it, including the revenues of all my kingdom, and all the jewels of my ancient dynasty!"

Hakim Ali laughed.

"My lord," he replied, "you will not have to pay one-millionth part of it."

With his tail he pointed at a bazaar booth where a mass of Persian, Bokharan, and Turkish rugs were heaped up for sale, precious, silken masterfuaceous gypsum shining like mirrors; pieces of the weaver's art, gay with furnace-crimson and cherry-red and lilac subtle as a spirit flame, with serpent-green and emerald-green, with amber like the bloom of grapes and the dead-gold of autumn leaves, with black and silver as a fervid summer night that is flashed by lightnings and with delicate yellow as the seedling of a pea.

"Rugs? Bah!" objected the Prince. "All the world has rugs."

Again Hakim Ali laughed. He pointed to the corner where, carelessly, negligently thrown, was a threadbare, worn, drab-colored square of carpet with a fair fringe all round.

"Look at it!" he said.

"What about it?"

"Buy it. Ten silver pieces will be enough."

"Why should I buy it?"

"Because"—Hakim Ali lowered his voice—"there is nothing rarer in the Seven Worlds of Allah's Creation."

And then, when the transaction had been finished through the Prince's majordomo who, incidentally, bargained the rug dealer down to six pieces of silver and deducted twenty-five per cent from this sum as his personal commission, Hakim Ali whispered into the Prince's ear the secret of the rug:

"Not one of these foolish Badahshani merchants knows its value nor its hidden mystery. You see"—talking in a flat, sibilant purr—"it is the magic carpet of Isfahan—the flying carpet of Isfahan!"

"What?" interrupted the Prince with rising excitement. "You don't mean to say that it is really . . ."

"Yes! I mean it. There is no doubt about it! It is the magic carpet! Stand on it! Sit on it! Squat on it! Then tell the rug where you wish to go! And—swish, swish, swish! like the shooting of dragonflies—it will rise into the air, it will cut through the sky, high up, above the roofs, above the clouds, and carry you wherever you command. Hai—ho—hee!" he laughed vindictively, triumphantly—"for years it has been in this bazaar—for all the world's fools to spit on and wipe their feet on. And none knew! None knew!"

"Thank you, thank you!" exclaimed the Prince, while the servants stowed away the magic carpet in the litter. "Name your reward!"

"Don't thank me—yet!" sneered Hakim Ali. "For, doubtless, you will win Zobeid with this rug."

"That is just why I am thanking you!"

"That is just why you should not thank me! Woman? By Allah! Has it not been said that woman is an inflicter of grief in love as well as in hate? Has it not been said: 'Among the philosophers, the Chinese; among the beasts, the fox; among the birds, the jackdaw; among men, the barber; and in all the world woman—is the most crafty?' Has it not been said, furthermore: 'The beauty of the lark is in its song, good manners are the beauty of an ugly man, forgiveness the beauty of the devotee, and the beauty of woman is virtue—but where shall we find a virtuous woman?' Wah!" he rumbled on. "I have always considered the female of the species a sort of walking, two-legged pest, whose mission on earth, like the mission of mosquitoes"—here he flicked a mosquito away with his tail—"is only to prevent our being too happy! No, no, my lord! Do not thank me!"

He was serene and happy. The end of the first moon—and already he had acquired the treasure wherewith to win the Princess' hand. Why—he thought—he was in no hurry to return to Bagdad; would be able to stop for a couple of months at Kerman. For this was the season when the purple plums and purple melons of Kerman were ripe! Ah!—he smacked his fat lips—a lamb, stuffed with nuts and raisins and roasted whole; a heaped platter of plums; a bottle of golden Khaketian wine; and a melon—perhaps two melons—as dessert! Life was worth the living indeed!

He fell asleep, while the little slave girl, curled at his feet, crooned a lilting, lisping Afghan love song, and while the Mongol Prince's spy, who had watched and listened, rode swiftly toward the North to make report to his master.

On he rode: over the ragged, bitter crests of the mountains, across sudden valleys, flanking the dwarf dikes of the poppy fields, on through the huge, grey flat of the upland desert that was seamed with wide sheets of tufaceous gypsum shining like mirrors; on, ever hurrying, grudging the hours of rest spent in camp and towns by the way; galloping his shaggy pony no matter how rough and steep the road; knowing well that the Mongol Prince, while punishing cruelly those who disobeyed, rewarded liberally those who obeyed and rendered fair service.

And it was an ironic twisting of Fate that, without knowing it, the spy passed within a short distance of the Hill of Eternal Fire, the Hill of Pride, where the Thief of Bagdad was facing his second ordeal.

This Hill—wrongly so called—was an enormous defile, cleft between towering black walls, and in the centre of it a great, seething, rock-lined caldron of flames, perhaps three miles across, fed by the pride of unjust men and fallen Angels.

Hard was the road up the defile to the stepping of Ahmed's feet. Stronger and stronger, as he toiled upwards, his lungs beating like a hammer, the heat from the caldron, as he approached it, sucking through the defile as through a chimney and scorching his face, grew the temptation to return, to give up this pilgrimage. Was Zobeid, his love for her and her love for him, worth this terrible suffering of his flesh and his soul? Was anything under heaven worth it?

"Return, O fool! Return!" whispered his brain. "Go back to Bagdad! There is a life of ease and plenty waiting for you in bazaar and marketplace! Why strive for the unobtainable?"

But while his brain reasoned, his soul prayed; mechanically at first; then ardently, fervently; until—dimly, gradually—he began to comprehend that Allah was something far greater, more immeasurable, more vast, both more merciless and more kindly, than hitherto he had been able to grasp. Something there was in Allah's will, he knew, he felt, which gave unity and coherence and reason to all, even to sufferings and martyrdom, and he might some day lay hold of this something, the Infinite, through his faith, and thus vaguely, but truly and indeed see the shining face of God.

Reasoned his brain:

"Return, O fool!"

Said his soul:

"Keep on your road! For everything is of God—you yourself, your weakness, your strength, your love for Zobeid, your faith, your doubts!"

So with the understanding of God's eternal omnipotence, humility came to the Thief of Bagdad while step by step as he neared the seething caldron and while his flesh suffered ever more intensely with the enormous, cruel, splintering heat, the temptation to return, to give up his pilgrimage, vanished and thinned and disappeared completely; was only a drab memory when at last he reached the caldron—and looked down—and shuddered.

Around the rim of the saldron the flames licked up like speckled, blotched luminous reptiles; like cobras with dripping lips, stained crimson and scarlet by the blood of sacrifice; coiling about the souls of the unjust men and the fallen Angels with the destroying heat of their flaming bodies, cleansing the sin-scabbed spirits as in a crucible; while smoke, blue, black, grey—the sins of these souls released from the pure, spiritual matter—rolled on and up in gloomy, grotesque, sinister garlands. Farther toward the centre of the caldron the flames peaked a thousand feet high in a supreme travail and martyrdom, melting the rocks here and there, bursting them asunder, so that they tumbled down, loud-booming, like the black crack of doom. And still the blaze soared up, spread up, twigled up, forked up; red-hearted, blue-tipped, yellow grayed; and ever and anon, when the black-winged Angel of Death seized another soul of pride and injus into the caldron, there would come immense shrieking and yelling, a the flames would shoot higher—ever higher.

The Blessed looked. He stared. How might he cross? There seemed no way, except to swim across these flames as across a river. And again temptation touched him. He would return. He was too weak to face his ordeal.

Curiously, with the thought, with the very realization of his weakness, something strengthened his resolve and, by the same token, steeled his will power. For, as he admitted his weakness, his pride died; as his pride died, his humility increased; as his humility increased, his belief in Allah's mercy grew; and as his belief grew, he saw dimly at first, then more and more clearly, rocks rising out of the ocean of fire—rocks that seemed untouched by the seething, hissing whirlpool of flame—"the Rocks of Faith," the ancient Arab chronicle calls them. The first rock was only a couple of feet from the rim. Ahmed measured the distance with his eyes. Yes, he said to himself, by vaulting high and straight he might reach it. Again he stared into the flaming sea. Beyond the first, he saw a second rock like a small, flat-topped island; beyond the second, a third—a fourth, a fifth—a whole chain of them; and at the opposite side of the caldron he saw, shimmering like a holy silver grail through the crimson curtain of fire, a limpid stream of water that rippled from a basalt wall—"the Stream of God's Charity," according to the ancient manuscript that has brought down to us the tale of the Thief of Bagdad.

He longed for the coolness of this stream. The longing grew. He made up his mind. He would risk the journey across the precarious bridge of rocks. He whispered a short, fervent prayer:

"El-hamdoo 'lillahi Rub el-alamin—unto God be all glory, the Lord of the Worlds!"

Then he leaped away from the rim, with all his lithe, clean young strength; leaped high and straight, with the shadow of fear in his heart. He reached the first rock—trembled a little, then balanced himself, his agile, bare toes gripping the slippery stones.

Again he mumbled a prayer:

"Yah abeyd Ullah, la ilah ill' Ullah, wahed Ullah—verily I declare that there is no God but the Lord God—one the Lord God is!"

Again he leaped while the tossing flames beneath him licked up with their cruel red tongues—missing him—just missing him. So he reached the third rock, the fourth, the fifth, and with every keen, lean, straight jump his confidence became stronger until at last he found himself at the opposite side of the caldron, where he bathed his face and hands and soul in the cool, healing water from "the Stream of God's Charity."

Yet, grateful, humbled, having shed his pride as if it were a soiled turban cloth, he was still the old Ahmed, merry and gay, with ever a joke on his lips, a jest ever in his heart, and looking back at the seething, hissing maelstrom of fire, he said:

"If the Prince of Persia had to vault across this caldron—by my teeth and my honor!—his fat body would have melted and would have reeked to heaven like a mountain of grease sizzling in a gigantic skillet. If the Prince of the Mongols had attempted it—hayah!—his proud and haughty soul would have fed these flames so that they would have flared up, high up to the Seventh Hall of the Blessed where the Prophet Mohammed—on Him the salute!—sits on his seven-stepped throne of glory. And I doubt that the Indian Prince's divine ancestors would have helped him much. Decidedly, it pays to be a thief—at least, a reformed thief!"

Laughing gayly, he left the defile of the Hill of Eternal Fire, the Hill of Pride, and walked along steadily until at the beginning of the third moon he fell in with a wise hermit—a hermit, indeed, so wise that, alone in that part of the world, perhaps in all Asia, he knew all about the defects of a horse, the reasoning of a cat, the thundering of clouds, a woman's deeds, and a man's future fortunes.

He told Ahmed that he was on the right road, but that he would first have to cross the Valley of the Monsters and the Garden of the Enchanted Trees.

"As to the latter," said the hermit, "it is your wit and cleverness that will help you; and, as to the former, your strength, your pluck, your sword."

Ahmed smiled.

"It is a good thing," he replied, "that I lost my pride in crossing the Hill of Eternal Fire. Otherwise I might say that, as to wit and cleverness, the bazaars have sharpened my brain to needle point, while as to strength and pluck—by Allah and by Allah—modesty stuffs my mouth from telling you the truth!"

Then he was serious once more. For it seemed to him as though from very far away, spanning the distance, he could hear the voice of Zobeid urging him on, telling him:

"I love you, Ahmed! I trust you—utterly! I shall wait for you!"

The voice came to him with an all-pervading sense of sweetness and peace. It came with a wafting of jasmine and marigold perfume, a soft tinkling of far-away silver bells, and the muffled sob of a one-stringed guitar. And, indeed, at that very moment, up in the tower room of the harem, Zobeid was thinking of the Thief of Bagdad. She looked from the window, out toward the sweep of the twilight, the bunched, squat mass of Bagdad was reddening to russet, then chilling to a flat, silvery grey.

"Send back to me my lover, O Allah!" the prayer rose to her lips. "Dear Allah! send him back to me! For I love him—I love him so . . ."

GET ACQUAINTED WITH W.O.C.

(DAVENPORT, IOWA—484 METERS)

By WILLIAM J. FAGAN.

Of all the broadcasting stations controlled by American seats of learning, WOC can boast of ownership by possibly the most unusual educational institution, the Palmer School of Chiropractic. And, naturally, not being under the control of a conventional university, more money can be appropriated for the station's operation than a college ordinarily could, for WOC is the best advertisement for Palmer that could ever be devised.

WOC possesses a quite powerful transmitter and has some remarkable distance records. Its programmes consist most entirely of broadcasts from the studio, with very little remote control work, although WOC has on several occasions joined the national hook-up in broadcasting outstanding political events, election returns, etc., thereby demonstrating its willingness to expend funds to bring to its listeners features of possible importance.

A studio orchestra is maintained by WOC for the playing of both dance and concert music and there is a weekly organ recital from the residence of Dr. Palmer, head of the school which bears his name. The balance of the "set" periods on the programmes consist of educational and medical lectures at stated periods each day; and a Sandman" story each evening for the children.

Like many of the mid-western stations, such as WOAW, for instance, WOC has been quick to grasp the value of community programmes, and organizations of performers from Iowa and Illinois cities have come to Davenport for the purpose of displaying their talents before the microphone.

The programmes of WOC have been of fairly good quality and have maintained a rather high average. There has been no attempt at anything beyond the abilities of the performers or the limitations of the station itself.

WOC is strictly a "sectional" station. Its programmes are of such a nature that it cannot be expected that far distant listeners will endeavor to tune in for any other purpose than to mark WOC in the long distance log book. In other words, there has been nothing of great importance, save on but few occasions, which would serve to bring WOC to the notice of listeners throughout the country.

Its broadcasts are undoubtedly good, substantial fare for the fans locally and in the section easily reached by its waves. This does not imply that WOC is commonplace. It merely means that it is not particularly distinguished. Then, too, WOC is serving a private interest, more or less, and it is therefore deprived of the privilege of rendering disinterested service. This is an unfortunate fact about numtrous broadcasting stations—too many of them have "axes to grind."

St. Thomas, Ont.—Photographs of eight of the seventeen former ministers of Central Methodist Church, now celebrating its jubilee, have been secured. St. Paul's Methodist Church, Aylmer, has beaten this record handily by collecting photegraphs of every one of its sixteen former pastors.

VOICES FROM THE PAST

A chain of industrial museums will be established in this country by a big fund provided in the will of Henry R. Towne. He said his purpose was to show the process of production on which our civilization rests, also the evolution of inventions and industry.

There are only four other important museums of this sort in the world. They are in Paris, Munich, London and Vienna.

A visit of a Towne industrial museum will be highly educational. And it will start a lot of thought. For one thing, it will make us appreciate the conveniences we take for granted and consider commonplace.

The present generation does not realize how fortunate it is. Ask a white-haired old woman who can recall when water was carried in pails instead of through pipes, when there were no gas or electric stoves, and kindling had to be chopped to start a fire.

The thermostat, which automatically regulates the temperature of an office, store, factory or home is magical. So are electric irons, telephone, radio, street cars, movies.

There rises in memory of many a reader the day when bath-tubs were scarce, when life in general was a succession of discomforts from the modern viewpoint.

All these would be shown in industrial museums.

We look at our homes, furniture, autos, fine roads. We thrill with pride and vanity in the belief that all these have been created by our efforts.

"I worked to earn the money, saved up to buy it."

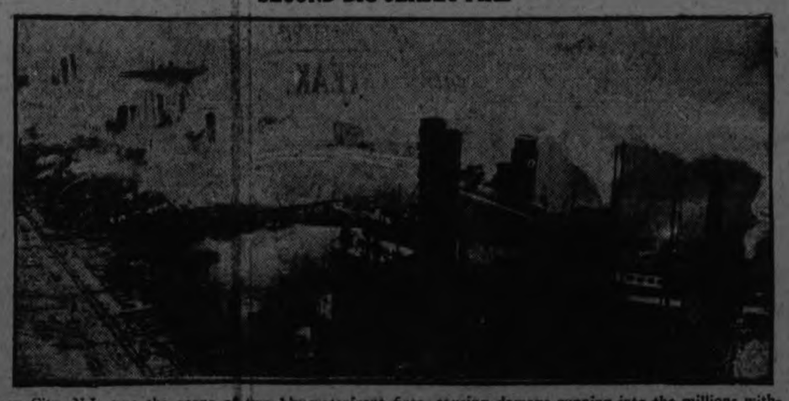
Ah, but nine-tenths of these things we use are really legacies from the past. They were made possible by the toil, hardship and courageous struggles of the millions who long since went to the grave. A rich heritage of progress has been handed down to us—and an even richer heritage contributed by men still living or but a few years deceased.

In the last generation we have progressed industrially and scientifically more than the people of 100 generations before. Art does not tell the story. Nor does history, which is mainly the records of wars. Industrial museums could. And they probably will, thanks to the vision of the late Henry R. Towne.

A little kerosene added to enamel will make it easier to apply. Stir in, very thoroughly, about one tablespoonful to the gallon enamel.—Popular Mechanics.

There's a complete electric railway, 8,100 feet underground, at the bottom of the Calumet and Hecla copper mine in Michigan.

SECOND BIG JERSEY FIRE



Jersey City, N.J., was the scene of two big waterfront fires, causing damage running into the millions within 72 hours. Fireboats are shown here attacking the flames which de stroyed two Erie Railroad piers that were filled with merchandise. Lighters and cars also were consumed and two firemen were injured.

ONE DRINK OUT OF EACH 100 IS SAFE

Large Amount of Spurious Booze is Mostly Poisonous.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28 (United Press).—Of one hundred drinks taken by those who "scoff" at the prohibition laws but one is genuine, according to Federal Prohibition Commissioner Roy A. Haynes.

"Less than one per cent of the more than 7,000,000 gallons of illicit liquors seized by federal agents during the last year was genuine," Haynes said. "We have examined over 90,000 samples in the chemical laboratories of the Internal Revenue Bureau."

The Commissioner believes the samples are fairly representative of the kind of liquor now on the market because they represent seizures from every state. Most of the rests were made in the Washington laboratory, but analyses made in the branch laboratories in Buffalo, Chicago, Columbus, Little Rock, Minneapolis, New York, Philadelphia, Providence and San Francisco showed the same results.

Largely Poisonous.

"This large percentage of spurious booze, most of which is actually poisonous," Haynes said, "is due to the intensive activities of federal agents during the last year in breaking up the operation of 'moonshiners,' and bootleggers who concoct their own from synthetic compounds and redistilled denatured alcohol.

"We have kept so constantly after them that they are unable to maintain stills in one place long enough to produce a drinkable product. In their anxiety to sell before they are discovered and their equipment seized, they put the stuff on the market in its raw state, which is most deleterious to the consumer."

Haynes pointed out that more than 160,000 stills and parts of stills were confiscated by agents last year, as well as over 5,000 automobiles used for illegal transportation of liquor.

The breaking up of "moonshining" operations and the decrease in diversion of industrial alcohol to bootleg channels has forced the bootlegger to secure his supply from the smuggler, Haynes said, but with the Coast Guard rapidly getting this situation in control, the illicit supply is growing less each day.

3,000 SCOTS FAMILIES

There is quite a peau of exultation over the pact, said to be come to between the Mother Country and Canada The pact is for the transference, in the early spring, of over 3,000 families from Scotland to Canada. Puir auld Scotland! Or rather puir all-left-behinds with the taxes and rates. These drafts out of the country are making the burden all the heavier on those who are left. Does it not seem unfair that people are allowed to leave their obligations, and thus saddle their share on those who remain? We do not look upon these departures in this way, though it is the sane way. Rather do we say, "More room for others," and think that the situation will be improved, while, according to the finest reasonings, every person who leaves our land is a lost asset.

Welcome to Toyland

FORWARDED TO HALL'S FOR YOUR SELECTION

A CAR LOAD OF TOYS

Everything to gladden the hearts of the boys and girls of Peterborough and whole surrounding country has been gathered in this big Toy Department. There are Dolls of every description—all sizes, for the tiny tot to her bigger sister—Dressed Dolls and Dolls to be dressed at home, Speaking Dolls, Sleeping Dolls; in fact, every conceivable kind of Doll. New Toys—practical, durable Toys. Everything in dependable Toys.

This will be undoubtedly Santa Claus' headquarters for Peterborough district.

The Real SANTA CLAUS Comes To HALL'S Saturday

Santa comes down from the North and owing to the fact that there's no snow south of the Kawartha Lakes, he will take the train at Lakefield, arriving at Canadian National depot at 10 o'clock, and proceeding immediately to Hall's Toyland Department.

Come at 10 o'clock and meet Santa. He'll be in the department from 10 to 12 and will be glad to meet personally all the kiddies of the city. Can't say how long he can stay with us, but he'll be here sure from 10 to 12 o'clock.

THE ART AND STUDY CLUB

The fourth meeting of the Art Study Club, in connection with the Women's Art Association, was held on Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. H. Morphet, Hunter street, with a good attendance of the members. An interesting paper on "Titian", was read by Mrs. D. Carmichael.

Italian art, rather than being a national art, is largely regional. Thus, Florentine and Venetian papers are always spoken of when Italian art is mentioned. Titian was one of the outstanding exponents of the art of Venice, where most of his life was spent, and where he did a great deal of work, both for private interests and for ecclesiastical edifices. The number of his paintings testifies to his industry, and to the last of his life, his work was of very high order.

A characteristic of his painting was the cultivation of the beauties of landscape as a separate and individual object of study and the development of the art of portraiture with the interpretation of the facts of social life which finally resulted in genre painting may be traced to the example of the Venetian painters.

Titians outstanding contribution to the painter's art was his pre-eminence in colour. Colour was the great was the great characteristic of all Venetian artists, and this characteristic has been attributed variously to the wonderful range of colour ever present in the sky and water landscapes of Venice itself and also to the fact that the art of stained-glass work preceded that of painting.

The Venetian school was placed above the Florentine school of art in rank, not that it rivalled it in intellect or sentiment, but because of its richness and splendor. Tintoretto, Veronese and Tipola were among the greatest of the Italian painters. Of Titian's work, "The Assumption" is probably ranked as his best, although little of the original, repatched and re-touched as it has been, remains intact. Others of his works are "Sacred and Profane Love", "The Tribute Money", "The Madonna of the Roses", "The Man with the Glove", and several paintings of Charles the Fifth and Philip the Second.

The next meeting of the Art Study Club will be held on Tuesday, December 9th, at the home of Miss Beatty, Weller street when Mrs. H. Morphet will give a paper on "Greek Sculpture". As this is the only meeting to be devoted to the study of sculpture, it should be of general interest to the members.

BRITAIN'S FLEET ANNUAL CRUISE

Indulge in All Sorts of Exercises—How Jack Enjoys It.

GOOD CLIMATE.

A sailor is a lucky man. If you ask him he will generally swear he is everything excepting that, but what other employer in the world is so careful of his employees' health that he takes him abroad for the winter months?

The Admiralty does this as a matter of course, so Jack takes it all for granted, but generally swears a bit, as most Jacks prefer "Pompey" to the Mediterranean Sea.

The weather around this island of ours in the winter time isn't all that could be desired, and as the fleet must exercise, so then it must steam to a sunnier part of the world, and the coast of Spain—the south coast—is ideal from the weather point of view.

Soon after Christmas leave is over the fleet takes in stores, and, accompanied by submarines and destroyers and all sorts of "mother ships," steams out of harbor and up the Channel.

All sorts of exercises are done on the way to Gibraltar—sham battles, practice attacks, &c.—providing the weather is good, and when the coast of Spain is reached the fleet splits up into flotillas and squadrons, each part of the fleet visiting a different port. One part might go right on to Gibraltar, another to Malta, while another might visit that ancient port of Raleigh's time—Cadiz.

Generally a stay of four or five days is allowed at each port of call, and plenty of leave is given to the sailors to enable them to visit the town, and on one day perhaps the Spaniards may be invited aboard the various boats to see for themselves the force of the British Navy.

Spain is a queer sort of place, and Jack is a jolly individual, and wines are as cheap as lemonade in this country, so leave for the day generally finishes about 7.30 or 8 o'clock, as this ensures Jack being aboard before the night life of Spain begins. Spanish theatres generally open at 10 p.m., and dances begin then, and so consequently the Spaniard doesn't trouble to leave his home much before eight or nine o'clock at night.

If the port of call happens to be a large place of any importance, occasionally the ships are received in great style, and the crews are welcomed officially by the town officials, and invitations are given out for balls and dinners and concerts, &c.; but Spaniards on the whole are a lazy nation, and don't exert themselves if they can help it.

Ships calling at Barcelona generally are treated very well, and this town, or city, is a happy four or five days' time for any battleship.

Gibraltar is generally Jack's curio-collecting depot, and after pay day or on pay night Gibraltar's sole street is packed from top to bottom with jolly Jacks buying silks, cigars, ivory articles, and canaries or parrots.

Gibraltar is a quaint little place, but its resources for amusing a large fleet are not great, and a day spent there is quite enough.

Generally after the fleet has been out from England about four or five weeks a certain place in the islands of Majorca is chosen as a meeting place for all the parts of the fleet, and two or three days are given over to fleet exercises, and perhaps gunnery practice and torpedo practice.

Then more towns are visited, and the fleet steams home again, ready to give Easter leave to all hands.

Now is this not an enviable life? I've tried it, and found is to be A1, except when the weather was bad, and then after a bad spell of Mediterranean blue waves I've felt that we were, after all, entitled to a few days of rest in harbor.

It might not be "seeing the world in comfort," but, at least, it is seeing the world "on the cheap."

Henry arrived at breakfast in a cross frame of mind. He informed his wife that Tommy had taken some change from his pocket. "It isn't fair to accuse Tommy," his wife remonstrated. "Henry, you might as well say I took it." "No, dear" the brute answered. "It wasn't all taken, you know."

ONLY TWO SURVIVE.

Freight Steamer and Crew Went Down In English Channel.

LONDON, Nov. 27. — (Canadian Press).—During a furious gale in the English Channel to-day, the freight steamer Hartley, of 2,000 tons, bound for Ghent, sank off Portland with all hands, except two, who were rescued by the Liverpool steamer Machson, says a despatch to Lloyd's Shipping Agency from Weymouth.

The Old Way

COMPLETE OUTFIT IS MUCH HANDIER

The complete outfit makes the washing so much easier and handier. The complete outfit includes the tub bench, for instance, to hold the rinse and bluing tubs. The tub bench is so much more convenient than an old box or stool. It holds two tubs side by side, moves on large wheels and can be folded up and put away. The complete outfit includes a tub, or, if you wish, two tubs. The two tubs are very necessary for the rinse and bluing water. Then there is the washing machine drainer, to fill up the washer and tubs and empty them out again—and the clothes basket. Everyone should have a clothes basket.

Guaranteed Washers by a Reliable Concern

The 1900 Washers are made by Beatty Bros, Limited, the largest and oldest washer concern in the British Empire, celebrating their 50th anniversary this year. There are more 1900 Washers in use than all other makes combined.

A PRESBYTERIAN MINISTER SLAMS DODGER CHARGES

Accusations That Methodism is Apostasy Are False, Quotations Fabricated, Says Rev. Dr. Christie—Denies Martin's Book in Text.

STATEMENT ABOUT DR. JACKSON UNTRUE?

TORONTO, Nov. 28.—Declaring that "nothing more scurrilous has ever been uttered in the English language regarding a Christian church, Dr. Wallace Christie, minister of s Rhodes Avenue Presbyterian Church, has issued an answer to the pamphlet against the "Apostate Methodist Church." This pamphlet was recently issued and given wide circulation in Presbyterian Church circles to influence the vote on church union.

Rev. Dr. Christie answers five accusations of the pamphlet in his statement, which is as follows:—

D. Christie's Answer.

Answer to Pamphlet against the "Apostate Methodist Church."

The author of this pamphlet has, at the last moment, sought to create a panic. "The Ark is in danger," he cried. Hitherto anti-unionists have professed high regard in respect to the Methodist Church, have advocated the policy of co-operation, have handed over thousands of Presbyterian members to the exclusive charge of Methodist ministers. Now they have issued a pamphlet declaring "The Methodist Church is an apostate church, that it no longer believes in the atoning death of Christ, or the inspiration of the scriptures or the infallibility of Christ. The Methodist Church of to-day has no longer any message for a sin-burdened world." Nothing more scurrilous has ever been uttered in the English language concerning a Christian church.

The leaflet offers certain alleged quotations from the Christian Guardian, tracts issued by the authority of the general conference, and other less official papers. These "quotations" are so skilfully edited and arranged that they are either true or deliberate falsifications. There is no possible excuse based on mistake or misunderstanding. Are they true copies or are they fabrications? The answer is, that, taken as a whole, they are deliberate falsifications. We select for comparison with the original, which will enable the reader to test the case, certain specimens from the pamphlet.

Cities Quotation as Fabrication.

Accusation I.: "In the Christian Guardian of January 23, 1922, the editor writes: 'We cannot possibly accept the supernatural and plenary authority of the Holy Scriptures, the substitutionary atonement, and the second coming of Christ.' (Quotation page 1, of anti-union pamphlet.) No such statement was ever made by the editor. He was challenged to accept certain formulas which pre-millennialists have sought to substitute for the historic official creeds of the church, and he replied: "We would unhesitatingly say that as pre-millennialists generally interpret them, there are at least three items in the above creed which we would not accept." The three items are those specified. It was a rejection, not of the doctrine, but of the pre-millennialist interpretation of them. The accusation is false, and the quotation cited is a fabrication.

Denies Book Approved.

Accusation II.: Referring to the issue of February 13th, 1924, in which the literary editor gave an account of a book by Dr. Hartt, entitled "The Man Himself," the leaflet states, "The editor quotes with approval from the book which he is reviewing, 'Legend has sought to glorify him (Jesus) by saying that he could walk on the sea, fast forty days, still the tempest, etc.'". This also is a total falsehood. Not one word of approval was given with the citation from the book. The editor simply narrated the contents of the book. But why did the writer of the leaflet suppress the very definite and severe criticism of this book which the Guardian did print. Here is what it said in a full page article: "It is not easy to substitute for the age-long conviction of the Ultimate Divinity found in Jesus, the slim account offered in 'The Man Himself.' This regrettable attitude appears most strikingly in the cheap disposal of the two great articles of the ancient creed: Born of the Virgin Mary . . . the third day he rose again from the dead." What are we to think of a writer who suppresses this deliberate censure of a book and puts in its place the invented approval seen in the mere announcement of its contents?

Accusation III.: Victoria College is assailed because "we find that practically the whole teaching staff belong to the modernist school, who no longer believe in the inspiration of the bible; and the text-books are such as are calculated to destroy the faith of the students."

In support of this, quotations are made from High Martin's book, "The Meaning of the Old Testament," said to be the text-book in use in Victoria College.

Dean Says Book Is Not Text.

Now, this is a clever maze of false statements.

(a) The Dean of the Faculty asserts that the book in question is not a text-book in Victoria College.

(b) The writer of the book is not a Methodist, but a distinguished minister of the Scottish Presbyterian Church, and the book is published by the Student Christian movement to enlist students in the service of Christ.

(c) The quotation cited is cut off at the critical point.

(d) The statement that the teachers in Victoria do not believe in the inspiration of the Bible is a plain falsehood. There is not one of the theological faculty who is not a devout Christian and who does not devote his life to the exposition of the inspired word. They will stand the test of scholarship and devotion before any properly constituted tribunal.

(e) The statement about the influence of Victoria is disproved by the fact that the ex-president of the Canadian Student Movement has singled out the graduates of that college now in the mission fields of China for special praise, and the quality of the missionaries whom the college continues to produce refutes the slander.

Accusation IV.: Referring to a tract issued by the Methodist Board of Evangelism and Social Service to set forth the traditional Methodist teaching regarding the pre-millennial programme, the leaflet says:

Says Statement Not In Tract.

"While admitting that this (Second Coming) was taught by Christ and His apostles, it asserts that they were mistaken."

No such statement appears in the whole tract. Only the pre-millennial interpretation is set aside as mistaken. The references in the pamphlet to John, Daniel, Psalm 110, and Revelation, are also fabrications.

Accusation V.: Referring to a book by the Rev. George Jackson, D.D., of Didsbury College, England, the leaflet says: "The statements in this book were considered at a Methodist conference and no action was taken, because a majority found no fault with the book." Here is the most hopeless tangle of wrong statements.

(a) Dr. Jackson was never a minister of the Canadian Methodist Church, but was simply here on an independent arrangement. He was not in any way responsible to the Methodist Church, and so his orthodoxy could not be considered by any Canadian conference.

(b) The reason that "no action was taken" (if true), was not that the majority found no fault, but that they had nothing to do with the book or its author.

(c) It is not true that no action was taken; for on the only matter before the conference important action was taken—strict discipline was provided for college professors and new methods of enforcing the discipline were enacted.

Says Charge Against Jackson Untrue.

But even though Dr. Jackson has nothing to do with the Methodist Church, the writer of the leaflet has to hunt him thus:

"In July, this year, in the Eaton Memorial Methodist Church, Dr. Jackson denied the personality of the Holy Spirit."

The statement is absolutely untrue. Dr. Jackson was answering the question, "What do we understand by the Holy Spirit?" He stated clearly that he was not going to touch on the theological problems of the trinity; but said that "For practical purposes we may say that by the holy spirit we understand the spiritual presence of Christ."

On such a web of falsehood and gross misrepresentation this leaflet tells a Presbyterian church that the Methodist church is "An apostate church" and denies the great articles of the faith. To what depths have the opponents of union fallen when they will resort to such methods.

Is Anti Office Party to This.

Most significant is the statement in the leaflet that readers are referred for substantiation of its statements to the head office of the Presbyterian Church Association. This can only suggest that the head office is to some extent a party to this slander on a great communion. It would, therefore, appear that the Presbyterian Church Association is not only responsible for the pamphlet, but that they are now repudiating the right of the Methodist Church to be called what they have so often called them—"a sister church," and "a great communion."

H. T. L. Morgan, Arrested in Camden as Bigamist, Cites Duality of Natures.

BROTHER DIED IN WAR

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—Twin personality was the astonishing defence offered last night by H. T. L. Morgan when arrested in Camden, N.J., on a charge of bigamy. The prisoner, denying the accusation, asserted that he had assumed the duties and responsibilities of a husband to the wife of his twin brother, who was killed in France.

Morgan declared that he had played the part so well that the widow never guessed that her real husband was dead, and her two children accepted him unquestioningly as their father. He insisted that he had done this wholly out of affection for the dead man, and in order that the news of his death might not shock his family.

But Mrs. Morgan asserted that the prisoner is the man she married and to whom she bore the children. She maintained, weeping:

"This is not H. T. L. Morgan, my husband's brother. It is John Morgan, my real husband. There is no doubt about it. Do you think a man's own wife and children could be deceived as to his identity?"

Another Claims Him.

Morgan, however, insisted that so close was the resemblance between the twins, not only in appearance but in minutest mannerisms and even in ways of thinking, that no one could have told them apart if they did not desire it.

The prisoner is forty-two years old and lives part of the time at least in Audubon, near Camden, with Mrs. Morgan, who was Frances K. McDonald, an exceptionally attractive young woman. He was arrested on complaint of another woman, who claimed to be his second "wife."

This woman described herself as Mrs. Robert J. Crofton, of Woodcrest. She was emphatic in her identification of Morgan as her husband, saying, even as Mrs. Morgan had said:

"This is my husband. There is no doubt about it. Do you think a man's own wife could be deceived about his identity?"

Standing beside Mrs. Morgan, and weeping with her, Mrs. Crofton, who is of about the same age and equally comely, continued:

"We were married in July, in Woodcrest, my home. He gave his name as Robert J. Crofton to me, and we were wed under that name. Then we moved to Philadelphia. We were happy for a while and then I became suspicious because he spent only five days each week with me.

"He said he was visiting his brother's family in Philadelphia on the other two days. At first I believed him, but later I decided to investigate."

The prisoner insisted that both did him an injustice, and that he had been a victim of his own chivalrous nature. Police Judge White held him in $2,000 bail for a hearing.

COBOURG INQUEST ADJOURNED PENDING REPORT OF ANALYSIS

Doctors State that Death of Donald Yorke Was Due to Heart Failure, Unless Analysis of Stomach Discloses Some Other Cause.

COBOURG, Nov. 28.—The inquest into the death of the late Donald M. Yorke was resumed here last evening, after an adjournment of two weeks. So great is the interest locally that at seven o'clock the courtroom was filled to overflowing.

Mrs. D. W. Coyle was the first witness called, and stated that on the night of Tuesday, November 4, Ernest Bowen met Mrs. H. Delaney and witness and told them about Yorke's death. Mrs. Delaney and witness went to the Yorke home, and, while there, Bowen told how they had gone to MacDonald's house and had drunk poisoned wine which they had procured there, and that Bowen had left a bottle of whisky in Yorke's garden, and while she was there had brought the bottle into the house and gave it to Miss Yorke, sister of the deceased.

Mrs. H. Delaney was next called to the stand, and corroborated Mrs. Coyle's evidence.

Mr. W. Shearer, who was with Yorke on the death trip, was called to give evidence. He stated that he had known Yorke for some years, and was also a frequent visitor to MacDonald's house on Bell Lane, and had seen Yorke there quite frequently.

On Saturday night, witness was at MacDonald's house about midnight, when Yorke arrived there under the influence of liquor, and Yorke had a bottle of whisky with him. Yorke's face was scratched, apparently from a fall while coming to MacDonald's house.

Witness left about one o'clock Sunday morning, and did not see Yorke again until Sunday afternoon at about 4.30 p.m., at MacDonald's house. Deceased had spent the night at MacDonald's house and was sobered up. They had a few drinks and all went for a drive, returning about 5 p.m., and after supper they went for a drive to Colborne, and at 10 p.m. took Yorke home. Deceased was sober when he went home Sunday night.

Mr. Shearer did not see Yorke again until Tuesday evening about seven o'clock. MacDonald phoned him, asking witness to come over as Yorke was there and was in bad shape. Drinks were poured from a bottle produced by MacDonald, and Yorke was in such a condition that he could not drink.

Witness suggested to Yorke that he go home, and after much persuasion, they got him into the yard and into MacDonald's car. They drove over to College Street, and, when near Yorke's home, Bowen suggested going down as far as the crossing for a drive to see if it would help Yorke any, and, coming back, the car stalled in front of Rowe's place, about one mile from town.

Bowen, Yorke, and witness walked as far as D'Arcy Street, where Shearer left them. At this time witness thought Yorke was much better.

About eleven o'clock Tuesday night he was at MacDonald's house when Mr. Herrald came and told about Mr. Yorke dropping dead.

W. R. Wilmott, representing Bowen, asked witness why he let Yorke go home with Bowen, who was just a boy. Witness started to answer when Coroner Ferris remarked that this inquest was being held to stop a lot or rumors which have been current for some time, and that needless cross-examination would not be permitted.

W. J. MacDonald, a taxi-driver, was the next witness called. He had known deceased for about two years, and Mr. Yorke came up to his house quite often. He had taken deceased on short trips on various occasions, and that Yorke never bought liquor at his house but brought it when he came.

About three weeks before his death, Yorke had spent the night at his house, and the Saturday night previous to his death Yorke arrived about midnight and was put to bed by witness. On Sunday, MacDonald's wife took the whisky Yorke had brought up on Saturday night and hid it.

Sunday afternoon he took Yorke for a drive and again Sunday night, when Yorke went home Sunday night he was perfectly sober.

Witness did not see deceased again until Tuesday afternoon, when Wood's taxi brought him to witness's house. Yorke wanted witness to take him to Chicago, but he refused.

On Tuesday evening about 6 p.m., MacDonald was called to Yorke's store to get Yorke who told witness to take him up to his house. Deceased had a bottle of wine with him.

The witness brought out the bottle left at his place by Yorke on Sunday, and which he had filled up with water. Yorke was very drunk and after supper they started for Yorke's place when Bowen suggested going out the highway for a drive. Coming back the car stalled and that was the last time witness saw Yorke, and did not know of his death until 11 o'clock that night when Mr. Hessald informed him about it.

Questioned by Mr. Kerr if the money Yorke gave him was for liquor witness said no, but was for the drive to Colborne on Sunday night.

Mrs. MacDonald, wife of previous witness, was next called and corroborated her husband's evidence. Witness stated that Yorke ate a hearty meal and was much better after supper.

Dr. Jamieson was the next witness. He stated that he had performed a post-mortem examination on the body of the deceased, and found no marks of violence and that unless an analysis of the stomach showed poisoning he would say death was due to heart failure.

Doctors Kennedy and Lloyd substantiated Dr. Jamieson's statement, and both were of the opinion that under the circumstances they would pronounce death due to heart failure.

Inspector Miller of the Ontario Provincial Police was the last witness. He stated that the analysis of the stomach which had been sent to Toronto, was not complete and that the analysis of only one bottle of liquor was completed.

Witness stated that the analyst had informed him that the bottle of whiskey was of good quality, but had been diluted with water.

At 10.30 p.m. Coroner Ferris made an adjournment till Friday, December 5, at 8 p.m., when the report of the analyst will be ready.

Mrs. Jas. Bathgate Dead.

Word was received last week of the death of Mrs. James Bathgate (nee Laura Tanner) at the home of her daughter in Hartford, Conn. Mrs. Bathgate, who with her husband, had been for many years a resident of East Lyme, Conn., was visiting her daughter when she died. The deceased was well-known in Peterboro before her marriage, and was a very popular lady both in her old home town and in her home in Connecticut. She is survived by her husband, one daughter, Mrs. Mabel Hall of Hartford, Conn., and one son, George, of New London, Conn., three brothers: E. A. and C. S. Tanner of Lakefield and Fred. W. Tanner of Toronto, and four sisters: Miss Tanner of Lakefield, Mrs. Gillard of Cobourg, Mrs. Wakeley of Agincourt, and Mrs. James Edward of Montreal.

Missionary Pageant.

The Sunbeam Mission Band of the Presbyterian Church gave a missionary pageant on Friday evening last in the school-room of the church. Mrs. (Rev.) P. L. Jull got up the programme and trained the children, who played their parts extremely well. This is found a very successful method of impressing missionary facts in the child minds.

FABLES ON HEALTH

WATCH YOUR WEIGHT.

"Look our for overweight," Mr. Mann's physical adviser warned him, when Mr. Mann was reaching middle age.

It is overweight that figures so prominently in insurance risks when men of middle life are considered.

What foods to avoid, when overweight threatens, is of much importance. While an entire list cannot here be given, the most important are: fats in any form, milk as a drink, sugars, salmon pork, cream, butter, olive oil, pastry and sweets, nuts, mackerel and other fat fishes.

It is far better to depend on such vegetables as lettuce, spinach, tomatoes, fruits of all kinds, carrots and such foods as are low in fuel value and help to reduce the amount of fat-forming elements but still satisfy the cravings of hunger.

I Don't Know How You Did It But You Were Everywhere Says Ald. Maher to Police

Besides the Governor General's compliments upon the good work and splendid appearance of the police force commendation was also forthcoming from many other quarters.

His Worship Mayor Turner was loud in in his praise of the smoothly running machine that had helped so much toward the success of the city's entertainment of the vice-regal party.

Alderman M. J. Maher complimented members of the force highly on the way that they handled the parade. "I don't know how men got there," the constables quote him as saying, "but they were at every corner. It was handled in excellent fashion.

A member of the Governor-General's party remarked that the city police force seems large and was astonished when told that there were only twelve men. Over fifty could have been counted at intersections and stopping places as the procession progressed. The seeming impossibility was achieved through the fast work of the two cars in transporting men from place to place ahead of the procession, some men appearing in a dozen places. They were picked up when the parade had passed one point and rushed ahead of it to another.

AKRON TO BUILD SUPER-DIRIGIBLE

Huge Air Craft Will Be Twice the Size of the ZR-3.

AKRON, O., Nov. 28. — (United Press). — Construction of a super-dirigible, more than twice as large as the ZR-3 or the Shenandoah, will commence here following the arrival from Germany of Dr. Karl Arnstein, noted Zeppelin engineer, to assume his duties as vice-president of the Goodyear Zeppelin Corporation.

Dr. Arnstein landed in New York, Nov. 24, and will proceed to Akron with a technical staff of 12 picked engineers, designers and draftsmen. Work on the new craft will be begun immediately. The ship will be of 5,000,000 cubic foot gas capacity, more than twice the size of the ZR-3 or the Shenandoah.

Dr. Arnstein, under whose direction, nearly 100 Zeppelins were designed and manufactured in the German Zeppelin plant at Friedrichshafen, Germany, will supervise construction of the super-airship. Dr. Arnstein designed and built the ZR-3 at the German factory.

The noted engineer is a graduate of the Technical University of Prague, Czecho-Slovakia. For several years he was a member of the faculty of that university, lecturing on bridge construction, mechanics and mathematics.

Later he was chief engineer for a bridge building concern at Strassburg. Dr. Arnstein designed and constructed the largest reinforced concrete railway bridge in the world on the Arosa Railroad at Laugwicks, Switzerland, and directed the project of laying new foundations for the famous tower of Straussburg.

Dr. Arnstein entered the services of the German Zeppelin Co. at Friedrichshafen in 1915 and designed some of Germany's greatest war dirigibles.

FOR TRIMMING.

One of the most distinctive ways to trim a black velvet gown is to embroider it with roses in their natural color.

THE MODERN INDIAN

No longer is it the universal sentiment of the white man that "the only good Indian is a dead Indian." From one of extermination the Indian policy of the white man's government and the white man himself has changed to one of friendly aid. Instead of warfare there is education, for destruction has been substituted protection. From a condition of naked savagery and of cruel exploitation by unscrupulous white men the American Indian has been raised in less than a century to an appreciation of modern civilization and to relative safety from encroachment on his rights and property.

The Indian has now been brought into constant contact with the white man's civilization. His children are being taught the English language and he himself is learning the white man's trades. The life on the reservation has been preserved but not isolated. The result has been that the red man has been brought into competition with his white skinned brother economically and forced to adjust himself socially.

While the Indians were left to themselves they slowly cast off their native traditions, customs and culture for the white man's. He preserved his art, religious rites and language only on the reservation and in the tribal tepee. But when certain well-meaning individuals and groups sought to hasten his assimilation into the white man's civilization by forbidding to him his ancient traditions and culture he rebelled and with justification. Efforts to abolish their ceremonial dances were made in the spirit of benevolent ignorance of the fact that the Indan's culture is intimately bound up with his religion and that the Indian expresses his religion in his dance. Those who have described the Indian dances as immoral may be astonished to hear that the Indian makes the same charge againts tthe dances of the white man.

The only really serious Indian problem which confronts the nation to-day is that which the voluntarily-interested have constructed for themselves in their missionary zeal. All that the red man wants is to be left to live his own life. All that the white man must do to grant the Indian his wish is to be tolerant. It is the will of the general public that the Indian be left to his pottery, basket-weaving and snake dance for the sake of his own racial salvation, the preservation of his art and culture and of one of the most interesting heritages of the American people.

NATURE'S FAIRY-LIKE PATTERNS

Birds, Snowflakes and Insects the Designers Rich Field.

Countless exquisite fairy-like designs are to be gleaned from a multitude of curious creations of Nature, and artists in textiles, wallpapers and other decorative arts, including the gentlemen who make such pretty and expensive pieces of jewellery for the women, have had their attention just called to this by Dr. H. Janson, the distinguished biologist of Stuttgart, Germany.

So impressive are Dr. Janson's arguments that already snakes, bugs, germs, butterflies, scales, snowflakes, caterpillars' legs, cross sections of hedgehogs, quills, pollen grains of flowers, curious little microscopic sea creatures called radiolarians, and even the heads of house flies, are being used by artists and designers.

Most people would not think the snake beautiful, and, as Dr. Janson points out, its beauty is indeed different from the crystal purity of the snowflake. But a snake in motion, he points out, is beautiful.

In dealing as patterns or designs with the larger creations, such as the snake, the elephant, the crab, the lobster, and so on, this element of motion has to enter to make them effective. It is not necessary when microscopic objects are dealt with.

Next comes the element of symmetry. The bill of the stork and its long, ungainly legs, the beak of the toucan or of the rhinoceros bird, the pouch of the pelican, the claws of a lobster—all these taken singly may seem to us grotesque and exagerated.

And, looked at from that point of view, they are, Professor Janson points out. But repeat these designs, add color to them, and a marvellous effect of symmetry is gained.

Wallpaper and Embroidery Hints.

One of the favorite decorative designs of the ancients was the spiral or whorl. It is pointed out that there is nothing essentially beautiful in the single grouping of these curved lines. But repeat the design seven times, put a border around them, and join the tops of each spiral with their borders by another line, and you have a pure design of classic beauty and regularity.

In the same way, if we take a couple of dozen figures of storks and run them as a freize, the long legs and the long bills cease to be grotesque, as do the hunched-up bodies. We have then a repeated arrangement of pleasing lines.

Jewellers and lacemakers will find their chief inspiration in the snowflake—although the wallpaper and embroidery-makers ought not to miss them. Man has never been able to originate any more beautiful forms than the master craftsman Nature does with freezing cold and particles of H2O.

Professor Wilson A. Bentley, of America, is one of the most enthusiastic snowflake collectors in the world. Professor Bentley has collected 2,000 microphotographs of perfect flakes, none of which are the same.

As Professor Richard Kerr, the English scientist, says:—

"If the radiolarian measured inches instead of the tiniest fraction of inches, we would provide special cases for them, or cabinets in which to display them to the best advantage. They range, as a matter of fact, in diameter from a tenth to a one-hundredth and fiftieth of an inch.

"There is a richness of design in the radiolarian not found in any other form of minute life. They are living creatures, and their wonderful symmetry is enhanced by their extraordinary coloring.

Ancient Mosaics.

The octopus would not be considered by most of us as beautiful. And yet some of the most exquisite of mosaics and frescoes are those in ancient Mycenæ, in Crete, where the conventionalised octopus borders doors and walls.

The cross-section of a sponge under a maghifying glass shows a bewildering and beautiful medley of what are apparently stars, moons, suns, comets, intermingled with five-petalled flowers of myriad shapes and forms. A few minutes' study of one of these cross-sections would give an artist ideas enough to last him a year.

Nothing is more graceful under the same glass than the tongues of the moth and the butterfly. They are slender, exquisitely colored, and in their movements produce a kaleidoscopic shifting of spiral motifs full of inspiration to the fabric designer.

The Medusæ, of jellyfish, cold and clammy as they are, have been lovingly worked over by Nature while in a mood for beauty. Their long and slender tentacles, cunningly fringed and decorated, and their transparent bodies, in which their organs assume curious geometric patterns, are still another source of inspiration.

In the shells there is still another world for the artist. These exist in countless sizes and shapes, but perhaps the most exquisite of all are the almost microscopic ones.

Not the least interesting and important of models for dress fabrics, laces and jewellery, says an American paper, are the scales upon the wings of butterflies and moths. The arrangement of these scales, and the shifting colors, provides a fund of suggestion. In certain butterflies there unusual symmetrical markings upon each of these scales that are as fine as designs upon cut gems.

THE MAJOR POLISHES UP DUGAN & DIXON'S ACT

THE SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA CONCERT

(By Jeannette.)

The Grand Complimentary Concert tendered by the directors and members of the Peterboro Symphony Orchestra, with Professor Rupert Gliddon conducting, and given in the Grand Opera House last night, was a complete success. The floor, the boxes and the balcony were filled almost to capacity, and between seven and eight hundred people were present to hear Peterborough's own Symphony orchestra, and to hear Miss Agnes Logan, lately returned from a year's musical study in England, and Miss Edwina Palmer, the city's premier violiniste.

The programme was artistic and delightful. Of an enjoyable length, it included heavy and light selections, arranged in a manner that left the hearers wishing for more at the conclusion. The orchestra and assisting artists seemed to be at their best last night and every number was accorded instant and enthusiastic applause.

The orchestra, a full aggregation of about fifty members, played beautifully. Much has already been said about the music of this organization, under Professor Gliddon's expert direction, but they certainly surpassed themselves last night. The quality which is a part of their music, a clearly-projected impression that each individual member's heart and soul is in his playing, was as apparent as ever, and another sharply-etched attribute is the instantaneous response to the baton in attack and release. Attention to detail, smooth, full tone, finished ensemble playing that leaves no ragged edges of sound to mar their execution, and an evident love of their art, makes the Symphony orchestra's music notable.

The programme opened with a bright Festival March by the orchestra, followed by the "Zampa" overture, a selection that was very effective, with the prelude of the blaring brasses followed by the response of shivering strings. The clarinet has a good deal of solo work in this number.

A group of three numbers constituted the orchestra's second contribution to the programme, in the favorite novelty, "In a Clock Shop," the whimsical, humorous piece of descriptive music that includes several cymbal and chime effects, and a good deal of pizzicato string work; Rubeinstein's "Melody in F," a soft, melodious interval, and a grand selection from the opera "Aida." This last was a particularly heavy number and was handled with skill. It calls into play the various orchestral resources of strings, wood wind and brass in turn. The broad legato of the viols merges into a final massed burst of melody from the entire orchestra, and there is much solo work for the cornet player.

The final number by the orchestra was the lovely idyll, "In a Monastery Garden," with its recurrent, graceful theme, its bird song introduction and its delicate flute overtone, forming a fitting finale to a splendid programme.

The work of the assisting artists was heartily applauded. Miss Agnes Logan and Miss Edwina Palmer scored individual success with their interpretation of pianoforte and violin music of a difficult order. Both played throughout entirely from memory, in a series of exacting numbers, in the execution of which both appeared absolutely at ease.

Miss Logan's initial selection was one of Chopin's Ballades, No. 3 in A flat. The charm and simplicity of this young artista's playing was as evident as always. Miss Logan gives the impression of being absolutely at home and absorbed in her own graceful music and the lightness and delicacy of her touch and the ease with which she handles technical intricacies was manifested to the full in the dreamy Ballade, now sombre, now gay, and her effective interpretation of the temperamental treatment accorded his music by Chopin, who delights in intricate effects. To repeated applause, Miss Logan played the haunting "Londonderry Air," plaintive, charming, but she refused to do more than bow nicely to the three recalls which followed her second number, "Jeux d'Eau," with its rippling, finely-spun cascades of melody that simulated to perfection the "play of the water."

Miss Edwina Palmer was at her best last night. Her ease of execution and mastery of the technical difficulties of the violin, the king of musical instruments, her pure, ringing tone and facility in bowing were never more apparent. Her programme was lengthy and ambitious, and, played entirely from memory, revealed a high degree of skill. The "Concerto in G minor" was a massive number, entailing in its several movements a versatile treatment that was adequately met by the young artist. The swift tempo of the initial movement changes to a delicate, minor tone in the soft strains of the following section and brightens once more to the dancing measures that close a very effective selection.

Miss Palmer's second contribution was a trio of three charming numbers; a characteristic Slav dance, in G. major difficult, effective, done with double-stopping throughout and an odd halting tempo to the foreign music; a pretty arrangement of "Drink to Me only with Thine Eyes" and a gay, descriptive bit of repeated melody in nautical vein, "Three Poor Mariners." To the reiterated applause that followed this group, Miss Palmer gave a dainty, light encore in swift tempo, the "Polichinelle" of Fritz Kreisler.

Mr. John Crane, president of the Peterboro Symphony Orchestra appeared at the close of the performance and made an appeal for support of the city's premier musical organization. Ranged on the stage beside him were several orchestral instruments including a set of tympanies which Mr. Crane said were examples of what was needed to bring the orchestras supply of intruments up to the necessary number. Referring to the gratuitous nature of last evening's entertainment, and to the donation made by the Opera House management of the sum of twenty-five dollars toward the fund for the purchase of new instruments, Mr. Crane asked all who were favorable to the orchestra and in sympathy with its work in the community, to write their names and amounts to be subscribed on the back of their programmes. Donations may also be left at any time at the Dominion Bank, the J. M. Greene Music Store or the Conservatory of Music.

IMPOSED MAXIMUM FINE.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press).—Declaring that he could not believe the story of W. R. Brown, that he knew nothing about the large still captured in an otherwise empty house on his farm last Saturday, County Magistrate Hawkshaw found the defendant guilty in County Court Wednesday afternoon of having a still in his possession contrary to the Inland Revenue Act, and imposed the maximum fine of $500, or six months in jail.

Toronto, Ont.—When a Toronto newspaper made search for a juvenile portrait of Rev. Peter Bryce, chairman of the Mothers' Pension Board of Ontario, the only photograph discoverable showed him at his mother's knee in his Scottish birthplace. Since that time Peter Bryce has been seen as a touring evangelist in England, as a relief worker in Toronto in the black winter of 1907, as the organizer of five Methodist churches in the same city, and as football player, but no photographs of him in any of these roles were available.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

VICE-REGAL PARTY AT LINDSAY THUR.

Reception in Honor of Lady Byng Held Under Auspices of I.O.D.E.

LINDSAY, Nov. 28.—Thousands from town and county united yesterday in etxending a welcome to Lord Byng, Lady Byng and other members of the vice-regal party, on the occasion of their visit here. The distinguished party arrived from Whitby at 2.00 o'clock, and was met at the station by a guard of honor, the L.C.I. Cadet Corps, Boy Scouts, members of town and county councils and the Executive of the Local Chapter I.O.D.E. The vice-regal party was escorted to the Armouries where an address was read by His Worship Mayor Graham. The children of the school sang patriotic choruses, after which a reception was held. Lady Byng presented the colors donated by the I.O.D.E. to the L.C.I. Cadet Corps, after which a reception in her honor was held under the auspices of the I.O.D.E. at the residence of Lady Hughes.

The vice-regal party during the afternoon visited St. Joseph's Academy, where they were the recipient of an address, and also the Ross Hospital.

A PUBLIC ADDRESS.

Under the Auspices of the National Council of Education.

On Tuesday evening, at 8 p.m., Dec. 2nd, in the Collegiate Institute Assembly Hall, there will be delivered an address by John Lewis Paton, M.A., retiring Head Master, of the Manchester Grammar School.

Mr. Paton has been brought to Canada by the National Council of Education, a body of laymen who are interested in Canadian Education. The principles for which the National Council stands are:

(1)—Character Education;

(2)—Education as a spiritual process;

(3)—Education is imparted by personality;

(4)—Education is everybody's business.

(5)—Canadian education must be Canadian in its ideals.

In 1923 the Council brought to Canada Sir Henry Newbold and Sir Michael Sadler, who delivered more than 100 addresses. Mr. Paton is carrying on the work this year and is visiting the various cities of the Dominion.

All interested in Education are cordially invited to hear his address. Admission free. Mr. Paton comes to Peterboro under the auspices of the Teachers' Institute.

SAYS 1,000 UNEMPLOYED.

Conditions the Worst in Thirty Years, Alderman Declares.

OSHAWA, Nov. 28.—"Never in thirty years in Oshawa have labor conditions been as bad as they are now," declared Ald. John Stacey, prominent local man. The alderman, who is in close touch with a large number of working men, declared the total unemployed to be 1,000, and that he knew of cases where men engaged on city work for three days a week, nine hours a day and drawing a wage of $10.80, were starving to death while they worked. He said that one man came to him and said he and his family of three were not able to get enough to eat and could not buy coal. This Mr. Stacey declared to be a fact, and said some remedy would have to be forthcoming. The man, he said, lived in one of his houses and had not paid rent since April and he knew that he could not buy fuel and was getting little to eat. He also declared he knew of many others in a like position.

$400 AND COSTS FINE IMPOSED UPON ANDRESS

Defense Witnesses Skipped Out and Accused Pleaded Guilty.

FIRST OFFENCE.

Three Spotters Posed as Americans, With Car and Money, Says Counsel.

prosecution had been heard against prosecution had een heard against him on a charge of selling two bottles of liquor, Sieve Andress, who operates the tables in the upstairs part of Yeotes' poolroom, changed his plea to "Guilty" and was fined $400 and costs.The evidence against him was gathered by three special operatives oin the staff of the Provincial police.

Esteve Andress, charged with selling liquor to I. H. Sexton and L. G. Fleming, Provincial special officers, pleaded not guilty. He was represented by R. R. Hall, K.C., while J. F. Strickland conducted the prosecution, assisted by Provincial Inspector A. E. Sarvis, of Toronto.

Mr. Sexton said he saw Andress in Yeotes' pool-room on October 24. The first clash between counsel took place when the witness referred to a note, and was pulled up short by Mr. Hall.

Later, he asked to refer to his note-book, and Mr. Hall remarked, in objecting, that "he evidently doesn't know what he's talking about so far."

Mr. Hall withdrew his objection when the note was declared made at the time of the offence.

It was about 8.30 in the evening when he met Andress. Andress came out of the store and got into an automobile with him. The car bore a Michigan license, being one seized by the Department and allocated to this work. At Burnham and James Streets, Andress went toward the waterfront and returned with two bottles of Argyle whiskey, in accordance with a deal made while in the car. Andress said he would sell it at $9 a bottle.

Officers Fleming and Russell were in the car at the time Andress discussed the sale of liquor. The first bottle was delivered to Fleming, who paid a $10 American bill and received $1 in change.

A bottle of whiskey was produced and identified as the one sold to Fleming and sent to the Provincial analyst.

The second bottle was handed to Sexton, who paid $10 in American money and received $1 in change.

Cross-Examination.

Mr. Hall cross-examined.

The witness told him he lives in Toronto and has been a special officer of the Provincial Police since February last, appointed through the Attorney-General's Department. Since his appointment he had been engaged in O.T.A. work, on salary and had no commissions or share of fines.

"How much do you get a month?"—"I think that's a personal question."

"Who were you working for?"—"I don't wish to bring in my previous employers."

The Magistrate — "Character is always an issue."

The witness said he worked for the Motor Sundries Corporation in Toronto. Before that he worked for the Willard Storage Battery Co. for over two years.

Prior to taking work with the Provincial Government, he worked in an insane asylum at North Battleford, where he was instructor in basket-making and other manual work. He could not remember others for whom he had worked.

"You admit that you have a very poor memory when you can't recall all for whom you have worked?"

"No. I have a very fair memory."

The witness said he came to Peterboro on October 23, the day of the plebiscite. He or his companions had no liquor during the day, and he himself had never taken liquor while in the country, and his companions had not taken liquor that day.

The witness said Burnham and James Streets are over Hunter Street Bridge, and to the right, then on the first turn to the right where a street goes half left towards the water.

There was another person in the party whom the witness could not name in full, but who was called "Jack."

Mr. O'Brien whispered to Mr. Hall—"He's in court."

"Yes," said the witness, "he's in court. He is in the third row, wearing a spotted tie"—indicating Jack Pethick.

Jack Fixed It Up.

Fleming Russell and Sexton were in Yeotes' pool-room playing pool when 'Jack' came walking in. The party got in touch with Steve Andress through Jack.the witness said.

On Magistrate Langley making an order that the witness, and not counsel, was entitled to hold his notes, Mr. Hall said, "Yes you may have your notes now. You need them, do you?"

"Yes. All business men make notes nowadays."

Answering Mr. Hall, Sexton said he did not know just how he met "Jack."

The witness did not know Fleming or Russell very long, and did not know what they did before becoming special Provincial officers.

In re-examination, the witness said he was 3½ years overseas with the 2nd C.M.R.'s. He was a casualty through gas wound. He had had several small temporary jobs.

Mr. Strickland said he wanted to show that the witness had no innuendo attaching to him of blackguardism. He was simply here to do his duty so long as the Act is on the statute books.

Whiskey Produced.

L. G. Fleming told of meeting Andress at Yeotes' pool-room on October 24. In the car, Fleming told Andress he wanted to get some liquor, and he said it would be $9 a bottle. At Burnham Street, Andress left the car and returned in ten minutes with two bottles. The witness identified the bottle produced as the one purchased by him.

Answering Mr. Hall, the witness said the cork was pulled on the other bottle on the night of the seizure, when the officers assured themselves by smelling that the contents really were liquor. No one drank any. He had to take a drink in his business sometimes, but not this night.

"And you had a bottle of Scotch whiskey before you in a dry town and didn't take a drink?"

"It might have been moonshine for all I knew."

"It might have been cold tea in the other bottle for all you knew?"

"We smelled it."

"But you have to do more than smell it."

"It was the same in both bottles; they had been turned over at the same time."

Witness said he lived at 15 Garnet Avenue, and had been employed with the T. Eaton Co. until Christmas last. Prior to that he had farmed in the West six or seven years.

Telling the story of the night when Andress is alleged to have sold the liquor, Fleming repeated substantially the events recited by the previous witness.

They asked "Jack" where they could get liquor and he told them. He did not know who the officers were. "Jack" brought out Steve to the car.

Both bottles were turned over to Inspector Elliott in Toronto on October 25. Nothing had been taken from the bottles and they were sealed.

The party met "Jack" in Yeotes' pool-room in the afternoon, but the witness did not remember seeing Steve.

In Charge of Party.

R. S. Russell, another special Provincial officer, said he was with the last two witnesses on October 24 when Steve got in the car at Yeotes' pool-room Mr. Russell was in charge of the party. The car was a seized car and was used in Departmental work prior to sale.

Mr. Russell identified Andress positively as the man who sold the liquor and the bottle exhibited as the one purchased by Fleming. The second bottle was handed over to Inspector Elliott in Toronto. None of his men had anything to drink, he said, to the best of his knowledge.

Replying to cross-examination by Mr. Hall, the witness said he knew a man called Asa White and another named Andy Whitney, but he had never bought liquor from them or sold it to them. He had met 'Jack' three years ago, but when he looked around the court to-day, "Jack" had disappeared. "Jack" arranged for Steve to come out to the car.

When the party met 'Jack' in the afternoon they asked him to get liquor for them, not naming any particular place. Then the party went out to other places and succeeded in getting liquor. He did not drink any, and he was not asked to give the names of the others who supplied liquor.

The witness said he lived at 16 Pembroke Street, Toronto, and had not been doing anything for two years before he joined the Provincial force. Jack roomed there with him several months. Nine or ten men and women roomed there at the time and the place was looked after by his wife.

Prior to that he worked for the Grand Trunk, switching and braking, up till he went overseas in 1914.

Returning to the evening of the alleged offence, Russell said the question of liquor was broached in the pool-room, and Jack went to Steve while the officers entered the car. Russell had never seen Steve before, and did not see him again until to-day.

The first suggestion Jack made that he might get some liquor was during the play at Yeotes', and it was only when Andress came to the car that Russell knew who was to obtain it.

Pleaded Guilty

R. R. Hall, after adjournment during which he held a consultation with his client and found that some of his important witnesses had skipped out asked leave to change his plea to one of guilty, which was granted. He said this is a first offense and a fit case for light treatment.

Mr. Hall pointed out that the provincial officers arrived as Americans, in an American car and with American money. His Worship remarked that this does not make any difference, as it is as much an offense to sell to Americans as to Canadians.

Mr. Strickland said the case is a first offense and there had been no previous complaints. Inspector Stewart remarked there had been suspicions of the pool room without knowing who was the guilty person.

Magistrate Langley in passing sentence of a fine of $400 and costs said he hoped it would be a warning to others inclined to deal in the traffic. Costs amounted to $43.15, and the alternative was six months in jail.

Shipwreck Victims Brought to Harbor

Scenes from the rescue of passengers on the wrecked steamer "Zacapa" which grounded on an island off Cuba. Below is shown a boatload being taken from the Zacapa to the S. S. Teno, which rushed to the rescue in answer to an SOS. and brought three passengers to New York. Photo at left shows wreck survivors being transferred to the Teno from a life-boat. Three pretty Chilean sisters were among the rescued. They are Marie, Victoria and Carmen Van Ureken de Muroz (left to right).

COGNAWAGA PLAY A HUGE SUCCESS

"Too Many Husbands" Was Greeted With Packed House Last Night.

The Cognawaga Athletic Club of St. James' Methodist church put on a very attractive entertainment last night in their Sunday school hall, when the farcical comedy in two acts, "Too Many Husband" was presented to a packed house. The production proved a really humorous one and evoked plenty of applause. It was cleverly presented and the management of scenery, etc., was excellent. The young people deserve great credit for the manner in which they staged their play, which will be repeated this evening and should have a bumper house. The plot gives rise to many comical situations, which are made the most of by those taking part. A vaudeville entertainment, under the direction of W. Wright, with William Prest at the piano, adds much to the pleasure of an enjoyable programme. The Sunday school orchestra of the church also renders much fine music.

The manager of the play is A. L. Davis the director Wm. McLaren, master electrician Cecil Church and master of properties Alvah Rooke, Kenneth Shadgett has charge of the scenic side of the production. The Toonerville Band plays a prominent part in the proceedings. The cast of characters includes the following members of the Club; Dorsey Davis Hazel Grose, John Wilson, Elmer McLaren, A. Davis Hazel Plunkett, Sherman Rowe Jean Hamilton, Greta Welbourn, Fred Cripps, Jack Billingsley and Arthur Vanest.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY DRY.

BELFAST, Nov. 28. — (United Press).—The Irish Free State Senate yesterday amended the Liquor Bill so as to make St. Patrick's Day entirely "dry," like Good Friday and Christmas, according to a Dublin despatch.

METHODIST CHURCH IS GROWING FAST

The Centenary of Methodist Church in Canada Has Just Been Celebrated.

TORONTO, Nov. 29.—How John Wesley's scholarship affected his circuit riders in early Canada, is told in the Mail and Empire by a well-known college teacher, writing as follows under the regular department "The Educational Link."

Canadian Methodism has just celebrated its centenary. The Methodist Church enjoys the distinction of being the first ecclesiastical organization in Canada which had for its professed and exclusive object the cultivation of the Canadian field. For the last time—in 1823—delegates attended the American Conference, which was held that year in the town of Westmoreland, Oneida County, N.Y., and when they turned their horses' heads homewards to the forests of Upper Canada, it was to go back no more. From that day the Methodist Church in Canada has retained the imprint of the unconscious nationalism of its origin. It has looked at questions of religious propaganda, public morals and national education from the Canadian point of view and has made a worthy contribution to the development of the Dominion. In no department, however, has Methodism done more for Canada than in the matter of public education.

Wesley was a scholar, and though the appeal of Methodism was to piety and the emotions, Wesley took pains to write grammars in a variety of languages, to edit extracts from the classics, to make an English dictionary, and to produce a prodigious mass of literary work, scarcely included in thirty-two compact volumes. The successors of this amazing Englishman, who left his impress far beyond the confines of Methodism, endeavored to imitate his learning not less than his piety.

In "Case and His Contemporaries" one finds the early Ontario circuit-riders glorying in what vestiges of education or classical scholarship they possessed. They had an almost childish desire to appear learned as well as pious. Next to spirituality they valued rhetorical English and an impressive presence. Some of them, like Ninian Holmes and Nathan Bangs, fed their minds, if not upon Vergil and Homer, upon Milton and Bunyan.

They carried in their saddle-bags to the inaccessable settlements where they preached, a store of good books—not primarily religious books—which they distributed or sold to the mentally famished pioneers.

Methodism is the religion of individualism, and its impulse had been to elevate the common people.

INVESTIGATING CASE.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., November 28—No charge will be laid against Mildred Potter, the East Zorra girl, who put Paris green in her school mates' sandwiches, until a full investigation of the circumstances and the girl's environment is made. It appeared to-day that Mildred had been ostracized to some extent by other girls, causing her much bitterness.

BRAMPTON, Ont.—Despite rural depopulation in Peel County, Palestine Methodist Church celebrated its fifty-fourth anniversary with increasing attendance and membership, with descendants of original settlers and trustees as officials and with the addition of memorial windows to pioneers. Graftons, Wedgwoods and Paddocks were the first trustees, and their grandsons are now in charge.

OYSTERS ACTUALLY GROW ON TREES

Freaks of Nature Are Known All Over the World.

The notion of oysters growing on trees seems absurd, but in New Zealand such a thing actually takes place. In many parts of the country there are salt water inlets, which are frequently large and run a good way into the land. At high tide they are full of sea water. When the tide is out there is left a bed of deep black mud. Growing a good way out from the sides in the mud are stunted trees and shrubs, many of whose stems are covered with rock oysters. In New Zealand there may also be found boiling wells, which the natives use to cook their food. These wells do the work as well as a fire. Parties of Europeans have been known to cook their Christmas dinner in such hot water conveniences provided by Nature ready to hand.

That cats have a deep aversion to water seems to be a pretty well established fact, but the following incident is an exception to the rule. A burn had been dammed up to make a pond, and the pond became the home of large numbers of water rats. A cat was seen one day to dive under the water while in pursuit of a rat, and to emerge with its prey safely. The incident is amply vouched for.

A hare escaped from a butcher's shop, with men and dogs in full cry. It bounded across the street, incidentally dodging a motor car and a company of soldiers marching to the railway station. It next scaled a seven-foot wall into a garden, then leaped right into the sea, where, having eluded the efforts of the coastguard officer to shoot it with a rook rifle, it swam fully a quarter of a mile before it was taken in an exhausted condition by a retriever sent after it by a man on the beach.

Another hare was lifted into a boat by a compassionate rower some time after it had taken to the sea on being chased by a dog. It may be added that the hare benefited by the sporting instincts of its rescuer, who put it safely ashore when the danger was past. It hurried away none the worse for its immersion, and was soon hid from view.

Not long since a male roe deer made a savage attack on some human beings. It followed a boy close up to his home. The boy thought it tame, and was gently stroking its head, when it butted him and nearly knocked him over. It next attacked and elderly lady furiously. Her screams attracted several rescuers, but one of them was twice knocked down, her clothing torn, and her leg severely lacerated. Her wounds had to be stitched by a doctor. The deer was stalked and shot soom afterwards.

Motoring to fish at the head of Loch Ard, and rounding one of the bends where the road is hard by the edge of the water, a party of anglers encountered a flock of sheep going in the opposite direction. The car was brought to a standstill to allow the sheep to pass. They went on the side next to the loch. One unfortunate animal slipped over the edge of the road in the confusion and fell into the water, some two or three feet beneath. Buoyed up by its thick fleece, the sheep started to swim away from the road before any of the party had time to catch it. One of them, however, immediately began to fit his rod together, and after threading his line through the rings in the usual way, fixed a large hook to the end of it. After a few preliminary casts he threw a well-judged line right over the sheep's back. On tightening the line the large hook became entangled in the heavy fleece. He then put on a slight strain, the terrified sheep offered no resistance, and it was guided safely back toward the road. Two of the party, lying flat on their stomachs, got hold of the animal and heaved it on to the road. After the hook was disentangled the sheep ran off to join its fellows, seemingly none the worse of its adventure.

Passing a farm, a motoring party encountered a cock and several hens which came out of a steading and started to cross the road. The hens turned before the motor was on them, but the cock kept on regardless of consequences, with the result that his head got caught in the spokes of the front wheel. He was twirled round several times, in the process of which a bunch of feathers were thrown up into the air. The bird then emerged from his dangerous position absolutely without a feather upon him, as if he had been plucked, and walked away apparently not a whit the worse of his experience.

JAMES AKEY CHARGED.

Provincial Special Officer Bought Liquor From Him, Information Alleges.

James Akey was charged in Police Court this morning with selling liquor, and his case was adjourned until Thursday on bail of $1,000. Two previous convictions in 1921 were cited.

The sale with which he is charged now is of two bottles of whiskey to R. S. Russell, a special Provincial officer.

J. A. O'Brien appeared for the accused, and J. F. Strickland conducted the prosecution.

LOST HER TEMPER.

Cora Livingston Climbed Out of Ring and Slapped Spectator.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 28—(United Press).—Between a heckling woman wrestling fan and a strangle hold, Cora Livingston, Boston woman wrestler, lost her temper and the decision in her match with Louise E. Gardner, of Wakefield, at the Grand Opera House here.

Early in the one fall affair, Cora slipped away from her opponent, climbed out of the ring and slapped a woman who had been jeering her and rooting for Miss Gardner.

The officials tore the two apart, and getting back into the ring, Cora vented her rage on Louise, and administering the stranglehold. When she refused to relinquish it, the judges disqualified her and gave Louise the match.

Joe Ball, of Michipicoten, With Clothes Torn Off, Won Desperate Battle with Wolf Which Attacked Him

Hobbled by a snowshoe and unarmed he strangled the wolf with a piece of trappers' cord. - Beat off three others with snowshoe he was able to remove from his right foot.

"The MISSION from the trail to Michipicoten Harbor ~ Sketch from photo

(By J. W. Curran in the Sault Daily Star)

On Oct. 21, Sam and I reached the Long Portage on the Michipicoten River. We spent the evening listening to our host, Joseph Ball, tell the best wolf story I have ever heard. It was a true one.

Coming from "The Mission" on the Lake Superior shore you climb pretty steadily upwards. When at last you peer over the rim into the valley of the Michipicoten you see a basin say ten or twelve miles wide from rim to rim. The river is away down below you and across it is a vast vista of autumn leaves, whose wealth of color fill the eye. You get the feeling you are looking at the side of a mountain that stretches away in the distance down the river. Down on the river we could see a bridge, and hear the roar of the 200 foot falls. Across the bridge was Joe's house, alone in this great stretch of wilderness.

The Sault Daily Star has always combatted the idea that an Algoma wolf would attack a man. It has investigated several stories of alleged attacks, and none of them had ever stood up under examination. But I am prepared to accept Mr. Ball's story that a wolf did attack him. He answered freely all questions put to him, and went into minute details. We talked for three hours in the evening and then reviewed the fight for more than an hour next morning at my request. There couldn't have been anything vital left uncovered.

Mr. Ball has been in the Michipicoten wilderness for over 25 years. He came in with the Foleys when they were building the Algoma Central & Hudson's Bay Railway to do blacksmithing. For the last couple of years he has lived at the falls on the Michipicoten river with his cousin, Isaac, looking after the power plant there that hasn't turned a wheel for some time,—waiting for the day when Michipicoten's iron and gold will need power.

Mr. Ball is tall and square and spare, with a build that would film well as an upholder of law in a lawless camp. I noticed at our evening meal he didn't eat partridge, and Sam said he hated to see the birds shot. Our host casually mentioned then that he was sure he could raise partridge with his hens "if people would not bother them." You don't have very many visitors seven and a half miles in from Lake Superior on the Anjigomi trail!

The fight took place in February, 1917,—seven years ago. There were four wolves in it,—one principal and three assistants. Mr. Ball killed the principal with his bare hands. The others fled.

The scene of the battle was on the road that ran south from the Grace Mine, five and a half miles from Michipicoten Mission. That winter Mr. Ball had been the caretaker of both the Grace and the Norwalk mines,—both of these having a full equipment of machinery and buildings to look after. They had grown up overnight in the boom of a quarter of a century ago when Michipicoten's wonderful showings of free gold startled the province,—a promoters' boom that was developed so assiduously to Michipicoten's hurt that only in the last couple of years have its riches been again taken seriously by the outside world.

One and a half miles south of the Grace, a miner named Dyce had a shack; a mile west of Dyce's was the Norwalk mine. It was Mr. Ball's duty to inspect the equipment at both the Grace and the Norwalk two or three times a week. His permanent quarters were at the Norwalk, and it was after a visit of inspection at the Grace about the first of February that he encountered the wolf a quarter of a mile after leaving the Grace on his return home. At the time the nearest human being was Mrs. Dyce, a mile and a quarter away.

"It was ten o'clock in the morning," said Mr. Ball. "There were three and a half feet of snow on the ground and snow was falling so heavily that objects a few yards away were hidden. I never remember flakes so large, or a fall of snow so completely blotting out objects at a short distance away. I was on snowshoes, and was on the trail I had made on my regular trips. This trail was firm,—a beaten path. I do not remember hearing a sound of anything but the drag of my snowshoes when about thirty feet away from me or less, a wolf came out on my trail and headed me off."

Mr. Ball took his pipe from his mouth and put it on the table beside the coal oil lamp.

"I had heard the wolves before I saw the first one. I said to myself when I first heard them 'There are my two hounds; some one must have loosed them.' I knew that nobody but myself had keys for my house, and I figured that someone had broken in Wolves first make a few yips and then comes the long howl. You can always tell them. I had only my jack knife and a piece of trapper's cord about three feet long. All trappers carry some cord. It's a very useful thing in the woods, it comes in handy for a hundred uses, but I carry a shot gun now too."

Mr. Ball drew a piece of cord out of his pocket. It had a loop on one end. I adopted it on the spot. Next day I used it on the trail to tie a can on the outside of my packsack, and thereafter to truss up a coat to put in the same place.

"Did the wolf know you were a man?"

"Certainly it did. No question of that. I had noticed its tracks in the fast falling snow, which was coming down so thickly that it would cover your tracks in five minutes. It was the freshness of the wolf tracks that drew my attention. 'Why' I said to myself 'that wolf is right here.' I hadn't gone ten yards then before the wolf jumped out ahead of me on the trail. He stood broadside on, licking his lips. He didn't hold up his head but kept looking down. Then his tail began to rise and he came to me. I braced myself."

"I wasn't frightened," said Mr. Ball. "I think I can say that the feeling uppermost in my mind was surprise. I had never in all my experience in the woods where I have spent most of my life heard of a wolf deliberately stepping ahead of a man to dispute the road with him. It puzzled me, and even when the yellow brute stood his ground and stared at me boldly I had no idea he would attack me,—not the faintest suspicion he would. And I was unarmed,—didn't even have a stick in my hand."

"The wolf came on slowly on my trail,—he probably took two minutes to get within jumping distance. When I realized through his slow approach, his showing his teeth, his licking his lips,—and I didn't take my eyes off him for a second,—that he was going to attack me, I tried to get my snowshoes off. I managed to untie the right one, but somehow in the hurry my left foot slipped through the harness, and I couldn't free my foot. By this time I fully expected a battle, and what was more I had made up my mind to do my best without losing my head.

"On the right the road had a bank about three feet high on which small spruce grew very thickly with some cedar. This high bank was the result of the roadmakers using a scraper to make a level way. They had taken the earth from the right and spread it on the low side at the left. On the low side a lot of small alders grew.

"The wolf didn't give me any time to do more than slip my right snowshoe off, and this snowshoe in my hand was the only means of defense I had. He came on slowly,—I will never forget the snarling teeth and the slavering lips,— and when about five feet away he jumped. He almost reached my chest, trying to grab my clothes."

Mr. Ball was wearing a coat of rough cloth, and apparently during the fight that followed this coat became unbuttoned and when the fight was over, both it and the shirt were in rags.

For four successive times, the timber wolf jumped. The man, powerful and cool headed, threw him back, arms crossed in front of his chest. The fourth time Ball managed to grasp the jowl of the wolf with his left hand, just far enough back so the animal could not bite him. "I just had hold of the cheek; it wasn't a bone hold."

"I had always had a powerful grip, and people had remarked it even when I was a boy," he said. And with this brawny left hand on the jowl in a death grip, the wolf and the man fell off the hard trail into the three feet of soft snow,—the man on top.

Mr. Ball held out his sinewy left hand. He had fingers of great natural power, and his work at the forge for a lifetime has strengthened them. "Men would break the skin in my palms, but not one ever was able to break my grip," he said.

You must realize that Mr. Ball was telling a guest a story that enthralled both speaker and listener. The narrative was simple and sincere and there was no thought of boasting. The man took no offence at the most searching questions; his reply was always unaffected. His only thought was to make his story perfectly understood.

It would be impossible to reproduce the dramatic recital in cold type. When Mr. Ball, in telling of his wrestling with the wolf got on his knees on the floor, to show how he had fought the animal, my mind carried back to the night Sir Henry Irving had played the part of old Mathias, the inn keeper who under hypnotic spell is forced to rehearse the tragedy he was mixed up in. Mr. Ball lived over again his terrible experience. It was plain that the story gripped his whole being and that no little part of it would ever escape his memory.

The battle in the snow was a terrific one. "I was filled with a cold fury," said Ball. "The wolf was a powerful brute, and you will realize that when I tell you that several times he had me practically off my feet when I straddled his back. In this way he carried me about twelve feet. The brute's efforts to shake himself free of my grip, while I battered him with the snowshoe I held in my right hand would have shaken off an ordinary man, I think. I tried vainly to break a leg. But I was able to jam his head down through the snow time after time, and through the soft snow filling his mouth he began to choke.

"I was beginning to feel I had him, when I became conscious of something on the road behind me. I turned my head and to my horror saw three more wolves, only a few feet away.

"Realise the position! I was hobbled by the left snowshoe, and couldn't use that foot. I was holding a wolf by the jowl and lower lip with my left hand and dare not loosen my hold. I had nothing to defend myself wife but the snowshoe I held in my right hand. I realised the chances I had were slim, but I never lost my head. If the worst came to the worst, I instantly made up my mind I would fight back to the alders about twelve feet away and try to draw myself up out of reach of the wolves, no matter how badly I had been torn. Then I would get my knife.

"Did you ever see a wolf's fore teeth?" Mr. Ball turned to ask. "They are not straight. They curve inwards like a shark's. Consequently when a wolf bites, he tears away what he takes hold of. I have seen deer here at my door terribly torn,—not badly enough wounded to immediately die. I knew if any of the wolves behind me reached my thigh, I was gone. They would have torn out the muscles. So that I kept down as much as I could striking out from my position on the ground. The three jumped at me perhaps ten times,—I don't know. They came on together just like three dogs. They took the back out of my coat in mouthfuls.

"I had fought the single wolf for possibly five minutes, when the three others came at me from behind. They tried to bite me, and I slashed back at them with the snowshoe. One I managed to kick heavily as he lunged at me from behind ,trying to reach my thigh.

"There were two things that favored me. One was that I had the wolf in the soft snow, where he had not the footing he would have had on the hard trail and the other was that we had rolled off this trail to the left. The three wolves stuck to the trail, and thus I was able to oppose them with the snowshoe in my right hand, and to kick at them behind with my right foot while I knelt over the other wolf. Had the three attacked on my left side I couldn't have done a thing. They would have had me in a trap. But they never attempted to leave the hard trail to the left of which I was, and they didn't press home the attack. Something seemed to be on their minds, and after making several attempts to reach me, they backed up suddenly and all three of them raised their heads. They seemed to be looking over the trees on the high side of the road when suddenly they struck off swiftly together, jumping the high bank and disappearing like a flash.

"I was tiring. I had been holding a powerful animal for several minutes with my left hand, and I dare not let go. I had been tempted to get my knife. I could open it with my teeth, I argued. I wanted it to rip open the wolf. But my better judgment told me there was a considerable risk that I would seriously cut my mouth in doing so, the knife possessing a strong spring.

"Then I thought of the piece of trapper's cord I carried. I could tie it around the wolf's neck and strangle him."

Mr. Ball reached for a ball of trapper's cord, cut off three feet of it and went through the whole performance. First the permanent two inch loop on the end of the cord, then the other end run through the loop, and the cord was tightened on the writer's wrist; then an additional turn around the wrist and a knot. The wolf's hair had gotten into both knots and held the cord fast.

"He began to weaken in a minute or two, and when I had him groggy I slipped over to the alders and quickly cut a club with which I battered his head. It's wonderful how much a wolf's skull can stand. The place looked like a slaughter house. I battered the wolf's head and his blood covered the snow. Then I bundled the body into my packsack and set off for the Dyce shanty. Mrs. Dyce was alone. I told her the story and showed her the wolf. She called attention to the fact that my coat and vest and gray flannel shirt were torn to shreds back and front. I told her I was going home for my gun, and would go back after the three wolves. But when I got home I found I had to go to bed.'

The reaction had come. Mr. Ball could not bring himself to skin the animal he had killed.

"I never can explain what came over me," he said.

He crawled into bed and lay there for two hours. Then he arose, found his clothes were beyond repair, and donned another suit.

Mrs. Dyce had endeavored to dissuade him from returning to the scene of the fight, but Ball spent the rest of the afternoon there with his rifle. The wolves did not return.

The skin of the wolf was sold to Mr. William Morrison, superintendent of the power plant on the Michipicoten River, who paid Mr. Ball $12 for it. The lair of the wolves was traced up a creek to the Mariposa gold mine. Mr. Robert Patterson, the engineer there had hung up a moose hide close by and the wolves had eaten most of it. The place where they had lain in the snow there was found.

"Why did the wolf attack you?"

"Hunger drove him to it. I found nothing in his stomach except a little moose hair. His intestines were clean. You could almost see through them. And yet he wasn't skinny. His ribs were fairly well covered. He had a big frame."

A certain old trapper says that a wolf is always hungry and is never hungry, By which he means that he can defer eating till another day if he wishes to. If this is true it would seem to have been the inexperience of youth that drew Mr. Ball's wolf on to his doom.

"Were the wolves fully grown?" I asked.

"No," said my host, "The one I kill weighed probably 75 or 85 pounds.

"In your experience what does a fully grown wolf weigh?" I asked.

"A man told me once that he had shot one weighing 165 pounds. Do you think wolves ever weigh that much?"

"I shot one weighing 148 pounds here," said Mr. Isaac Ball my host's cousin and said that some wolves undoubtedly weigh more than that.

So that the wolf which attacked Mr. Ball was apparently a young one. Young wolves are notoriously venturesome like young dogs. Anyone acquainted with young dogs knows how irresponsible they are. The wolf is of the dog breed, and it may be agreed that a young wolf has no more sense than a young dog, which is the quintessence of lumbering indiscretion.

The Ontario government has invented a breed of wolves for bounty purposes. Up till recently the bounty on a timber wolf was $40, while only $15 was paid for the skin of a "brush" wolf as it is known in Algoma. Some farmers adopting a western term call this mythical species 'coyotes." A coyote is a plains wolf. It seems to have come east into Michigan to a limited extent, but none of the true breed have ever been seen in Algoma. The Fish and Game Department of the Ontario government has for years been paying bounty on so called "brush" wolves. Experienced bushmen in Algoma do not believe in the existence of the brush wolf; they say that a brush wolf is simply a young timber wolf. So it turned out to be in the case of Jack Egglesfield's wolf, and this is also the case with Jim Summers' two wolves at MacLennan. If any trapper in Algoma believes there are two kinds of wolves I have not yet run across him. The farmers have accepted the government's dictum that there are two breeds, with reluctance, and lately there has grown up a legend that the brush wolf hangs around farmhouses to kill sheep. He will come right onto a field to attack them, in sight of a plowman.

The bold brush wolf seems to be simply a young and unsophisticated timber wolf, there being no other kind of wolf in Algoma. In support of this theory it may be pointed out that no old wolf has been caught in a trap and no old wolf is caught around a farmhouse. The old and wise wolves are only to be found away back from where man lives. Only the youngsters are venturesome enough to try sheep raiding.

The theory that Mr. Ball was attacked by wolves probably about ten months old does not lessen the interest in the story or take away any of the credit due him. He would have had a harder fight if his assailants had weighed 150 pounds instead of half that amount, but the probability seems to be that no old wolf would ever have ventured to attack him.

Mr. Ball has no fear of a wolf. But he thinks no one should be foolhardy. He makes it a practice to get out of the woods before dark, because he can't then see his rifle sights. For this reason he likes a shot gun in the woods. He says no wolf will stand before a shot gun.

Contrary to most people Mr. Ball believes wolves are hungriest when frost first comes and just before the lakes freeze over.

BUTCHER OF DEER

(Ottawa Journal)

Ernest Thompson-Seton made a fine appeal at the Canadian Club luncheon in Ottawa Saturday for consideration for wild life. He touched on various aspects of worthiness of wild life, whether of animal or bird, and pleaded for restraint in the destruction of it.

Which reminds us of the butchery of deer which occurs every year in this part of the world by driving with dogs. A party of so-called hunters came back to Ottawa recently from a trip in the Gatineau country having killed sixteen deer in the water—and fifteen of them were does. A wonderful sample of how to kill out wild life!

Deer, when hunted by dogs, make for water. They can swim twice as fast as any dog. Also deer, when pursued, usually keep on fixed paths, alias "runways" which are easily noted. Accordingly the men who use dogs to hunt take up their positions on runways leading to laks, before they turn loose their dogs. Hunted by the dogs, the deer make for the water, and are shot in the water by the men who have been waiting near the runways.

That sort of shooting is not sport, but butchery. In the woods a deer has a chance. If a man still hunts—that is if he hunts individually, endeavoring to see a deer before it sees him—he has his work cut out, and a heap of exercise provided. If he takes part in a "drive," where some of the party try to round up deer and scare them towards other ambushed near runways, he usually gets only a shot at a deer going past him at 20 miles an hour or so. In any case, most everybody has to do a lot of stiff tramping. And there is some real sport to the hunting. But a deer in the water is a mere pot-shot.

Driving deer by dogs should be prohibited. It is a means of slaughter which sooner or later, if tolerated will extinguish the deer. Shooting of does should be prohibited under all circumstances. Such shooting is another sure way towards rapid extinction of the deer.

THE KLAN IN CANADA

(Toronto Globe)

An Ontario man, Charles Monteith, who admits that he is a Ku Klux Klan organizer, has been arrested at Hamilton on a charge of carrying a loaded revolver. The police say that cards found on him show that he had enrolled four women as Klan members, at the rate of three dollars apiece. According to a Police Inspector this knight of the pillowship boasted that he initiated over thirty Hamiltonians into the mysteries of the hooded order. His notebook showperhops those which have recently ed an item of $20 for burning crosses been displayed on the mountainside to set tongues wagging.

The gun-toting charge is apparently the only legal complication in which Monteith is involved. The Ku Klux Klan is not known to the Criminal Code, and it would not be an indictable offense to belong to it or uersuade others to join it. If a number of "callithumpians cavorting around a cow pasture,' 'as William Allen White calls the Klansmen, choose to pull white sheets over their heads and go through some mummery which they call a ritual, it is not a cause for police attention or for public alarm. If it goes no farther, it is an occasion merely for ridicule. Such nonsense is natural in children, but in men and women it is excusable only in a circus or an indoor masquerade. The law of common sense ought to be a sufficient guarantee against the spread of an organization like the Klan, but if weakminded people cloose to belong to it the statute book will be invoked against practices as have made the name of the Klan a srynonym for mob lawlessness in many parts of the United States. The first exhibition of the kind in Ontario will be the last.

Canada, as we have remarked before, has its racial and religious difficulties, but Canadians have surmounted them in the past and will surmount others of the same nature in the future— in the Canadian way. The Klan on this side of the line would be an importation or an imitation of something of which broad-minded Americans of all parties and creeds are ashamed. For the solution of our wa problems we can draw on our own experience and apply our own methods.

U.S. EUROPEAN DEBTORS

(New York Herald-Tribune)

Poland is the fifth European state to arrange for a funding of its debt to the United States. The others are Great Britain, Finland, Hungary and Lithuania. That Poland should be able at this juncture to carry through such an agreement is one of the most startling evidences of the capacity of European nations to restore their finances and discharge their war obligations if they have a real will to do so.

Not long ago Poland had a worthless currency and was plunged in financial embarrassments. Now she has a currency maintained on a parity with gold, a balanced budget and a reestablished credit. Her outstanding public debt is small, slightly in excess of the government's estimated revenues for 1925. Under these circumstances she has promptly negotiated for a funding of her American indebtedness of $178,560,000 in bonds maturing over a period of sixty two years, bearing interest at 3 percent up to December 15, 1933, and 3½ percent interest thereafter.

WE WANT MORE PEOPLE

(Medicine Hat News)

Canada is equipped with railways and productive machinery adequate to serve three times as many people as the present population of less than 9,000,000. Tax burdens have grown enormously in recent years, without any proportionate increase in population to lighten the load. Canada's part in the war cost the federal government about $1,460,000,000, according to the statement of the Minister of Labor, from 1914 to 1923, the annual interest charges on the national debt increased from $14,687,797 to 136,007,667. For pensions alone, in 1923, the total liability amounted to over $30,000,000.

With this national obligation to be met, the Dominion is impelled to look for new settlers. There is any amount of room, too, for a much greater population. Canada is naturally endowed with great potential sources of wealth. There is no lack of fertile land, and the climate is all that industrious northern people could desire. There should be employment opportunities for all.

THE INDIAN PROBLEM

(Ottawa Citizen)

During Labor's nine months of office at Westminster, no attempt was made to introduce any fresh policy regarding India. In fact, one of Mr. MacDonald's first acts was to issue a plain warning against Indian extremists who imagined that the advent of a Labor Government meant a sympathetic response to their demands. So that matters have not changed since either of the old parties held power. Now Mr. Baldwin and his colleagues have the problem of India before them again. And it is a problem which may easily overshadow all others before very long.

LORD AND LADY BYNG RECEIVED HEARTY WELCOME FROM CITIZENS DURING BRIEF THREE HOUR VISIT

Part of Tour Was Cut Short in Order to Conform to Schedule Time—Photographs Presented to the City.

OLD VETERANS OUT.

The visit paid the city this morning by Their Excellencies, General, the Right Honorable Lord Julian Byng of Vimy, G.C.B., K.C.M.G., M. O.V., Governor General of Canada and Commander in Chief, and Lady Byng, accompanied by Miss Sandford, aide de camp Captain the Honorable Francis W. Erskine and Captain C. S. Pryce-Davies, was very successful. The weather, for such an advanced date, was clear and fine, with a bright sun that took the chill from the frosty air, the arrangements were run off well within the schedule set, and everybody appeared to be perfectly at ease and happy. The vice-regal party made a splendid impression on all with whom they came in contact, and the various civic officials who welcomed and escorted them on their tour of the city seemed to make a correspondingly good impression on their guests.

His Worship, Mayor Turner, who acted as chief cicerone to the party, was at his best, and the distinguished visitors steamed away on their special car waving a very friendly farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Turner and Mr. G. N. Gordon, who also assisted in guiding them about the city. Others who escorted Their Excellencies in the dozen cars that took part in the tour included W. H. Bradburn, M.P., and Mrs. Bradburn, members of the City Council in Aldermen J. Crowe, W. Stocker, M. McIlnyre, J. Maher, R. Morrison, J. M. Greene, chairman of the Board of Education, J. A. McKone, Mr. and Mrs. R. Denne, Mrs. J. Crowe, Mrs. M. McIntyre, A. L. Killaly, A. Mowat, Mrs. W. R. Morris, Dr. J. J. Craig, Dr. H. M. Yelland, A. A. Fowler.

A feature of the reception of Their Excellencies and the tour of the city was the excellent service rendered by the Police Department. Traffic officers were on duty at intersections of a few blocks apart. If the Governor General and his lady failed to notice the features of the policemen they passed so often on their way, they must have left Peterboro with the impression that the city possesses about fifty or sixty stout guardians of the law, many with a distinct resemblance to others.

His Excellency, Lord Byng, congratulated Chief of Police Samuel Newhall, who led the tour about the city, just before his departure. He spoke in warm terms of the "clean, neat and upright appearance and the excellent service" rendered by the Police Department, and thanked the Chief personally for his attention and care during their stay.

The school children of the city formed the chief concern of the vice regal visitors while in the city. The majority of the schools were visited in turn, several doubling up obligingly with neighboring institutions. The party in their special car was welcomed at the C.N.R. station by the Mayor and Mrs. Turner, Mr. G. N. Gordon and Mr. W. H. Bradburn, and came in to the city to the strains of music played valiantly by the Peterboro Rangers Band, with Bandmaster Peryer in charge. The thirty players piped away in the chill air, overcoats over their uinforms, gloves on most of their fingers. Then the tour of the city began. East on Charlotte street to George, then south of Perry, where the motors turned west on Perry street, and south on Aylmer to the King Edward school, where the assembled children of the school had been augmented by the pupils of the Sacred Heart parish school, waiting outside and within the entpal in charge.

At the big Prince of Wales school, a monster delegation that must have numbered nearly a thousand children, and was composed of the pupils of this school and those of the Queen Mary building, waited outside, with Mr. G. S. Mattice and Mr. M. N. Clark, at the steps, with the vice-principals, and the junior Salvation Army band to play for them. They sang a rousing chorus with a good deal of merry "la-las" in it, and here the Governor-General and Lady Byng shook hands with Adjt. Smith, with whom the former had quite an extended conversation, and with Miss Rannie, as well as the principals, and Mr. A. Mowat.

Down Monaghan Road to Gilmour street went the cars, then north on Park street and west on Hunter and Homewood to Monaghan Road again, where they proceeded down Weller street to the Park, and on up to Jackson Park, making a circle of the lower level of the Park, where the artificial lake has a thin layer of ice over its still waters. Returning by way of McDonnel and Park streets again, they turned at Hunter, to St. Peter's High School, where they were welcomed by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, and members of the Catholic Clergy of the city and district, and the assembled pupils of St. Peter's school and St. Mary's Convent. Jauntily waving little red flags the boys sang the National Anthem, and the little girls, stationed inside the building, which the party entered for a few minutes, gave very appropriately in song the words of the immortal "In Flanders' Fields," of Lt.-Colonel John McCrae.

Down Rubidge street to Charlotte, then east to George and north on the city's main thoroughfare to Smith street, where the party traversed the bridge and toured the Oval, went the motors on their way to Armour Road and the King George school, where the children of that school had been joined by the pupils of the Immaculate Conception school. Mr. J. E. R. Munro and Rt. Rev. Monsignor McColl were on hand here to welcome the visitors, and the children, standing on the lower level of the terraces sang lustily in the chill wind that fluttered the silk of little red flags spiked in the grass. "O Canada" was the selection, sung in real snappy style at this school.

Owing to a desire to get the party back to their special coach on scheduled time, the tour of the city was cut short in the north end to the extent of cutting off the Auburn trip, and the visit to the Lift Lock was also curtailed, the chill breeze of the morning also contributing to a cutting short of this particular item. The party made their way under the Lift Lock without stopping, and proceeded by way of the boundary road and Rogers street to Hunter, over the famous bridge, and north on Water street to the corner of Murray street, where the children of the Central school and the Queen Alexandra school were stationed on either side of the road, the former singing "O Canada" lustily and well, under the direction of Mr. O. Steer, with a very effective cornet solo rendered by Adjutant Smith, and the children of the north end school, under Mr. M. H. Park's direction, giving in great style a patriotic song, to the tune of "Men of Harlech." Messrs. M. H. Park and K. Wightman welcomed the visitors as principals of the two schools.

An energetic member of a friendly reception committee of one made his first appearance here, in Mr. Reg. H. Turner's little black dog, bearing proudly in his mouth almost to the feet of the Vice-Regal party, a large white sign, lettered with "Welcome" in black.

A visit was then made to the G.W.V.A. Hall, where seventy of the veterans, the majority in uniform, were inspected by the Governor-General, who seemed to take a great interest in the returned soldiers, shaking hands with and enquiring the name of each in turn, and spending considerable time in the hall, while Lady Byng met several of the ladies connected with the Auxiliary to the G. W.V.A. The men were in charge of Captain R. E. Layfield, Major W. B. Hall, Captain Winterbottom, Capt. S. Whatley and Colonel Johnson.

Among them standing on the line, was possibly the oldest soldier in Peterboro, John Gibson, a veteran of the Indian and Soudanese campaigns, who enlisted in 1869, and served 12 years with the Imperial forces. Near him in the line was Joseph Mackness (his son-in-law), and Lawrence Gibson, his son, both veterans of the late war, while another son, Ernest Gibson, also served in the Great War.

"My comrades, I bid you farewell," said Lord Byng, as he stood in front of the men and regarded them with very evident affection, later waiting in patience outside with them as a photographer snapped the group. The Junior Veterans supplied music at the hall.

At the Armories, a few minutes later, still ahead of their schedule, the Governor-General and his party held a reception in the upper gallery at the eastern end. The Mayor's address to the assembled people, two or three hundred in number, in the hall below, and the pupils of the Collegiate Institute, and the Normal school, who joined them, follows:

Peterborough, Ontario.
November, 28th, 1924.

To His Excellency Baron Byng of Vimy, G.C.B., G.C.M.G., M.V.O., Governor-General of Canada.

May it Please your Excellency:—

On behalf of my colleagues in the City Council and of the citizens of Peterborough desire to bid Your Excellency and Her Excellency Lady Byng a most cordial and sincere welcome to Peterborough.

The intelligence that you had accepted the office of Governor-General of this Dominion was received with gratification throughout Canada, and in no part of the country was it more gladly received than in this city.

We are pleased to welcome you as the representatives of our gracious King for whose person and throne we, as do all Canadians, entertain the strongest feelings of loyalty and devotion. We appreciate the freedom which we enjoy as British subjects, and the protection and safeguards thrown around our liberties by the constitution and by the traditions of respect for law and authority which we have inherited from our British ancestors. We desire to pay our homage to you as the honored representative of the Sovereign of the British Commonwealth of Nations, for we claim to be not the least important member of the Empire over which he reigns and over which we earnestly hope he will long be the King and Emperor.

And we are honoured in having this opportunity of welcoming you to our city as one of the foremost soldiers and generals of His Majesty's Army, under whom the soldiers from Canada, including many from Peterborough, were privileged to serve in the Great War. As citizens we are happy to met the commander who directed the Canadian troops who won glory for themselves and for their country at Vimy Ridge and in ther important engagements, and those among us who served in the War are proud to meet the General under whom they carried arms in those never to be forgtten fields in Europe. Your great services to your King and country are deeply appreciated by us and the memory of them will not fade.

We appreciate the thoughtfulness which has prompted you to make yourself acquainted with the different parts of the Dominion, for we know that your considerate action in making yurself familiar with the beauties, resources, apportunities and needs of the country, and with its people, will be of great benefit to Canada, not only while you remain among us as Governor-General, but also after you have returned to England to serve the Empire in other capacities, for we feel sure that the interest which you have shown in the people and in the development of Canada will not cease with your term of office.

Again we wish to acknowledge the honour you have conferred upon this community by your visit here, and to again assure you and Lady Byng of the heartiness of our welcome. I have the honour to be,

Your Excellency's obedient servant
J. J. TURNER,
Mayor.

Following this His Worship presented Lord Byng with the beautifully bound and inscribed book which contained the address, a handsome square bound volume, bound in light cream plush-finished leather, with delicate inscriptions in gilt and illuminated pages, ingeniously lettered and colored by Mr. E. W. Glover.

Lady Byng was presented with a large sheaf of pink Columbia roses, by small Mary McPherson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. A. W. McPherson, the dainty little maiden in her poudre blue frock getting a warm salute in turn from Lady Byng and from the Mayor.

Lord Byng, who was heartily applauded, read the following address:

Mr. Mayor, Ladies and Gentlemen,

As representative of His Majesty the King, I thank you for the loyal messages which you have expressed in the address just presented to me. It will afford me great satisfaction to forward your assurances to His Majesty, whose interest in the people of the Empire is only equalled by his unfailing service on their behalf.

I find it difficult to express in words my gratitude for the welcome you have given us or the pleasure it affords me to be here. It is also a great source of delight to renew acquaintanceship with my comrades of the war, and to meet for the first time some of those who helped at home to bring that war to a successful conclusion. I know what value to place on Canadian friendship and I know what a help it can be. I found it a constant inspiration and comfort while I had the honour to command the Canadian corps. Manliness, courage and self sacrifice are the qualities that made that corps famous, that gave them their splendid honors and victory; and these qualities, which I saw for myself in the fighting men, are characteristic of the whole nation. Distance makes no difference. Canadian men and women all worked together to achieve victory.

Ladies and Gentlemen, on behalf of Lady Byng and myself, I thank you once more for your welcome. We are both keenly anxious to see and know all that we can of you, for, in this great country, we can only hope to keep in touch with all that is going on through the knowledge gained on these visits, and we feel sure that you will help us towards this end.

Assisted in their presentation by Mayor and Mrs. Turner and Mr. G. N. Gordon, citizens of the city, men, women and children, to the number of about four hundred and fifty, then filed past Their Excellencies in turn and were greeted by a warm handshake and word of recognition. The old formal practice which decreed that two cards should be supplied, to be passed on in turn to two aides and the names formally announced, has been discarded for the more democratic and friendly method witnessed this morning. The children presented were quite evidently much impressed by the honor, but one Quakerish small man marched through the file and gravely presented his hand to each visitor in turn, without removing the cap, which sat jauntily on the back of his head.

After signing the register at the Armouries, the visitors departed for their train with the cheers of their escort ringing in their ears as their special pulled out of the station. Before their departure, Lord and Lady Byng presented two large photographs of themselves to the city, one to be placed in the Council Chamber and one in the G.W.V.A. Hall.

The vice-regal party, which spent last night at Jones' Siding, after leaving Lindsay, and went on to Trenton to-day, was escorted during the past two days by C. N. R. Detective W. H. Howard.

UNCLAIMED PRIZES AT KIWANIS FAIR

Well Over Two Thousand People Took in the Fair.

The big Kiwanis Winter Fair went over the top last night with an attendance of nearly six hundred people, making a total for the four nights some hundreds over the two thousand mark, and with a record behind it of real success. Everything saleable was cleared up at the different booths by last night, which was Belmont night, when members of the Belmont Club afforded excellent support to the Kiwanians in putting over the last night's entertainment. The final evening ended with an informal dance by the members of the club.

The "Tommy Tucker" tooth film, which has been shown during the week in several of the local schools, and for which the projection machine at the Fair was kindly loaned by the Y.M.C.A., proved of interest to those to watched its exposition of the care of the teeth. The boy who takes care of his teeth has a better chance of success in the world than the boy who neglects them, and this picture shows where one boy with a good teeth gets a job over a boy with poor teeth. The latter, however, visits "his best friend," the dentist, and stages a comeback. The film is instructive to adults as well as to juniors.

There still remain many unclaimed prizes from the Fair, and the chairman of the attendance committee, J. A. MacNabb, is anxious that they should be reclaimed as soon as possible. Application at his store, 371 George street, may be made at any time for any of the following awards: Door prizes for Tuesday night: 2nd prize, bag of flour, won by Ticket No. 2935. 3rd prize, cook book, won by Ticket No. 2941. Door prizes for Wednesday night: 1st prize, $5, won by Ticket No. 3677; 3rd prize, cook book, won by Ticket No. 3406. Door prizes for Thursday night: 1st prize, $5, won by Ticket No. 4245; 2nd prize, bag of flour, won by Ticket No. 4465; 3rd prize, cook book, won by Ticket No. 4207.

The raffle prizes last night were won as follows: 5 lb. box of chocolates, donated by the Laura Secord Cand yCo., won by Ticket No. 499, Mr. Claire Stewart, 590 Homewood avenue; box of cigars, donated by A. W. Clysdale, won by Ticket No. 682, Mr. Bruce, of Hamilton, Ont.

The two paintings donated by Kiwanian W. Dicken went to Ticket No. 1631 (first choice), unclaimed, and Ticket No. 1302, (second choice) Gerald Neville 350 Charlotte street.

The Bachelor's cake was won by Mr. W. M. Lang, Collector of Customs of the Port of Peterboro, with Ticket No. 18

On Wednesday night, the second door prize ticket No. 3284, was held by Mrs. Mahood, 709 Water street, who won a 24 lb bag of flour donated by J. W. Meyers.

For the largest family present, a $5 gold piece was donated by G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P. Deputy Speaker of the House of Commons and was won by Mr. F. R. Story, 294 Mark street present on Monday evening, with eight children, himself and his wife making a family of ten.

The prize for the oldest gentleman in attendance, $5, donated by Walter Stocker, was won by Mr. George Young 569 Park street, aged 94 years and 6 month, present on Wednesday night.

The prize for the oldest lady present, a $5 gold piece, donated by Roy Carmen was won by Mrs. Mary A. Briegel, 315 Rubidge street, aged 84 years and 6 months, present on Wednesday evening.

As there were two ladies of the same age 84 years and 6 months, present on Wednesday evening, the Kiwanis Club decided to give a second special prize to the second lady, of five dollars, and this was won by Mrs. Taylor, 279 Sherbrooke street.

SOME HINTS TO VIOLINISTS

By a Fellow Fiddler on Pizzicato Playing.

GOOD ADVICE.

Pizzicato Playing.

Instead of producing the note by the bow, the string is sometimes plucked by the first or some other finger of the right hand. It must not be touched with the nail, but with the finger itself. Use the end of the finger, and take care that it is pulled quite clear of the string each time a note is made. The string should not be attacked where the bow works, but a little distance below the beginning of the finger-board, where resistance is less. The bow must not—as a rule—be set aside, for pizzicato notes often occur amongst others ordinarily played, and it is important to commence the pizzicato playing and to return to bowing very quickly and neatly. This requires considerable practice. There are, however, long passages of pizzicato to be met with in which it is quite unnecessary to hold the bow in the hand, though the violin should be held in the usual way under the chin. Some players find it convenient to use a succession of fingers in rapid pizzicato passages. Note that pizzicato is pronounced pitzicato; that "pizz." is the sign for its commencement, and "arco" that for return to bowing. Good pizzicato work is very telling, and it should be aimed at by every young and keen fiddler.

The Mute.

This is a small wooden or metal article which is slipped on to the bridge of the violin—each of the three feet of the mute coming between two strings. The effect of the mute is to curtail and soften the tone. It is frequently used in lullabies and in many other pieces and passages where a particular type of soft playing is required. The tone of a mass of muted strings can be particularly beautiful. But let no young fiddler think that the mute is essential to soft playing. The veriest pianissimo can be produced by light and yet true bowing. If on occasion you happen to have no mute with you (though every fiddler should possess one or more), a good substitute for it is a peany piece, or, better still, a half-crown threadad between the strings immediately behind, and pressed right up to the bridge. Don't be content with this makeshift, however, for the tone produced by it is more nasal and generally less satisfactory than that from an ordinary mute. And don't go off through carelessness with any borrowed half-crown in your fiddle-case! The indication for the use of the mute is "con sordini," and that for its cessation "senza sordini."

The Bridge.

It is important that your violin should have a bridge which suits it. The feet of the bridge must fit the belly of the fiddle properly, and the bridge must be of the right height and shape. It is well to go to a good violin-repairer—the reputable man who does his own work, for choice—and get him to cut you a bridge to suit your instrument.

The Metal String.

Many people are now using a metal first string in preference to a gut or an acribelle one. Although the metal string has its disadvantage, and may not be altogether suitable for solo fine work, yet it has much to recommend it for ordinary use. You will probably find it an aid to getting a clear tone on the upper octaves. It seldom breaks, and it is capable of being tuned to a nicety when fitted to the little screw-and-slide apparatus obtainable at almost any good music shop. The string is tightened in the ordinary way, by the peg at first. But the final adjustment to pitch is made by this little screw-and-slide, which connects the tailpiece of the violin with the end of the string.

If, however, you use a gut or an acribelle E, see that it is fastened properly to the tailpiece. Because of its thinness and slightness it needs more than an ordinary knot in the groove. If the string is furnished with a loop at the end, it is a simple matter to thread the other end through this after the loop has been brought downwards through the hole in the tailpiece, and then to pull up tight. If there is no loop, after pushing the knotted end well through the hole (downwards), bring the other end of the string over the side of the tailpiece, threading it through from beneath, and then pulling tight so that the string crosses in the groove, just beyond the knotted end from slipping. But take care not to crack your string in the process.

Other Strings.

When a string is in double length, don't allow the unused half to curl round the scroll of the violin. It will look untidy and be in the way. When fitting, cut off the length you need, and put the remainder back into its paper wrapper. Don't leave strings about loose in the pockets of your case. Keep reserve strings of all the four. Don't suffer the disappointment and vexation of having a broken one, and no successor. When tightening a new string, do so gradually, stretching it by little screwings and unscrewings as you work it up to pitch.

While the strings should on no account be loosened before putting away the fiddle after use, the bow should be slackened, though not unduly.

Do not play with your bow too tight. It should be screwed up so as not to allow the stick to touch the hairs when you are playing firm passages, but not so tightly as to take all curve out of the stick. When playing in a warm room the bow will often become too tight, and will need loosening.

LITTLE OF EVERYTING.

French inventors claim they have perfected a "ghost plane"—airplane without crew, piloted by wireless, carrying explosives to be dropped on enemy armies by radio control. This is about the one-hundredth time such an invention has been announced. Of course, it's quite possible. More than that—inevitable.

You'll notice the claim for this uncanny plane is that it can deal out death. No boasting about economies in transporting mail or express to far distant or hard-to-get-to places.

The airplane, to date, is primarily a war device.

PUSS IN PROVERBS.

The domestic cat has so long claimed as its inalienable right the cosiest corner of our hearths that it is only but natural it should have become a frequent subject of reference in our everyday talk.

There is, for instance, quite a string of proverbs in which pussy figures as the example that points a moral, and on occasion adorns a tale. None of these proverbs is perhaps in more common use than "A cat has nine lives," and it may be added, in accrediting our cats with that number of lives, that they have as many proverbs as well tacked on to them. You may "be a catspaw," or live "a cat and dog life," so that you are glad to get outside, even although it is "raining cats and dogs" in a spot where "in the dark all cats are grey." Nor are you "letting the cat out of the bag" when you agree that "a cat may look at a king."

Some of these proverbial sayings contain quite a fund of old-world lore embedded in them. How many know, for example, when they speak of not having room "to swing a cat," that they are keeping alive an allusion to the very old and barbarous custom of tying cats in a bag and swinging it from a tree so as to form a mark for the archer of bygone times to shoot at? In a like fashion, "Letting the cat out of the bag" more than likely originated in the questionable trick of substituting a cat for a pig at a country fair and then selling it to some unsuspecting greenhorn.

A great deal of folklore on cats lies, moreover, outside the range of proverbs. The "catscall," dreaded by the actor who has displeased his audience; the "cat-o'-nine-tails," equally dredded in the good old days by the culprit who got a dose of it; the "cat's cradle," made by youngsters with a piece of string manipulated on their nimble little fingers, are all instances in proof of this.

A great deal of folklore on cats Then we have also with us the "Kilkenny cat," and thereby hangs a tale, or rather two tails, according to the story, which runs as follows:—The town of Kilkenny was once garrisoned by Hessian troops, and these soldiers took to amusing themselves by tying two cats together by their tails and then stringing them over a rope and so leaving them to fight it out. The officers, getting wind of this, tried their best to stop it, and on one occasion when an officer appeared unexpectedly on the scene one of the soldiers slashed off the cats' tails. The cats got away right enough, but when the soldier was asked to account for the two tails still hanging over the rope, the only explanation that occurred to him was that the cats had fought so fiercely that there was nothing left of them but what now met the officer's gaze. The story also was supported by the fact that the towns of Kilkenny and Irishtown were much in the same predicament, for these places quarrelled so much about their boundaries that both of them were beggared, i.e., only had their tails left. Another cat of fame was "Dick Whittington's cat," which is familiar to all because it seems to have more pantomine lives than even the proverbial nine. Curiously enough the "cat" in this case is probably a pious fiction, for the cat connected with Whittington's career was really a ship known by that description, and used in his time for bringing coals from Newcastle to London. Whittington in his heyday is said to have been the owner of several of these vessels.

Still further there is the "Cheshire cat," with its grinning propensities. "To grin like a Cheshire cat" is not exactly a complimentary remark to pass about anyone, but why Cheshire? For an answer one must again go back into the past when cheese was formerly made in Cheshire and moulded in the form of a cat.

Scottish cats may even claim superiority over their English cousins, since they can boast also of mention in our history in the saying, "Who is going to bell the cat?" which has become a well-known Scottish proverb. They can also boast of supplying the Macintoshes not only with their crest, which is a mountain cat, but also with their motto, "Touch not the cat but (without) the glove." This was for long a common proverb in Scotland, but is now rarely heard, probably on account of our forgetting that the word "but" in the sentence is really the old form "beout," which is equivalent to our present word "without." Put this latter word in the proverb, and its applicability and canniness are, as Lord Kelvin used to say, "obvious to the meanest intelligence."

HEAVY VOLUME OF BUSINESS BY U. F. O. IN OMEMEE REPORT

Supplies Purchased Amounted to $14,889.42—Cattle Sold $38,236 and Hogs $67,082.

ANNUAL MEETING.

OMEMEE, Nov. 27.—The Omemee branch of the U.F.W.O. held their annual meeting on Tuesday evening. The President, Mrs. F. G. Sandy occupied the chair. Reports were received from the Secretary and Treasurer, showing a surplus in the bank. All the ladies present, felt the need of the organization and signed up as members for the ensuing year, and an effort will be made to secure a large membership than last year.

A social evening was discussed but no date was set apart.

The following officers were elected for the year 1925:

President—Mrs. Joseph Bradley.
Treasurer—Mrs. R. H. Johnston.
Secretary—Mrs. W. Brown.
Directors—Mrs. Charles Rutherford, Mrs. L. Moncrief, Mrs. D. Weir, Mrs. A. Pogue and Mrs. W. Burgess.

U.F.O. Annual

The meeting then closed and the ladies were privileged to "listen in" at the annual meeting of the U.F.O. where a goodly number of enthusiastic farmers had gathered. Mr. William Burgess occupied the chair A splendid report was given by the Secretary showing the following goods having been received through the Omemee club, during the past year: 3 cars flour and feed; 4 cars sale; 2 cars coal; 8 cars Western oats, 6 tons twine; 45 bushel seed corn; 250 lbs salt and sulphur and quantity of oyster-shell.

The total value of which was $14,880.42 Mr. T. H. Fee, the treasurer followed with an itemized report, and the financial situation showed a balance of over $440. in the bank.

The Auditor's report was then given by Mr. Harry Deyell in a very capable manner.

"From November 1st 1923 to October 31, 1924 521 cattle, 734 calves and 437 sheep were shipped through the Omemee clubs. The total value of same was $38,236.58. The total number of hogs for the same time was 4,025, the value of same being $67,082. 78. This is an increase of 706 more hogs than in 1923 and thus an increase of $16,795.32. The cattle calves, and sheep also showed an increase of 782, over last year's shipment.

These reports go to show that the Omemee organization is in a very prosperous condition and the club members were delighted with the year's business they being now able too pay off the debt on their recently purchased building and still have a surpus in the bank. The burning of the mortgage will be celebrated by the holding of an Oyster Supper for the members and their wives in very near future.

As it is desirous, that everyone who does business through the organization, be a member, a membership drive will be put on. Different views were expressed as to the great value received through the club in consideration of the small membership fee.

Officers Elected

Mr. Bruce McNevin, the president of the County organization was then voted into the chair, and in a neat speech congratulatd the Omemee Club on their successful year in this trying time when prices for farm products, are only fair. Mr. Eugene Switzer acted as Secretary and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President— R. H. Johnston. Vice-President,—Eugene Switzer; Secretary—David Weir; Treasurer—Isaac H. Fee. Directors—Melville Elliott, D. H. Dick, George Henderson, Hubert Gardiner, C. E. Mitchell, Herman Franks and W. Veals.

Auditors —Harry Deyell and W. Robinson.

Shipping Committee—C. Rutherford, V. Franks, R. H. Johnston and Jos. Bradley.

New School Opened

A half holiday was proclaimed in the Public and High School here on Monday owing to the opening of the new school at Raeboro, and on Friday the scholars enjoyed a full day when the Governor-General proclaimed it a holiday.

NINE ARE TRAPPED IN CARDIFF MINE

80 Were Trapped, 70 Escaped—1 Killed, 9 Missing.

CARDIFF, Nov. 28. — (United Press).—Eighty miners were imprisoned to-day when water rushed into the Penlan Colliery ,at Dunvant seventy succeeded in escaping, one was drowned and nine were still buried at noon to-day. Rescue parties were doing their utmost, with little chance of success.

After working waist high in water and battling deadly black damp all night rescue crews this morning were still struggling to reach the nine miners who were entrapped last night in Penlan Pit at Dunvan when sudden rush of water caused numerous roof falls.

One body has been recovered from debris. Several score of miners escaped struggling through water reaching to their necks.

Hundreds of women relatives of trapped men kept night long vigil at pit head.

BOXING RETURNING ON WESTERN COAST

Purses Instead of Medals Will Bring Out the Mit Performers.

By M. D. TRACY.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 27.—They're dusting off the boxing gloves and sweeping out the old arenas here in California, for the prize fight game, once flourishing, is coming back.

For several years four round bouts with "medals" instead of purses for the winners have been the rule.

But while the rest of the country elected a President Nov. 4, California voted into being a law legalizing ten round fights with a decision or 12-round no decision bouts, under control of a boxing commission.

Already the promoters are busy, getting ready for the revival of the game. Offers of fights have been made to Benny Leonard and Jack Dempsey.

Once San Francisco was almost the country's prize-fight capitol. Jimmy Britt, Battling Nelson, Jim Jeffries, Stanley Ketchell, Willie Ritchie and a host of others made this their headquarters or did much of their fighting here.

Then the sport came into disrepute and for years only the four-round game eked out a precarious existence. Then interest in the short fights began to grow. Old ills were forgotten by the public and now the ten-round route is legalized again.

In the years that have gone by many of the old-timers have remained in the west.

Jimmy Britt is a prosperous owner of real estate and apartment houses here. Willie Ritchie is head of an automobile tire concern. They both look to be in the rpime of health and not needing money.

Jim Jeffries lives on his farm at Burbank—much of his health gone. The last time the writer saw him he was big, overweight and flabby.

Jim Corbett spends much time in Los Angeles, around the movies. Jess Willard is there, too, off and on.

Ad Wolgast, his mind deranged, lives at one of the Los Angeles beaches, always training for a fight that never takes place.

Spider Kelly is in Arizona, fighting off the "White Man's Plague."

And the old, familiar places where fighters trained—they are largely memories. Rowardenon, where Jim Jeffries liked to work, is now a place of summer cottages.

Billy Shannon's, across the Bay, still has its old sign painted on the building's side—but that is all.

But Sol Levison is still in San Francisco and through the "years between" he has continued to be the man who makes the gloves for the champions. He looks for business to boom.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

LATEST CRUZE PICTURE OPENS AT CAPITOL TODAY

James Cruze, noted Paramount producer, who jumped into the directorial limelight with "The Covered Wagon", "Merton" and other screen successes recently finished a new Paramount picture which is being hailed as another screen masterpiece. "The City That Never Sleeps" is his latest of cinema thrillers, and local fans will soon have the opportunity of judging its worth because it opens today at the Capitol.

The story is an adaptation of 'Mother O'Day", by Leroy Scott, which ran serially in McCall's Magazine. It has New York for its background—that portion of New York which has made the city so famous. The night life of New York of today is contrasted with that of a decade ago when the Bowery was in the heyday of its glory.

Briefly the story deals with a mother's sacrifice for her only daughter—her efforts to protect the child from the Tenderloin environment in which she herself was brought up. Later she comes face to face with the bitter realization that despite all she has done to prevent it, her daughter is travelling too fast a pace. The manner in which she saves her daughter by making the supreme sacrifice provides real thrill and leads to a mighty climax.

With a cast that includes such likeable players as Louise Dresser, Virginia Lee Corbin, Kathlyn Williams, Ricardo Cortez and Pierre Gendron there is no lack of acting talent. The entire production was done in typical Cruze fashion and you know what that means!

RUDOLPH VALENTINO COMING TO THE CAPITOL NEXT MONDAY

Rudolph Valentino will be seen in his very latest picture 'Monsieur Beaucaire" at the Capitol, next Monday Tuesday and Wednesday. This production which ran for four weeks at the Regent Theatre, Toronto, at prices up to $1.00, will be presented at the usual Capitol prices in Peterboro. This is only possible through the tremendous buying power of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Ltd., operating the Capitol and 81 other theatres .

AT THE GRAND.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS IN "THE THIEF OF BAGDAD"

Douglas Fairbanks in "The Thief of Bagdad", generally accepted as being the pinnacle of moving picture accomplishment, will be on view at the Grand beginning December 1, 2 and 3. Douglas Fairbanks' great success has been owing, in great part, to the fact that to begin with he had a great romantic story, and that in the picturing of it he did not allow the mere seeking after spectacle and the like to interfere with its development. The story is the main thing always. "The Thief of Bagdad" one might imagine, considering the enormous amount of talk that has been created by certain features in this picture,—such for instance, as The Magic Carpet, with which the Thief and the Princess sore over the house-tops and into the sky; the Winged Horse, which flies through the clouds,—that this picture was a mere stringing together of extraordinary happenings. In point of fact, "The Thief of Bagdad," a realization of Arabian Nights stories, is a continuously connected tale. The Winged Horse and the Magic Carpet are not mere tricks to excite the theatregoers; they are indeed necessary developments of the story. It is because Douglas Fairbanks has been able to produce on the screen these most astonishing happenings, which are part of the extraordinary Arabian Nights story, that "The Thef of Bagdad" surpases any picture, according to all accounts, that has yet reached the screen. The criticism of other cities disclose the fact that Mr. Fairbanks has brought to the moving picture something new and astonishing. The critic of the N.Y. "Times" said "A feat of motion picture art which has never been equalled." The reviewer of the N.Y. "Telegram" averred that it is "the greatest picture we have ever seen or expect to see", while the "Herald-Tribune" said it was: "The greatest film ever made." The critic of the "Boston Post" said: "It is foolish to compare this marvelous fantasy with any other photo-play production." The Philadelphia "North-American" said: "You have to see it to believe it. Not merely ahead of its field; it creates a field of its own.".

This picture will positively not be shown at any other place in this city this year.

DOUG. FAIRBANKS IN "THE THIEF OF BAGDAD," AT THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE, STARTING MONDAY, DEC. 1.

AT THE REGENT.

HOBART BOSWORTH HEADS STRONG CAST IN "HEARTS OF OAK" FILMa

Pauline Starke and Theodore Von Eltz in Supporting Roles of Great Old Play. William Fox Screen Version of Herne's Melodrama is Booked for Local Theatre.

Hobart Bosworth heads an excellent cast that has been assembled by William Fox for his screen version of James A. Herne's well-known stage play "Hearts of Oak," which opened at the Regent last night, and continues to-day and to-morrow.

Theodore Von Eltz and Pauline Starke play the two roles next in importance, and the others in the cast are James Gordon, Francis Powers, Jennie Lee, Frances Teague and Francis Ford.

"Hearts of Oak" is a gripping, poignant story of pure love, and its heartaches, written around the simple fisherfolk of a New England coast town. The action sweeps from Marblehead, Mass., to the Arctic wastes, and embraces all the romance of the sea with the picturesque beauty of the coast country.

Mr. Bosworth plays the role of Terry Dunnivan, a retired sea captain, who has adopted two children—a boy and a girl. As the girl, Chrystal, grows to womanhood, Terry realizes that his fatherly love has grown to something stronger. He asks her to be his wife. Chrystal really loves Ned, her foster brother, but consents to marry Terry rather than destroy his happiness. On the day of their marriage, Ned returns from a long cruise, intent upon making Chrystal his wife. His great love for Terry leads him to sacrifice his future for him and depart, hitting the downward grade. Ned is about to embark upon a futile Arctic expedition, realizing that it means his own death, when Terry learns of the sacrifice of his own children. He forces the youth to abandon the trip and takes his place, exacting a pledge from his adopted children that, in the event he does not return, they will marry each other. Then follows a series of dramatic events that end in complete happiness.

AT THE ROYAL.

GEORGE M. COHAN COMEDY MAKES FINE ENTERTAINMENT

George M. Cohan's famous stage play, "George Washington Jr.", which opened yesterday at the Royal, where it will show until Saturday night, has been admirably transferred to the screen by Warner Brothers, and makes a motion picture full of clean humor and plenty of action. It proves an extremely good vehicle for Wesley Barry who is seen for the first time in what is pretty near a grown-up role.

The idea of transferring a comusical play to the screen might seem a bit questionable. But the result obtained in this instance washes away all doubt as to whether it can be done with success. "George Washington Jr." on the screen is even more funny than the original stage version.

As "George Washington Jr.", who would not tell a lie nor countenance an untruth in those about him, Barry is capital. He gives the touch of truth to the whole portrayal which is the height of dramatic art.

"George Washington Jr." is the story of a boy who desides to build his own character along the lines laid out by the great statesman. The idea in itself is good, but young George carries it to extremes, insisting that his father tell the truth too, which is good sometimes—at other times, not so good. For his father happens to be a U.S. Senator who is mixed up in more or less diplomatic affairs.

How George, Jr., his pal, and an old negor servant who shows pugilistic tendencies, put Bolshevists to rout, expose a bogus count, recover papers of state which the count had stolen from George's father, and bring about the marriage of the girl to her real lover, furnishes action enough for six pictures—also comedy in big, large quantities.

The children should be sent to see it Saturday afternoon. Clean cut comedies with a moral are too few and far between.

"HOLD YOUR BREATH," ROYAL, MONDAY

A riot of thrills and comedy comes to the Royal, Monday. Al Christie's first full-length feature, "Hold Your Breath." The cast is the greatest ever assembled for a comedy. Dorothy Devore, Walter Heirs, Tully Marshall, Jimmie Adams, Jimmie Harrison, Priscilla Bonner, etc.

The substance, which had nearly broken several teeth, was disclosed as a very fine pearl. A leading jeweller of the city estimated the value of the pearl, when polished and cleaned, at about one hundred dollars.

THE PARIS MIDINETTE

By A. L. BRADFORD.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—(United Press).—A sumptuously dressed, rather fleshy dowager stepped down from her limousine in the Place de l'Opera, and, attracted by a diminutive, stylish, rather coquettish young thing, carrying a hat-box on the arm, raised her lorgnette better to inspect the modish little figure. As the crowds were rushing to and fro across the Place de l'Opera, the Young Thing reached into the pocket of her dress and pulled out a pair of scissors, which she held up to her eyes in lorgnette fashion and stared back at the wealthy dowager. Men and women stopped and laughingly sided with the young lady in the game of which would "stare the other out of countenance." Naturally the dowager snorted and stamped off.

The Young Thing was a typical Paris Midinette, one of the most picturesque figures of the French capital.

The incident of the Place de l'Opera well illustrates the character of the Paris midinettes, which, of course, means a young, female apprentice of a grand dressmaking establishment. The midinettes' happy, care-free spirit, but ever-readiness to assert their rights, and above all, their modishly-dressed figures, throw many a bright spot on Paris life.

The "men about town" of Paris are among the most appreciative audiences of the midinettes. Almost any evening squads of the "old boys" can be seen along the Rue de la Paix and the Avenue des Champs Elysees as the great dress-making shops close up and the midinettes call it a day. The "old sports" crane their necks as the midinettes trot along in their modish dresses, always cut short at the bottom, may it be noted.

The midinettes are most characteristic of Paris, for on almost any postcard of the human side of Paris life you are likely to see a picture of the midinette, with the inevitable box on her arm, carrying a dress or a hat to a customer. They are always well-dressed, for they have the advantages of their places of employment to aid them; they are always short in stature, for their taller sisters are selected as the mannequins. The midinettes are much of the spirit of Paris: happy, light-hearted, but underneath all this a serious appreciation of the realities of life.

One of Paris' many fetes is largely associated with the midinettes. This is the fete of Sainte Catherine on November 25. On this day every young lady who has reached the age of 25 years and has not found a husband, puts on a special bonnet and other adornment, parades the streets and makes merry. The midinettes, through their costumes and their merry pranks, are among the most picturesque participants in this fete.

DETROIT WINS HYBRID RUGBY FROM VARSITY

Toronto Team Led 18-3 at Half Time, But Detroit University Romped Away With the Second.

FINAL SCORE 30-18.

Forward Pass and Interference Bewildered Canadians Under U. S. Rules.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press).—The University of Toronto, which lost the football championship of Canada to Queen's University by a single point, was beaten 30 to 18 by the University of Detroit in a hybrid exhibition here Thursday, played partly under Canadian rules and partly under American rules.

The first half under Canadian rules introduced Detroit into the lateral pass, frequent punts and open field running without interferences—all features of the Canadian game. The half ended 18 to 3 in favor of Toronto.

In the final periods, however, Detroit playing under American rules, overcome the Toronto lead, scoring four touchdowns on forward passes and line plunges that were unfamiliar to the Canadians.

Snyder's Great Run.

Warren Snyder, captain and middle half of Toronto, brought the crowd to its feet in the first minute of play when on the first lineup of scrimmage, he circled the left end and sprinted 75 yards for a touchdown.

Following this Detroit scored its only point of the half when Philliport, Detroit full back, kicked a goal from the 15 yard line.

A Detroit fumble resulted in a Toronto touchdown when Campbell, outside wing, recovered a fumble and sprinted for the score. He kicked goal. Pequegnat, Toronto left half, scored the last Canadian touchdown going over the line after recovering a blocked Detroit punt.

Forward Passing.

Snyder opened the second half with a 35 yard run back after the kickoff but Toronto was helpless on attempts to smash the Detroit line and Detroit got the ball near midfield. A long pass, Philliport to Desroches put the ball deep in Toronto's territory and Schlickmeyer in two smashes carried it over. Brennan plowed through for the second touchdown a few minutes later while the third one came on a 25 yard pass, Philliport to Des Roches. The last came after a 30 yard run by Philliport and a 12-yard gain through the line by Brennan. Philliport carried it over for a touchdown but failed to kick goal.

Two previous attempts at place kicking for the added point proved successful and the other point was added on a pass to Des Roches.

FIRPO IN COURT IN $175,000 SUIT

Hears MacCorkindale Testify Argentine Owes Him 25 Per Cent. of Ring Earnings.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Luis Angel Firpo, South American heavyweight, forgot about boxing long enough Wednesday to appear in the Chancery Court, Jersey City, before Vice-Chancellor Lewis, in connection with a $175,000 suit instituted against the Argentine boxer by Andrew D. MacCorkindale, of Nutley, N.J., who seeks to recover 25 per cent. of all earnings from Firpo's bouts in this country, which are estimated at $700,400. Firpo is represented in the action by Prosecutor J. Milton, of Jersey City. Former Common Pleas Judge Richard Doherty represents MacCorkindale.

MacCorkindale claims that he had a contract to represent Firpo as the South American's manager in this country when Firpo first came here. On the stand Wednesday MacCorkindale admitted he had no written contract, saying the agreement was verbal.

He claimed to have made arrangements for Firpo to fight Italian Jack Herman and Sailor Tom Maxted, admitting that the agreement under which he negotiated these bouts was verbal. MacCorkindale further admitted that his only connection with motion picture rights of Firpo's fight with Maxted was in obtaining permission to have the pictures taken for a South American film company which paid him nothing for his work.

Firpo is under a $50,000 bond for his appearance in New Jersey whenever he is wanted in the courts.

NOVEL GOLF MARATHON

Wisconsin Addicts Play 63 Holes On Seven Different Courses Covering 20 3 Miles In One Day.

APPLETON, Wis., November 28.—Here's a new goal for the marathon golf field. Two local stars, J. D. Steele and H. L. Davis recently played 63 holes of golf over seven different courses, sovering a travelling distance of 203 miles, and all in one normal day.

The demon marathoners started from here at dawn for Oshkosh, played nine holes there, motored to Fond du Lac for nine more, then to Elkhart Lake, Sheboygan, Manitowoc and Green Bay, in the order named.

By now the sun was sinking in the west. A whizzing motor brought Steele and Davis back to their starting point, and in the gathering twilight they completed the last nine holes of their ordeal over their home course.

The average playing speed for a round was an hour and 10 minutes. Incidentally Davis beat his opponent by ten strokes in medal play and was one up in the match.

EUGENE CORRI ON BOXING AND BOXERS

Cleverness of Harry Leach—Soldier Jones Who Boxed Here in London.

By EUGENE CORRI (London.)

Of the cleverness and the promise of Harry Leach we have long been sure, and I saw in him, after his heroic failure last term against George M'Kenzie, one of the best little fellows for ever such a long time. And now at the Ring he set us all by the ears, by not only stopping Jim O'Donnell, of Stockport, but carrying the day when the odds seemed long against him. Let me tell you what happened so that you may appreciate the true merit of the performance of this Yorkshire lad.

In the first round he was sent with a bang to the boards, and stayed down for eight. If ever a man seemed to be out Leach did. But because of the grit that is in him, he pulled himself up, as though to say, "I have got to be killed to be beaten." But he was clearly in a very bad way, and if O'Donnel had kept his head he must have won in the second round. He was the stronger by far. But O'Donnell was all concerned about getting his right hand home; he was obsessed by the idea; and Leach profited accordingly.

Leach, in a way quite astonishing, took on a new lease of life, and the longer the fight lasted the stropger he became; so much so that he not only wore O'Donnell down, but reduced him to such a condition that at the beginning of the fourteenth round the referee very properly called a halt. The contest, if only because of the finish—a finish that was against all probability—was precisely after the liking of the crowd, who make a habit of turning up at the hall across the river.

Leach will do few better things than his win over O'Donnell—a good, strong, honest fighter, if ever there was one. There is something more than a whisper of a return, but what we most want is to see Leach against George M'Kenzie at headquarters for the feather-weight title, for which they have been matched for some time past.

This should go far to compensate us for a great many disappointments, and should do much in the way of rekindling memories of greater boxing days. In Leach, Doncaster has given to the game one of the best little fighters we have seen for ever such a long time. Certainly George M'Kenzie could want no better opponent, and the club could not wish for a fight richer in promise

Light Weights' Chances.

I wish I could speak of the light-weights in the same strain as I have written about Leach. But I cannot. The eight young fellows who have taken part in the eliminating bouts have not realised expectations at all. I have been very disappointed with them. Not one of them is within reasonable distance of Freddie Welsh or Matt Wells, for instance. I did expect quite a deal from Ernie Izzard at the Club, recently, but, although he came through his affair with Tommy M'Innes, of Hamilton, with success, he did not shape more than fairly well, and certainly did not like a champion.

He has put on flesh since last I saw him, and he did not appear to be so good as when he won the Crystal Palace tournament some time ago. He is still very speedy on his feet, and in the arrangement of himself he is more than a trifle clever, but he has not come back from America with a sure winning punch. When Izzard went to the States I was sure that he would improve no end—that is, he would be made to realise that titles are mostly won by those who have it in them to hit hard and with a very definite purpose. Izzard, in a physical sense, has everything in his favour.

For one of his poundage he is exceptionally tall. His reach is extraordinary, and he makes it fairly obvious that he knows much about the art of boxing. But he is rather of a common kind in that he is deficient in punching powers. He had nothing very formidable to beat in M'Innes. The Scot was just a plain, honest fellow who, I should say, is only now learning the tricks of the trade.

In my opinion the most likely candidate for the light-weight championship is a London-Italian, Alf Mancini.

He is not so clever or as engaging as Izzard, but he is more of a complete fighter. There is much in him that reminds me of Ernie Rice, the former holder of the title. He swears by the punch. He proved altogether all too much for Sid Fanner, who was put up against him. And the contest was stopped in his favour in the fifth round. Mancini, Izzard, Jack Kirk, and Harry Robinson are the survivors of the competition which has to do with finding a successor to Harry Mason. And the four of them will take the ring on Monday week.

The attraction next Monday at the Club is a fifteen rounder between Billy Mack and Joe Rolfe, whom Peggy Bettinson still believes will become champion welter. And on this night we are to see Roland Todd, for the first time since his return from the States, against Joe Bloomfield, at Premierland, and in the afternoon, just to keep the bale rolling, George M'Kenzie will appear at Hoxton against Johnny Curley.

Phil Scott's Chance.

It is good news to know that Phil Scott has been fixed for another match. He is to meet Soldier Horace Jones at the N.S.C. next month. In the Canadian, Scott will find a man who fights harder than any he has yet encountered. Jones is anything but a stylist, but he is the very man to tell us whether Scott is made of the stuff a champion fighter must have.

If Scott beats Jones in anything like a convincing way, then he need not especially fear Jack Bloomfield, or any other of the big fellows. His stock will go up ever so high if he disposes of the Canadian, and as likely as not he will be given an early opportunity to try for the heavy-weight belt. The time arrived long ago for an official champion.

Meantime, so I am assured, Billy Wells is busy preparing to come back; and the latest about Jack Dempsey—this from Paris—is that some time next year he will present himself in the gay city to fight Paolino for two million francs and a percentage of the gate receipts! So there!

BULL FIGHTING IN BUDAPEST

BELGRADE, Nov. 28.—(United Press).—The attempt to acclimatise Spanish bull-fighting in Budapest has ended in failure. The number of spectators was not large and one of the toreadors was severely wounded. As a result, the enterprise suffered a loss estimated at two billion Hungarian crowns. In addition, the 125 million crowns taken at the box office was seized by the tax authorities in payment of the tax due to the Government. On the intervention of a deputation of members of parliament the Minister of Finance consented to this money being returned to the "unfortunate." It will help to defray the expenses of their return to Spain.

WALTER JOHNSON IS BENT ON MAKING HOME IN THE WEST

Great Pitcher Says He May Not Return to Capital.

RENO, Nevada, November 27. — The heart of Walter Johnson, who pitched the Washington American league baseball club to victory, was still set on making the west his future home to-day.

When he was shown an Associated Press despatch from Chicago, which quoted President Thomas Hickey of the American Association, as saying that the Washington twirler could raise enough money in 24 hours to finance the purchase of that city's club, Johnson only smiled a bit, and said he had not given consideration to the St. Paul offer.

"All the information I have received regarding the St. Paul offer has come through the papers, with one exception," Johnson said. "That exception was that I was told several weeks ago that Mr. Norton, owner of the St. Paul club, was about to retire. I have received no offer of any kind and in fact have given little attention to the matter."

Johnson read with interest the statement of Clark Griffith, the president of the Senators, in which he said that the pitching ace must succeed in purchasing a western club or pitch for the Senators next year.

"I'm not worrying," Johnson said; "I intend to make my home in the west if I can get a proposition that suits me."

CANADIAN NATIONAL INAUGURATES NEW FAST SERVICE TORONTO TO WINNIPEG, EFFECTIVE SUNDAY, DECEMBER 7TH

Commencing Sunday, December 7th, "The National" now leaving Toronto 10.45 p.m., daily for Winnipeg, will leave at 8.45 p.m., daily, and arrive Winnipeg 9.45 a.m., on the second day, making the run in the remarkably fast time of 38 hours actual schedule. Canadian National will thus be enabled to offer to its patrons the fastest train over the shortest route between the Capitals of Ontario and Manitoba.

In addition to the Compartment-Library-Observation and Standard and Tourist Sleeping Cars now forming in part the Winnipeg equipment of "The National", the train will carry as usual the ever popular Toronto-Sudbury Sleeper and also a Standard Sleeping Car which will operate through between Toronto, Port Arthur and Fort William during the month of December.

Canadian National patrons are invited to make every use of this new service, in which are blended the most modern of travel requisites, comfort, safety and speed. 28-2-6

LIGHTWEIGHT KING A FORMER PAINTER

Lucien Vinez Has Had a Rocky Road to Top of European Heap.

PARIS Nov. 28.—Lucien Vinez, who wrested the European lightweight championship from Fred Bretonnel recently, is 29 years old and has had a rather rocky road to the top of the European heap. He has been fighting for 11 years, meeting the best lightweights here, never scoring a knockout, but always winning close decisions.

Never popular with the boxing fans because of a peculiar style of combined attack and defence, he has never fought for large stakes. A house painter by trade he worked at it until two or three years ago, upon many occasions picking up brushes the very next morning after he had shed the gloves.

Like Criqui, he is a product of Belleville, the slums of Paris and like the former featherweight champion of the world, he has remained modest and unassuming.

The day after his victory over Bretonnel, one of his Belleville friends asked Vinez whether he could recommend a painted colleague who would give his house a new coat of paint.

"Cheapest possible, Lucien", admonished the friends, "you know I am not very rich."

"Don't worry about that," answered the new European lightweight champion, "Ill go and do it myself and it won't cost you a centime."

TWO OF SEASON'S CLOSEST GAMES FEATURE OF SOFTBALL BENEFIT

Orangemen Won Narrow Decision From the Kiwanis In Nine Innings.

SCORE WAS 10 TO 9.

Tool Room Beat De Laval 9-7, But Bowlers Were Easy For Teachers.

The fans who attended last night's games of the Softball League, for the benefit of Art Primeau, who broke his leg while playing for the Toolroom, were well rewarded for all the games were interesting exhibitions. A great number of tickets were sold and a gratifying sum was realized for Mr. Primeau.

Toolroom beat DeLaval in a close game in the Softball League last night. Rose for the Toolmakers and Kennedy for the DeLaval both pitched well, allowing 12 hits each, but Rose kept his opponents clouts well scattered.

A freak play came up in the fourth when McElroy slammed the ball up into a cranny in the rafters where it remained until Fowler of the DeLaval climbed up and retrieved it. As the bases were full at the time, Lefty receives credit for achieving the ball players' dream—a home run with the bases full.

L.O.L. 10—Kiwanis 9.

The second game was the feature of the evening's play. The Orangemen scored 3 in the first and the Kiwanians came right back with 3. The fife and drum boys collected 4 more in the next three stanzas and then the Kiwanians got them all back in the fifth. From then on the score went up in singles with the teams remaining deadlocked until L.O.L. 50 got a counter in the ninth that Kiwanis could not match. The club men had three hits in their ninth but threw away their chances by poor baserunning.

TO BANQUET CHAMPIONS.

City Council Committee Will Recommend Feasting the Lakeviews and P.C.I.

At a short meeting of the Legal and Reception Committee of the City Council, last night, with Alderman Crowe in the chair, it was decided to recommend to Council that the winners of athletic honors be entertained by the city. The banquet will include Lakeviews, Junior O.B.A. champions of Ontario, and P.C.I., winners of the Eastern Ontario Rugby championship. Aldermen Phelan, Maher and Crowe are members of the committee to arrange the details.

Arrangements were concluded for the reception to the Governor General today, and several matters of a legal nature were dealt with.

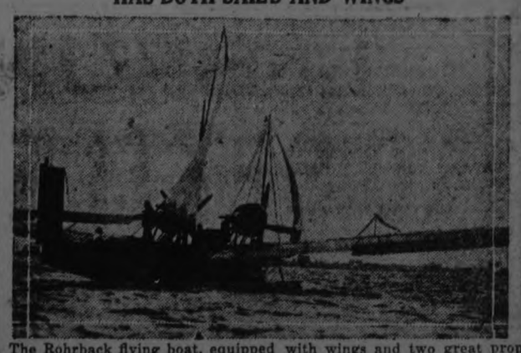
RICKARD BANS RADIO HAS HURT ATTENDANCE

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Radio broadcasting of boxing bouts is at an end, so far as Tex Rickard is concerned, it was learned at Madison Square Garden. The raeason given by one close to the New York promoter is that use of the radio keeps down attendance at bouts. For the past three years title boxing matches have been fought before microphones, the thud of the gloves and the shouts of the fans being plainly distinguishable, according to reports of listeners. Expert critics have been assigned the task of describing the contests and the far-away 'spectator' has received everything except the actual view of the combatants. Garden officials said that the radio listener has been satisfied with this blow by blow story as broadcast and therefore has not contributed his financial share to the support of the sport.

SCHOLES WON IN DETROIT

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 27.—Art Scholes wearing the colors of the Gladstone Athletic Club of Toronto to-day led the runners over the 10 mile course from Ferndal ,a suburb to the Moose Temple here in the annual marathon run sponsored by the Irish-American Athletic Club. He covered the distance in 55 minutes and 55 seconds.

HAS BOTH SAILS AND WINGS



The Rohrback flying boat, equipped with wings and two great propellers for flying and with sails for cruising on the water, recently broke several speed records on a Switzerland lake.

GIBBONS ABANDONS QUEST.

Tires of Chasing Dempsey, Seeks Titles Held by McTigue and Tunney

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 28.—Tommy Gibbons, St. Paul light-heavyweight boxer, has decided to abandon for the time being at least his quest for the heavyweight boxing championship and devote his time in an attempt to annex the light-heavyweight crown.

"I am getting nowhere in trying for a fight with Jack Dempsey," said Gibbons before leaving for New York to fight "Kid" Norfolk Dec. 9. "It is time I picked off a title and there's no reason why I can't add the American and world's light-heavyweight championship to my list of accomplishments, especially when I know that I can beat both McTigue and Tunney.

"I am leaving for New York several days ahead of time so I can spend some of my time convincing the New York commission that it could well lend its aid in the successful promotion of a fight with either McTigue or Tunney."

EMPLOYMENT SLACKENED.

Month of November Not as Good as October.

OTTAWA, Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press).—Employment in Canada fell off slightly on November 1, as compared with October 1, according to a bulletin yesterday issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The combined pay-rolls of 5,735 firms totalled 770,595 persons on October 1, and 762,848 on November 1.

The index number therefore declined from 93.9 to 93.0 during October. On November 1, 1923, 1922 and 1921, index figures stood at 98.9, 99.8 and 90.2 respectively. Employment in manufacturing as a whole declined; construction, hotels and shipping showed seasonal contractions, while logging, mining, steam railway operation and trade registered considerable improvement.

WESTCLOX TAKE THREE STRAIGHT FROM LAW LADIES

The Westclox took three straight last night from the Law Ladies in the Ladies' Mercantile Five Pin League. The Law Ladies were not up to their usual standard, while the Westclox Ladies were hitting them in great style.

Miss O'Brien had the high three games of the evening and also had the high single. She rolled 465 for the three games and 211 for the single game. Miss Scott was next highest with 425 and had a single of 164 and Miss Easson had a high single of 155.

The Ladies' Mercantile League is proving a great success and some good rolling has resulted from this league.

Following are the scores:

Westclox—
Miss Scott	140	164	121	425
Miss Sadler	77	117	124	318
Miss O'Brien	211	138	116	465

BRINTON CARPET LEAGUE

The Ardebils, by taking three straight from the Carltons last night, at the Water Street Allyes, upset the dope in the Brinton League. Some good rolling, as is usually the rule in the Brinton Carpet League, was shown last night.

O'Dette had the hight three games of the evening with 580 and Shaughnessy next with 534. Shaughnessy had the high single of the evening with 242.

Following are the scores:

Ardebils—
R. Martin	126	212	183	521

OBITUARY

In the passing away of Mr. P. A. Kearney, after a lingering and painful illness, Young's Point loses one of its oldest and most respected residents. He was a son of the late James Kearney, one of the early pioneers, and was born and lived all his life at Young's Point, having been post master there for over 30 years. At the time of his death he was in his 83rd year. His wife predeceased him 13 years ago, and there are left to mourn his loss five children: Thomas J. Kearney, of Vancouver, B.C., Mrs. W. E. Brooks, of South Beach, Young's Point; Mrs. W. E. McDonough, of Healy Fork, Alaska; Miss Jennie Kearney of Young's Point; Mrs. F. G. Young, of 434 Park street, Peterboro; thirteen grandchildren, four great grand-children, and one sister, Mrs. L. G. Fobert of Bridgenorth.

The funeral took place from his late residence on Wednesday morning, November 26th, at nine o'clock. Requiem mass was celebrated at St. Mary's church, by the Rev. Father Garvey; Father McGuire of Peterboro, preached the funeral sermon.

The services at the grave were conducted by Rev. Father Garvey, assisted by Rev. Father McGuire and Rev. J. J. O'Brien of Peterboro.

The funeral was largely attended by relatives and friends, who came to pay a last tribute of respect. The pall bearers were Messrs. W. E. Brooks, of South Beach, Young's Point, and F. G. Young, Peterboro, sons-in-law of the deceased; George St. Leonard of Toronto, G. H. Giroux of Peterboro; C. Young, of Lakefield, and P. P. Young of Young's Point.

The esteem in which the deceased was held was testified by the many spiritual and floral offerings.

WILLIAM JAMES MITCHELL.

Rev. S. Burnside Russell officiated at the funeral of William James Mitchell, which took place from his residence, 110 East Avenue North, to Hamilton Cemetery. It was largely attended. Mount Forest was represented by Mayor Allen, Mr. Scott, Dr. Beaton, Thomas Ellis and Dr. Perry; the county of Wellington by Warden Dickinson, County Clerk Beattie and John Young, county road superintendent; Elora by Undley Richardson, former M.L.A.; Wingham by ex-Mayor Elliott, and Listowel by the Town Council. The pall-bearers were: G., R. and H. Mitchell, brothers of the deceased, from Peterboro; D. Craig, brother-in-law; C. E. Fisher, representing Ionic Lodge, A. F. and A. M., and A. Hill, of Victoria Lodge I.O.O.F. The floral offerings were numerous and beautiful.

The deceased was a former resident of Peterboro, and a nephew of Mr. J. Graham Weir, Romaine Street.

SARAH JOY.

The death took place in West Toronto, yesterday, Thursday Nov. 28, at the residence of her son, Mr. J. R. Joy, of Sarah Joy, widow of the late Theodore L. Joy, aged ninety-two years.

The deceased left Peterborough some years ago to reside with her son in West Toronto, after spending many years a resident of Mark St., Ashburnham.

The late Mrs. Joy was a much beloved woman by all her friends and neighbours. Very few, however, are left who knew here when a resident here, and those who are still living will regret to learn of her death.

TRUTH VERSUS ERROR.

"A bruised reed will he not break and dimly burning wick will he not quench," Isa. 42. Surely these words symbolize a great bulk of mankind, and show the falsity (saying nothing of the heartlessness) of those who claim that the many millions of human beings of the past and present age are consigned to a place of endless torment. It is cheering to any one, who has any measure of the Spirit of Christ, to know that in the coming age, inherited tendencies, environments of an untoward character, ignorance, and other hindrances shall be removed, and mankind in general shall have a full complete chance of having eternal life. Then in that glad day of judgment Jesus will, assisted by His chosen ones (the complete Bride) bring forth justice to the nations, blind eyes shall be opened, and the clear clarion call of the "Bride" shall echo all over the earth—"Come, whosoever will let him take the water of 'life' freely."—M. T. Butcher. 1d-127-7615

Little Jane was walking in the country with her mother. "Gracious" exclaimed mother, "what is that noise?" "Oh, that's a cow mooing —trying to sell her milk," said Jane. First Burglar—"Hullo, Bill, you look annoyed. What's the matter?" Second Burglar—"Matter? Do you see this bill in the police window? They are offering $50 for my apprehension, and it used to be $100. My popularity must be on the wane."

PETERBORO.

Society

Mrs. H. H. Miller will receive for the first time since coming to Peterboro at 320 Boswell Avenue, on Saturday afternoon, from 4 to 6 o'clock. Her mother, Mrs. T. B. Taylor, will receive with her.

The Aeolian Trio, Miss Kathleen Wallis, Miss Beatrice Prest and Miss Muriel Gladman, assisted by Miss Esther Cassels and Miss Edith Foote, gave a most interesting recital in the big dining room of the Sherbourne House Club last night before a large audience. The platform was effectively done with palms and ferns. Miss Wallis wore a pink georgette frock with grey fur and silver. Miss Prest was in a draped white georgette. Miss Muriel Gladman was in pale yellow chiffon. Miss Edith Foote was in a pink silk frock. Miss Esther Cassels wore a pretty pale pink georgette with French roses and trimmings of silver. Among those present were Lady Flavelle, Miss Bailey, Miss Minty, Miss Proudfoot, Mrs. Herbert Macklem, Miss Charlton, Mrs. Gladman (Peterboro), Mr. and Mrs. J. Morris, Miss Leslie McGregor (Galt), Miss Tobie, Miss Walker, Mrs. Tyrrell, Mrs. Gossage, Mr. J. H. Harstone, Miss Stevenson (Peterboro), Mrs. Murray, Miss Nan Murray, Miss Wimnifred Gillespie, Mr H. Mr. Oswald R. Brooks of Oshawa, passed through Peterboro on his return home, after attending the funeral of his grandfather, the late P. A. Kearney of Young's Point.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. James Pilling will regret to learn that their little boy Harold is in the hospital with pneumonia.

ROBBED OF $300,000.

Jury Find that Conspiracy Had Existed to Extort Money From Prince.

LONDON, Nov. 28.— (Canadian Press.)—Jury in the Robinson conspiracy suit involving an unnamed Indian Prince, rendered a verdict this afternoon finding that conspiracy had existed to extort money from the Prince, known as "Mr. A.", but that Robinson and Mrs. Robinson were not parties to it.

The jury also found that "Mr. A" was induced to part with two checks for $150,000 each through such fear and alarm that his mind was unsettled and that the act was not free and voluntary.

After these findings the jury again retired to consider further questions put forward by Justice Darling, the presiding judge.

BANDITS SCARED OFF.

Proposed Hold-up of Toronto Bank's Armored Car Never . . Never Took Place. . .

TORONTO, November 28. — On a tip of a citizen that he overheard on the city hall steps the discussion of concerted plans for the hold-up of the Domion Bank's armoured car, and the head office of the bank itself, by a squadron of bandit cars, extraordinary precautions were taken by the police and the bank officials yesterday and last night, to guard the bank, and its messengers. Heavily armed special guards were on the bank premises all night. If an attack had been arranged, it was aparently scared of.

VOL. LV., No. 127 PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1924 PRICE THREE CENTS

DR. KING ASKS CITY COUNCIL TO RETURN FINE IMPOSED ON HIM BY MAGISTRATE LANGLEY

Conviction Under Drugs Act Was on Narrow Margin He Avers in Claim.

CAN'T BE DONE.

Peterborough's Share of the Plebiscite Revision is $1,073.85—Investigate Pool Rooms.

That the City Council is not in a position to interfere in the course of justice as meted out by the courts will be its reply to Dr. D. C. King's application for remission of a fine imposed upon him if a recommendation made by the Finance Committee last night is adopted at Monday night's meeting. Dr. King was fined $300 and costs on March 21 last, on conviction before Magistrate O. A. Langley, of selling drugs contrary to the provisions of the Opium and Narcotic Drugs Act, the case arising out of a raid made by the city police in which a number of addicts were caught and given terms of imprisonment.

Dr. King remarked in his appeal to the Council that the fine was made on a very narrow margin of evidence under new amendments to an Act placing the burden of proof on the person accused.

"I had prescribed what I thought was the proper treatment," Dr. King says, "and the Magistrate was so much in doubt that he required to reserve judgment and then finally gave judgment against me. As the fine was paid to the city, I feel that under these peculiar circumstances you might see your way clear to remit the penalty and repay the amount of the fine to me."

Revising Lists.

W. F. Huycke, clerk of the Election Board, reported that the cost of revision of voters' list and election expenses amounted to $2,025.28, of which Peterboro's share is $1,073.85, and requested prompt payment to His Honor Judge Huycke, chairman of the board, who will distribute the amount. This account, for the recent plebiscite, is $183.73 more than last year's Provincial election expenses.

Alderman Stocker remarked that the larger municipalities are of the opinion that detailed statements should be presented.

Alderman Phelan said the treasurer would prefer itemized statements so that he might apportion the amount.

It was reported that Mr. Huycke is unable to provide this since the accounts are bulked together and divided according to population of the municipalities affected.

Alderman Maher suggested that a detailed statement might be furnished for the treasurer's file.

Mayor Turner moved that the cheque for the city's share be made out and a request attached that, if convenient, the detailed statement be sent. "We have confidence in the men who have been elevated to these high offices," the Mayor remarked.

Alderman Stocker—"We wouldn't do it in our own businesses."

Alderman McIntyre seconded Mayor Turner's motion and approved the sentiment expressed by him regarding the officials. He was supported by Alderman Fife, and Alderman Stocker said he would go with the majority.

The motion carried, no one dissenting.

Pool Rooms.

A discussion took place of the recent case of a pool-room keeper who failed to obtain a license, and this broadened into an analysis of conditions existing in other pool-rooms.

An investigation may be asked for, and in the meantime His Worship the Mayor will draw the alleged conditions to the attention of the Police Commission.

Grant $50.

A grant of $50 will be made to Leon Frazer, secretary of the Trent Waterway Development Association toward the expenses of advertising the district at New York Motor boat Show.

BECK WILL RESIGN FROM HYDRO CONTROL IN 1925

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 29.—Speaking Friday to the London Kiwanis, Sir Adam Beck announced that he would resign from the Chairmanship of the Ontario Hydro Commission as soon as the last generator had been installed at Queenston. Present arrangements call for the installation of this generator in the world's largest power plant in 1925, so that Sir Adam will probably retire from this, greatest of his interests next year.

The news caused a bombshell and Sir Adam's statement pronouncing his decision was greeted with cries of "No", "No". He reiterated his intention however, but added that he would not relinquish his active interest in either the Queen Alexandra Sanitorium "the dearest thing in my heart," or in London's Transportation system problem.

GOUGH CHARGED IN BANK TRIAL

Third Director of Home Bank Accused of Having Made False Returns.

OPENED FRIDAY.

TORONTO, November 29.—Judge Coatsworth, having refused a certificate to C. A. Barnard, the Home Bank director, to admit that the conviction was suitable for appeal, will likely sentence him on Monday, with Lieut.-Colonel Clarence F. Smith, another director; Sidney H. Jones, auditor, and Ocean C. Smith, accountant.

The case of Barnard, it is understood, has aroused the interest of Hon. Charles J. Doherty, a former Minister of Justice, at Ottawa, who visited Hon. W. F. Nickle, Attorney-General on Friday, at the Parliament Buildings, and discussed the case of Mr. Barnard, who is his brother-in-law. No statement was made concerning the visit.

Cover Old Ground.

The greater part of the time yesterday in the trial of R. P. Gough, the third director to be tried, was taken up with the reading of evidence before the Royal Commission which inquired into Home Bank matters. The only other evidence was the formal submission of the reports of the bank to the government upon which the charges are based.

Gough is charged with making a false monthly statement as well as approving the annual statement of the bank for 1923.

B. J. Roberts, secretary of the Department of Finance, produced the documents which were put in by the Crown.

Sentenced Monday.

Three directors, the chief accountant and the auditor, have now been tried. Four have been convicted and are to be sentenced on Monday morning.

The other two directors yet to be tried are F. J. B. Russill and S. Casey Wood, K.C. Then will come the conspiracy charge in the assizes against the directors with M. J. Haney, a former director, also arraigned.

On top of this the directors are also facing a civil law suit by the Home Bank liquidator for the recovery of $5,000,000.

EGYPT'S NEW PREMIER.

Ziwar Pasha, president of the senate of Egypt, succeeds Zaghloul Pasha as premier, following the latter's resignation because of Great Britain's ultimatum concerning the death of Sirdar Stack.

PROPAGANDA OF SOVIET ABROAD

Premier Rykoff Equivocates That Communist International is Independent of Moscow.

IGNORES LEAGUE.

MOSCOW, Nov. 29.—That the Communist International is carrying on propaganda abroad, was admitted yesterday by Premier Rykoff in discussing Russia's present situation among the world Governments. He argued, however that the international was an organization independent of the Soviet Government.

"Affiliated with the communist international" he said, "are communist parties which are prosecuting their work legally in England, France, the United States and other countries. We have no reason to refuse representatives of these parties protection or the right of refuge, nor can we forbid them to co-ordinate their activities."

Won't Join League

The Premier said that he considered the political movement was to the "right" in Great Britain, Germany and the United States, but that this movement only brought Europe much nearer an armed struggle. He felt that Germany's acceptance of the Dawes plan forfeited that country's economic independence, but he foresaw the ultimate joining of Germany and the Soviet in the closest relations.

The Soviet Premier declared that nothing had happened in the past year to persuade the Soviet Government to join the League of Nations.

"We shall never link our foreign policy with the decisions of a league which is organized for the sole purpose of exercising an Entente dictatorship over Europe," he added.

It is useless hoping for the best, unless you are also working for it.

FRENCH DEBT WILL BE DISCUSSED BY U. S. BODY

Conferences Look For Basis For Refunding Obligation.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—The French debt to the United States will be discussed by the United States debt commision at a meeting here December 1. Members of the Commission will be informed at that time of results of a series of conferences between Secretary Mellon and Ambassador Jusserand, looking to a possible basis for refunding the French Government's obligation, which is the second largest amount loaned by the United States to its associates during the world war.

Meetings between Mr. Mellon and the Ambassador have been entirely informal and their discussions are understood to have been directed to a clarification of the understanding between the two Governments with respect to the French fiscal position. The talks however, are expected to lead to tangible results, although the meeting of the commission which was called Friday by Secretary Mellon, probably will do no more than go over the situation as it is now known by the treasury head.

Expect Reduction

PARIS, Nov. 29.—Finance Minister Clementel, after Friday's Cabinet meeting, said Ambassador Jusserand's conversations with Secretary of the Treasury Mellon in Washington were all that had taken place so far between representatives of the two countries concerning the French debt to the United States. The Minister expressed belief that the United States Government would grant a decided reduction in the rate of interest on the debt and hoped there would be a similar substantial reduction in the principal.

STEAMER IN DISTRESS.

'Berengaria" Receives Radio Call and Responds.

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—The steamer Castelporziano was reported in distress in a wireless despatch picked up at the Boston navy yard last night.

The S. O. S. call was picked up shortly before 8 o'clock and all local broadcasting stations were ordered to stand by for forty minutes. Dispatches intercepted here a few minutes later indicated that the liner Berengaria was proceeding to her assistance. The position of the Castelporziano was estimated at 1500 miles off the Atlantic coast, almost due east from Norfolk, Va.

ROBBER CAUGHT.

Tried to Rob Bank—Caught by Messenger.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Nov. 29. — (Canadian Press Cable via Reuters).—Owing to the heroism of W. Almeda, a messenger for the Hampton suburb branch of the Commercial Bank, an attempt at bank robbery Friday was frustrated. Although shot and seriously wounded in the stomach the messenger chased one of two men suspected of having attempted to rob the bank and compelled him to return to the bank. Almedia thereupon collapsed. His condition was regarded as critical.

The other suspect was detained.

UNCHRISTIAN SPIRIT.

LONDON, Nov. 29. — (Canadian Press). — "An English parson recently spoke about our unchristian spirit towards Easterners in Australia," declared Sir Joseph Cook, High Commissioner in London for Australia, yesterday. "I wonder if we got one hundred million Easterners in Australia, what would become of that parson's Christianity."

OPIUM SESSION ADJOURNED TO AVOID RUPTURE

U. S. Proposal for Survey of Opium Production by Major Commission Opposed.

INDIA OBJECTED.

Bishop Brent Declared U.S. A. Could Not Compromise With a Curse.

GENEVA, Nov. 29.—Strong opposition to proposals of the United States delegation to the plenary session of the international opium conference developed at Friday's session of that body and so sacrimonious grew the debate that the meeting was finally adjourned until Monday. The conference voted to send the first proposal of the United States delegation—that the manufacture of heroin be prohibited—to the first commission for examination.

It was on the second item of the U. S. program that difficulties were encountered. India opposed Representative Stephen G. Porter's resolution to the effect that the first commission should study the proposal looking to the control of the production of raw opium and coca leaves so that no surplus would be advailable except for scientific purposes and for opium smoking which is still authorized. This resolution, if incorporated in the convention would mean the discontinuance of India's growth of opium for personal use of the natives.

H. Clayton representing India, immediately registered a protest, insisting that the resolution was out of order and declaring that if adopted it would wreck the conference and thereby do harm to the League of Nations.

Relieve Millions.

Mr. Porter argued that the whole basis of the conference was restriction of the production of opium to medical and scientific needs, and he appealed to all the delegates to treat the entire problem on broad grounds so as to bring relief to the millions of people who he said were suffring from "ghastly drugs."

It was emphasized by Mr. Porter that his proposal was clearly within the scope of the conference. India, he said, had appealed to the United States to recede from the position which the United States had maintained from the very start. He, in his turn, said he wished to appeal to India and ask India to agree that soul-destroying drugs should be limited to purely medical and scientific requirements. "Only by doing that can we put sunshine and happiness into millions of homes where misery and squalor exist," declared the delegate amid ringing applause that lasted several minutes.

India Would Retire.

Mr. Campbell, the chief delegate for India, asserted that the United States delegates at the meeting last year had withdrawn their objections to India's reservation concerning opium eating in India and had clearly said they did not wish to interfere in domestic matters. Mr. Campbell added that the question could not be reopened and announced that if it were put in the agenda India would find it extremely difficult, and perhaps impossible, to continue in attendance upon the conference.

Bishop Charles H. Brent, United States, vigorously attacked Mr. Campbell's position and said he regretted the Indian delegate had raised the question of national honor. The United States delegation stood by the records of the League of Nations, which were available to all. The Bishop added that the Americans had made no compact about the Indian reservations, and if they had they would have been repudiated by the Washington Government.

No Compromise.

Coutinning, Bishop Brent said the United States could not compromise with a curse, and he merely wanted honest and fair treatment of the proposals so as to master the terrible scourge. If during the discussion India got in the way, that was her concern, but she could immediately retreat behind a reservation. The Bishop said he considered Mr. Campbell honest in his motives, but he wished Mr. Campbell had attributed motives equally honest and honorable to the American delegation.

Senor Aguero, Cuba, moved that the situation was so serious it was best to adjourn and give the delegates an opportunity for calm reflection, and perhaps a compromise on the formula.

The conference thereupon adjourned to meet next Monday morning.

ULSTER AND BRITISH GOVERNMENTS DECLINE TO DISCUSS IRISH BOUNDARY

Free State to Make Representations to Boundary Commission in London—Failure of Commission Fresaged By Ulster's Refusal.

BELFAST, Nov. 29. — The Governments of both Great Britain and northern Ireland have informed the boundary commission that they do not care to submit statements to the commision or appear before it by counsel, or otherwise, according to a statement issued Friday by the commission.

The Government of the Free State, it was added, has submitted a formal statement regarding Article 12 of the boundary treaty and has also intimated its desire to appear before the commission by counsel at a later meeting in London.

The refusal of the Ulster Government to have anything to do with the boundary commission is not surprising, and it is interpreted as presaging the failure of the commission to accomplish anything. The British expression of lack of desire to appear is accepted as meaning that Great Britain takes the position that the commission was appointed to hear what the Irish have to say, and not the British, and thereafter to report back to the Westminster Government.

ACCEPTANCE OF BRIBES DENIED BY MONTREAL POLICE OFFICERS

Witness Swore He Paid for the Protection of Gambling in His Shop.

PAID WITH CASH.

'Fight Manager" Tells of "Frame Up" By Police to Trap Him.

MONTREAL, Nov. 29.—(Canadian Press).—Eddie ("Kid") Baker, who said he was a manager of prize-fighters, but admitted that he had not "managed" anybody for several months, and that consequently he was "broke," was one of the witnesses at Friday afternoon's session of the local police probe. In the course of his testimony, Baker declared that at one time a man named Tom Campeau, whom he described as a police "stool pigeon," tipped him off that local authorities had prepared a trap in which they hoped to ensnare him in connection with the robbery of a St. Catherines Street store belonging to a tailor named Kissis.

Previous evidence given in Mr. Justice Coderre's court, where the enquiry into alleged local police corruption is proceeding, was to the effect that Kissis, after being roobed reported to the police that "Kid" Baker had approached him with an offer to get his stolen goods back for a certain sum of money, and that following receipt of this information the authorities had arranged with the tailor to give the "fight manager" $25 and to ask him to bring the goods to a specified place, near which constables would be embushed ready to seize him.

Baker was said to have returned the $25 to Kissis a couple of days later with the declaration that it was a frame-up and that he would proceed no further in the matter of recovering the missing articles.

On the stand yesterday, Baker swore that he had not approached Kissis and that the latter had come to him for help.

He declared that he had actually lost money through trying to help the tailor get back his stolen goods.

An Artful Witness.

While he was on the stand, Baker proved himself a rather difficult witness to handle, being extremely reticent concerning his private affairs, and more than once J. P. Lanctot, who is conducting the investigation, complained to Judge Coderre that he would not answer questions. His Lordship, after a personal attempt to pry some information out of the "manager of prize fights," remarked that with his "cleverness," Baker would do well in some "legitimate business."

Another witness from local fistic circles was Sam. Sailor, whose evidence showed that he had been arrested in Montreal several times. No effort was ever made to secure his police record in the United States, or to deport him thither, although the local authorities knew that he was "wanted" across the border.

Denied Taking Bribes.

Earlier in the afternoon, Inspector Robert, who was charged in the morning by a witness with accepting several bribes of fifty dollars for "protection," emphatically denied that he had ever accepted money from the witness in question or from anybody else, while Captain Ainey, who was charged by the same witness with taking a single fifty dollar bribe, also made a vigorous denial.

The witness who charged these two officers with accepting money from him was a plumber named Charles Gauthier, who admitted running a gambling business in a room behind his shop on Montcalm Street.

He testified that he had given Captain Ainey, who is his brother-in-law, fifty dollars to "lay off" him and that he had made four payments of fifty dollars to Inspector Robert for further police protection. In proof of his assertions, he produced four cheques for fifty dollars, made payable to cash and endorsed by himself, stating that he had drawn the money from the bank in order to pay the Inspector cash.

Gauthier also testified that he had given a hundred dollars to a Mr. Demers, a clerk in the police court, which he was sure was not to pay his fine. This transaction occurred after his first arrest for keeping a gambling establishment, he said.

Gauthier, who occupied the stand most of the morning and part of the afternoon, told the court that he had not paid money to any members of the police force but his brother-in-law, Captain Ainey, Inspector Robert and Mr. Demers. His affairs, domestic and otherwise, occupied a good deal of the day's session.

Gauthier stated that his house was known as a gaming house in the immediate neighborhood, but apparently not generally so.

The Commissioner — "Did you come in vourself to make this report?" The witness replied with an emphatic negative.

Mr. Lanctot—"Far from it; he has done a good deal to avoid appearing here."

The Commissioner — "Then it gives you no pleasure to come here and tell your story?" — "I do not want to cause trouble for anyone. I am very sorry to have to come here."

The Commissioner — "Then it is not a case of settling a grudge?"—"No, sir."

Mr. Lanctot—"You are related to Captain Ainey?" — "Yes, we are married to two sisters."

Gauthier further stated that Capt. Ainey had never arrested him personally. He had been three or four years engaged in 'running a game.' Prior to his arrest, he had been in that line of business some nine or ten years altogether. The two men of the families concernerd called on one another and were friends, but witness did not have much to do with Ainey personally.

The Commissioner — "How did these payments take place and where?"—"Once down stairs here —"

"Where?" — "In the police court offices. That was on the occasion of my first arrest."

The Commissioner—"And afterwards?" — "At Inspector Roberts' Ontario Street home."

Cheques Didn't Go.

"Were these payments by

LAST OXEN IN HARNESS A CURIOSITY AT APSLEY

Recall Pioneer Days of Laborious Work and Hardships.

APSLEY, Nov. 28.—George Seney, of Hadlington, twenty miles north of here, brought his yoke of oxen to Apsley on Wednesday with the intention of disposing of them. They were weighed on the scales here, one weighing exactly 2,000 lbs. and the other over 1,600. They were a source of attraction to young and old, to the latter reminiscent of their own early pioneer days, bringing back with mixed feelings, memories of hardship, privation and toil unknown to the younger generation, who only viewed them with casual curiosity. This is probably the last yoke of oxen to be worked in the back country.

The annual Christmas tree and entertainment of the Methodist church will be held on Christmas Day at St. George's Institute and Parish Hall and at Haultain on December 19th.

ROBINSONS NOT IN CONSPIRACY AGAINST RAJAH

Jury Returns Verdict in London's Sensational 125,000-Pound Blackmail Case.

JUDGMENT LATER.

Bank Obeyed Mandate of Cheque's Deposit—Evidence Endangers Newton.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—The jury delivered its verdict yesterday in the extraordinary suit brought by C. E. Robinson, a former bookmaker, against the Midland Bank, but judgment was deferred pending legal arguments, which will be heard at a later day. For eight days the case aroused widespread interest, because of the charges brought out that an unnamed Indian Prince, referred to as "Mr. A" was held up for blackmail after he had been discovered in a Paris apartment with Mrs. Robinson.

The jury found that there had been a conspiracy to extort money from the Prince and that the mysterious potentate, whose name was kept secret for "reasons of state" parted with £150,000 while his mind was unsettled through fear. It found, however, that neither Mr. Robinson nor his wife were parties to the conspiracy.

Judge Darling had decided that the question of negligence on the part of the bank in connection with the £125,000 which Mr. Robinson alleged was due him, was beside the issue, but after the jury gave its verdict on the conspiracy point, it retired again to consider other technical questions concerning the bank and the check put by the Judge.

Hobbs in the Plot.

The jury's replies to these questions established that the bank in paying out £150,000 had obeyed the mandate under which the money was received and cleared the check, and that William Cooper Hobbs, a solicitor, it has been declared on the witness stand, was a party to the plot against "Mr. A" in drawing out the money, purported to act under the same authority as that under which he paid the check into the bank; that Hobbs had no intention of transferring his whole right, if any, in the check of £150,000 to the plaintiff. But on the question whether the rights in the check were ever transferred by Hobbs or Appleton and Company to the plaintiff, the jury disagreed. The Judge said he would not take the responsibility of ordering the jury to retire again to consider this question, which was not sufficiently material. The jury was then discharged and the court rose.

Newton in Danger.

In the course of his summing up, Judge Darling remarked on the risk being taken by Montague Noel Newton, who had testified to having posed as the husband of Mrs. Robinson. "He is in danger now," the Judge said, "there is no doubt of it."

Newton's appearance, when it was supposed he was abroad, has been one of the most startling inci-

SOVIET WILL NOT JOIN THE LEAGUE

Government Says the League Has Done Nothing in Past Year to Persuade Them.

MOSCOW, Nov. 29.—(Canadian Press.)—That Communist international is carrying on a propaganda abroad was admitted yesterday by Premier Rykoff in discussing Russia's present situation among the world governments. He argued, however, that international was an organization independent of Soviet government.

"Affiliated with the Communist international," he said, "Are communist parties which are prosecuting their work legally in England, France, United States and other countries."

The Premier said he considered the Political Movement to right in Great Britain, Germany and United States, but that this movement only brought nearer Europe much nearer armed struggle.

The Soviet Premier declared that nothing had happened in the past year to pursuade the Soviet Government to join the League of Nations.

"We shall never link our foreign policy with decision of league which is organized for the sole purpose of exercising an entente, dictatorship over Europe," he said.

MAKE STREET SAFE.

City Council Will Investigate Possibilities of Avoiding Accidents.

On suggestion of Mayor J. J. Turner at last night's meeting of the Board of Works, the members will meet at Donegal street C.N.R. crossing on Monday evening at 5 o'clock to view the situation from the standpoint of protection from trains.

It was suggested to the Council that the road be closed to traffic, but it was felt that there must be some other solution of the problem. The nevt street east is already closed and the blocking of Donegal street would impose a hardship on the residents in that locality.

"And anyhow," as one Alderman declared, "the street was there generations before the railway'.'

THE GUMPS—THE FAMILY SKELETON

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Bazaar of Christ Church a Big Success—Social Events in Town.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 29.—The bazaar of Christ Church Willing Workers was formally opened on Friday night at eight o'clock by Mr. J. F. B. Belford, M.P.

The kitchenware booth, decorated in orange and silver tinsel, was in charge of Mrs. T. E. Tait and Miss Helen Tait. The decorations were put up in the form of a triangle and a large number of articles for sale.

The next booth, a wheel of fortune, each one getting the article corresponding with the one turned on the wheel. Miss L. Smith was the convenor, with Mrs. Humphries, Mrs. Clarke and Mrs. M. West assisting. This booth was decorated in red, white and blue.

The flower booth, decorated in green and white, filled with pretty plants, was in charge of Mrs. Lawford and Mrs. A. Denmark.

The home cooking booth, with Christmas decorations and red and white, was to be in charge of Mrs. C. Benor and Miss M. Muffit. As the bazaar is to be held also on Saturday, the donations were not brought in on Friday.

Across the hall was the fish pond, in yellow and white, with large and small paper fishes pinned on the white. Mrs. Tinney and Mrs. E. Cassan were in charge of this.

A larger booth for the fancy work and plain sewing, decorated with bells and green and red, was looked after by Mrs. Burling, Mrs. Wilsher, Mrs. F. Lang and Miss A. Martin. This booth was filled with all sorts of articles, large and small, fancy and plain, everything for one to choose from.

Ye olde booke shoppe, in charge of Mrs. Caddy and Miss Archer, was in orange and black, where books of all sizes and kinds were shown.

At the front just below the stage was the candy booth, in pink and blue, with Mrs. Jenkins, Miss Maynard and Miss E. Bedford in charge. Here candies of all sorts and shapes, some in fancy boxes, some in little fancy baskets, and others in bags were for sale. Last but not least was the mysterious "Tut's tomb," up to date, brought over for the express purpose, in charge of Mrs. F. Burgar and Miss Campbell.

A large number of people visited the hall on Friday night, and the ladies at the booths were kept busy.

2nd Vice-Pres.: Mrs. J. S. Fan-

The bazaar will be open Saturday afternoon and evening, with a six o'clock supper in the basement. The ladies have done their utmost to make the two day's bazaar a great success, as the proceeds go to swell the fund raised during the anniversary month for the debt on the Parish Hall.

Birthday Party.

A very pleasant evening was spent on Friday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Taylor, when their youngest daughter Jennie, celebrated her twenty-first birthday About twenty-five guests were present.

The evening was spent in games, cards, music and dancing for a short time after dinch. Part of the evening was spent in telling incidents that happened in England while the family lived there. These were very interesting and were enjoyed by all present.

A very dainty lunch was served and a large birthday cake was cut. It was prettily decorated in pink and white with the word 'Jennie" and the date.

The top story of this cake with the words loving wishes from Canada will be sent to Mrs. Taylor's parents and other relatives in England. Miss Jennie received many pretty and useful presents among which was a beautiful clock given to her by her father and mother. The congratulations of all her friends present were tendered her and best wishes for many more birthdays.

Social Evening.

Mr. and Mrs. George Beggs, Sebastapool street, entertained a large number of their friends on Friday night, at their home.

The evening was spent in dancing and social time. The hostess served a dainty lunch during the evening and the dancing continued till the small hours of the morning.

Mrs. Harry Bambrick and little son Harry of Cobalt, are the guests of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Cassan, Sebastapool street, and other relatives.

Miss Helen Dayman, of Colborne, is visiting friends and relatives in Campbellford this week.

NEWS OF HAVELOCK.

A November Wedding and Other Social Events in Town.

HAVELOCK, Nov. 29.—A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized on the 26th inst., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Forde, when their daughter Ella, became the bride of Mr. William Woodbeck, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Woodbeck, of town. Rev. J. McIlroy officiated. The bride was becomingly attired in a gown of sand crepe de chine. After a honeymoon trip to Toronto and other points, Mr. and Mrs. Woodbeck will return to Havelock, where they will make their home.

Sale of Work.

The Parish Guild of St. John's Anglican church held their annual sale of work and supper in the basement of the church on Thursday evening. A large number of useful and fancy articles were on sale.

Mrs. Holdcroft had charge of a work table for the junior branch of the Women's Auxiliary. The proceeds amounted to $117.00.

The regular meeting of the Ladies' Aid of Knox church was held in the basement of the church on Wednesday afternoon, when arrangements were made for their bazaar.

Miss Mary Patterson spent Sunday with friends in Madoc.

Mr. Jos. Harrison visited relatives in Hastings and Westwood this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Pacey are moving to Toronto next week.

SHIP 3,132,000 EGGS.

Steamer Melita Sailed For England From Montreal This Morning.

MONTREAL, Nov. 29.—(Canadian Press).—What is claimed to be the largest shipment of eggs ever to leave this port on a single vessel, was carried to-day on the Melita, which sailed for Belfast and Glasgow with a cargo of Canadian produce, including 3,132,000 eggs, or 8,702 cases.

The Whole Family Finds Enjoyment in the

Heintzman & Co. New Player-Piano

For young and old there is real enjoyment in the Heintzman & Co. Player-Piano—the piano with the aluminum action.
This instrument is for those who can play and those who cannot. Every one can take a turn at it.
It will fill a void in your home, for with it you can idle away a pleasant, restful evening with congenial company, or when alone, and the hours drag, you can play any favorite to suit your mood.

ANTON FLETTNER

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—They laughed at Columbus and at Robert Fulton and at thousands of the men whose vision has made the world move forward.

And now, if there ever was a prime object for derision, it is Anton Flettner and his new sailless, engineless ship which he moves by what he calls a "rotor."

The trouble for the jokers is that it seems to work.

Conservative business men are investing their money in it. Trial trips are reported marvelously successful. It is said to reduce crews, save space and effect economies estimated at from 35 to 60 per cent. It may revolutionize ocean transportation as completely as did the steamship.

Flettner's ship, the Buckau, is a 2,000-ton freighter, rebuilt for his experiments. The masts are removed, and in their place are two steel cylinders, rising from the keel and standing about 60 feet in the air. They are about nine feet in diameter. A small electric motor is used to start them revolving, and as they spin around the ship moves. Their speed reaches 120 revolutions a minute.

A ship so equipped can drive through the worst ocean storms, according to the inventor, and attain a speed far beyond the average of steam freighters.

How does it work? What makes the ship go?

Silence is Flettner's answer to the questions. He has made long tests on the Baltic Sea and plans a voyage to America, but he withholds announcement of the hidden principle which he applies.

All he reveals is that it is a development of the Magnus Law, a principle of physics discovered in Germany more than half a century ago. This law asserts that a cylinder revolving in a current of air will exert pressure at right angles to the current. But how this principle can be utilized to harness enough power from the wind to drive a ship is a mystery to the great uninitiated public, both scientists and laymen alike.

Wonders, of course, are what the world is filled with. Electricity is fully as miraculous to the surface observer as these fragmentary accounts of Flettner's rotor ship. Even sailing ships daily accomplish the seemingly unreasonable feat of progressing against the wind.

The Hamburg-American line is reported so thoroughly sold on the Flettner idea that it has committed itself to install the rotor on ten new freighters for its Asiatic trade. The Stinnes Shipping Co. likewise is said to plan using the rotor. The pioneer ship of Flettner's was equipped by the Krupp concern.

The inventor previously has established himself sufficiently in the scientific world for his announcements to be taken seriously. He has perfected a rudder and now is director of aerodynamics at the Institute of Amsterdam.

One further question suggests itself from Flettner's experiments. If the wind can be harnessed by his cylinders to drive a ship, could it not be caught on land to generate power for any industrial purpose?

PETHERICKS CORNERS.

Fire Destroys Farm Buildings—Baseball at a Prayer Meeting.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, Nov. 29.—On Tuesday forenoon, a very disastrous fire occurred when all of the buildings of Mr. Harry Sweet on the 12th Concession, went up in flames.

Mr. and Mrs. Sweet were at the barn bagging up some grain to take to the mill, when the fire broke out. The fire originated about the stove pipes, the house and barn and all of the surrounding buildings were soon destroyed and all that was saved was a team of horses, their load of grain and a few items of household furniture.

Baseball Match

A very enjoyable evening was spent at the prayer meeting on Thursday when the service took the form of an indoor baseball match; two very evenly contested sides were chosen and with questions from Psalm 23 and Matt. 5, 1-26 the two sides fought away until the end of the fifth innings the score being 1-2. The next scheduled game will be 1st chapter of Genesis and 103 psalm

The public and Sunday schools have decided to have a Christmas entertainment in the hall as usual and all efforts are being put forth to make this the most successful one that has ever been given.

A large number of the men from this neighborhood attended the shooting match on Wednesday and brought home with them quite a number of birds.

Mr. Alfred Barnum returned on Thursday evening from Toronto, where he has been visiting for about a week.

CAVAN MAN FOUND GUILTY.

Geo. Lane Remanded Until Dec. 14 For Sentence.

COBOURG, Nov. 29.—Considerable interest was taken in the trial of George Lane, of Cavan, who was tried by Judge Cameron at the County Criminal Court here. Lane, who is aged 37 years, has been living around Cavan for many years.

The charge against Lane was that of having carnal knowledge of a girl under the age of 14 years. Judge Cameron found the accused guilty, and remanded him until December 14 for sentence, and also to give his counsel time to produce character evidence.

cheque?"—"Cash, cheques did not go." (Laughter). Witness stated that the payments to the inspector had been divided over a period running from the spring of 1921 into 1922.

"How many payments did you make to Inspector Roberts"—"One at the police court and three at his house."

"How much did you give him?"—"Fifty dollars each time."

Gauthier stated that when he wanted the cash to pay Roberts he would send his daughter, who was twenty-six years old, to the bank to cash a cheque, payable to cash and use the proceeds. He had told her on various occasions that the money was to save him from being arrested.

Mr. Lanctot—"When and how did you meet Inspector Robert?"—"It was the first time I was arrested. I was introduced to him by friends who said that he would be a good man for me to know."

The Commissioner then asked how Gauthier's case had actually been disposed of and received the reply that there had been a fine of $50 and the costs.

Mr. Justice Coderre—"And over and above that you gave Inspector Robert $50 to help you?"—"Yes, sir."

Drunk Several Times.

Cross-examined by Oscar Gagnon witness denied that he had had any family trouble with Captain Ainey over his mother-in-law's will. He had been in prison once for a period of nine months for theft. He had also been arrested several times for gambling. "He came to my place often since then," witness said. "He has been drunk in my place many times." Witness had forbidden his wife to admit Capt. Ainey's children to his house because he thought they only came to spy on him.

"You have told us that you once said to one of your friends, 'it takes a dirty dog not to notify us, after we paid him to do it.' Did you also speak to Gagnor about that?"—"Yes."

"Did you speak to Mr. Mercier, proprietor of the Arcade Theatre?"—"Yes, when I received my subpoena."

"What did you say to Mr. Mercier?"—"I said I was going to tell the whole truth here."

"What did you say to him about Captain Ainey?"—"I said I was to tell that I had paid him for protection and he was a — pig to let me down."

Capt. Ainey Called.

Capt. Ainey then took the witness stand. He had been captain of number one station for nearly eight years. He knew Emile Morin, a betting man with a place on St. James Street, from having once raided his place and arrested him. He never went there to bet, and he never placed bets through anyone else. He was not a betting man.

Witness produced his bank book. He had only one, and he could not produce his wife's book, as ordered in his subpoena because she had none. There was unfortunately not much in the book, he explained, because he had nine children and that did not facilitate saving money. His younger children had bank books at the school, in which they deposited their odd cents. He had four children working. Three of them gave their money to their mother and one paid board and lodging.

Asked regarding heavy expenses that he had gone to last winter, alleged to include champagne and fur coats, and which were said to be the result of money collected from doubtful sources, witness flatly denied having bought champagne. He admitted having bought three fur coats. One of these was a Persian lamb and the other two were chapel seal. The first was for his wife, the other two for his two oldest daughters. The daughters had contributed their share to the household and they put all their money together to raise the funds for this expenditure. He had intended getting one for his third daughter also, but later they had decided to leave that over until this winter.

NEW HEALTH FOR SUFFERING WOMEN

Obtained Through Enriching the Blood Supply.

Many women endure with silent patience suffering that casts a shadow over half her life. But an aching back, tired limbs, sideaches, attacks of faintness and splitting headaches need not be a part of woman's life. Such trials indicate plainly that the blood is thin and impure; that to drive away these troubles her system requires the new, rich blood supplied by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills are valued by suffering women, who have used them, above all other medicines because they make the rich, red blood that makes women feel well and at their best. Proof of these statements is given by Mrs. Eugene Deslauriers, Richot, Man., who says: "A few years ago my health completely failed. I was subject to those troubles that afflict so many of my sex. Added to these I suffered from constipation, loss of appetite dizziness a ringing in my head and nervous prostration. I consulted several doctors but their medicines failed to give me relief. After much persuasion I began to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, but without much hope as I believed that no medicine would help me. To my great joy, however, I found these pills were just what I needed, and I can honestly say they have made me a well woman. I can now do with ease all my own housework, and I strongly urge other weak, ailing women to give this medicine a fair trial, feeling that what it has done for me it will do for others."

You can get these pills from your druggist, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1924.

YESTERDAY'S RECEPTION.

General congratulations are in order over the smoothness with which the plans for the reception of Lord and Lady Byng were carried out yesterday.

The time schedule was carefully adhered to, there were no hitches anywhere in the programme, His Excellency saw a great deal of the city, spoke to most of the school children, reviewed the war veterans, received an address of welcome and replied thereto, shook hands with some five hundred citizens, and within two hours and a half from the time the vice-regal party stepped off their train they were speeding away from Peterborough.

The citizens generally co-operated splendidly with the civic authorities in the success of the reception, and the staffs of the various schools did their part effectively.

The arrangements made by Chief Newhall and the Police Department left nothing to chance.

Traffic was carefully looked after, the railway crossings were guarded, there was the minimum of crowding or confusion, and the work of the department was efficient and business-like throughout.

Had the visit been longer more elaborate ceremonies could have been arranged, but under the circumstances the reception must be regarded as a well managed affair, giving His Excellency the opportunity he asked for of meeting as many citizens as possible.

LICENSES FOR DRIVERS.

The Inter-Provincial Roads Conference, composed of representatives of all the Provinces, has approved of the principle of licensing every person operating a motor vehicle, and recommendations to that affect are to be sent to all the Provincial Governments.

Quebec has already passed legislation along this line, requiring all drivers to have a license and charging a $5 fee, while Prince Edward Island enacts a $5 charge which includes the driver and one member of the family.

That Ontario needs a license system for drivers is the concensus of opinion.

At present anybody who wants to climb into the front seat of a motor car and operate it is at liberty to do so.

There are people in every centre driving cars who are obviously unfit to be entrusted with such responsibility.

A license system would give the Province some control over the situation, particularly as the cancellation of the license could be set down as one of the penalties for reckless driving.

Drivers who are careless about being fined are likely to regard the possibility of losing their privilege of operating a car as a much more serious matter.

The suggestion of the conference is sound and should receive the consideration of the Provincial Government before the next session of the Legislature.

EARLIER ELECTIONS.

Numerous cities in Ontario are holding their municipal elections on Monday, and apparently the drift away from the custom of choosing the municipal boards at the beginning of the New Year has assumed considerable proportions.

There is much in the change that will commend it, but the principle reason for favouring the first Monday in December is the very obvious advantage of having the municipal elections take place at a time when they do not conflict with the Christmas and New Year's holidays.

It seems difficult to secure any genuine enthusiasm over civic affairs at a season when the mind of the public is centred upon other things, and it is clear that the December date gives the election a clear field, for the campaign is over before the Christmas rush is fairly under way.

This is an advantage that is not to be dispised, and it seems reasonable to believe that holding the municipal election a month earlier than usual would result in greater interest and a larger vote than is possible under the present system.

Peterborough civic authorities have up to the present shown little interest in this matter, but it might not do any harm to secure from cities who have adopted the December date some information as to how successful the plan has worked out in practice.

If it is better than our own method there is no reason for not giving it a trial.

GREATEST SPORT OF ALL.

Why are people visited with so many troubles in life? Why is it difficult to reach success? Why does nature curse us with disease, sorrow, handicaps, obstacles, disappointments?

There's a reason, and a very plain one. Many reasons, in fact.

First of all: Life is a spiritual gymnasium. It is only by encountering difficult and disagreeable tasks and situations that we can develop intellect, character, wisdom. We are like athletes training and exercising to develop strength.

One sometimes wonders why "fine characters" have had so many troubles, obstacles and disappointments. In many cases their "fine characters" and kindly ways and tolerance have been developed by the ordeals they have gone through.

Enjoyment of life is largely a matter of contrasts. A steady diet of candy and rich foods becomes sickening. To enjoy tasty things one must have eaten long of the coarser and less attractive foods, for contrast.

Nine-tenths of the joy of success is in having fought hard for it. Success is sweetest when it is the reward of privation and effort, far sweeter than inherited wealth.

The view from the mountain top is grandest when the climbing has been difficult.

If one did not have sorrow and trouble for contrast, he could not appreciate joy and pleasure. A movie thrills us if we see only a few shows a week. To theatre employees, who have the movie pictures before them many hours every day, the shows are monotonous. All is contrast.

Man pays the full price for everything in the long run. Whatever he enjoys, he must struggle for. Without the struggle, the enjoyment is faint. Yes, and nature rewards us for effort. Maybe we do not attain the success we strive for, but we have the pleasure of anticipation, the thrill of the contest, the satisfaction of having done our best.

Quite naturally, the man who looks on life in general and his job in particular as a game is the man who gets the most pleasure out of life.

Good health is not appreciated unless we have undergone miserable illness, for contrast. So with all else. Why be discouraged by troubles, handicaps or obstacles? They are merely part of the game.

THE REAL REASON COMES OUT.

Washington has undertaken to deal with Chicago's water stealing case. All the States bordering on the lakes have joined in the effort to make Chicago stop stealing water. A despatch announcing this concludes with the wording, "The practice has also brought protests from Canada."

Protests from this country should have been so vigorous that they would have been the main cause for Washington's action, says the London Advertiser.

If anything were needed to show the real reason for Chicago's water steal it comes from the fact that Missouri, Tennessee, Louisiana and "commercial organizations in the Mississippi valley are backing Chicago on the claim that Chicago's canal aids navigation on the Mississippi River."

That is exactly the reason why the canal was built in the first place—to take water from the Great Lakes through an artificial course, develop power plants and improve navigation on the Mississippi River.

And all this was done under the guise of protecting human life in Chicago from the scourge of disease, while all the time Chicago could have tackled her sanitary problem exactly the same way as has been done by other large cities.

If 100 men from London went to Washington and started to tear down the Capitol in order that a city hall might be erected in London, there would be trouble right straight off, and Washington would make the trouble.

Yet London people would be just as much within their rights in such a move as Chicago is in stealing water from the Great Lakes.

In this case it is primarily an action of Ottawa against Washington, and Ottawa need have no apologies for making her protest frequent and strong. She may have cause for apology to her own people if this is not attended to right up to the letter.

A UNITED STATES OPINION.

Government, the American reader finds the chords of memory vibrating strangely. Where have we heard that tone before? It is an ominous thought, but does not the document read by Lord Allenby to Zagloul Pasha recall the ultimatum of Austria upon the crime at Sarajevo?

But happily there is no likelihood that the British demands upon Egypt will precipitate another world war. There is no mighty Russian bear at the shoulder of King Fuad and his Prime Minister, and while Moscow undoubtedly welcomes any embarrassment England may have through the effect drastic measures may have upon the Mussulman world, it is not able to intervene with practical aid for Egyptian resistance. The British Government will be free to take such steps as it sees fit to recover control over Egyptian affairs, and while there will be much condemnation, even in England, of the course evidently now to be followed, we do not expect it will modify or mitigate the new Government's policy in any important respect.

The killing of Sir Lee Stack thus will be found an expensive indulgence of inflamed Egyptian patriotism and race hatred, and his excellency Zagloul Pasha must secretly share the view pressed upon him by the British Government that his incendiary political rhetoric was a rather serious mistake. If the British Government were interested only in teaching the world that a British subject, and especially a British official, is not a proper target for firearms, the British demands could and would have been limited to a sizable indemnity in money, conspicuous honors to the deceased, and an official apology. Had Mr. MacDonald's Government been the victor in the late election, this might have been the extent of the mischief done, speaking from the viewpoint of Zagloul, and the Egyptian must be wishing today that if his fanatic followers were determined to express their emotions they had done their shooting some time before the election and not after.

We are not hinting that the Egyptian leaders connived at assassination, but certainly the party of independence has played its hand recklessly. Doubtless Zagloul relied on the disposition of the Labor Government to put imperialism on the shelf, and did not foresee the return of a Tory Government with all the prestige of an enormous majority. Lack of foresight, plus the hand of a fanatic, has played havoc with Egyptian hopes.

We do not think civilization has lost by the turn of affairs. The Egyptians are not ready for independence. So far as the masses of the people are concerned, they have a choice of masters and, taking British rule at the worst said of it, it is more enlightened and humane than that of the class which would govern Egypt if the British retired. Anti-imperialism feeds on phrases. The facts of government and of civilized progress are with the imperialist in almost every instance. Stay-at-homes rage over academic formulae, which are in application irrelevant; but it is British imperialism which will make Egypt contribute to civilizaton.

Meanwhile, Americans should not one of the British demands, namely, number 6, that the Egyptian Government shall "notify the competent department that the Sudan Government will increase the area to be irrigated at Gezira from 300,000 feddans (375,000 acres) to an unlimited figure as the need may arise."

That means, probably, more cotton, and Egyptian coton is something for our southern States to think about. We are not hinting calamity, but the United States can well afford to watch the development of Egypt by the British, if the experiment with native government is done with. How seriously our agriculture may be affected by it remains to be seen, but the wealth of the civilized world will be enlarged by what the anti-imperialist condemns as exploitation, and not only the Egyptian people but the masses of all Europe will be the better for it.—Chicago Tribune.

The Little Things.

"Oh, it's just the little homely things, the unobtrusive, friendly things, the 'won't-you-let-me-help-you' things that make our pathway light. And it's just the jolly, joking things, the 'never-mind-the-trouble' things, the 'laugh-with-me-it's-funny' things that make the world seem bright. TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, Nov. 28.—Practically the only finished butchers during the week were heavy steers and heifers, suitable for export, and a limited number of baby beeves.

Heavy steers brought on the market cost about steady prices at $6.50 and $7.25 a cwt. Some short keeps were procured at $5.50 to $6.25, and a small number of heifers at the same price.

Handyweight butcher cattle on sale were very largely of poor quality, and equally poor finish. A small number of good butchers were able to realize $6 a cwt. These just below this grade made $5.25 to $5.75, and good medium butchers were $4.75 to $5 a cwt. For cheap priced beef, bunches of light heifers and steers, not suitable for further feeding, were sold from $3 to $4 a cwt. These various grades were steady with last week. Choice and good butchers' cows were easier but there was a heavy demand for canners and cutters, and these were firm at 1.75 to $2.50 a cwt. The only quality bulls on sale were taken for export, and bologna bulls were firm at $2.50 to $3.25 a cwt.

Most of this week's feeders were of the light kind, 700 to 800 lbs. each and these brought $3 to $4.25. Those 900 to 1,000 lbs. each were mainly dealt in between $4 and $5, but an occasional load of the right kind sold at $5.10 to $5.25 a cwt. A steady market exists in milchers and springers, but the demand runs largely to the medium ones from $45 to $50 each. Good Holsteins but not choice are going at $70 to $75 each. No heavy run of butcher cattle is now expected until the week commencing Dec. 6th when the holiday cattle will come in and there appears to be an opening for some real good butchers before then.

Calves weakened and firmed again during the week and finally closed about steady with last week. Choice tops are worth 11 cents a pound; good calves 10 cents and good mediums 8 to 9 cents, common and heavy calves are 6 to 7 cents and grassers average 3¾ cents.

Light lambs are easily up a dollar a cwt. since a week ago and choice bunches are selling at 13 cents. Average good quality ewes and wethers are 12½ cents. Second quality and heavy lambs are 9 to 11 cents. Good butchers' sheep are holding firm at 7 to 7½ cents.

Much against the wishes of the packers, hogs held steady all week at $9 a cwt. f.o.b. and some sold to a cwt. higher. This price is definitely good until Monday, but following this there will be a determined effort to reduce the quotation to $8.75 a cwt. f.o.b.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—(Canadian Press).—Although temporarily ignored, frost reports from Argentina had much to do with strength which developed in wheat prices yesterday after an early decline. Late despatches indicated that severe damage to crops had been done in South and West Argentina. The wheat market here closed steady at the same as Wednesday's finish to ¼c higher, Dec. 1.54 3-8 to 1.54⅝ and May 1.62 5-8 to 1.62 3-4, with corn 1c to 1⅛c up; oats varying from 1-8c decline to ¼c advance and provisions unchanged to a rise of 37 cents.

EGG MARKETS.

OTTAWA, Nov. 29. — (Canadian Press).—Generally egg markets are very firm owing to the light supplies coming forward and the steady reduction in stocks on spot. There is a very good demand from grocers and other dealers for supplies to meet their immediate requirements. The main feature of interest is the price to be obtained for turkeys. Winnipeg dealers are asking 29 to 31 f.o.b., according to weight.

Toronto fresh higher; jobbing specials 72, extras 66, storage unchanged.

Montreal receipts light; good demand. Jobbing fresh extras 64 to 65, firsts 49 to 50, storage extras 47 to 48, firsts 42 to 43, seconds 38 to 39.

Ottawa retailing fresh extras 65, storage extras 50 to 60, firsts 47 to 50.

Manitoba and Saskatchewan markets unchanged, fresh supplies being brought in from British Columbia to supply the demand.

STERLING RATES.

MONTREAL, Nov. 29.—(Canadian Press).—Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows: Sterling demand $4.62 3-4; sterling cables $4.63 1-8.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Nov. 29.—(Canadian Press). — There was no new development in the export trade in Canadian grain here yesterday, business being reported very quiet in all lines. The market for Ontario barley was steady with car lots of No. 3 extra malting barley quoted at $1.08, No. 3 grade at $1.07 per bushel, ex-track, and car lots of Ontario No. 2 white oats sold at 62 cents, No. 3 grade at 60 cents, and No. 4 grade at 58 cents per bushel, ex-store.

There was some enquiry from United Kingdom buyers for spring wheat grades of flour yesterday, but as the prices bid were one shilling per sack below what millers were asking no new business was reported in this direction. Prices were well maintained in winter wheat flour.

Prices on Green Mountain grades of potatoes were reduced 5 to 10 cents per bag. Quebec varieties were unchanged, while Green Mountain were quoted at 75 cents per bag.

Cron beans were quoted at $2.75 and $2.80 per bushel.

YIELDED 99 BUSHELS.

LETHBRIDGE, ALBERTA.—N. Peterson, operating a farm at Hill Spring, has secured a total yield of 99 bushels of wheat to the acre on 56 acres the past two seasons.

Gin Pills relieved her headaches and backaches

Headaches and backaches frequently indicate kidney trouble, and may be the forerunners of dangerous illness. Read how one sufferer was relieved.

"My trouble has been very bad headaches, backaches and dizzy spells. I started taking Gin Pills and only used a little more than half a box when my headaches and backaches stopped and now I feel like a new girl. I am well and have had no return of those distressing headaches and backaches."

NEW YORK GLIMPSES

Fifth Avenue is Peacock Alley of U. S.—Most Suicides Men.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29. — Fifth Avenue, America's most famous Main Street, is celebrating its hundredth anniversary.

Fifth Avenue is the street on which New York holds its parades. It is the street on which women who "have nothing to wear" go shopping. It is the street on which all the George F. Babbitts of Gotham hold forth at corner-stone layings and monument unveilings.

There is more window shopping done on Fifth Avenue than on any two streets in the world. The ladies, bless 'em, get ideas for dresses, cloaks and hats from Fifth Avenue windows for garments made at home or bought in cheaper stores.

Fifth Avenue, too, is the nation's greatest Peacock Alley. On Easter Sunday poor working girls, who have saved for months to buy fine feathers, parade with the richest families in America—and the casual passerby can't tell the difference between them.

It is the general belief that most of New York's suicides are girls. The majority of them are men, and quite a number of them are married men whose homes have been disrupted. In six months there were six suicides in West Twenty-ninth street, between Eighth and Ninth avenues. One was a woman and the others were men separated from their wives.

Broadway isn't the only false alarm thoroughfare in New York.

The biggest crush in New York is the Sunday night movie crowd. Legitimate shows are closed on Sunday and the screen shows have little opposition. On Sunday nights I have seen strings of people each more than a block long waiting to get in the Capitol, Rivoli, Strand and Rialto.

But the movies do not empty the churches. I have seen the Church of St. Paul the Apostle on Ninth avenue, just a block away from the Gay White Way so crowded that people waited outside to get in.

A subway car at three o'clock in the morning.....Half the passengers asleep, yet all seem to awake in time to get off at their stations.....A grimy loser of the night embarrassed because a young lady in beautiful evening dress has gone to sleep against his shoulder. The escort of the young lady is asleep with his chin on his chest.....A young baby asleep in its mother's arms. And the mother's asleep, too.....Your young nabobs inspired to song by the stuff they've been drinking. The noise they make is terrible, but they think it's headline stuff.....A drunken bum stretched out full-length on the seat, so filthy nobody will sit or stand near him.....Three tired girls returning home from a dance, unescorted and refusing to flirt with the bibulous songsters.....When will all these people get up? And how will they be able to do a day's work on the morrow?

CHINESE

China is buying five times as much American-made goods as in 1914. Though our orders from her now total 125 million dollars a year, she still ranks only eighth among our customers. The day may come, however, when China will rank first. Our real Japanese problem is to keep Tokyo from getting economic control of the Chinese. That appears to be their dream of empire. A great fuss about immigration is calculated to keep our eyes away from China.

FURNISHING THE HOME

The unit in furnishing a home is not a single room, but the entire house.

This means that the whole home from cellar to attic must be kept in mind when furniture, or draperies, or other accessories are sought for a single room.

First there is the exterior architecture. The interior should conform with it in some general way. There must not be a sudden change in design or atmosphere as soon as a person steps into the vestibule.

Then, as a person walks from one room into another, it would be annoying and nerve-wracking to meet a sudden change every time a doorway was crossed.

Yet there should be variety in furnishing a home. Especially should this variety pertain to the use of colors in the various rooms.

Basic Scheme.

Similarity and variety in furnishing can be compromised by the attempt to establish a basic color scheme or unit throughout the house. Likewise with furniture, draperies and other parts of the home.

For example, the floors may be covered with the same material throughout the lower floors, and this may be carried up the stairs to the hallway above. There, where each bedroom has a door and may be closed to the hallway and the rest of the house, the first floor rug may stop and make way for a separate carpet or rug in each room.

But if this is done, there should be something in each bedroom upstairs that carries out the basic color and furnishing plan of the rest of the home.

Period Decorating.

There are exceptions to this—where a room is furnished in a separate period design, apart from the rest of the home. But even in this case, it may be noted, homes with such period rooms direct the visitor gradually to this distinctive change by introducing him or her to period furniture right at the start—in the living and other rooms downstairs.

Period furniture is the exception in such a home.

Similarly the same colors that are in use downstairs should best be continued upstairs. But not in the same manner. Their combinations should be different. This is what furnishes the variety.

There should not be too much repetition of the same designs or colors or anything. Repetition tends to monotony and drabness.

TURKISH PRIDE BRINGS TROUBLE TO TRAVELLERS

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Nov. 29 —Turish nationalist have gone to extreme measures, according to information current in this city, in their endeavors to bar all foreign languages out of the country. In preparing new passports for the Angora government Turkish officials insist that not a word of any foreign language be used, and print all the documents in Turkish script.

When the bearers of these passports tried to leave Turkish territory, their troubles began. No official could read the Turkish script; they could not tell whether the paper was a legitimate passport or a bill for groceries, and the bearers were refused permission to cross the border.

LOWER COST OF LIVING.

German Government Aims To Bring Down High Prices.

BERLIN, Nov. 29.—With the view of reducing the high cost of living in Germany the government has taken the lead in enacting measures designed to give an impetus to business generally throughout the country and to decrease the cost of various every day necessities to the consumers. The first move on the part of the Berlin officials was a decrease of ten percent in the freight rates on the state owned railroads. The price of coal has also been reduced from eight to ten percent.

The next reduction scheduled is in the charges made by the post office department for the transmission of money. Changes in the banking regulations as contemplated include the cost of reduction of credit facilities extended by the banks, governmental and municipal financial institutions, and the lifting of numerous restrictions in the matter of handling of foreign exchange.

CONSTIPATION OF TEN YEARS' STANDING

Winnipeg Clergyman's Wife Permanently Relieved By Internal Bathing.

From many, many sufferers from chronic constipation and its long train of ills come letters that fairly bubble over with enthusiasm about the new health and joy of life resulting from Dr. Tyrrell's new system of Internal Bathing.

Warm water is Nature's best cleanser for the colon or lower bowel, but until Dr. Tyrrell perfected his new J. B. L. Cascade there was no means of inducing warm water to travel harmlessly through the whole length of the colon, ridding it of poisons that linger there causing constipation, rheumatism, appendicitis, hardening of the arteries, sick headaches, etc.

A Winnipeg clergyman writes: "My wife is naturally sensitive about having her name appear in public print yet is anxious that others should know what the J. B. L. Cascade has done for her. It has really given her a new lease of life. For years she has been doctoring for constipation which becomes worse each year. Since using the J. B. L. Cascade first about four years ago, she has not been sick a day, and has become robust and strong again. Should any person wish this letter confirmed, you are at liberty to give my name in private."

The J. B. L. Cascade is an invention perfected by Dr. Chas. A. Tyrrell of New York, and has done more during the past few years to restore health and lessen disease than all other means combined. Ask for booklet explaining all about Internal Bathing and what it has done for others. It is entirely free, or write to Tyrrell's Hygienic Institute, 181 College street, Toronto.

The J. B. L. Cascade is now being shown and explained at the Warne Drug Company.

ROBINSONS NOT IN CONSPIRACY

dents of the trial, and the Judge's remark is considered very significant.

The Judge emphasized that Mr. "A" gained nothing despite the concealment of his name, but it was difficult to believe that anyone who knew him would be unable to identify him.

Aide a Disgrace.

Regarding the potentate's aide-de-camp, the Judge declared:

"Only that the revelation of his name might have led to the discovery of the potentate's identity, I should have liked nothing better than to have made his name public to the world. I think he deserves every punishment which can be inflicted upon any person who so disgraced an English name. I am thankful to say he has never been a regular officer of His Majesty's army."

Judge Darling described the bank as an innocent victim of a plot, and characterized Mr. Robinson as the "intermittent husband—there when wanted and away when unwanted."

Robinson Denounced.

Sir John Simon, counsel for the bank, in a scathing denunciation of Robinson, declared that this "Is the first time in the history of law that a man has had the hardihood to come into court openly to obtain a stupendous sum of money which has been proved to have been the result of blackmail."

On the other hand, Lord Halsbury, representing Robinson, asserted that conspiracy had not been proved on the part of his client. He dismissed the sensational testimony of Montague Noel Newton to the effect that he had posed as the husband of Mrs. Robinson, in the alleged fleecing of the Indian prince, with the remark that "it was bought for £3,000." It had been previously stated by counsel that Newton was paid £3,000 to testify regarding the alleged blackmail plot.

TONGS

A New York newspaper claims that the tongs, which recently sent a lot of American-resident Chinese to the undertakers, are unknown in China. This isn't so.

The Hip Sing tong invaded America only about 65 years ago. But in China, where its membership runs into the millions, the Hip Sings were at war with the On Leongs several thousand years ago.

TRENT RIVER NEWS

TRENT RIVER, Nov. 29.—High winds have prevailed for the past few days causing the temperature to lower.

A number from this district and Havelock motored to Belleville Tuesday to attend the funeral of the late Mrs. E. O. Seymour.

Mr. Isaac Lawson drew a load of rye to Hastings Tuesday, receiving $1.25 per bushel.

Mr. and Mrs. Pat Flynn gave a euchre party at their home Tuesday night.

AN UNNECESSARY SACRIFICE

Much as we admire the youngsters who go shouting about the streets and trooping into the schoolhouses, taking sunshine and happiness with them, most of us are far too careless in allowing our little ones to take risks of accident.

The statement just made by the American Red Cross that 20,000 children under 14 years of age are killed in accidents each year in the United States is appalling. Big figures are hard to comprehend. But when we think of each one of these innocents sent to the slaughter of carelessness, we can realize what a sum of poignant grief has been cast up.

Every mother who has lost a child has a constant sorrow. But it is not alone in suffering that the nation loses. Twenty thousand boys and girls, cut off before their faculties be developed, have lessened the quality of our citizenship for the next generation in a measure that it is impossible to compute. This should not be.

Such an easy thing it is to warn a child that he must be careful. So little trouble to provide training in the habit of discretion. Burns, falls, auto and other vehicular accidents, drowning and poisoning exact the heaviest toll. A certain number of such occurrences are always avoidable accidents. But the proportion of them that can be traced back to carelessness on the part of the child or some adult is large. Let us have a care. Our children must not be in the silent army of 20,000 that reproaches the nation.

SOCIAL EVENING AT CAMPBELLFORD CHURCH

Music Was Supplied by the Members of the Mission Band.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 29.—A very interesting and pleasing programme was given on Thursday night in the Sunday School room of St. Andrew's Church by the members of the Mission Band and others.

Though the weather was not very favorable and the fee small, twenty dollars were taken in.

Rev. C. F. McIntoen, the minister was the chairman for the evening. The first number on the programme was a chorus, "A Welcome Song" by the Mision Band.

The chairman in his remarks, expressed delight at being present at one of these entertainments.

A recitation, Tim Tomkins, Edna Brady; instrumental solo, Evening Chimes, Dorothy Ackerman; reading, "If" by Kipling, Miss Lillian Hay; followed by a humorous reading "If"; a chorus, An Animal Party Band members; instrumental solo, Les Naiades, Jack Haig. There was a Dutch drill by three girls, Jerinne Barnum, Marion McArthur and Elsie Connor dressed in Dutch costume, with their blue dress, white apron, blue caps and colars. Recitation, Miss L. Hay; vocal solo, "The fairies have never a penny to spend" by Mrs. R. W. Scott.

Scene one—Five members of Westminster Guild. Chapter—Jerinne Barnum, Elsie Connor, Dorothy West, Margery Ackerman and Ruby Townsend. The teacher, Miss Weir was taken by Jean McArthur.

The girls expressed a desire to change their society from a missionary society to a literary society. The teacher requested that the girls meet in two weeks, have all the twenty members present.

Scene two—Miss Weir gives an entertainment to the twenty members.

Scene three—Miss Ward's room in Tokio. (A missionary) with Miss Ward (Dorothy Barnum) and Miss Smith (Eva McKelvie) teacher present. Two Japanese children (Mildred and Ethel Easton) telling of the joy of having Christmas presents from Canada, but the box does not come as the society is tired of missions. Miss Ward and Miss Smith resolved to have something to take the place of these present.

Scene four—Dr. Leonard's office at Peking, with two medical missionaries (Dorothy Henson and Frances Anderson. A Chinese girl (Wilhelmine Allan) pleads with them to take her mother and make her better, but they have not room, as contributions from Canada are growing less, but they will do their best.

Scene 5—Doctor's Office. A Chinese girl (Jacqueline McEachern) offers herself for a doctor but there is no money to educate her.

Scene 6—A missionary's (Jean McLeod) house in India. An Indian lady (Margaret Hyslop) wants a missionary to come to her village, but no missionary has been sent from Canada.

A child (Lois Meyers) wishes to come to school and learn different things but the teacher (Mae Bell) is sick and the school closed.

Scene 8—Where all the girls of the guild are ashamed of their selfish attitude and they resolve to send money and help.

While the twenty members stood, Miss Helen McDonald sang very sweetly, "We've A Story to tell the Nations."

The next part of the programme was a series of tableaux.

Spreading the Gospel—By the girls dressed in costume, who were in the pageant.

Hearts desire—Hector McMillan and Eric Scott.

St. Valentine, Cupid's Bow, Ralph Finney.

Dominion Day—Walter Rutherford, holding a flag and flags draped around him.

Thanksgiving Day—Phyllis Adamson and Rita Watson.

Music hath charms—Eon McIntosh and Hugh Southworth. Each sang a comic verse.

WEATHER

You know how the sun early in 1922 began giving off less heat, playing havoc with our weather. A complicated scientific chart shows that, to date, the sun has only recovered halfway to normal radiation. Several very cold winters are ahead, experts predict.

Long-range weather forecasting, two or three years in advance, may result from recent studies of the sun. It's now believed that solar heat regulates temperature of ocean currents, which in turn slowly control inland weather.

Berlin Fruit Dealers Sell Apples at 90c. Each.

BERLIN, Nov. 29.—Fancy apples in first-class shops have been selling here this fall as high as 90 cents each. They are from France, without blemishes, and apparently raised with great care.

American apples, chiefly from the Pacific northwest, were retailed here a year ago in great quantities, but as yet none has appeared this season. Dealers say the American apples will be along for the holidays and the choicest ones will probably sell for 10 or 15 cents apiece. Ordinary apples however, German-grown, may be purchased from the push-cart dealers in the streets for from 10 to 15 cents a pound.

DOWN WITH THE KING

Turkey may be king of the Thanksgiving feast, but, in these days, it is more than ever apparent that "uneasy lies the head that wears the crown."

Now, there is no question that the turkey is a royal bird—both in appearance and flavor.

And it is equally beyond question that the pig is anything but royal in aspect. Nevertheless, according to the late lamented Charles Lamb, and to which we are happy to give our unanimous assent, roast pig is a delicacy of no mean quality. Fact is, a roast fresh ham has a stuffed turkey hung up by the legs and gobbling for mercy.

First, you take the bone out; then you stuff it. After that you make a roasting pan half full of gravy, made with flour and water, and seasoned to taste. When it is boiling drop in your ham, along with an onion (if you like the flavor), or some celery and parsley, if you prefer that. Roast the ham in the gravy, replenishing it from time to time and basting thoroughly. When it has cooked sufficiently, and it should be very well done, and browned to a turn, it may be served with the accustomed side dishes, and nobody will miss the turkey. It is, indeed, the only substitute that tastes better than the original dish—and, kind folks, listen—a medium-size fresh ham can be bought for two dollars or less.

Down with King Turkey!

SIMPLE PRAYER BEST

In these days, when it is not uncommon to hear a minister praised because of his "beautiful prayers," by "beautiful" being meant ornateness of phraseology, it is refreshing and timely that a clergyman has seen fit to declare that simple prayers, like that taught by the Founder of Christianity, are best.

Prayers hardly are a fit subject for studied oratory. Those that come from the heart not infrequently are marked by unconscious eloquence. But it is contrary to the spirit of Christianity that one should compose supplications to the Almighty with regard rather to what men will think of them than to how the Deity will view them. And it is to be feared that it is the effect on the congregation rather than the effect on God which is in the minds of the authors of some of these elaborate prayers against which we are warned. Moreover, the effect of such prayers on the congregation is likely to be other than what the minister intended; for the very complexity of the language may divert the listeners' thoughts from God to the orator.

Christians have been counselled by the Supreme Authority on such matters not to pray ostentatiously, as the hypocrites do, "that they may be seen of men, but to address God in the simple, earnest way in which a child would present a plea to his father. And it would seem that that advice was intended to apply to public prayers as well as to those spoken in the secrecy of the closet.

Let The Women Tell Their Story

Every woman is interested in another woman's letters, and we shall give the women a chance to present their experience with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food by quoting from their letters.

If you do not find anyone you know among these ladies, write us for references from people in your community, or ask your friends and neighbors for particulars about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

There is scarcely a town, village or hamlet in this great country but can produce splendid evidence as to the restorative, upbuilding influence of this well-known treatment for the blood and nerves.

Girlhood

Mrs. M. E. Robson, 170 Dublin St., Peterboro', Ont., writes:—"My daughter of 15 lost appetite, color and was on the verge of nervous collapse. Five boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food completely restored her health and strength."

Womanhood

Mrs. N. C. McDonald, RR. No. 2 Colborne, Ont., writes:—"When a girl, my health became run down. I was sleepless, had nervous headaches and finally developed St. Vitus' Dance. I was completely relieved by a course of treatment with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I am married now, have three children and have had no return of the old trouble."

Motherhood, Middle Life

Mrs. A. Ernest, R.R. No. 4, Walkerton, Ont., writes:—"For some time after the birth of my first child I was in a weak, nervous condition. I could not sleep well, had frequent headaches and buzzing in the ears. I also had neuralgic pains through my body, twitching of the nerves and was subject to weak spells. I had indigestion and seemed tired and languid. I began to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and found the results most satisfactory. I have used a great many different medicines, but never found one as good as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. It is especially good for quieting the nerves and I feel very grateful for the good it has done me."

Mrs. M. E. McCarthy, Gardner's Creek, St. John Co., N.B., writes:—"In my estimation there is no medicine that will so quickly build one up and restore the nervous system as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. From worry and hard work, I began to get behind as regards general health. It seemed as though each day some new ailment cropped up and before I realized it I was just about "down and out." I turned to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for help and was not disappointed. I took six boxes and felt like a girl of sixteen. My nerves are as steady as I could wish them to be and I am having no trouble at all in passing through that time of life when some women experience so much suffering."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

It is woman's greatest friend at every critical stage in her life and is endorsed by women everywhere. 60 cents a box of sixty pills, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

"From my experience as a wife and mother I find that the majority of users of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food are women, especially women passing through the change of life; next by young mothers to regain strength after baby comes, and also by mothers for their young daughters entering their womanhood. While it is good for all classes of humanity, I am sure it is especially so for women, as they seem to be troubled most by nervous diseases."—Mrs. H. Alchorn, 23 Gerald Street, Charlottetown, P.E.I.

Critical Age

Mrs. C. Nicol, Gormley, Ont., writes:—"I consider that I owe a prolonged term of life to Dr. Chase's medicines. Like many others, when at the critical stage of middle age, I threw aside doctors' medicine and turned to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills. For three months I continued to use this combined treatment and cannot find words to tell how much it helped me.

"I have recently been using Dr. Chase's Catarrh Powder for a stubborn case of catarrh, and it has relieved me greatly, having stopped the pain in the head and frequent headache from which I have been suffering."

Advanced Years

Mrs. Mary Rowdon, 22 North St., St. Catharines, Ont., writes:—"My husband died in February, 1923, at the age of 74 years, and after that my nerves became very bad. I started taking Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and have found it all you claim it to be. For run down constitution and tired, exhausted nerves, there is nothing like it."

WHITE WYANDOTTE KING TELLS STORY OF HIS GREAT SUCCESS

Hon. J. S. Martin Gives Sidelights on Poultry Raising.

"BREED BETTER"

Employs Ten Men and Seven Stenographers in His Business.

By THE HON. J. S. MARTIN
Ontario's Minister of Agriculture, as told to Charles C. Nixon, Toronto.

I LEFT off teaching high school nearly twenty years ago, when my hobby, White Wyandottes, developed into a real business, which now earns thousands of dollars for us every year.

I now have ten men busy on my farm, and seven stenographers in the office.

I now have 25,000 customers in the United States alone, and have a big business in every civilized country in the world, and several thousand customers here in my native Dominion of Canada. There are between 7,000 and 8,000 White Wyandottes on the farm now.

Men who ought to know tell me that in the last twenty years I have built up perhaps the most profitable and largest fancy-poultry business in the world. In addition, I run a mixed general farm, over which my Wyandottes have unlimited range. Dairy cows, poultry, and hogs are my prosperity insurance. I have 200 acres of land which we call the Regal Poultry and General Farm. It lies on Silver Lake, skirting the village of Port Dover, Ontario, Canada.

This farm and business are the realization of the ambition of my life. My dreams have come true even better than I had planned. When I was teaching in the high school, I used to build air castles, and plan and hope; but I never really thought my dreams would come so true as they have. I have capacity for this work because I love it; and it is capacity for work that the successful poultryman needs, for to go to the top with poultry you must have more kinds of equipment and ability than is required in most other lines. The programme that has made it possible for the business to succeed is this:

I first had to have the poultry, and then constantly to breed it better, while telling the world about it via the poultry shows and the advertising columns and catalogues.

Love of the chicken business was no doubt bred in me. I have been told how my great-grandmother used to take me with her to the poultry-yard when she went to feed, helping me to toddle by her side with a scarf around my chest, under my arms; and she often expressed the hope that I would love to feed the hens when she was gone.

Being raised on a farm and always a fancier means something in the development of the poultry breeder. Following your natural bent helps any man. All my life I have stuck to the thing I liked best. I think it pays anyone to do that. Thirty years ago I recall having my first purebred poultry—some Light Brahmas. In 1885 my father bought for me a trio of Barred Rocks, and I raised this breed for seventeen years, just as a hobby on the home farm. But I made no business of selling.

Some time after taking up the Barred Rocks, I obtained the White-Faced Black Spanish and kept them for two years, adding to them the White Leghorns, which I kept for five years. White Cochins I kept during 1891-1892; and about this time I had Brown Leghorns also.

My White Leghorns were of the large type that laid big eggs. I developed this flock all through one hen that produced the best eggs, from which I was able to rear about forty pullets the first year. After disposing of all the White Leghorns, I tried the Partridge Cochins and the Langshans, all the time keeping Barred Plymouth Rocks. Late in the nineties, before I finally decided upon White Wyandottes, as best adapted to my purposes, I kept some Golden Wyandottes and some White Minorcas. It was the fine laying of the Golden Wyandottes that led me to take up the white variety.

I had started keeping White Wyandottes during the year of the Pan-American Exposition, 1901. At the Pan-American a beautiful lot of White Wyandottes were exhibited. And among the winners were some exceptionally fine specimens in type, color, and condition. I was one of the many admirers of this popular white fowl at this great show, and perhaps no one observed and studied these White Wyandottes any more closely than I did. Looking back on that occasion, I can see wherein it was the most momentous one in my career as a poultry fancier; for it was there and then that I decided to make this breed my sole specialty. Within two years the results were so gratifying that the keeping of White Wyandottes became my main occupation.

Shortly before this decision I had quit high-school teaching and was in the piano business with my two brothers. The White Wyandottes took me ahead so fast that I sold out my interests in the piano business to devote all of my time to poultry and the farm.

When I began breeding White Wyandottes I obtained the very choicest stock from several of the leading strains that it was possible for me to get. I was compelled to do this because I could not find any one strain having all the qualifications that I wanted. It pays to get only the best. One strain would excel in shape, another in color, another in head points; but they all excelled in utility qualities. I decided that it would be unwise to use a strain that was not strong in utility qualities, no matter how strong the show quality. These strains I gradually combined into a new one, and I called it the "Regal" strain—the success of which, along both fancy and utility lines, has become history.

I was very fortunate in obtaining my foundation stock to get several hens almost ideal in shape and color, at least in those days. These hens I bred to a quick-maturing cockerel of an excellent heavy-laying strain.—The pullets from this mating I bred to the grand old cock bird, Regal I, a first-prize Ontario winner. This bird proved to be a wonderful breeder, and he stamped his excellence on the whole flock. He was a wonderfully vigorous bird, standing very wide, full-breasted, and broad in every section. He had a fiery-red eye and extra good head points.

It is to the fine breeding qualities of Regal I that I feel a great share of my success is due. He was placed in the breeding pen in December, and the eggs were very fertile. From this mating a number of early chicks were hatched, and when the Dominion Exhibition at Toronto came on the latter end of August the cockerels and the pullets were full grown, and the pullets laying. The cockerel that headed this pen was without a rival in a class of thirty. His plumage had a dazzling whiteness that made other birds look yellow. I named him Regal II. At this show I was awarded the diploma and medal for best display, and since that time the name of Regal has become a familiar name to breeders of White Wyandottes.

I have throughout my work clung to my ideal of a stylish, attractive, cobby bird with plenty of size, but not overdone in any way. Many judges and breeders have told me they can pick out birds of Regal breeding no matter where they see them. They are the sensible type, combining the useful and the beautiful. I have studiously avoided all fads—fads for the short body and the small bird, going all for color and size and to disregard shape, which fad was entirely wrong, as shape should be the outstanding characteristic of a good Wyandotte.

Some years ago, finding that there was a demand for bred-to-lay stock, I decided to make use of the trap nest to get records of my best layers, and to begin systematic work along this line.

In my second year's work I succeeded in getting a wonderful record from an exhibition pullet. She was hatched in February and began laying early in the fall. In her first year's laying she made a splendid record of 241 eggs. This female I named Dorcas, and decided to make use of her to build up a flock of heavy layers. She had many other qualities besides being a good layer. She had many other qualities besides being a good layer. She had all-round good exhibition qualities; splendid color, good shape, neat head points, and plenty of size.

The following season I mated her to a fine, vigorous cockerel bred from a female with a record of 205 eggs. This cockerel also had fine exhibition qualities, and was good enough to win in keen competition. In addition to this he gave wonderful fertility, eggs from his pen running from 90 per cent to 95 per cent fertile. Thus was my Dorcas line developed.

I demand of the females in my Dorcas breeding pens, first, vigor and stamina; second, a good egg record; third, exhibition qualities. The male birds must have a fine, sturdy, vigorous appearance, with a record of fertility back of them, and bred from females with an egg record of 200 eggs or better. They must have neat heads, good eye color, stay white color, good bone, and as good Wyandotte type as possible.

You know of my winnings at the New York State Fair over the past seventeen years, where I have swept everything year after year. This is the greatest of all the early American shows, and is famous for having the finest exhibition poultry building in the United States. The exhibits are large and competition very keen. To win at this show you must get your chicks out in January and February. It is a great test for vigor, stamina, and winter egg production.

You will notice from my catalogues that my motto has always been "A square deal to everyone," because I do not want a single dollar of any man's money without giving him full value in return. I make my catalogues of a practical, helpful nature, and in them give away all my secrets on how to breed, feed, and condition, and how to exhibit.

Years ago I established the policy of keeping my winners at the big exhibitions, mating up a goodly number of pens and selling eggs from all these pens. One of my customers by purchasing a setting of eggs hatched the first prize cock at Madison Square Garden, a bird worth at least $500.

I have found that this policy has increased my business from year to year, and my customers, knowing that I gave them a square deal, come back year after year whenever they need new blood.

Thus have I built a profitable business out of the thing I have always liked best to do.—Farm and Fireside.

What's It?

Its papa was a turkey and its mama was a hen. So it's called a "turkock." Its crow is partly a gobble. A whole flock of these "turkocks" is being raised commercially at St. Johns. They sell at a good figure as poultry, due to their increased weight.

WEIGHT FOR LAMBS.

The right weight for marketable lambs is not much more than 80 pounds. When they get up to 90 or 100 pounds the cut in price is usually heavy regardless of the condition or quality.

Canada's Production of Wool Growing Rapidly

Canada has made rapid strides in recent years in wool production, largely as the result of government grading, both the federal and provincial governments being active in the promotion of the industry. Last year 15,539,416 lbs. of wool was produced in Canada, much of which reached the highest grade. As the result of grading, Canadian wools are now purchased freely on a graded basis in the United States and Great Britain as well as in Canada.

MUST PROTECT FARMER'S SALE

Scotchman Says Government Should See He Gets Reasonable Price.

NEED HOME LIFE

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 29.—The creation of a government department especially to take over the grain supply of the Dominion in the interests of the farmers, and establishment of fixed prices, were urged in an interview with ex-Bailie Erskine of Burntisland, Fifeshire, Scotland, who is making a prolonged tour of Canada for the purpose of studying industrial, agricultural and socialt conditions.

"We must protect the farmer and see that he gets a reasonable price for his grain," said Mr. Erskine. "In the Old Country a farmer sells direct to the grain merchant on sample, and does not, of course, sell unless he is satisfied with the price. With the large quantity of grain in Canada, I quite see that this plan is not feasible, and for that reason I advocate creation of a special department under government direction. Why should a lot of middlemen, who have nothing to do with the growing of the grain, fatten at the expense of the farmer? The agriculturalist has to endure a great deal of anxiety and worry, only to discover ultimately that others are getting profits which rightly should accrue to him. I sincerely hope that the wheat pools will go a long way in the solution of this difficulty. If they do not, I hope some action on the lines I have outlined will be taken."

From an industrial standpoint, Mr. Erskine considered it a pity that more domestic capital was not available for the development of the natural resources of the Dominion. "Everywhere I go," he said, "I find evidences of capital from Great Britain and the United States being used for purposes of development. This, I think, is being carried too far, proportionately speaking, at the present time. Judging from the saving bank deposits and the war bonds held in the country, the Canadian people must be, on the whole, well-to-do, and I would rather see a large portion of this money invested within the Dominion than so much reliance being placed on outside capital, for God helps those who help themselves."

Continuing, Mr. Erskine deplored the lack of home life in Canada, but advanced the belief that as the country became more settled, real home life would materialize.

CATTLE OFF PASTURES.

Winter Quarters Are Ready To Protect Bethany Stock.

BETHANY, Nov. 29.—Ploughing in this vicinity was held up with the recent heavy frosts, but the fair weather of the last few days permitted them to again resume ploughing, and in most cases this work is practically completed.

Farmers are removing the cattle from the pasture to winter quarters, and a few cases are observed where cattle were allowed to remain out during the recent snowfall and heavy frosts

Eggs are scarce and are retailing at 47c per doz, with butter more plentiful at 34c per pound.

STORING POTATOES.

Potatoes should be stored over a slatted floor so that the air may circulate through them more easily. This keeps them cool and dry, and results in less loss by shrinkage.

Woman Puts Art in Cattle Raising

PURE-BRED JERSEYS BRING HOME PRIZES

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 29.—The business of raising blue-bloods in dairy cattle is being made an art by a woman!

She is Mrs. Clara G. Drewry, noted clubwoman of Cincinnati and owner of the Camden Terrace Farms at Milford, O., 15 miles east from here.

On this farm is a stock of 50 pure-bred Jerseys, which have been bringing Mrs. Drewry championships and ribbons enough to pay more than her expenses. Just as the herd is artistically developed, so is the entire farm and its buildings.

The cattle stalls are clean and the barn is immaculate. In the barn itself is Mrs. Drewry's office, with home-like furniture and flower-bedecked windows. Covering an entire wall of the office are the ribbons, cups and other prizes her stock has won.

High Producer.

Out on the farm is a small herd of test cattle, well-fed, well-shaped and groomed to a nicety. One of them, Majesty's Lustra 418681, a daughter of Imp. Oxford Majesty II, 152182, has just finished a 305-day test with 15,000 pounds of milk and 720 pounds of butterfat to her record. She holds a gold medal and a state record.

Ten years ago, Mrs. Drewry knew nothing about cattle. Her husband had given her this farm and had left it to her to manage. She decided to take the winter course in agriculture at Ohio State University.

"There I learned that to have a productive farm I need stock," she says, "and in having stock I might as well have the best.

"I decided on Jerseys for their dainty, gentle and alert nature. Fortunately for a novice, I chose a good dam and sire to begin with."

Good Start.

She started with an in-dam daughter of the famous Golden Fern's Noble, 145762, and a son of the noted bull, Noble's Jolly Sultan. These gave her a wonderful herd to start with. Five years ago she bought another young sire, Tiddledywinks Majesty's Lad, 167989, which has been her herd sire since.

As a result of her management, Mrs. Drewry's stock has brought in hundreds of ribbons and other prizes. During the last showing this year, they took 132 ribbons, 11 championships and three grand championships.

Two railroads buy her milk for their dining car service, and she sells much more besides. Although this is secondary, she points out, her milk production in one month nets her about $1100.

"Besides," she concludes, "I take great interest in working out a system of crop rotation and proper fertilization of the soil that I may not only grow sufficient food for my cows and horses, but that I may have some money crop as well."

BUYING PURE-BRED SOWS NEEDS CARE

Breeder, Hog, Pedigree and Price Are Important Points.

Four points should be remembered in considering the purchase of a purebred sow. They are: the breeder, the hog, its pedigree, and the price.

"Much depends on the honesty and reliability of the breeder, especially when sows are purchased by mail or without first seeing them," says R. T. Smith, professor of animal husbandry at the State College of Washington. "When this is done, the purchaser should insist that if the sow proves unsatisfactory it may be returned within a reasonable time, at the seller's expense."

"In selecting breeding stock," he continues, "avoid animals with weak backs and feet, shallow bodies, coarse open shoulders and thick ears. A good breeding hog has a strong, smoothly-arched back, strong straight legs, a body which is uniform in width and with all parts blending smoothly with each other.

"A six-months-old pig should weigh close to 165 pounds, adding 30 pounds more for each additional month up to two and a half years.

"Every purchaser of breeding stock is entitled to a certificate of registry which should be signed and sealed by the secretary of the record associ-

SLIM CHANCE.

The two students yawned.

"What shall we do to-night?" said one.

"I'll toss a coin for it," his chum replied. "If it's heads we'll go to the theatre; if it's tails we'll call on Nan and Bess; and if it stands on edge we'll study."

NONE OF HIS BUSINESS.

The taxi came to a sudden halt, and the driver turned to look back at his two young passengers.

"What's the matter?" demanded the sheik.

"I thought the young lady cried 'stop'!" answered the driver.

"Go on," said the Sheba; "I wasn t talking to you."

I Have a Task To Do

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

I have a task to do, and till it's done
Let the selfish whims and fancies stand aside!
Envy, talk not of some more fortunate one
Whose hands to duty are no longer tied.

Now, Self-Indulgence, check your whisperings low,
Pour not your subtle poison in my brain.
Deception, do not come to me to show
Some false, but easy way my goal to gain.

Stand off, Self-Pity, with your useless sighs,
Sap not my strength with cowardice and fear.
Pleasure, hold not your glamor to my eyes,
Let me, untempted, meet my duty here.

What matters it that some from care are free,
That there are those who idle in the sun?
I have a task to do, and I must be
Unswayed of purpose, till the work be done.

Egg Had Three Yolks Says Western Reader

A hen recently laid an egg that was as large as a goose egg and contained three complete yokes, even sized, writes W. H. Currens, of Demaine, Saskatchewan, in renewing his subscription to The Examiner.

Crops were not very good in Mr. Currens' district this year on account of dry weather.

STORY CONTEST PRIZE WINNERS

NEXT COMPETITION.

If the artists among the young readers of the Examiner did well, the story-writers have done almost better. The essay competition has changed its name to "Story competition," because that is what the entries are—most interesting little stories. Most people associate "essay" with a dry-as-dust discussion of some wrote them, they they could compare them as they appear on the Farm Page."

By far the greatest number of errors occur in the use of plural forms of the verbs with singular subject forms and vice versa. One girl writes, for instance; 'Each one have their own talent." This might be considered a slip of the pen were it not for the fact that it occurs again and again throughout the stories. Here are some examples, taken from the entries of this competition:

"Scarcely any person who spends the largest part of their time. . . "

". . . . so mechanically perfect has these machines became."

NEXT COMPETITION.

The coupon for the next competition is not being printed this week, but will appear next Wednesday. Meantime, just so that you may start on your stories, we will tell you what the subjects will be. Write your stories, attach the coupon, and mail them, to The Examiner, "Farm Page," Peterborough. Write on only one side of the paper. No matter how good a story is, or how well written it cannot be considered in this competition if written on both sides of the paper.

The subjects for next time are:

Senior class, 15 years and over:

"Why I intend to stay on the farm," or

"Why I do not intend to stay on the farm."

Junior class, 14 and under:

"Why I like going to school," or,

"How we put in the winter on the farm."

SOME HINTS.

In reprinting these stories The Examiner has only corrected the worst errors in grammar and composition sufficiently to ensure smooth reading. If the writers had kept copies of their stories just as they

FARMER HAS CASH IN KEENE SECTION

Fewer Sales and Less Grain Being Drawn to Market.

KEENE, Nov. 29.—Mr. Howard Windsor is holding a farm sale on December 4th. There are fewer farm sales in this community than usual.

Crops were good this year, and prices being on the upgrade has brought a note of optimism to the farmer. Wheat has been ranging around $1.40, this being about forty per cent. increase over last year's price.

It is also noticeable that the farmers are not drawing out so much wheat and grain as usual at this time of the year. Especially when taxes are almost due. This would also tend to show that they have more surplus cash than in the last two or three years.

Produce prices are fair, this week's quotations being:—Eggs, 50c; chickens, 5 lbs and up, 20c; turkeys, 25c; hens, 14c.

A few of the farmers have reported rot in their potatoes in the cellar. This appears more prevalent in the crops that were grown on low land.

This week has seen practically the winding up of the fall ploughing.

Stewart Boys threshed this week and reports about 12-13 hundred bushels of wheat besides other grain.

Otonabee is known for its good conditions in the growing of Ontario wheat, and it is safe to say that very few townships, year by year, can produce as much and good quality.

UNTO THE END.

How's this? asked the lawyer. You've named six bankers in your will to be pallbearers. Of course, it's all right, but wouldn't you rather choose some friends with whom you were on better terms?

"No, judge; that's all right. Those fellows have carried me so long, they might as well finish the job."

The Farmers In Politics

Progressive Movement Launched Because of Discontent With Policies of Old Parties. What of the Future.

By T. WAYLING.

Eight or nine years ago the farmers of Canada began a definite, organized campaign to make themselves a power in national business and political affairs. They were rallied around a list of grievances from which they sincerely believed they were suffering —manufacturers' combines, unfair tariffs, banking, trade preferences. The extremists demanded free trade, but many of the leaders urged them to go slowly and see whether it were not possible to create a better understanding between business and agriculture. But the then leaders of banking and manufacturing, indifferent and lacking vision, treated the approaches in a way that left resentment. The farmers then proceeded to go their own way and secured many of their objectives, lower tariff, etc.

What of the future?

The Progressive convention held in Toronto this week holds intriguing possibilities. It was the first of a series to be called under the impulsion of the Progressive members of parliament. In Manitoba, a series of 550 district political meetings will be held during the next six weeks, culminating in a convention next January. In Saskatchewan, constituency conventions will be held this winter, and, in Alberta, the U.F.O. is politically active. It is possible, therefore, that a Dominion Progressive convention may be held immediately following the close of the next session of the Federal Parliament.

Whether this Progressive movement will get anywhere or not is a subject matter for debate. Each province has a method peculiar to itself, and the exponents of that method have their own ideas as to the route to be taken. They are generally agreed, however, that they are aiming at the same ultimate destination; the revitilizing of Canadian political institutions and a more democratic control of public policy.

To deal with the Western provinces briefly, one might outline the method of organization and the manner in which the new political force seeks to make itself articulate. In Alberta, the United Farmers of Alberta is a power in itself, embracing two of the three factors in the agrarian scheme of things. The farmer movement finds expression firstly in an economic organization, secondly, a commercial organization; thirdly, a political organization. In Alberta, the economic and political organizations are one—the commercial organization being the Alberta branch of the United Grain Growers' Ltd. The commercial organization is divorced from the political and economic aspects. The U.F.A., therefore, is organized for educational and political purposes; and it may be said to be one of the most perfect organizations of its kind. It jumped into a provincial and then a federal election with less preliminary than any party organization ever attempted, and was successful in both instances. It could enter a provincial or federal campaign to-morrow and have a candidate in every riding.

The same thing applies to a lesser extent in Manitoba. The United Grain Growers, is the commercial organization; while the U.F.M. embraces the economic and political fields. This organization has been gaining ground steadily, and while it has not yet quite reached the perfection of organization of the U.F.A, it is a force to be reckoned with, as exemplified by the fact that it has planned and will carry out 550 meetings within six weeks.

In Saskatchewan all three factors are interwoven. The Saskatchewan Co-operative Elevator Company is the commercial organization, but it is largely interwoven with the Saskatchewan Grain Growers' Association. Of late there has been a tendency to divide the two, and an extraneous factor has been the rise of the Farmers' Union, which had a meteoric career, but which of late has been on the decline.

The Co-operative, like the commercial bodies in Alberta and Manitoba, will remain strictly aloof from any political manifestation whatever; the economic body will adopt an attitude of watchful waiting.

Progressive leaders see in this week's convention the initial step in the building up of a national Progressive party that will include in its numbers men drawn from all walks of life. The convention itself passed a resolution calling for such a Dominion convention. None of them, however, will hazard an opinion as to what leadership will be forthcoming at such a convention, though all are agreed that the vital need of the movement in a national sense is outstanding leadership that will command the respect and support of the elements which at present show a tendency to pull apart from one another.

RECORDS BROKEN LIVE STOCK SHOW

5,105 Animals Entered in the Individual Competitions.

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—(United Press).—With all records smashed for the number of entries of individual cattle, draft horses, sheep and swine, the International Live Stock Exposition opened here today, celebrating its twenty-fifth anniversary. It will continue through December 6.

President Coolidge has accepted an invitation and will be present on December 4.

A total of 5,105 animals has been entered in the individual competitions. The display of domestic stock during the first week in December will be the greatest assemblage ever brought together at any one time or place, officials stated.

"The previous high water mark was several hundred entries less than the number scheduled to appear here," B. H. Heide, Secretary, said.

"Cattle lead in the total number of entries, with nearly 2,100 nominations; swine come second, sheep third and horses fourth. The largest increases are in the swine and sheep departments, the Berkshire, Chester White, Tanworth, Shropshire, Cotswold and Dorset breeds showing the greatest number of exhibits. Many herds, flocks and studs make their initial bow at the International, and there are consignments of outstanding animals.

"Thirty different breeds of livestock, as well as various grades and crossbreeds are on the list of contestants. They come from practically every State and Canadian Province, and many were originally imported from Scotland, England, Belgium, France, New Zealand and Australia."

CANADIAN FLOUR HIGHER.

Increase in Quantity Only Moderate, But Revenue Is Increased.

MONTREAL, Nov. 29.—While exports of Canadian flour are showing only moderate increase over this period a year ago, the trade represents a greater revenue to the country, due to the higher prices that wheat flour is bringing. During October, 1923, wheat flour exported from Canada had an average value of $5.35 a barrel, and, in October, 1924, it had an average value of $6.55 a barrel. Flour exports were slightly smaller in October, but for the six months to date of the present fiscal year, Canada has exported 2,738,000 barrels of flour valued at $17,000,000, as against 2,268,500 barrels, valued at $12,150,000, for the similar six months of 1923.

CANADA SEEKS STOCK PRIZES

International Livestock Exhibition at Chicago Opened To-day—Many Entries.

GRADE IS HIGHER.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 29.—(Canadian Press).—Thousands of head of cattle, swine, sheep and horses were brushed and curried and made to look their best last night in anticipation of the grand opening today of the twenty-fifth annual international livestock exhibition at the Union stock yards here.

Canadian entries were found all over the group of buildings housing the show. In cattle and sheep the Dominion entries are heavy, and in the hay and grain show the maple nominations were predominant.

Ontario is showing a surprisingly large numbers of nominations for the prizes in the sheep class. Many of the entries have not arrived as yet, due to the fact that they were exhibited this week at the Canadian Royal show a Toronto.

David D. Bell, of Shakespeare James a Campbell of Ford, F W. Guerney, of Paris, James Parkinson, of Guelph, and H. M. Lee, of High Gate, are among those represented here. Both Mr. Lee and Mr. Parkinson scored heavily last year. The former taking seven out of ten possible firsts, including both the ram and ewe championships, in the Lincolns. Mr. Parkinson placed five times in the same class. Mr Campbell took two firsts and eight places in the Cotswold division last year. Robert McEwen of London, another ribbon winner last year, is again entered.

F. H. Newcomb, of the Alberta department of agriculture, who is in charge of that province's exhibit, was found busy arranging some sample wheat today.

"The show this year is going to be greater for us than ever before," he said. "The entries are just as numerous, and of even a higher grade than last year. I look confidently to many Canadian triumphs when the judging starts."

MIGHT AS WELL.

A wealthy old lady, falling ill, called a lawyer to assist her in making her will. She tried to go into a good deal of detail in her instructions, and the lawyer said soothingly:

"Now then, don't you worry about disposing of this property; just leave it all to me."

"Well," answered the old lady, "I guess I might as well. You'd get most of it anyway."

WAS STILL ALONE.

"Didn't you marry because you didn't like to be alone?"

"Sure."

"Then what are you getting a divorce for?"

"For the same reason."

Success comes to the man who does not fear failure.

THE THIEF OF BAGDAD

BY ACHMED ABDULLAH

CHAPTER VI.

In describing the adventures of the Prince of India during his search for the greatest rarity on earth, we are confronted not by a lack but by a superabundance, a prolixity, an extraordinary embarrassment of too much material in which we have to separate the chaff from the wheat, and vice versa. For the contemporary accounts by Hindu poets, theologians and historians, written in the most classis and most elegant Sanskrit, fill over seven thousand enormous tomes, twisted and baroque with Oriental parlance and imagery and illustrated with countless charming miniatures. Therefore, having read and digested every last one of them, we have decided to give here only the gist of the shortest of these accounts, which begins, piously and properly:

"Rung hao! Hail to the gods! Greetings, salutations and genuflections to Surya, the Sun; Vayu, the Wind; Yama, the Judge of Souls; Varuna, the Regent of Water; Prithwi, the Earth; Lakshmi, the Dispenser of Wealth!

"Greetings to all the household gods!

"Greetings, also, to Vishnua, Shiva, and Doorga!

"Greetings, finally, to Brahm, greatest of gods! May His might be glorified and His word be exalted! For it was He who distinquished man by the garment of intellect, who adorned his exterior with splendid form and perfect figure, and who illuminated his interior with the light of knowledge. Man hath thus received the happy gift of being enabled, with clear view and penetrating reflection, to contemplate the wonders of Omnipotence and the mysteries of creation, and to know that the brocaded surface of Day, colored with brilliant and motley groupings, and the glorious curtain of Night, decorated with the light of the many stars, received not visible form without a wise Ordainer and a preventing Framer . . ."

So the original Sanskrit text rambles on for about three hundred pages to come back to earth by describing the meeting at Puri, the ancient capital of Hindustan, between the Prince of India and the learned Brahmin priest, the Sami Haridat Rashiq Lall.

The latter, having listened to his sovereign lord's request, immediately rolled up his tongue, separated his soul from his body, and went into a trance which lasted for seven days and seven nights. Then, returning to consciousness, he declared that he had considered the matter of the Prince's marriage, and quoted the Shastras, the Hindu Scripture, at length:

"'She who is not descended from his paternal or maternal ancestors within the sixth degree is eligible by a man of high caste for nuptials. In taking a wife let him studiously avoid the following families, be they ever so high in caste, or ever so rich in grain and cattle and gold: the family which has neglected prescribed religious duties; that which has produced no male children; that which has thick hair on its body; that whose sons have blue eyes; and that which is given to vile language.'"

The swami slurred; stopped; then, smiling a little, went on:

"Rajah! I have the very wife for you. She is very learned and of good family. She is of golden color, with a dear little nose like the flower of the sesamum. Her eyes are large, like the principal leaf of the lotus. Her lips are red, like the young leaves of the mango-tree; her teeth are like pomegranate seeds; and her swaying walk is that of a drunken elephant. She is most fair amongst the fair. I repeat that she is of excellent family. She is, in fact, my daughter. Marry her, my lord, and be happy ever afterwards!"

"A curse on your daughter and her father!" exclaimed the Prince impatiently. "I told you—did I not?—that I wish to marry Princess Zobeid!"

"She is an Arab—a Moslem—a foreigner—a heathen—a cannibal of the holy cow!"

"A cannibal, too, of my heart! She has devoured it—by Shiva! I love her!"

"The gods have ordered that . . ."

"The gods may order you, but not me, to do or let undone certain things," haughtily interrupted the Prince. "I am their descendant. I am their equal." And when the other continued to argue and plead, he exclaimed: "Shut your lips lest your teeth catch cold! And now—tell me what I came here to consult you about. The greatest treasure on earth—where shall I find it?"

Then, as Haridat Rashiq Lall still went on voicing his objections and quoting lengthy passages from Hindu Scripture in support of his arguments, at last the Prince lost his patience and commanded his Rajput slaves to give the Holy Man a sound bastinado upon the soles of his saintly feet. They did so, trussing him up like a pig with his feet in the air, plying their bamboo staves with ardor and enthusiasm, having never liked the priest who was given to nagging and preaching and sermonizing and pointing out other people's sins and errors. After which, the soles of his feet cut to ribbons and hurting painfully, the latter was convinced that his imperial master meant what he said. So he rubbed ointment on his wounds; went into another trance which lasted for seventeen days and seventeen nights; awakened; painted a brand-new, crimson caste mark on his forehead; and announced that, though he still disapproved of the Rajah's decision, he had succeeded in discovering what was wanted of him:

"The rarest and most wondrous thing on earth! The goddess Doorga's left eye wherein one can see, as if graved there by a steel chisel, whatever is happening anywhere in the world!"

"For instance," asked the Prince, "could I read therein what Zobeid is doing at this very moment?"

"Indeed, O Rajah!"

"Very well. Where is this statue of Doorga?"

"Far, far in the north! A thousand miles from here. Beyond the Suleymani Range! In the land of the heathen Afghans! In a jungle a little to the west of the city of Kandahar!"

Early the next morning the Prince of India went into the North, accompanied by a large retinue of soldiers and slaves and porters, not forgetting to take along seven Tamil sorcerers. For the Swami had warned him that he would have to cross a swamp inhabited by ghastly and repulsive supernatural beings.

They climbed the Suleymani Range and, at the end of the second moon, came to the jungly swamp. It was guarded by a Yogi, the guardian of the swamp who, dressed in nothing but age-old dirt, squatted on a mound of earth, drumming upon a skull, and incessantly exclaiming:

"Ho, Hail! Ho, Devi! Ho, Doorga!" as he prayed to the three dread incarnations of the goddess of destruction.

But the Prince of India did not stop to argue with him. A word to his scarlet-robed executioner—the swish of a two-handed sword—and the Yogi's head rolled on the ground like an over-ripe pumpkin, while the Prince and his followers entered the dismal swamp.

The Swami's warning had been right. For it was inhabited by all the terrible creatures of the Hindu hell. There were here enormous goats with tiger claws and flat, opaque snake eyes, possessed by the souls of those who had slain Brahmins; things with the bodies of men and the faces of camels and monkeys and warthogs, inhabited by the souls of deniers of the deities; huge, hideous, crawling green worms, containing the souls of priests who had eaten meat or drunk fermented liquor; blood-sucking bats who in life had stolen the property of temples; restless ghosts of those who had married low-caste women; shades for whom the funeral rites had not been correctly performed; sobbing, wailing, moaning souls fresh from the tortures of Tamisra, the Hell of Outer Darkness, and the Usipatra Vana, or Sword-Leaved Forest. There were here corpses and skeletons animated by female fiends, Daginis and Yoginis and Shankinis, dancing about in frightful revelry, and a thousand other terrible sights.

So the seven Tamil sorcerers had their work cut out for them. But, what with prayers and exorcisms and incantations, with the burning of secret incense and the mumbling of ancient spells and the beating of devil drums, they succeeded at last. The supernatural beings disappeared in a great, roaring, yellow wind; and the Prince and his retinue continued their journey until, finally, they reached the statue of Doorga, the goddess of destruction.

Standing alone, majestic and grim, in the heart of the festering, miasmic jungle, it was raised on a tall, square pedestal, on which was painted a panorama of all Hindustan's many motley myths and legends and faiths and superstitions: from the Chhadanta Jataka, the birth story of the Six-Tusked Elephant, most beautiful of all Indian legends, to the ancient tale of Kaliya Damana, which tells how Krishna overcame the hydra Kaliya; from color-blazing designs picturing Rama, Shiva, and Lakshmi meditating in their forest cells, to a representation of Bhagiratha imploring Shiva to permit the river Ganges to fall to the thirsty earth from his matted locks.

The statue itself was immense, towering over two hundred feet into the air, and carved from a single block of shiny, black basalt: with thick, blood-red, sensuous lips that were curled in a cruel smile; around its neck a double girdle of human skulls, and skulls, too, hanging from its ears; in its whirling hair a cobra, a mermaid figure of the river Ganges, a human skeleton, and the crescent moon. It had six arms. One of them held a sword, the second the blood-dripping head of a bearded man, the third a drum, the fourth fire, while its other two hands were empty and raised to bless the worshippers. Before the statue's feet lay the utensils of sacrifice—dishes for the burnt offerings, lamps, jugs, incense, copper cups, gongs and conches.

Thus, in its solitary jungle home, as all over India, in a hundred temples from the snows of the Himalayas to the moist reek of Cape Comorin, towered Doorga, the Great Mother, the Emblem of Lust and Destruction—that unspeakable Representation of the Mysteries and Cruelties of Life!

The Prince looked at the idol. He murmured a prayer:

"O Six-Armed Reverence! O Mother of all the Spirits—of Alays and Gumas, Baitals and Yakshas of dreadful forms! Bless me, O Doorga! O Smashana Kali!"

Again he looked at the statue. Its right eye, carved from the basalt, was painted a bright yellow. But the left, distinct even from this distance, was an immense crystal which mirrored the dance of the clouds.

The magic crystal! The magic globe! The greatest rarity in the world! The treasure with which to buy the Princess Zobeid and Bagdad!

For a moment he was conscious of certain misgivings. Should he risk it? Should he mutilate Doorga, the Great Mother, the dread goddess of Destruction? Should he pluck out this wondrous eye of hers?

Quickly he overcame this feeling of misgiving. By cutting out her eye he would bring Bagdad and all Arabistan under his sway—under the sway, thus, of India's gods—of Doorga herself. Yes. Doorga would understand.

Only, before sending up a man to cut out the eye, he decided to propitiate the goddess with proper worship. He spoke to his priests and sorcerers; and shortly afterwards, the worship commenced according to the ancient rites, with a procession of Hindus advancing through the forest and jungle toward the idol, singing, playing on instruments, on esraj and sitar and tabla, carrying swinging lamps that stabbed points of yellow and gold through the greenish gloom of the jungle, others carrying wreaths of orchids and bowls filled with milk and fruit and sweetmeats.

At the end of the procession came the Prince himself. He was flanked at the left by a tall, mitred high-priest in white robes, and at the right by another minister, swinging a flat incense burner on silver chains.

Around and around he swung it, and there rose long, slow streamers of perfumed, many-colored smoke—wavering and glimmering like molten gold, blazing with all the deep, translucent yellows of amber and topaz, flaming through a stark, crimson incandescence into a great, metallic blue, then trembling into jasper and opal flames, like a gigantic rainbow forged in the heat of a wondrous furnace. Up swirled the streams of smoke, tearing themselves into floating tatters of half-transparent veil, pouring through the jungle and clinging to the trees the bushes, the statue of Doorga.

Straight up to the idol moved the procession, bowing with outstretched hands, depositing their offerings at Doorga's feet, and chanting their litanies—with a gathering, bloating volume of voices, gradually shaping the words the full hymn, the full melody, the full meaning beat up like an ocean of eternity, the whole punctuated by the hollow, staccato thump of the drums:

"Ho, Kali! Ho, Devi! Ho, Doorga, Doorga, Doorga! Thou who holdest a sword in thy lotus-like hands—who art fearless—who art black as the clouds—whose form is terrible—who dwellest in burning ground . . ."

The voices dropped to a flat humming and purring. Then a wail of drums and cymbals, a shrill piping of reed-flutes in ear-splitting waves of sound—and once more the chanting rose loudly, while the swinging incense-burner poured out a thick cloud of cloying, dead-sweet smoke, like an impalpable cloud of dread superstitions—the soul of their ancient Hindu faith in scented, vapory form:

". . . nor this the weapons pierce; nor this does fire burn; nor this does water wet, nor the wind dry up—Doorga, Doorga! O harasser of Thy foes eternal—all-pervading and constand Thou! Changeless, yet ever changing; unmanifest, unrecognizable Thou, and unvarying . . ."

The voices of the worshippers peaked to a hideous, insane, soul-freezing pitch. They burst forth in thick, palpable fervor:

"Hail, Mother! Hail, goddess of a thousand names! For as a destructress Thou art Kali! As a reproducer Thou art symbolized by the Yoni! Thou art the Mother of the Universe, in the holy reincarnation of Jagan-Matri! As Parvati, Thou dost protect the hillmen, and Thou art also Sati, Tara and Bhaivana herself, the consort of Shiva! Ho, Kali! Ho, Devi! Ho, Doorga! Help us cross the Vaitarami, the dread stream of death! Help us over the horrors of the outer darkness Tamisra, across the sword-leafed forest of Usipatra Vana!"

Then the high-priest raised his hands to command silence; and he broke into a chant, between speaking and singing:

"Hail, Mother! Hail, six-armed goddess of horrid form, around whose neck hangs a string of human skulls, a precious pendant! Hail, malign and blessed image of destructiveness! Listen Thou to my Mantra!"

"Ho, Kali! Ho, Smashana Kali!"—the worshippers prayed and chanted and groaned.

Some were half mad with excitement, and every once in a while one of them would jump up with a throaty yell, swing into the open space in front of the pedestal with a whirling, gyrating motion, and dance before the jeering, black statue with horrible gestures—and over all the sullen, palsying din of the drums and cymbals and tomtoms—and the red, floating, swirling wreaths of incense smoke—until at last, through sheer, physical exhaustion of the worshippers the ceremony came to an end.

There was in the Prince's entourage a young Brahmin from Madras, called Asoka Kumas Mitra. This youth was very learned and of excellent family. His was an absolute purity of living and thinking, so exemplary that he even refused to look at his own great-grandmother, an ugly, shriveled old woman, unless her face was covered by a thick veil; his character was irreproachable; his honor unstained; and his charity so great that he used for himself only one hundredth part of his income and divided all the rest in equal proportions between saintly beggars, one half to Bairagis or Vishnu's mendicants, the other half to Sanyasis or ash-smeared worshippers of Shiva. Him the Prince of India commanded to climb the statue and remove the left eye from its stone socket.

"For," he added, "your hand is as pure as your heart. Your touch will be gentle to Doorga."

The youth trembled with fear.

"Heaven-Born," he replied, "I am afraid."

"Afraid? Of what, may I ask?"

"To remove the eye—oh—it would be a terrible affront to the goddess!"

"Is that all?" smiled the Prince carelessly. "Have no fear. Doorga is my cousin. I myself absolve you of all sin."

But still Asoka Kumar Mitra hesitated, and the Prince was about to lose his temper—which had always been short—when the high-priest whispered a word in his ear:

"You cannot do it, my lord."

"By Shiva!" exclaimed the Prince. "Was there ever a Rajah in all Hindustan as plagued with objecting, arguing, nagging, contradicting, cursed fools as I am? Why can't I do it?"

"Because"—the high-priest pointed at the grim, fiendish statue—"Doorga is not yet appeased."

"We prayed to her. We worshipped her according to the proper rites."

"I know. But she demands a sacrifice."

"We offered milk and flowers and fruit and sweetmeats."

"This is the month of pilgrimages, Heaven-Born," argued the high-priest. "This month Doorga demands a sacrifice of blood—to smell sweetly in her nostrils!"

"Very well," said the Prince. "I shall sacrifice to her when I return to Puri. I shall give to her a holocaust of thirty white sheep, thirty black sheep, three virgins and seven Brahmin youths of excellent family. I give oath!" He bowed toward Doorga. "And now"—turning to Asoka Kumar Mitra—"up with you, my lad. And have no fear. No sin is yours. I absolve you!"

It is a disputable point what caused the young Brahmin to obey. Perhaps he did so because he had faith in the Prince's divine connections; perhaps, on the other hand, because just then the Prince was making a significant gesture in the direction of his red-robed executioner. At all events, up he went; mounting the pedestal; escalading the idol's huge feet; scrambling up to its left knee, whence, slowly, warily, precariously, he scaled the hip's enormous, curved circumference; reaching out and grasping one of the great arms and using it as if it were a ladder; attaining the hand which held the blood-dripping head of a bearded man; sitting astride its thumb for a few moments to rest himself and regain his breath.

Down below the Prince urged him on with hearty words; and so the youth vaulted in a keen leap toward the statue's thick, sensuous lips; got there in safety; and at last pulled himself up to the left eye, standing on the stony rim of the socket.

He took a sharp chisel from his waist shawl; worked assiduously for several minutes until he had removed the eye. And then—was it fear of the goddess' revenge, or was it a plain case of dizziness?—suddenly he gave a cry of terror. His feet slipped. His knees gave. He lost his balance. He tried to steady himself; could not; and, the crystal hugged against his breast, fell down, through the air, in a fastic curve, striking the ground, two hundred feet below, with a sickening thud and crash.

There was complete silence. Silence of utter terror. The youth was dead.

Then the high-priest broke into a loud chant of thanksgiving:

"Ho, Devi! Ho, Doorga! Ho, Smashana Kali! Thou hast listened to my Mantra! Thou hast accepted the sacrifice! Blessed be Thy name, O Great Mother!"

Quickly he bent over the dead. With agile, practiced fingers he opened a vein and drained a generous quantity of blood into a sacerdotal bowl. He poured it out at the feet of the idol while the worshippers prayed and chanted, and while the Prince picked up the crystal eye which had remained unbroken in spite of the fall.

He held it high.

He looked into its milky whiteness. The greatest rarity in the world, he thought triumphantly, well worth the death of a thousand young Brahmins! The treasure by the strength of which Zobeid would be his! Then, at the thought of her, he spoke her name. He addressed the crystal:

"Tell me, O magic crystal, what Zobeid is doing at this moment!"

At once the globe clouded, to become a moment later like a vivid, colored miniature that showed Zobeid on the balcony of her home staring with starry eyes into the distance—eyes that were full of longing and love and faith.

"By Shiva!" thought the Rajah, who all his life had had an excellent conceit of himself. "The Crusher of Hearts is thinking of me!"

It would have shocked him dreadfully had he been able to read the words which Zobeid's lips were forming silently:

"Ahmed! Ahmed! Soul of my soul! Oh—my Ahmed—how I wish that I could be with you—to help you—help you in your search!"

And indeed right then the Thief of Bagdad was in dire need of help.

For he was about to cross the Valley of the Monsters, the Valley of Evil Thoughts, where all the envies and jealousies and bad wishes formed in the human brain since God created Adam out of clay mixed with water and Eve from a crooked rib of Adam's body, lie in ambush for the traveller—unless there be no rancor in his soul and no envy nor malevolence in his heart.

In this valley dangers of all kinds were as thick as hair in the tail of the blue-faced Vindhya monkey. Here were slippery rocks and timber falls and jagged precipices; impetuous torrents flashing down their beds of black stone; and no path except a fugitive track through the undergrowth, hardly discernible, wiped by the poisonous breath of the jungle into a dim, smelly mire which bubbled and sucked—seemed to reach out for those who dared tread its foul solitude.

Ahmed gripped his sword and steeled his will. He walked on.

Cable-like, spiky creepers dropped low from the trees and struck his face; they opened before him with a dull, gurgling sound as he brushed them aside with fist or sword point; they closed behind him as if the jungle had stepped away for a second to let him through, leisurely, contemptuously, invincibly, to bar his way, should he attempt to return.

Darkness came suddenly. It came with black thunder clouds and the fiery, crimson, forked tongues of lightning. All about him Ahmed could hear the night cries of wild animals; the trumpeting of gigantic elephants; the howling of tigers; the hissing of cobras; and the whimpering of wild dogs coursing in packs on the tracks of their prey.

Fear dropped on him like a sodden blanket. He thought of the Prince of India, the Prince of Persia, the Prince of the Mongols. Thought of them with envy in his heart and rancour in his soul. They were strong. They were powerful. They were rich. They had thousands and thousands of armed retainers and wise men to obey their every wish, while he was alone in all the world, with nobody to lend him a helping hand.

"Allah!" he exclaimed. "How I envy them!"

And, as his lips pronounced the words, all at once the darkness was cleft in two by an immense shaft of quivering, yellow light, and he saw, square in his path, a huge monster facing him.

It towered above him like a mountain. Its shape was that of a dragon covered with green, steely scales, a swishing tail that wound up in a forest of lances, an enormous, cavernous mouth that was armed with a treble row of dagger-sharp teeth and dripping with blood and black venom, and eight legs with claws large enough to rip an elephant to pieces as if it were a mouse, and to tear a banyan tree up by the roots as if it were a small weed.

It saw Ahmed, and made for him with a great, clumsy leap, breathing a column of smoke and fire from its nostrils.

The Thief of Bagdad was about to turn tail and run away. But he reconsidered. He had no chance of escape. The dragon would overtake him at a single leap; would swallow him at a single mouthful.

All right—he said to himself—it was quite hopeless; but at least he would die fighting. So he lunged at the brute with the point of his sword; missed; leaped nimbly to one side to evade the monster's claws; lunged again, missed again; again leaped to safety.

"Hai!" he gave his gutturalwar cry. "Hai!" and gradually, as he fought, the envy and rancor in his heart began to pale, and there came to him a certain high, reckless, clanking courage—nor exactly a courage of despair.

Up from the ground he vaulted with both feet, striking with all his strength. The dragon grunted, doubtless surprised that this small lump of humanity should dare resist him and give battle, and receded a step.

Ahmed laughed.

"Pig!" he shouted at the brute. "Wart! Jew! Christian! Unclean and ludicrous pimple! Come here and fight!"

The envy in his heart paling more and more, he went to the attack, fighting after the time-honored manner of Arab sworders; bending almost double; skipping in a lithe, rapid circle; executing various gambados and measured leaps; springing forward like a monkey and backward like a toad; beating with his sword upon the monster's tough hide so that it rattled like a drum.

"Hai! Hai! Hai!"

Why—he thought—he was really thoroughly enjoying himself! Bah!—with all their might and wealth the three Princes of Asia would never be able to fight as he was fighting. Envy them? By the Prophet—let them envy him! And, as his brain conceived and formed the thought, all at once his sword point found a soft spot between the monster's green, steely scales. The point entered, twisted, tore, cut, ripped; and with a great, wailing roar, the dragon fell on its side, breathed one final column of smoke and fire through its nostrils, and died.

"By the Prophet—on Him the salute!" the Thief of Bagdad said to himself, not at all modestly. "Pluck does it every time!"

He shook his right hand with his left, congratulating himself. He kicked the dead dragon contemptuously in the ribs, wiped his sword with a handful of grass, left the Valley of the Monsters, the Valley of Evil Thoughts, and turning the corner, found himself at the very entrance of the Garden of the Enchanted Trees, the Garden of Wisdom and Wit.

CHAPTER VII.

The garden was a sweet and charming spot.

Here the dark-hued tamala trees, bearded to the waist with grey and greyish-blue moss, served as a foil for the crimson glory of the pippal and pepper trees, the elfin-green and emerald-green exuberance of the cinnamon palms, and the majestic, columnar aisles of the banyan figs. From trunk to trunk, like bridges for the tiny, chattering, rust-red monkeys to pass across, stretched cordages of tough-stemmed, waxen orchids; while the ground was a rich mosaic of scarlet asoka flowers, cliterias of palest pastel blue, daks orange-yellow as the harvest moon, madhavis as white as the snows of the Himalayns, purple star flowers, and perfumed cascades of red and white jasmine. Farther on were trellised walks closely roofed with heliotrope creepers, the golden, heavy blooms of the mango trees, and enormous, sweet-scented clusters of champela blossoms.

There were few sounds. Only gently, softly, the humming of the bees plying their task amidst the flowers; and from time to time the dulcet notes of a kokila bird or the sobbing, minor wail of a turtle-dove deeply hid in its leafy bower.

Peace and happiness.

Peace and happiness, too, in Ahmed's heart as he walked through the garden, a song on his lips.

And then, quite suddenly, without reason, he became conscious of a feeling, not exactly of terror, but of a vague uneasiness; and the very next second he perceived the cause of it. For it seemed to him that, as he walked, the garden was walking with him, each tree and flower and bush, each orchid-laden creeper and tiniest blade of grass moving with him in a parallel line so that, for all his steady walking, he really did not move an inch.

ATTRACTIVE GIFTS ARE EASY TO MAKE

You Can Make Table Runner, Wall Panel or Lamp Shades With Ease.

BY HORTENSE SAUNDERS

To make the Christmas presents illustrated to-day you need no needle, thread or thimble, but you do need a fair supply of fine white glue and a shears.

And you'll find the glue is as mighty as the needle when it comes to getting results.

The table runner or wall panel, as you wish, is made of a length of novelty ribbon with a narrow border of metallic ribbon or galoon glued on the edge then the entire piece is mounted on heavy satin, glued in place.

Use Brocaded Velvet

Instead of novelty ribbon you could use a square of brocaded velvet or printed or even embroidered silk. These panels are, of course, copied after he Italian tapestries or the oriental embroideries, but they are decorative and very much in demand in our modern scheme of interior decoration.

A smaller panel, finished in the same manner with a binding or ribbon, may be framed to make a very attractive tea tray. Often a picture that has lost its interest has a valuable frame that can be utilized very neatly in this way.

Glass jars of various sizes, such as pickles or olives come in, may be covered with ribbon glued in place and finished with braid and used on the dressing table or even on the mantel or table to serve as a vase.

For the dressing table these are usually evolved from delicately colored ribbons or silks and embellished with bows of French flowers. Those for a less intimate room are more attractive in darker and richer fabrics with a conservative design.

Lamp Shades.

Lamp shades and paper baskets may be made in the same way and be made to match if one desires.

Whereas a lamp covering may successfully be pasted and worked onto a wire frame without stitching, the best results are obtained by buying a thin parchment-covered frame, or one covered with thin silk, and then with the frame work covered, the matter of adding another cover or ribbon chiffon or lace and securing it with paste become a very simple matter.

Attractive Gifts.

All types of tin or cardboard or even thin wooden boxes may be covered to make very attractive gifts.

Hat boxes covered with cretonne or even with wall paper, pasted neatly and evenly, and decorated with a large ribbon bows are featured in the eclusive gift shops and are really decorative in a bedroom besides keeping extra hats from dust and sunlight.

Such gifts as these come within the reach of any purse, since they may be made of inexpensive materials one has on hand as well as of bits of antique fabric or embroidery that necessitate quite an outlay.

GET ACQUAINTED WITH W.D.A.F.

(KANSAS CITY, MO.—411 METERS).

By William J. Fagan.

There is perhaps no late evening feature so popular with radio fans throughout the country as is The Night-hawk Frolic, conducted by The Merry Old Chief at Station WDAF, The Kansas City Star.

Every night (excepting during several summer months) at 11.45, Central Standard time, the voice of The Merry Old Chief is heard and the Night-hawks commence to frolic until the wee sma' hours. This feature has made WDAF what it is to-day, spreading its fame throughout the land, as there is perhaps no other feature on WDAF's programs which would serve to differentiate it from just an ordinary radio broadcasting station. At least, there is none which rivals the late program for popularity.

Every day except Sunday, WDAF sets aside the hour between 6 and 7 p.m. for the School of the Air. This feature consists of bedtime stories, addresses on various topics, radio piano lessons and similar features and music by the Trianon Ensemble. This, too, has a large following and is popular with both grown-ups and kids.

A good instrumental trio takes care of the afternoon broadcasts, being on the air for an hour beginning at 3.30 daily. Then, too, another WDAF organization is the Minstrel Troupe. This gang puts on a minstrel show weekly, assisted by the Star Orchestra, and their performances, while not exactly salon musicales, are first-rate and to be commended.

Several Kansas City organizations appear before WDAF's microphone with more or less regularity. Perhaps most important of these is the Ivanhoe Temple Shrine Band. The Ivanhoe Glee Club generally assists the band in its concerts, which are handled by remote control from the Ivanhoe Temple.

Perhaps were WDAF to have more variety in its program, it might be more famous. Of course, there is a certain variety, but with the important stations getting away from programs following too closely a set routine and permitting themselves to be in position to handle a special remote control broadcast, it might seem propitious to have a more elastic program than that presented by WDAF. However, that is but a slight criticism and possibly one not shared by the multitude of listeners to The Star's station. There is really very little to criticize about WDAF. Its powerful transmitter carries its music to all parts of the United States and it is really one of the bulwarks of mid-western radio, serving a large audience apparently with what they want and providing classical and popular music of good, sound character.

MESSAGE FROM THEATERS

NEW YORK CITY, (United Press).—The theatre has been added to the social worker's kit of tools, according to the announcement of a play contest issued by the Committee on Publicity Methods in Social work which is headed by Robert W. Kelso, director of the Boston Council of Social Agencies. Prizes of $350 and $150 given by Joseph Lee, president of the playground and recreation association of America, will be awarded for the best one-act plays carrying a social message.

No man can be great without an audience.

NOTHING TO EQUAL BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Mrs. Geo. Lefebvre, St. Zenon, Que., writes: "I do not think there is any other medicine to equal Baby's Own Tablets for little ones. I have used them for my baby and would use nothing else." What Mrs. Lefebvre says thousands of other mothers say. They have found by trial that the Tablets always do just what is claimed for them. The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach and thus banish indigestion, constipation, colds, colic, etc. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

GERMANS TURN TO SONG

BERLIN, Nov. 29.—Steps to double the time devoted to singing lessons in German schools have been taken by the ministry of culture on the theory that music, s a part of a general education has been neglected of late. It is proposed to devote at least four hours weekly to singing lessons in both the elementary and high schools, instead of one or two hours as at present.

THINKS SHE HAS CHANCE FOR LIFE

Mrs. Crudelle Believes Jurors Will Free Her If She "Primps Up."

(By ROY J. GIBBONS)

CHICAGO, Nov. 29. — Mrs. Sabella Nitti Crudelle is "fixing" to beat the hangman.

On a fur coat, some silk stockings and a newly acquired knowledge of cosmetics, she stakes her hopes for life.

Sabella, who is 45, is the only woman ever sentenced to death in Illinois. She spent 18 months in a "condemned row" cell in the county jail here. This after a jury found her guilty in the murder of her first husband, Frank Nitti.

Those were months of terror for Sabella. Her hair turned gray while she waited for them to kill her. She would rise on her cot at night and shriek as the tramp, tramp of the death watch sounded through the corridors.

When within a few days of the scaffold, the Supreme Court reviewed her case and ordered a new trial.

Sabella was overjoyed. It was good to live a little longer. She rushed home to her five children.

She has been free on bond ever since—working, praying waiting. So has her second husband, Peter Crudelle who was given death along with her. He is a mere youth in his twenties and worked as a laborer on Sabella's farm before he married her

The state contends they murdered the first husband to get him out of the way. Months later, what the state said was Nitti's body, was found floating in a sewer near Stickney, Ill. Positive identification, however, never was established.

At least that was the opinion of Supreme Court judges when they snatched Sabella and her second mate from the noose.

The woman's 10-year-old son was the principal witness against his mother. He told police that he had seen his father's body being taken away. He said he saw the second husband dump it in a drainage canal. But when officers dragged the stream no body was found.

"We no kill him," says Sabella. "Me no pretty when tried. Jury say me guilty. Jury no like homely woman.

"But now me got new trial. Me have fur coat —silk stockings. Jury no say me guilty this time. Pretty women always not guilty. Me no guilty. My husband no guilty."

Thus in her primitive sort of way, Sabella visions life at least and freedom too, on her second deal with Fate.

Since her release from the death house Sabella has gone back to farming. Her hands are callouse from digging in the ground and her face is burned by the heat of many days in the fields.

But Sabella does not care. The effort earned the few pennies necessary to refurnish her wardrobe. It provided too, some powder and a bit of rouge.

At her new trial Sabella plans to make a hit.

For as Sabella says:

"Pretty woman always not guilty."

Airplanes Carry Freight From Sweden To Finland

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 29.—(Associated Press).—A regular commercial express and freight service by air to neighboring countries is the latest development in the use of airplanes here. The freight service has actually started over the line between Stockholm and Helsingfors, Finland, and thus augments the air traffic between those two countries, which has hitherto been limited to passengers and mails. The distance to Helsingfors is about 240 miles across the Baltic Sea, a good day's run for a small steamer. The peculiar utility of air shipping was demonstrated by the fact that the first cargo carried half a ton of medical supplies which were delivered in Helsingfors three hours after being taken on board here.

It has been announced that next spring express and freight shipments will be carried to Copenhagen and Hamburg direct, with air connections for Berlin, Paris and London.

OFFER TO LANGTRY.

Vancouver Maroons Want Fort William Goalkeeper.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., Nov. 29. —(Canadian Press).—It was learned here yesterday that overtures had been made to Dr. Jack Langtry, star goalie of the Fort William hockey club, by Frank Patrick to join the Vancouver Maroons, of the Western Canada Professional League. Langtry is said to have declined the offer of the coast hockey mogul.

Patrick's reason for angling for Langtry's services is attributed to his fear of losing the services of Hugh ("Eagle-Eye") Lehman, who for many seasons has starred between the Maroon goal posts.

Lehman has been suffering from rheumatism, and it is thought possible that he may be forced to retire from the game.

LAWMAKERS GET POOR PAY

BERLIN, Nov. 29. — Being a member of the German reichstag, or parliament, is not a very lucrative position. The delegates are paid $140 a month, which is one-quarter the salary of cabinet ministers.

But the German parliamentarian enjoys free railroad travel throughout the republic in a first class compartment.

LAUNDRY BUSINESS LARGER

JOLIET, Ill., (United Press).—Education in home economics by the Amreican housewife is credited with being an important factor in the increasing volume of business now being performed by the power laundries, according to William E. Fitch, manager of the Laundry Owners National Association, in his annual report to the executive committee of the organization.

The growth of the laundry industry volume has been from 236 million dollars in 1919, to 500 million dollars in 1923.

"The Store of Holiday Happiness"

THE MISSING LOVE LINK

"Now You've Got My Letter It's All Right, John!

John Blunt regarded the prospect of matrimony uneasily. It appeared to him in the light of a necessary evil, a thing that must be gone through with, but—well, he would be glad when it was all over. The question that worried him most about it was —the woman. Funnily enough, he had not decided about her yet. Of course, he had a hazy idea she would be one of three. He went over the names of the three in his mind. It was going to be difficult. They were all so eminently worthy, so eminently suitable.

The morning was bright, and from the five-barred gate against which he leaned, John had a good view of his farmhouse and his fields. A blue tongue of smoke curled up from the chimney, the white walls glistened in the sun—a fine, comfortable down-settin' for any woman! In the broad acres, as far as the eye could see, cattle browsed—great, contented, healthy beasts, the best breed in the countryside.

"Mornin', Blunt," cried a thin voice from the dusty road on the other side of the gate.

"Hello, Silas! Anything for me?"

"Nothing," replied the little postman, removing his cap to mop his hot brow. "I'm making for Redlands —parcel for Miss Agatha. My, but, Blunt, your place is lookin' fine! Pity the old boy wasn't spared to enjoy his new house. But you'll be lonely there all by yersel', man?"

"Sometimes, Silas. I've been thinking—"

"And so are we all, John Blunt, and the sooner the better, say most of us."

"But, Silas—"

"Not at all. If ye're no' satisfied with what this countryside boasts in the way of pretty women, then all I say, John, is you're ower hard to please."

"Silas, the difficulty is—"

"That ye canna mak' up yer mind which one it's to be? I was in the same box mysel' once, John, and—well, I just drew lots, and the lot fell on the best woman that ever man had. My advice to you, John, is to draw lots and leave the result to the Almighty."

An hour later, over his bacon and eggs, Blunt still pondered the question. It was hard luck that the poor old governor and the little mother had passed away just after settling down in their grand new home—the home of their dreams that they had planned for years. It was hard luck, too, that John, left all alone, felt quite incompetent to run the establishment without a woman's help. The time he had come through with the minxes, who under his mother's strict rule were the most docile of creatures, was past thinking about. Their very natures seemed to have undergone a metamorphosis. The place was going to the dogs. A wife John must have.

He rose heavily from the table—a great, square-built man, nearing fifty, good-looking in a severe and stolid way, but as unromantic-looking as he was unromantic, with hair rapidly greying, and a face lined by exposure and the years.

"To-night I'll decide," he murmured, "and then the next day I'll try my luck. Like as not none of them will have me. I'm not the sort of chap a woman takes to, and I don't blame them." He smiled at the idea of himself ever becoming a ladies' man, and the sternness vanished for a moment from the strong face. "There's that timber beyond Redlands. I'll have a look at it now."

Redlands was three miles from the new farmhouse, a snug little place enclosed in a garden. Box bordered the flagged paths, and the tiny windows swung out all open to the sun. Miss Agatha owned Redlands. She was a lady. At one time her people had lived in the mansion-house, and she had been the old squire's prettiest daughter. But evil times had befallen the family, and Miss Agatha Sterne, the last of the line, had come to live in the little house when the estate had been sold to strangers. She led a secluded and contented life. Everybody loved her, and everybody from the crofters' children to great, hardy sons of the soil, like John Blunt, knew that they could depend always on her help and sympathy.

From afar, Blunt espied the little red roof. The timber plantation lay beyond it. He had not meant to call, but on second thoughts he decided he would. He had no definite intention of discussing so delicate a subject as the selection of a wife with Miss Agatha, but—well, he had promised never to pass Redlands without looking in.

She received him in the tiny porch, where the bees hummed all day long and the birds made their nests among the green things that covered it.

"Well," she exclaimed, "and isn't this a pleasure?"

"I was passing—"

"And you took pity on a lonely woman, John. You know you are always doing kind things." She made him sit down on the wooden bench. "Now how are you getting on, you poor man?" she asked.

John looked down into the animated face. Time had drawn no deep lines there. Smiles alone were accountable for the whimsical little creases round the eyes and mouth. Miss Agatha had always been pretty, but the sweetness of her girlhood was a pale, uninteresting prettiness to the luminous beauty of her maturity. John never saw any change in her. Nobody did, and nobody as long as she lived would refer to Miss Agatha as the old woman. She was really about John's age.

"You mean—" John hesitated. He wasn't going to disturb her with his worries. But he must be careful. She had a way of drawing things out of people before they knew where they were.

"Yes, your new house and the new stock you bought last month. Does all go well?"

"Fairly," replied Blunt cautiously. "Of course, I miss the old folks—miss them tremendously. I suppose it had to come, and they were really so contented to go, but—"

"I know, I know," murmured Miss Agatha sympathetically. "It's the emptiness." Then, brightening, "But —well, John, it's about time, you know—"

MORE

He looked down into her smiling eyes, and he was lost.

"Yes, I know; that's what's worrying me. But who is it to be?"

"Oh, John, John, how can I help you in that?" She laid her hand on his arm as if he were a small boy, and began gently to stroke the rough tweed of his sleeve up and down. "Have you thought of any one?" she questioned, without meeting his eyes.

"Yes," he said eagerly, desiring now above everything to have her advice. "That is, I've thought of three—"

"Three, John! Well, I never! And I suppose you think that any one of them will just jump at you?" There was a note of excitement in her voice.

"No, no, Miss Agatha, none of them will have me, I'm sure. That's what's worrying me. They'll all refuse, and I'll be no farther on."

"Who are they, John?"

Timidly he gave the three names. She repeated them, pondering over each. Then she sighed.

"All good women," she murmured. "Any one of them would make an ideal farmer's wife. They know all about farm life. I expect they can all make butter and sell produce to good advantage. They would take a great pride in the fine new house, too. Oh, John, you have chosen well, but, my poor man, which is it to be?"

"What would you suggest, Miss Agatha, please?"

She turned away from the earnest pleading in his eyes.

"John, do you—do you have any preference, even just the slightest preference?"

"Why, Miss Agatha!" The man actually blushed. "No, of course not —that is, I—I hardly know them. I've just seen them in the church and at the farmers' ball. One is as good as another to me."

Again Miss Agatha sighed.

"Will you give me a day to think over the names, John? If you come back to-morrow night I'll let you have my candid opinion. Then you must decide."

"Thanks, thanks. You're very good to me," said John, taking the hand that lay on his arm in his. "I shouldn't worry you with this, but—"

"Well, we're old friends, aren't we, John? And one has to help a friend. You would do it yourself if I were in trouble."

They parted and John went on to inspect the timber, while Miss Agatha sat a long time in the sunny porch dreaming of other days.

* * * * *

That evening John Blunt went to pay a last visit to the humble little steading which had been his boyhood's home. It was quite near to the new house. On the morrow it would be occupied by an artist to whom it had been let. The rooms were empty and melancholy. It depressed John. Just a short time ago it had been a little hive of bustle and happiness.

"Evenin', sir."

John turned and found his ploughman at his elbow.

"Oh, good evening, George."

"The new folks were here the day," continued George. "They wanted to see you, but I telt them ye wouldna be hame until afternoon. It was something about rot, sir—dry rot, I think the man said."

"In the cottage, George?"

"Ay; at the front door."

"Never heard of such a thing. Come and let's have a look."

They entered, and found that a piece of linoleum which covered the floor of the tiny hall had been pulled up. Under it, in the wood, there were decided signs of dry rot.

"That will need to be attended to, George," said the farmer. "I would be better to have it done before they move in to-morrow. D'ye think Jones would come first thing if you went to the village and told him to-night?"

"Sure he would," replied George. "I'll go and tell him now."

Left alone, Blunt started to pull up all the linoleum so that the floor might be in readiness for the joiner to begin work in the morning. It was beginning to grow dark before he had finished, and he was just leaving the cottage when a piece of paper covered with dust and yellowed with age caught his eye. It must have lain under the floorcloth for years. Probably an old bill that had been pushed in at the bottom of the door and had got stuck between the floor and the linoleum. John picked it up, put it in his pocket, and returned to the new house.

Meantime, in Redlands Miss Agatha sat before her cheery little wood fire. On the table at her side lay a pad and pencil. Three names were written on the white paper. She glanced at them time and again. Which? Which would make John the best wife? She tried to keep her thoughts from straying, to concentrate. John was her friend. She must help him.

On her lap lay a tiny piece of faded paper. If she put that away it would be easier to concentrate. But she would read it just once more. Once more—it would be about the thousandth time. Such big, clumsy writing, and all slanting down into one corner:—

"Agatha, if you send me a short note to-night or to-morrow night I'll know that you are not offended at what I said in the hay field. If I do not hear anything from you I won't bother you ever any more. And you'll forgive me, won't you? for I shall always be your loving John."

Yes, she had better put it away, or, better still, burn it. No, no; she'd keep it yet awhile—her one bit of romance. The tears stood in Miss Agatha's eyes. Such a little bit it had been. She, the squire's daughter, he the farmer's son. But love had laughed at the distinction, and on a summer day they had strolled through the hay field, and he had touched her hand. That was all, except his breathless, frightened exclamation—"But, Agatha, Agatha, I—I love you!"

She had written him a note, the note he had wanted in answer to his. She had not been offended; her heart had almost burst with joy. And that was all. He never answered it; he never came to see her. She was sent off to the Continent for education and travel, and when she came back he called her Miss Agatha, and she called herself his friend.

Opposite the third name, Miss Agatha made a cross. "She is the most suitable, there's not a doubt, and she is younger than the others, which is an advantage, for John is inclined to be too serious and introspective. She will keep him cheery as well as comfortable."

She placed the pad and pencil in a drawer and rose to lock up for the night. In the porch the perfume of wallflower hung heavy and sweet. She lingered under the clear stars, drinking in the beauty of the peaceful night. Not a sound—everything asleep. The ache in her woman's heart became almost unbearable. What had happened all these years ago? Why, why, why— But, no, she mustn't wonder any more. He must have had some good reason. Perhaps afterwards he was sorry. Men are so impulsive, and she had heard that sometimes they were sorry afterwards. That was it. He had not meant to break her heart or cause her all these years of loniliness. Suddenly she started. A heavy foot sounded on the flagged path, and a man's big figure came into sight.

"John—John Blunt, whatever is the matter?" She gazed up at the face above her, a face all alight with strange emotions.

"Agatha, Agatha, my little love, I've just found it—just only now—this evening—when I was pulling up the linoleum in the hall. Oh, my dear, my dear—"

"John, John, tell me—I—I don't understand."

"Your letter, beloved!" he cried "See, here it is. Silas must have pushed it under the door, as he often did with others when his knock was not attended to at once, but it went under the floorcloth and I never got it."

She took the faded note from him, then twining her arms round his bent head, she murmured close to his ear—

"Now you've got my letter, it's all right, John, it's all right. But, oh, I've been so lonely!"

In an instant he had sprung to his feet and enclosed the pathetic little figure in the strength and warmth of his arms.

"So, John, you've taken my advice," croaked Silas a few mornings later when the news of Blunt's engagement to Miss Agatha had spread.

"Yes, old fellow," replied a very elated John, "and it's advice I should have taken years and years ago."

The old man looked at him as if he were mad, then grunted and trudged away, quite unaware of the part he himself had played in the tragedy of loneliness that had almost spoiled two lives.

CARELESSNESS CAUSED FIRE IN EMPIRE CLUB

Cigarette or Match Thrown Into Botom of Elevator.

LONDON, Nov. 29.— (Canadian Press Cable.)—At the inquest Friday on the body of the housekeeper of the annex of the British Empire Club, Piccadilly street, who lost her life Tuesday last when fire destroyed the institution, the London Fire Chief stated his opinion that the conflagration originated through the throwing of a lighted match or cigarette into some rubbish in the bottom of the elevator.

The coroner remarked that it was a great comfort to know that the fire brigade was so efficient and the police so prompt and thoughtful on such a terrible occasion.

In the club when the fire broke out was a party of Canadians, including Hon. H. H. Stevens, former minister of trade and commerce, H. B. Thomson, former food controller, and Herbert Otto Frind, of Vancouver.

TWO TO PRISON.

Robbed Hungarians They Contracted to Smuggle Into U. S.

SARNIA, Nov. 29.—Jas. E. Murphy and Harold Moore, of Windsor, were found guilty in County Criminal Court Friday of armed robbery from four aliens at the village of Sombra on September 21 and sentenced to 2 years and 6 months' imprisonment respectively.

The two men had contracted to smuggle four aliens across the river to the United States but instead they lined up the trusting Hungarians on the river bank and while one accused held a revolver the other went through the men's pockets, taking $57. They then left the aliens to shift for themselves. Murphy was shown to have three previous convictions against him and drew a penitentiary term of two years, while Moore drew six months.

BEAR AND MONKEYS USED IN FIGHTING

Proved Useful To Chinese Armies as Detectives.

PEKING, Nov. 29.—(United Press).—The bear and monkey brigade is the latest thing in modern warfare and more than a thousand of the animals were recently transported to the North China front to do expert "detection" work, according to the Chinese papers.

The monkeys, according to the papers, are doing rather well, becoming experts in finding hidden mines and dangerous traps. They are excellent scouts, say the reports, and they can peek over the mountain tops, sniff out the enemy long before he is within gun range and rush back with the warning.

The bears are experts on digging up and exposing hidden mines, according to the tale, in addition to being no mean sniffers when it comes to finding the enemy, as well as giving good account of themselves in actual combat.

Much joshing is going the rounds of the vernacular papers on the basis of the yarn. One of the great questions resulting from the Darwinian theory has been settled, says one. Many have asked why, if man is ascended from the monkey, the present-day monkeys don't show a little improvement.

Another says the censorship has assumed a stern attitude and threaten to pass no dispatches containing references to "gorilla warfare."

Fundamentalists are asked by still another to kindly give the monkey a chance to win a place in the sun and to reserve comment until he and the bear go over the top.

CLOSE NAVIGATION.

SARNIA, Nov. 29. — (Canadian Press) —The lake season from this port will close on December 6, with the departure of the steamship Harmonic, it was announced Friday. The Harmonic makes her last sailing on December 3rd. According to local mariners, the weather on the lakes has been anything but kindly this fall, and much rougher than last season.

TRAIN PIGEONS FOR HAZARDOUS FLIGHTS

Pigeons Do Not Fly Well at Night and are Not Outstanding in Intelligence.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—(Associated Press).—Possible extensive use of pigeons in directing artillery fire is engaging the attention of the Signal Corps of the Army. Observers in advanced positions release the birds, carrying messages telling where the shells are falling, and they are trained to fly back to the lines. This method would be used when other channels of communication, such as radio or telephones, were not available. The Germans utilized pigeons to direct artillery fire on the eastern front during the World War.

There are now 1,500 pigeons at various posts, in the keeping of the Signal Corps, which has a breeding centre for them at Camp Vail, N. J. The birds are retained at the various army corps area headquarters, in the insular possessions, and in Panama.

It takes from ten days to two weeks, officers say, to train a pigeon to return to its loft and get its bearings. Pigeons do not fly well at night, and as a rule are not outstanding in intelligence. Difficulty has been experienced with pigeon fanciers in the army, who wish to make pigeons a major method of communication. Only one bird in ten is considered capable of flying 500 miles in one day.

In the Canal Zone, hawks constantly menace pigeons while in flight. To overcome this, a whistle is fastened to the tail of the bird, and as it flies, the rush of air causes the whistle to sound and frightens away birds of prey.

ST. LAWRENCE POWER AND NAVIGATION DEVELOPMENT

Present Characterstics of the River—Uniformity of Flow Unrivalled — Problem of Frazil Ice—Rival Plans of Development—Estimate of Cost.

By R. S. LEA
Consulting Engineer, Montreal

There is a peculiar fitness, a sort of picturesque propriety, in the fact that Canada has been compensated in considerable measure for the disadvantage of occupying the northerly half of the continent of North America by certain natural conditions which are directly due to this very situation. At the close of the glacial period, and after the final disappearance of the ice sheet which covered the whole of what is now Canada, the surface of the land was left with many irregularities, with rivers steep and rapid and fed by great numbers of lakes of all sizes and elevations, the whole being the work of the great forces exerted and set free by the advancing and receding masses of ice. As this occurred only the other day, geologically speaking, there has been little time or opportunity for the slow levelling-down processes of denudation and erosion to effect any appreciable changes in the physical features and general surface conformation of the country.

All this is particularly true of the action of the great Labrador ice-cap which covered the whole eastern half of the country, and which created the magnificent and absolutely unique system of elevated inland seas known as the Great Lakes of North America, and the Upper St. Lawrence River which forms their outlet. Here even the largest rivers, such as the St. Maurice, the Ottawa and the Winnipeg, have rapids and falls to their very mouths, and the aggregate water power available is nearly three-quarters that of the whole of Canada; which, in turn, is far greater than that of any other country except the United States.

River St. Lawrence in General.

The boundary line between Canada and the United States passes through the Great Lakes and their connecting rivers, and down the St. Lawrence to Cornwall, whence it continues eastward along the 45th parallel of latitude. Below Cornwall, the river is wholly within Canadian territory.

The St. Lawrence River, so-called, flows from Lake Ontario to the Gulf of St. Lawrence, a distance of about 600 miles, though its drainage area, which includes the entire basin of the Great Lakes, extends almost to the middle of the continent. It is made up of three stretches which are very different in character. The first 60 miles, from Lake Ontario to Prescott, in which the current is slow and the fall almost imperceptible, may be regarded as an extension eastward of the lake. It is generally deep, in some places over 100 ft.; and as the minimum depth of the channel is 30 ft., only a small amount of dredging to remove a few projecting shoals, is required to provide for 30-ft. navigation.

The lower stretch, from Montreal to the Gulf, is tidal for nearly its entire length of upwards of 400 miles. From Montreal to Quebec City, a distance of 160 miles, it averages about 2 miles in width, except for a shallow expansion about 7 miles wide and 30 miles long, known as Lake St. Peter. This lake is worthy of notice because of its effect in shortening the season of navigation to Montreal, both in Spring and Fall, a point which will be referred to later on. The channel has been deepened where necessary from time to time, until at present a depth of 30 ft. at ordinary low water has been provided. It is proposed to continue this work until a minimum low-water depth of 35 ft. has been secured.

In the third or intermediate stretch of 120 miles, the river falls from virtually Lake Ontario level at Prescott to harbor level at Montreal, through a total height of about 225 ft. It is with the projected development of this portion of the river that the present paper principally deals, because many of the works, including the necessary river improvements, can be utilized for the joint purposes of navigation and power, the cost of such work being divided, with mutual advantages, between the two projects.

The whole stretch, including the rapids, is navigated downstream by passenger steamboats of 6 or 8-ft. draft, and 14-ft. navigation is provided for in both directions by a system of Canadian government canals around the rapids, which has been available for many years. Power has been available at different points along the river to the extent of about 350,000 h.p., partly in a small way in connection with the canals, but mainly in three or four plants which derive their power by diverting for themselves a portion of the flow of the river. An areoplane view of the latest and largest of these, the Cedar Rapids plant, with a capacity of about 200,000 h.p. under a 30-ft. head, is shown in 'The Canadian Engineer,' which indicates the general method of development. Each of the 18 units has a capacity of nearly 11,000 h.p.

The large-scale schemes which have been proposed within recent years, have been either (a) by certain power interests for the primary purpose of water power development on a scale necessitating the utilization of the flow of the whole river, with provision for present and future navigation requirements, or, (b) as a government scheme for securing deep-draft navigation sufficient for ocean-going vessels, with the incidental creation of opportunities for the development of power. The second scheme is part of a more extensive undertaking, to enable ocean shipping to reach the head of the Great Lakes. It has already been investigated and approved as a whole by the International Joint Commission of Canada and the United States, which is a permanent body empowered by treaty to deal with all questions arising out of the use of boundary waters; and it is being further studied at the present time by representatives of the governments of the two countries.

From either point of view the works proposed are of exceptional magnitude and importance, the minimum ultimate depth proposed for the locks and navigation channels being 30 ft., and the total power when fully developed amounting to from four to five million horse-power, with individual plants having capacities of from 600,000 to 1,500,000 h.p.

It will be convenient at this point to refer briefly to certain interesting, and in many cases unique, characteristics of the Upper St. Lawrence, which have an important bearing on the design, construction, and operation of the development works.

Uniformity of Flow.

This "power reach" of the river is not a river at all in the sense that its discharge is directly dependent upon the precipitation on its adjacent drainage area. The water shed of the entire basin of the Great Lakes, including the lakes themselves, down to the head of the first rapids where the river virtually emerges from Lake Ontario, amounts in round numbers to 300,000 square miles. From this point down to its junction with the Ottawa, the tributary drainage area of the river is so small as to be negligible. Hence, for all practical purposes, the "power reach" may be regarded as nothing more than an overflow channel for Lake Ontario, and, therefore, for the whole system of the Great Lakes, which constitute a system of enormous natural storage reservoirs whose combined surface area is 95,000 square miles, or nearly one-half that of the tributary land whose run-off they serve to regulate.

Of the total drainage area just referred to, about one-ninth is directly tributary to Lake Ontario, whose main supply flows into it through the Niagara River, which is subject to the natural regulation of its own storage and that provided successively by the lakes above. Lake Ontario itself, with its 7,500 square miles of surface, provides sufficient storage capacity to receive the entire average inflow from the Niagara and the run-off from its own watershed, with a rise of a little over one inch per day, even with the discharge down the St. Lawrence entirely stopped.

The outflow from the lake is controlled by a ridge of rock crossing the bed of the river about 5 miles below Prescott, which acts as a submerged weir with an average depth of water upon it of about 15 ft. Hence the discharge of the St. Lawrence is directly governed and measured by the elevation of the water surface of Lake Ontario, and the relation between the two has been very accurately determined by a long series of measurements and observations.

The resultant effect of the combination of conditions above referred to, in producing uniformity of outflow, is shown by the records and observations of nearly 65 years. The average recorded discharge of the river during this period is about 247,000 cu. ft. per second, which,is however, considerably less than the true average because of the diversion, during the last 20 years or so, of an unknown quantity of water from Lake Michigan into the Mississippi through the Chicago Drainage Canal. At the present time this is estimated to be about 10,000 sec.-ft., and as a result there is a serious lowering of level in all of the lakes and river channels from Lake Superior to the Lower St. Lawrence, with a corresponding reduction in the power available for development.

In this whole period the lowest and highest recorded (monthly mean) elevations were 243.41 and 248.95 respectively, or an extreme range of about 5 1-2 ft. The corresponding change in the volume of flow was from 193,000 to 320,000 sec.-ft., equivalent to an average increment of discharge of 22,800 sec.-ft. per foot rise in lake level. It is not quite uniform, but for the greater part of the time a change of one foot in lake level will cause a change in the river discharge of from 22,000 to 23,000 sec.-ft.

Briefly summarized, the mean range of level over the whole period is less than 2 ft.; the range in any one year is rarely as much as 3 ft, and has been less than one foot; and for years at a time has varied between 1 and 2 ft. Translated into terms of discharge this means that on the average, and for the greater part of the time, the rate of discharge in any one year varies less than 10% either way from the average of that year; that the average discharge in any year seldom differs by more than 10% from that of the preceding year; that in the worst single year the minimum is about three-quarters of the maximum; and that for the period as a whole the minimum is six-tenths of the maximum. The fluctuations of river level follow closely those of the lake, the range being at some points a little more and at others a little less, depending upon local conditions as to cross-sectional area, slope, etc.

Such natural uniformity of level and flow is, of course, never even approached in any other river, whether subject to regulation or not, and indeed would be extremely difficult to attain artificially in any channel, however elaborate the system of control. In this respect the St. Lawrence stands absolutely alone, and always will.

For purposes of comparison reference may be made first to the Ottawa which, next to the St. Lawrence, is the largest river in Eastern Canada, in which as rivers go there is a high degree of natural regulation; and, second, to the Susquehanna in Pennsylvania, which is a river subject to great fluctuations of flow. In the former the discharge has, under natural conditions varied from a minimum of about 15,000 sec.-ft. to a maximum of 350,000 sec.-ft.; in the latter the range is from a minimum of 2,400 to a maximum of 550,000 sec.-ft., with a frequent high water discharge of over 300,000 sec.-ft.

It is also interesting to note that the changes in discharge from one month to another, and often for much longer periods, could not be detected by an actual measurement. The canal gauges, however, have had their readings carefully related to the discharge by long series of accurate observations carried out by the governments of both Canada and the United States. Hence, foremost of them the river discharge can be determined at any time far more accurately than it could be obtained by any single measurement, however carefully made. As they have been read continuously since 1860, they furnish data both as to discharge and slope, of the greatest possible value in detail studies in connection with various hydraulic problems arising out of the proposed development. These gauges have been supplemented by many others, set up for this special purpose, and a great number of measurements and observations have been made, giving interesting and valuable information in connection with the hydraulics of the river.

Volume.

The fact that the total drainage area of the St. Lawrence at its mouth is nearly 500,000 square miles, places it at once among the large rivers of the world, although it is far from being the largest. The watershed of the Missouri, for example, is 528,000 square miles; of the Mississippi, 1,245,000 square miles; and of the Nile, 1,500,000 square miles. The Upper St. Lawrence watershed is only 300,000 square miles, yet so far as its low water flow is concerned, it ranks among the largest, and it is probably correct to say that its dependable flow is incomparably greater than that of any river in existence which is adapted to power development. There is no need therefore to dwell further upon the unique position of the St. Lawrence among rivers in respect to volume and dependability of flow.

Regulation.

Remarkable as is this regularity of flow, it can be easily improved, and many important advantages thereby secured. It is quite feasible, and indeed it is an essential feature of the proposed development of the river, to control the discharge at the uppermost dam so as to keep it within considerably narrower limits than at present.

By reason of the slow response in the level in Lake Ontario to any change in the supply, even when the run-off from the local watersheds is excessive, it is not difficult to devise a reliable schedule of control operations by which the regulated flow for each month will depend upon the records of the preceding month. Such a system of regulation has been worked out, and, tested by the records of the last 64 years, it will, while restricting the maximum elevation of lake level to its present height, maintain a mean level one foot higher than the present mean, and a minimum level two feet higher than under present conditions. It will also provide an ample margin of storage always available for flushing ice and other contingencies. It will have a further important effect in diminishing the quantity of channel excavation necessary to secure suitable navigation velocities at all points to the greatest extent practicable. It will also benefit navigation in the lower river, by maintaining at low stages a greater depth in Montreal Harbor and in the ship channel below, and in lessening the excavation necessary to secure the proposed thirty-five feet depth at low water.

Throughout the "power reach" between Prescott and Montreal, the river flows in a north-easterly direction, over rather than through, a district composed of glacial drift, largely boulder clay, underlaid by compact rock. As this stretch of the river has only been in existence, from the geological point of view, for a comparatively short period of time, it has had no time to wear out anything in the way of a well-defined valley for itself; and as its maximum discharge is only fractionally greater than its ordinary flow, its channel has adjusted itself to dimensions sufficient to carry a more or less unvarying volume of water. With low banks, its general width averages rather less than a mile, and its mid-depth varies generally between 35 and 50 ft., being shallower, of course in the rapids. Its steady flow and entire freedom from suspended matter, abrasive or otherwise, as it flows out of the lake, has resulted in an extraordinary condition of permanent stability of banks and bed. The territory across which it flows has a slight northward slope from the Adirondack Mountains in northern New York, towards the Ottawa Valley, so that, especially in the upper half, the Ottawa river divide is never far from the St. Lawrence, and such tributary drainage area as there is, is on the south side of the river.

In the direction of flow, however, the land falls more rapidly in a series of three main steps or terraces, with comparatively level benches between. These terraces intersect the river, in a generally north and south direction, at the Long Sault Rapids, at the rapids above Lake St. Louis, and at the Lachine Rapids near Montreal. Down as far as the head of the Long Sault, in a distance of about 30 miles, the fall of 40 ft. or so takes place more or less gradually, and to the foot of these rapids the profile of the adjacent land on either side closely follows that of the river.

As a result of these topographical conditions, the total fall takes place in three different reaches, separated by the river expansions of Lake St. Francis and Lake St. Louis which occupy the intervening benches. They are:

(1) From the head of the Galops (the first rapids) to the foot of the Long Sault.

(2) From the head of the Coteau Rapids to the foot of the Cascades.

(3) From the head of the Lachine Rapids in Lake St. Louis to Montreal Harbor.

In the upper reach from Prescott to Cornwall, a distance of nearly 50 miles, there is a total fall of a little over 90 ft. About half of this takes place in the Long Sault and the remainder in Farran's Point, Rapide Plat, and Galops Rapids, and in the swiftly flowing intervening stretches of the river. Between 80 and 85 ft. of this fall can be utilized for power development.

Between Lake St. Francis and Lake St. Louis, in a distance of about 15 miles, there are three rapids—the Coteau, Cedars and Cascades, with a total fall of about 82 ft. of which about 78 is available for power.

Between Lake St. Louis and Montreal Harbor the total fall, including the Lachine Rapids, is about 45 ft., and of this only about 35 ft. can be developed for power at a reasonable cost, under present down-river conditions.

Limitations of Maximum Level

The land bordering on Lake St. Francis and Lake St. Louis is so flat that it is impracticable to raise the water level above the present maximum. The only improvement, therefore, to be made in these lakes, in connection with navigation, is a moderate amount of dredging here and there where necessary for the deeper draft proposed, and no further reference to them would be required except for the difficulties they give rise to, in connection with the operation of the power plants during the winter.

In the upper stretch as far down as Cornwall, the land adjacent to the river, especially on the south side, has such a pronounced slope in the direction of flow that the tributaries tend to follow a course parallel to, and at no great distance from, the river itself; so that, toward the lower end it is impossible to raise the river level to any onsiderable extent, without extensive lateral dams and dykes to prevent overflow into its own tributaries which enter it below the Long Sault.

Foundation and Construction Conditions.

A large number of deep borings have been made at different points along the river to determine the position and character of the underlying rock which is never exposed except in the vicinity of the crest of the rapids. In every case sound bed-rock has been found particularly well adapted to provide solid and impervious foundations, and for the most part at convenient depths.

The steady and dependable character of the flow eliminates the construction difficulties due to sudden freshets, usually met with in river work. It is also, of course, of the greatest value in connection with the operation of the works. On the other hand, this very constancy of flow gives no opportunity to take advantage of periods of low water to install coffer dams or do other early construction work; and at the locations selected for certain of the dams and power houses, there is difficulty in finding room for the necessary diversion of part of the flow during construction. The development of such a large flow under the moderate heads available, requires power houses of unusual dimensions and capacities; and, on account of the great depths, high velocities, and ice effects, the placing and maintaining of some of the coffer dams will involve work of considerable magnitude and difficulty.

Winter Conditions.

From the foregoing it is obvious that as regards the flow in the open water months, the conditions in the St. Lawrence for constructing or operating a power plant or navigation system are extremely favorable. During the winter season, however, this is often by no means the case. Ice troubles are common enough in all Canadian rivers, but with a river whose regular winter flow is ten to twenty times that of any of the other large power rivers of the country, and as great or greater than the flood flow of most of them; and where, quite apart from the rapids, mid-channel velocities run from 5 to 10 ft. per second, the difficulties from ice are also on a much greater scale and often of quite an unusual and complex character. As a matter of fact, the ice is here the crux of the problem of power development and operation, especially where the flow of the whole river is involved.

The upper river as far down as Prescott usually freezes over early in the winter and remains so till spring, when the ice melts in place, or comes down in such a disintegrated condition that it can be handled without difficulty. Below Prescott the river nowhere freezes across except in the expansions of Lake St. Francis, Lake St. Louis, and Lake St. Peter, and if it were not for them it would remain open throughout to tidewater, and the period of navigation to Montreal would be considerably lengthened at both ends of the season. A large field of ice may bridge the open channel, but this has only taken place with serious effect once in eighteen years in the stretch above Montreal, and could easily have been prevented or dislodged if the proper measures had been taken. In the tidal portion of the river above Quebec, this is more difficult but not impossible.

These lake expansions freeze over early, while the main channel from above the Galops to below the Long Sault Rapids remains open. A considerable area of bordage ice forms in the bays and subsidiary channels and where slack water and eddies occur in the lee of the islands. Beginning early in December this ice, unless interrupted by thaws accompanied by high winds, gradually extends outward, encroaching upon the main channel till a point is reached where the surface velocity is from 2 to 3 ft. per sec., when it practically ceases. Ice of a different kind, however, continues to form in the open water stretches, throughout the winter. Frazil ice forms in open water during periods of intense cold, particularly at night and in cloudy weather. This is the local name for a kind of ice which forms largely at the surface, in slightly undercooled water, especially when agitated. It occurs as fine spicules or detached crystals which are disseminated more or less throughout the body of the water by its motion, and which never freeze together to form sheet ice. Anchor ice forms on the bottom in clear cold weather, and when the conditions are favorable to terrestrial radiation. In the rapids of the St. Lawrence both kinds of ice form very readily even when the weather is only moderately cold. In bright sunshine and with rising temperature the anchor ice loosens its hold on the bottom and rises to the surface, often in large quantities. Fragments of bordage ice detached by winds and currents, and drifting snow, add intermittently to the floating burden of anchor ice and frazil. At one time, ice of this kind gave considerable trouble in the operation of power plants by adhering to and blocking the racks and runners, but with the large capacity single-runner vertical wheels of the larger installations, and with greater experience in the design and location of the plants, these difficulties have been practically eliminated, It may, therefore, now be said generally, and of the St. Lawrence particularly, that it is in the river channels above and below the plants that the principal difficulties with ice are likely to be met with. Where the river can be kept open, this slush ice is therefore of minor importance; but when it meets an ice cover as at the head of Lake St. Francis or Lake St. Louis, it is either drawn under by the current, or, when this is not sufficiently strong, it builds back, or "packs" upstream. In the former case it tends to rise and adhere to the under side of the ice cover in the eddies and when it reaches a point of lower velocity. There it accumulates in greater masses called "hanging dams," sometimes to a depth of 60 ft. or more. The jams thus caused raise the level and back the water up on the rapids next above. When the ice packs, it forms a thick and very rough and irregular cover of tilted ice cakes, masses of anchor ice and frazil, which greatly restricts the flow, and which in itself at once causes a much steeper slope and a consequent upstream rise in water level. The ice-cover in the ship channel between Lake St. Peter and Montreal, is always formed by the packing of ice.

Jams caused by these "hanging dams" form in the river opposite Montreal, sometimes raising the level 16 or 18 ft., and backing the water up on the Lachine Rapids just above. Similar jams form at the head of Lake St. Louis, but not to the same extent; though one year, 1918, the water rose as much as 12 ft. above normal level. More serious jams occur at the head of Lake St. Francis and in the river channels upstream to the Long Sault Rapids, where a rise of 15 ft. is not unusual, and where in 1918, at the foot of Barnhart Island, the site of one of the proposed power plants, the water rose 27 ft. above summer level.

These are the results of ice jams as they occur at present, and with practically nothing done in the way of prevention or protection except at Montreal. Considerable study has been given to these problems, and there is no doubt that much can be done to improve the conditions by taking measures and carrying out works which will tend to decrease the jams and to assist the river in its natural tendency to keep itself clear.

Methods of Development.

It has already been indicated that in the development of the "power reach" of the St. Lawrence, natural conditions have divided it into three stretches, each of which must be dealt with separately. The two lower ones, which are short and made up almost entirely of rapids, have been shown by the investigations of the engineers of the Government Deep Waterways Project, to be particularly adapted to improvement for navigation by the method of side canals, which work can be carried out quite independently of the development of power. The latter is an important feature, in view of the fact that both stretches are wholly in Canadian territory. Besides this the development of these powers would naturally and advantageously follow those of the rapids above. The deep waterways scheme contemplates an ultimate navigation depth of 30 ft., but in making the estimates provision has been made for an initial minimum depth of 25 ft. in the canal reaches and river channels, with the locks and other permanent structures constructed for the full draft of 30 ft. For purposes of a very general description, it may, however, be considered as a 30-ft. project.

Montreal Harbor to Lake St. Louis

For the lowest stretch, from Montreal Harbor to Lake St. Louis, several alternative plans for a canal about 9 miles in length have been proposed, differing principally in the route chosen. One of these begins with an entrance lock, No. 1, in Montreal Harbor, and this numbering is continued throughout the whole stretch of the river up to Lock No. 9, a little above Morrisburg, which completes the total lift. Lock No. 1, with a lift of from 22 to 32 ft., according to the river stage, leads to a section constructed in the river, and carried between an outside retaining wall and embankment and a levee or flood protection dyke which is already in existence along the river shore. The space thus enclosed may be utilized as a high level shipping basin, forming part of a scheme for greatly increasing the terminal and dock facilities of the harbor. Lock No. 2 is located at the further end of this section, and has a lift of 18 ft. The next section turns northward towards the present Lachine Canal and leads to Lock No. 3, with a low and variable lift according to the stage of Lake St. Louis. The canal enters the lake about 2 miles further west, from which point the excavation of a channel is necessary for several miles before deep water is reached.

The plans provide for locks 860 ft. long and 80 ft. wide, which are the dimensions adopted for the new Welland ship canal, now under construction, between Lake Erie and Lake Ontario. The canal sections are to be excavated to a minimum bottom width of 200 ft. in through cuttings and 450 ft. in the river channels, which is the width of the ship channel below Montreal. A dam will control the flow and may be utilized to maintain a low water level in Lake St. Louis 5 ft. or so greater than at present without raising the maximum elevation, and perhaps to provide the increase in depth when the change is made from 25 to 30-ft. navigation.

The 30-ft. project is estimated to cost about $70,000,000, and the power plant about $85,000,000 more, though these estimates do not appear to include interest during construction and certain other overhead charges. The amount of power to be obtained is estimated to be about 700,000 h.p. in summer, but less in winter due to the ice jams in the river below, which makes this one of the most expensive and least attractive of the different sites available. In any case it should be deferred until the development has been carried out in the second reach between Lakes St. Francis and St. Louis.

Lake St. Francis to Lake St. Louis.

In this stretch the conditions are unusually favorable to the side canal method. Between the two lakes, on both sides of the river, there is a level bench of land for nearly the whole distance, which lends itself to easy canal construction, and in which the total fall is largely concentrated near the lower end where the main lift locks may be conveniently located. It is, of course, possible to canalize the river, but important plants already existing would be interfered with, and the cost would be otherwise excessive.

The government plans offer two methods of development. In one of these the navigaiton and power projects are to be carried out as two entirely separate schemes. Navigation is provided for by a side canal on the south side of the river. A double twin flight of locks, Nos. 4 and 5, are located at the lower end near Melocheville on Lake St. Louis, which will raise the water level to that of Lake St. Francis. A guard lock, No. 6, is located at the Lake St. Francis end, where a dredged channel, with a jetty to prevent cross currents, is carried out for some distance into the lake. The cost of a 30-ft. navigation canal is given as about $40,000,000. The power development on the opposite side of the river consists of a dam across the river, between the Coteau and Cedar Rapids, which would drown out the former and bring the Lake St. Francis level down to the entrance of a power canal 1,500 ft. wide and 40 ft. deep, leading to a power house just north of Cascades Point, where over 1,600,000 continuous h.p. can be developed with the whole flow of the river available. Some excavation would be necessary through the crest of the Coteau Rapids. The estimated cost of this power development is given as $152,000,000.

In the other method of development considered practicable both power and navigation canals are on the north side of the river, and a dam serves both purposes. At the Lake St. Louis end there is a lock, No. 4, with a lift of 39 ft. followed by another lock, No. 5, of about the same lift. A guard gate is located near where the canal enters the river. The main dam, which is provided with spillway and control gates, crosses the river from below the power canal to De Salaberry or Grande Isle, along which it is continued by an embankment to a partial regulating dam and low lift lock No. 6, located near the head of the Coteau Rapids. The estimated cost of the combined navigation and power schemes if carried out at the same time, is given as about $12,000,000 less than by the first scheme.

Prescott to Cornwall.

The general physical features in this stretch of the river have already been shown to differ from those of the two lower stretches. The total fall is distributed over a distance of nearly 50 miles and, between the three main rapids, the river is navigable in both directions. Investigations carried on for several years by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario in connection with projects for the development of the entire flow of the river for power, have shown that many of the works necessary for this purpose will also be required for the canalization of the river which is the method of improvement most suitable to the natural conditions. This conclusion was also reached by the deep waterway

AN OPPORTUNITY

In order to keep our plant running and give work to our men, we will make a reduction of TWENTY PER CENT, on all Monuments.

We have received the rough granite in car-load lots from different quarries—Rock of Ages granite from Barre, Vermont; Silver Grey from Quebec; Black granite from New Brunswick, and Dark Red from Sweden.

Additional Machinery

Having lately added a large air compressor, also a polishing machine and surfacer, we are in a better position than ever to manufacture Monuments at rock-bottom prices.

We are here in your city and will give you a guarantee of our work and material. Our customers do not have to accept interior work or defective granite.

We will be pleased to show designs and quote prices.

ST. LAWRENCE, POWER

engineers when studying the question primarily from the point of view of navigation. There are several other reasons why this stretch should be considered in a separate category. For example, it is for its entire length the international portion of the river, in which the power belongs jointly to Canada and the United States, and where the development involves co-operation on the part of both countries. It is also the portion of the river which lies within the boundaries of the provinces of Ontario, where the general policy of power development is quite different from that of the province of Quebec, through which the rest of the river flows. Its improvement is the next step, following in natural sequence the completion of the new Welland canal in the deep waterways project, and the drowning out of the rapids should begin at the upper end of the river on account of the protection from ice thus afforded in construction and operation of works lower down. And, finally, there is a pressing demand in each country for its share of all the power available as fast as it can be developed.

Two general methods of improvement are possible, a double development scheme and a single development scheme. In the former, the works would be carried out in two stages, the upper of which would include the Galops Rapids, and Rapide Plat, and the lower Farran's Point and Long Sault Rapids. By this method the river would be confined to as great an extent as possible with in its present banks with practically no flooding below Morrisburg. In the single development scheme and the entire fall available for power should be concentrated at the foot of the Long Sault. There would be a regulating dam at the Rapide Plat to control the outflow from Lake Ontario. This method would cause considerable flooding and requires the construction of long and high wing dams, and a number of embankments of various heights.

Single Stage Development.

As in all schemes for improvement of the river, a large amount of excavation is required through the Galops Rapids and at various points between there and Morrisburg, in order to secure suitable depths and velocities for navigation and the highest practicable pool level at the dams below. This enlargement of the river channel will necessitate some means of controlling the flow, and this is provided by regulating dams at the Rapide Plat across the channels on each side of Ogden Island. With the water at elevation 245 above the Galops, a normal water level of about 242 can be maintained above the Ogden Island dams. There will be a navigation lock, No. 9, on the United States side with a maximum lift of 10 to 12 ft. From Morrisburg to the Long Sault no channel improvements will be required.

The foot of the Long Sault Rapids is at the lower end of Barnhart Island, and it is near this point that the power plant of the single stage development must be placed in order to utilize the available head. It is impossible to make use of the adjacent shores of the river at this point as they are much too low for the purpose. Fortunately, however, Long Sault Island and both Barnhart and Sheek Islands are considerably higher, and it is only by taking advantage of this circumstance, and by carrying the pool level down between the two latter islands, that a single development becomes practicable.

The normal elevation of the water surface above the Long Sault Rapids is 202, and that proposed below the projected power plant 155. The proposed pool level is 231, though the power house and other structures are to be designed to permit this to be increased by 10 ft. or so. The Little River is the shallow channel which separates Sheek and Barnhart Islands. It carries less than 5% of the total flow and leaves the main channel in the middle of the rapids where the water surface is at Elevation 175. Just below this there is to be a spillway dam about 3,800 ft. long connecting Barnhart and Long Sault Islands, and provided at each end with a set of Stoney sluices. Its crest will be at elevation 231, and it will therefore serve to divert the main flow into the channel of the Little River and down to the power plant. In order to retain this pool level, a series of lateral dams and embankments are necessary starting from both ends of the power plant. On the north side a retaining wall and embankment over 8,000 ft. long and 100 ft. high connects it with Sheek Island, the upper end of which is, in turn, joined to the north bank of the river by heavy embankments with core walls. On the south side the pool level is carried by way of Barnhart Island, the spillway dam, Long Sault Island, and a dam and power house at the upper end of the South Sault channel, to the main shore of the river. The main shores themselves, for miles further upstream on both sides require embankments at a number of points to maintain the required elevation.

The most important of the structures just referred to, is the spillway dam, which crosses the river at the swiftest and deepest part of the rapids, and which is estimated to cost upwards of $11,000,000. The power house at the head of the south Sault channel is to utilize, under a head of about 28 ft., the Water required for the existing Messena power plant, which is supplied from this channel by a power canal 3 miles long, and which discharges into the Grasse River, a tributary flowing at a much lower level.

Navigation is carried from the river at Cornwall up into the pool and past these works by about 7 miles of canal, and two locks, Nos. 7 and 8, and with lifts of 48 and 31 ft. respectively. At the proposed power plant at the foot of Barnhart Island, there will be a Canadian and an American power house. To better provide for the handling of floating ice, these power houses should be placed more nearly parallel to the direction of the current than shown, and space for a number of sluices should be left between their lower ends. Their combined length is about 3,400 ft., sufficient to provide for a total installed capacity of about 1,780,000 electrical horse power in units of about 34,000 e.h.p.

While it would considerably increase the lateral dams and embankments required, as well as the area flooded, it is quite feasible to maintain a pool level 8 or 9 ft. higher than that adopted for this scheme of development as described above. This elevation, which is that of the crest of the spillway of the main dam, was really determined by the conditions expected to obtain during the winter in the river above the works. Above the Morrisburg dam the enlargement of the channel and the raising of the water level, will considerably reduce the velocity of the current, but it will still be so great as to prevent the river freezing over even in the severest winter. Below Morrisburg, however, a complete ice cover will form at the lower end early in the winter, and extend upwards over the whole pool, and as this will be largely composed of packed ice, a considerable increase in slope is inevitable. The drowning out of the rapids will, in itself, greatly reduce the formation of frazil and anchor ice, especially the latter, which does not readily form in water over 25 or 30 ft. in depth. Yet, in the stretch of open water from Prescott down, a considerable quantity will still form, especially during periods of severe cold. This will lodge beneath the rough ice cover already formed, and will still further reduce the pool level at the lower end. Whether this reduction will or will not exceed the amount allowed for is difficult to say, but that it will occur every year is certain. On the other hand, the back water from jams starting at the head of Lake St. Francis will no doubt be considerably reduced though not by any means entirely prevented. A certain amount of slush ice will still be formed in the open water below the dams and power houses at all times, and in the beginning of the winter before the ice cover in the river has permanently formed, there will be a period during which the conditions are particularly favorable to the formation of anchor ice or frazil, all of which will pass on down to begin the formation of the jams below. In any case, the fixing of the pool level at an elevation which will entail the permanent sacrifice of between 100,000 and 200,000 h.p., summer as well as winter, whether by reason of the unavoidable winter drop in pool level, or the flooding of too much land or the risk of depending on so many long and high embankments, is undoubtedly a very serious feature of this method of development.

Double Stage Development.

The essential difference between this method and the single stage development is that instead of the regulating dam at Morrisburg, there will be a combined control and power dam, and a power plant of about 620,000 h.p., operating under a head of 28 ft. There will be a Barnhart Island power house in about the same location but with a pool level of 210 instead of 231. The river improvements as far down as the head of Ogden Island are identical. At that point the navigation channel continues down the present main river channel north of this island, instead of following the Little River channel on the south side, as in the single development. This other Little River at one time carried about 10% of the total flow, but has been closed by a dam for many years.

The main dam is between Ogden Island and the North Shore, and, in addition to a section of free spillway, is provided with a set of stoney and a number of sluices sluices for winter regulation. There is a second shorter regulating dam between the lower end of the power plant and the south shore.

The two power houses are in line with each other and parallel to the general direction of the flow, which is the best possible arrangement as far as the avoidance of ice troubles at the plant is concerned. The over-all length is about 4,300 ft., sufficient to accommodate 66 units of 11,000 e.h.p. capacity. Plans are being worked out, however, at the present time, to employ units of about double this capacity which will considerably shorten the over-all length and improve the lay-out in other ways. The lock, No. 9, will be located at the north end of the main dam, and will have a lift of 28 ft.

Extensive channel improvements will be made between Morrisburg and Barnhart's Island to obtain the required navigation depths and velocities, but this will be largely at the upper end of the stretch. At the lower end the location of the main dam and the power houses will be substantially the same as in the single development, though they will be much lower, as the head at the power plant will be 55 instead of 75 ft. There will be practically no dykes or embankments, and no power house at the head of the Long Sault, nor will there be any necessity for the long and high retaining wall between the north end of the power plant and Sheek Island.

Lock No. 7 and the river improvements below will be exactly as in the single stage scheme, but the canal will be located at the eastern end of the pool north of Sheek Island, from which the line of navigation will follow the main channel of the river to Morrisburg.

At the double development power house at the foot of Barnhart Island, it is proposed to maintain a constant forebay level of 210. Two power houses with a dam and ice sluices about 800 ft. in length separate the lower ends. They have a total length of 3,100, ft. designed to accommodate 50 units each of a capacity of 25,000 e.h.p. This power house can be supplied by the channels on both sides of Sheek Island.

In the double development the pool levels conform fairly closely to the natural profile of the river, the principal increase in height being at the power houses which are at the foot of the rapids. In other words, this method of development is in harmony with the actual physical conditions, and as a consequence the river as a rule does not overtop its present banks. Such flooding as there is, will be almost all above the Morrisburg plant where it will be exactly the same as in the single development.

With regard to ice effects there is a decided difference between the two methods. Down as far as Morrisburg, and below the Barnhart Island works, the water-level conditions under both methods will be the same at all times; and in the beginning of the winter before the lower pool of the single development freezes over, there will be practically no difference anywhere. But from Morrisburg to the head of the Long Sault the natural level is raised so little in the double development, that navigable velocities are secured in many places only by enlarging the channel. Hence, this portion of the river will remain open as at present so far as the main channel is concerned, but the bordage ice will probably extend further out and cover a relatively greater area.

As has been stated before, the drowning out of the rapids, and the deepening of the main channel will greatly diminish the formation of the anchor ice and frazil; but, with the continuous open channel throughout the pools which will be maintained under the double development, the quantity which does form will in part accumulate under the ice in the bays and eddies, but largely, no doubt, will be carried on downstream to the river below Barnhart Island, and assist in the formation of the jams which cause a backwater. On the other hand, special observations, which are confirmed by the regular winter gauge readings, show that the bordage ice has little effect on the slope of the river. Hence, whatever loss of head may result from the action of ice in the double development scheme, will be very largely due to backwater. This will of course be much less than under present conditions and in some years will be almost negligible. The gauge records show that it will never be felt in the tailrace to any great extent until late in January after the peak of the power demand has passed. Furthermore, there is undoubtedly an important element of security in the fact that the accumulations of ice which cut down the power are formed in the river below the plant instead of in the pool above.

Estimates of Cost, Prescott to Cornwall.

Estimates of cost of the entire navigation and power works in this stretch were made by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario on the assumption that they would be carried out as one continuous series of operations. This was done in order that they might be directly compared with those of the government engineers which were made on that basis. Based on 1921 conditions, the total estimate for the single development was a little less than $210,000,000, and for the double development about $1,500,000 more. Making allowances for the omission of certain items, the government estimate for the single development (the only one considered), would be about 12% lower, largely attributable to differences in one or two of the unit prices adopted.

A tentative apportionment of the total cost of each of the schemes to power and navigation was made by the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission on the basis of charging to each project the full cost of works required exclusively for its particular purposes, and of dividing equally between the two, the cost of such works as would serve the purposes of both. On this basis, the part chargeable to navigation was about 33% for the single development, and 27% for the double development. Other estimates were made by the Power Commission of the cost of carrying out the works, more in accordance with the probable conditions and requirements, all of which indicate a comparatively low cost per h.p. year or per k.w. hour.

Power Available.

The quantities of power available at the different sites, which have been mentioned in the foregoing columns, refer to 24-hour power which could have been depended upon year in and year out for practically the whole period of observation. Considering, however, the extraordinary regularity of the flow, and the magnitude and diversity of the power demand in the extensive distribution systems with which these plants would be connected, the power which can be developed and utilized commercially at its full value may be fairly estimated as 20% greater than the figures given. This means that the potential power of the St. Lawrence is not far from 5,000,000 h.p., and of this about four-fifths belongs to Canada.

Nowhere else in the world is there a group of closely associated powers of such magnitude and so advantageously located. Close to the two largest cities, the greatest ocean port, extensive industrial and mining areas, they are actually within transmission distance of half the population of the country. The adjacent districts are served by the principal railway lines, and water transportation is available to the centre of the continent and to all parts of the world. Under such incomparably favorable conditions, the mere development of this power at low cost will in itself attract industries of all kinds, and especially those requiring hydro-electric energy in large quantities, with reasonable assurance of an adequate future supply.

The development of this power for sale outside the country would not only be of practically no general benefit, but would be virtually giving away almost the whole of its potential value to competitors for the sake of a profit on the bare cost of production, which cannot but be paltry in comparison; and, what is worse, it would involve giving away with it part of the population to boot, which is the last thing Canada can afford to do. Impressive but unmistakable testimony as to this is furnished by the numerous towns and villages located all over New England wherever water power has been until now available, many of which are in large part French-Canadian in population, and in all of which there are large French-Canadian communities.

While water power in itself is one of Canada's most valuable resources, it has an added importance from the fact that it is essential to the development and profitable exploitation of many of her other rich natural resources upon which she depends for her future prosperity. Wisely developed, and utilized in the country where it belongs and which needs it all, it is not only a great Canadian asset, but taking into account for example the special opportunity which the development and utilization of the great St. Lawrence power offers to the scientist, the engineer, and the industrialist, it may well be regarded as an asset of value to the Empire.

A HUNDRED GIRLS AT THE FEET OF IDOL.

In the course of an informal interview, Mischa Elman happened to express his admiration for the simple English wife and said that she was his ideal. Somehow or other the idea "took" among the girls that he was looking for such a wife and he was besieged by one hundred offers from women woh felt that they answered the description. He was besieged by mail, telephone and personal presentations of the applicants.

THE LOCAL SCOTS HONOR PATRON SAINT ANDREW

Rev. W. S. Edgar Gave an Eloquent Address to the Club.

EXCELLENT PROGRAM.

Other Toasts Were Responded to by Prominent Citizens.

The local Scots frae a airts o' Auld Scotia, in Peterboro and vicinity gathered together last evening in the Victoria Hall, to honour their patron saint of Scotland—St. Andrew, by a sumptuous banquet preceeding the toast list which covered every angle of the Scots socialibility every angle of their adoption.

"Entwined thou art wi' money ties
O' hame and infancy."

Mr. G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., as chairman and toast-master, introduced the speaker of the evening, the Rev. W. S. Edgar, a Scot frae ayont the pond, of Gilmour Memorial Church who responded to the St. Andrew toast with an eloquent address.

"I thank you for the privilege of speaking to you.

"Tradition has it that St. Andrew was a disciple of John the Baptist but he was not content until he became a disciple of his master." Then he enumerated the many spheres in which the Scots dominated in the British Empire. Some people claim that Scotland is part of England, but I claim that England is part of Scotland. The British Royal family owe their ancestry to the Scots. One thing, I must confess, that the Englishman with his enterprise along with the dour determined Scots makes an admirable combination in the British Empire. The Scot is in the very front rank, taking for example that the British Government had six Scots Prime Ministers out of ten. In the world war, the Scots namely the 51st, 9th, 25th, and 52nd Divisions and Canadian Scots regiments—48th and 93rd, which was ably represented by Sir Douglas Haig in the world war.

Industrial Predominance.

When we turn to industrialism, Glasgow, on the Clyde, has predominated in shipbuilding, and in iron and steel. According to statistics, there were more ships built on the Clyde in one year than ever built in America. Of course, Scotland has obtained fame through its Scotch whiskey." The orator speaking of a drunk man he met recently was asked by his friend, what is the man talking about?" He replied "Oh, he is talking about whiskey and is full of his subject."

Invention, Finance and Mirth.

The speaker continued to describe the various fields where the Scot has excelled in the realms of invention, finance and mirth and stated that time would not permit him to tell all he would like to say because it is "embarrassment of riches." Now, fellow Scots, "It is up to us—Scots—who have made this country the land of our adoption, to carry on the great tradition to a higher plane."

"Twa Countries."

"The Twa Countries" toast responded to Mr. J. Grierson, Chief, Sons of Scotland," I thank you for the honour, the links are so closely connected with Canada that we think we are at home. It is a great character the Scot who has become a great colonizer in spite of the fact that he has a greater love of his native land. "I have a great reverence for the pioneer who came out here in the early eighties," the speaker replied. He interspersed with eloquent recitations that were very timely and finished up thus:

It's the hardships that are trying,
And there's always plenty found,
When the voyage lands the pilgrim
On the rich Canadian ground,
And the customs of the people
Make him feel the land is new,
And that life is not the picture
That his pleasing fancies drew.

There are biting frosts in winter
And the summer scorching sun,
There is sometimes food in plenty
And at times there may be none.
And it's hard to tramp across the plains
To sleep beneath the stars
Using spring mattress

A WOUND IS AN OPEN DOOR

Absorbine Jr. enables you to shut the door quickly.

The skin is Nature's own protection against germs. When it is bruised, broken or cut, that protection is withdrawn. The door is open. As quickly as possible Nature closes it by forming what we call a scab and renders you comparatively safe against infection. But this scab sometimes takes days to form and until it has fully sealed the wound, even until the wound has thoroughly healed again you must furnish the required protection yourself.

A few drops of Absorbine Jr. in the water will give you an antiseptic wash that will kill all possibility of infection and help nature to heal the wound. As well as being a very powerful germicide, Absorbine Jr. will draw out the inflammation and bring instant relief.

Absorbine Jr. is antiseptic, germicide and liniment in one container—handy to keep always in the house; easy to carry around if you travel.

NOTED SPEAKER CANADIAN CLUB

Sir Bertram Windle Addressed a Large Audience in the G.W.V.A. Hall.

Sir Bertram Windle, F.R.S., M.A., B.A., M.D., M.Sc., LL.D., was the lecturer of the evening last night at the meeting of the Women's Canadian Club in the G. W. V. A. Hall. He spoke on "Medieval England," illustrating his address copiously with lantern slides, and the hall, with a seating capacity of nearly five hundred, was packed to the doors.

The address was scholarly, distinctive and interesting from start to finish. Speaking with the authority of years and knowledge, Sir Bertram interspersed his description of medieval manners and customs with numerous humorous anecdotes and reminiscences of visits paid to the places of which he spoke. The major portion of his address dealt principally with views of the ancient monasteries and churches of England, emphasis being laid on the two outstanding elements of that age and generation; the great power of the barons and the connection of every detail of the life of the people with the life of the church.

Among the great church buildings shown were Peterborough Cathedral which up to the time of Henry the Eighth was the wonderful Golden Abbey of the Benedictines, and possesses in its interior a painted wooden Norman roof; the great spire of Salisbury Cathedral, three feet out of the straight line; and Tewkesbury Abbey, whose arched front entrance formed a haven in ages past for the warring forces who battled in the field without, where is interred the Duke of Clarence, who was drowned in a butt of malmesley, and where portraits of the great barons of the time are set in the clerestory. Here too is the heart of the lady who was twice married, and on her death directed that her heart should be buried with her first spouse and the remainder of her earthly body with the second.

Several of the ruined abbeys of the Cistercians were shown, including the great Cluniac Abbey, Tinturn, on the banks of the Wye; some of the great churches, with a fine picture of St. Botolph's, "the Boston Stump," in the fens of Lincolnshire; the castle of the Bishop of Durham, an ancient Norman keep, with its battlement and moat, and Carnarvon Castle in Wales and Conway Castle, with their bastions and towers.

One of the old guild halls, described by the speaker, was shown, the present Town Hall of Coventry, and a piece of Flemish arras depicting the initiation into one of the guilds of the time of the king, Henry Sixth, and Margaret of Anjou.

Old houses of medieval origin still remain in secluded spots of England. Their "inverted step" construction, devised to avoid the sagging of the main wooden beams, was described, and pictures shown of the half-timbered residences of the time, many of which still remain in good condition. One in Gloucestershire was thrown on the screen, in which the speaker had lived for some time, and paid yearly the sum of two hundred dollars for the rental of the large, dignified structure.

A few views of old forms of punishment, in pictures of the pillory, the whipping-post, the stocks and the ducking stool for scolding women, with a reference to the last known instance of this punishment, in 1817, concluded a very entertaining lecture.

A hearty vote of thanks to the speaker was moved by Miss A. Lancaster, seconded by Mrs. R. Harstone, and presented by the president, Mrs. F. D. Kerr, who occupied the chair for the meeting. Several of the members of the Peter Robinson Chapter I.O.D.E. acted as ushers for the occasion. Mr. H. O. Fisk operated the projection machine.

Mr. A. Mowat announced briefly the address to be given on Tuesday evening next, December 2nd, in the hall of the Collegiate Institute, by John Lewis Paton, M.A., retiring headmaster of the Manchester Grammar School, who has been brought out to Canada by the National Educational Council of the Dominion, and speaks in Peterboro under the auspices of the Teachers' Institute of the city. "Chivalry—Ancient and Modern," will be the title of the address, for which no admission charge is being made.

BUYING LANGUID LOCAL MARKET

Potatoes Scare at 85c. a Bag —Prices Had Big Range.

The farmers' market was slow this morning. Upstairs in the basket section and in the open buying was languid. There were plenty of things to buy, but the crowd on hand seemed more interested in enquiring prices than acquiring goods. The good-natured vendors on the market had a lot of information-seekers to reply to this morning.

Prices upstairs had quite a range. Chickens opened at 35 cents a pound in some instances, and descended gradually until they reached the 20 cents a pound level at which the hens also rested. Geese wore 22 cents a pound and ducks 22 and 23 cents. Big geese were lower in price, one twelve-pounder being quoated at $2. Eggs were generally priced at 60 and 65 cents a dozen One man had graded his stock, "because that's the way they are sold now," and was asking 70 cents a dozen for one division and 55 cents for the other.

Butter was priced from 36 to 40 cents a pound. Cream was 30 cents a pint, with a forecast of increased quotations in the near future.

Tatted pieces, small and large, could be bought all the way from a dime apiece to $2, and one man had Christmas things, in a large complete doll's bed at $2 and little tin soldiers in boxes for 10 and 15 cents. Two Indian women from Montreal, heads swathed in large shawls(one with evident French blood behind her dark skin, a narrow wedding ring on a thin finger, the other an elderly dame with no English, had a large stock of mocassins and beaded boxes. Artificial sweet peas, done in colored, waxed paper, were 50 cents a bunch.

The Co-operative honey merchant had the last remnant of his light honey supply, a few pails, on view this morning, and his dark honey stock is down to a low level also. Basswood and clover were selling at 19 and 16 cents a pound and amber at 13 and 12½ cents.

"We are giving this stuff away," said a dealer whose stock consisted mainly of roots, and tubers. Carrots and turnips are priced at 20 cents a peck, parsnips and beets at 25 cents Potatoes, what there are of them, are 85 cents a bag, and very scarce. White onions were 30 cents a peck, red onions 25 cents, and 20 cents for smaller samples.

A couple of Black Minorcas thrust enquiring heads out of a large crate. They could be bought for $1.50 a piece. The seven months old pig whose mistress regretted his imminent sale, because we had him s olong," slumbered peacefully, oblivious to his owner's feelings, with a price on his head of $7.50.

Spies were 60 cents a peck this morning, and Tolman Sweets 50 cts, of $2.75 for a bag. Snows were 40 and 45 cents and Blenheim Orange apples 45 cents.

Pork was 15 and 17 cents a pound and lamb 20 and 24 cents.

There was plenty of wood, the majority of it cut in stove lengths, on these open section. Mixed wood was priced all the way from $7 to $10 a load, birch was $9, tamarac $7 and hardwood $10 and $10.

COUNTY COUNCIL CLOSES SESSION

Will Give Alderman Stocker Information About Gravel If He Publishes It.

That the particulars of the purchase of gravel for the Suburban Areas road would be divulged if the enquirer would publish the information at his own expense, was the reply of the County Council this morning to a letter from Alderman Walter Stocker, of this city. Alderman Stocker wrote as follows:

"As a ratepayer interested in the suburban roads, and as an alderman of the city of Peterborough, I wish you would supply me with information as to the quantity of gravel purchased by the commission this year, and from whom purchased, and the price paid."

The resolution, moved by Reeve H. B. Rye, and seconded by Reeve J. F. Breckenridge, was: "That if Alderman Stocker will take the trouble to call on the County Treasurer at his office, he will supply him with all the information in regard to the suburban area gravel purchased, on condition that Alderman Stocker have the same published in the local at his own expense.

Appreciate Work.

A further expression of opinion regarding the Suburban Area Commission was contained in a resolution framed by Reeve Rye and Reeve Bert Middleton, declaring: "That this Council appreciate the work of the Suburban Area Commission who have now made the last report of their five years' tenure of office, and that a reappointing of the same gentlemen would be gratifying to this council."

Turn down Lakefield.

In the closing moments of the session, a request from Reeve J. C. Strickland, that the council grant $100 towards the cost and give its permission for, the lighting of Lakefield's new bridge, was turned down. Lakefield had been at heavy expense in maintaining its lighting system, and would like leave and help to extend the service to the bridge, he said.

Warden M. P. Coughlin asked why it was considered necessary to have the new bridge, with its wide, safe road illuminated, while the old tumble-down bridge, that was there before was good enough without any lights.

Deputy Reeve W. Brown of Smith township, moved that the request be granted, but his motion was lost.

No New Barn.

On motion of Reeve Rye, the rebuilding of the barn burned down at the House of Refuge, is deferred until next year, with a recommendation that it then be rebuilt nearer the other buildings.

A grant of $500 was made to the Salvation Army, on application to the council.

ST. JOHN'S BAZAAR VERY SUCCESSFFUL

Parish Hall Was Gay In Christmas Color For Splendid Fair.

The two-day bazaar in the parish hall of St. John's Anglican Church under the auspices of the Church Women's Association, opened with the ringing of the People's Chimes on Thursday afternoon and a few words of welcome from Rev. Dr. Blagrave, and closed last evening with a very good attendance and patronage of the sale of useful and fancy articles on view. The high tea and afternoon tea also had plenty of attendance.

Christmas decorations formed the keynote for the arrangement of the parish hall, which was hung with pennants and flags. The red and green and white of Christmas, in festoons and ropes and tinselled balls, decorated most of the booths, with plenty of Christmas trees and foliage.

Mrs. A. E. Coulthard, president of the C.W.A., acted as general convenor. The high tea, served at gaily decorated tables downstairs, was in charge of Mrs. A. H. Stratton, and ladies in charge of little tea tables, place on the stage, were Mesdames A. Gibson E. B. Clegg an F. W. Borbrige.

The Misses Barabara Massey-Cooke an Grace Dunsford had the brown and red fish-pond at the door and Mrs. W. E. Laing was a successful teller of fortunes in the striped red and white tent at the left, Mrs. T. H. Young, Mrs. F. D. Kerr and Mrs. Bender had the sale of books, and Miss Amy Halliday was supervisor of the disposal of church calendars and W. A. Christmas cards, at a small table trimmed with cedar twigs and poinsettia.

Aprons and tea-towels and pillow slips were sold at a red-arched table, in charge of Mrs. J. Mills; Miss Margaret English was convenor of the sale of Christmas gifts and novelties; the Misses Rubidge sold home-made cooking, and Mrs. J. Comstock was convenor of the kitchen booth, done with heavy red and green fringe. Mrs. G. S. Cameron and Mrs. Harry Cameron were in charge of the "White Elephant" booth.

Mrs. W. J. Hopwood was convenor of the fragrant section where cut flowers and ferns were on sale, decorated with green and red chenille fringes and large bells; Mrs. R. Denne had the tinsel-hung booth for dools, and Mrs. W. T. Hall the woollen goods' section. Mrs. W. D. Tyler and Mrs. J. Dishart had the sale of fancy work in a red and white section.

A very effective central decoration at the dainty candy booth was a large bowl of artificial purple and mauve iris. Mauve and yellow holders held the delicious-looking wares sold here by Mrs. H. Morphet and Mrs. C. E. Jamieson.

County Council Smiles.

That humour is not lacking in the County Council meetings is evidenced by an incident at this mornings session when a member suggested that the Council visit Ottawa regarding Chemong bridge grant in the middle of December.

Another member remarked that it is late in the session to take a trip like that.

Warden Coughlin: It's the last chance some of us may have to take a trip like that.

NEW FIRE HYDRANT.

Protection of the Canadian Nashua Paper Co. Is Object of Committee.

At a meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committee of the City Council last night, the Utilities Commission was authorized to place a fire hydrant on Aylmer street between Perry and Lake streets, opposite the Canadian Nashua Paper Co. The positions of several lights and proposed new lights were discussed and recommendations made.

KING'S MOTHER 80.

Dowager Queen Alexandra's Birthday Celebrated Over Week End.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—(Canadian Press).—The eightieth birthday of the Dowager Queen Alexandra will be celebrated by a gathering of the Royal Family at Sandringham over the week-end. Their Majesties the King and Queen, the Prince of Wales and others, assembled at Sandringham to-day.

The Dowager Queen is well and enjoying good health, but has withdrawn entirely from public affairs. She is able to drive out almost daily.

CHEMONG RANCH WINS.

Silver Foxes Carried Off Four Prizes Out of 13 Awarded In Ontario.

Patte and Wolff Foxes Ltd., of Chemong, showed the superiority of the stock carried at the ranch by carrying off 4 of the 13 prizes awarded to Ontario fox breeders at the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto.

In competition with the pick of Canadian animals, the Chemong bred foxes won one second, two fourth and one seventh places.

CAR WAS STOLEN.

Harvey Webber's Car Removed From His Home —Found at Nassau.

NORTH MONAGHAN Nov. 29—Harvey Webber, living on the Gravel Road, lost his car last night when it was taken from G.W.V.A. Hall. Car was recovered at Nassau to-day by the police, but no trace had had been found of who used it for the joy ride.

CHEQUES NOT PAID.

No Funds to Meet Notes Given For Cattle Shipped From Peterboro.

NORTH MONAGHAN, Nov. 29—Cattle buyers appeared in Cavan and district and purchased large quantities of cattle from farmers who are apparently out the money.

The buyers, it is said, shipped three car loads last Saturday, after the banks had closed. They gave cheques in payment, and it was not found until the banks opened on Monday that the cheques were worthless at the moment.

The farmers believe the buyers have an established business in Montreal and hope that the trouble may be only temporary until funds come through.

Why The Baroness May Regret Being So Snippy

Unpleasant Mess the Belgian Ambassador's Wife Stirred Up by Refusing to Sit Beside a German

Dr. Otto Ludwig Wiedfeldt, German Ambassador to the United States, with his wife and their son, Hermann

THE dinner given at the White House the other evening to the members of the diplomatic corps was not the completely harmonious affair it might have been. It was marred by acrimonious feelings that rankled in the breasts of a number of those present, and if spiteful looks and comments could have killed it is believed that this important function would have ended in several fatalities.

The trouble was all due to the fact that Baroness de Cartier de Marchienne, the wife of the Belgian Ambassador to the United States, seems unable to forget or forgive the enmities brought by the late war. In spite of the fact that a treaty of peace was signed some years ago, the baroness is, as it were, still in the trenches—ready and eager to take a shot at anything resembling a German.

Baroness de Cartier is an American born and bred and she feels she can best show her loyalty to the country she adopted when she married the Belgian diplomat by regarding all Germans as her personal enemies. She scorns to rub shoulders with them, to take them by the arm or even to sit beside one of them through the courses of a formal dinner.

Some time in advance of the recent White House dinner the Baroness managed to find out that it had been planned for her to have for an escort into the dining room and for a table companion Dr. Otto Wiedfeldt, the German Ambassador. This information brought from her an outburst which seems to make it plain that diplomats' wives can be quite as temperamental as any grand opera prima donna.

"I will never walk into the White House dining room on the arm of Dr. Wiedfeldt—or any other German," is said to have been the substance of the Baroness's protest. "I refuse even to sit beside him. If I cannot have some other escort then I cannot be present at the diplomatic dinner."

Through the same mysterious channels which had brought the Baroness her advance information was carried the news that the White House would have to get along without her distinguished presence unless it could rearrange its plans as to her escort and her place at the table.

This ultimatum brought perplexity and dismay to the officials of the State Department, who had been charged with the always perplexing duty of arranging the diplomatic dinner. These faithful servants of the Republic, whose salaries are very largely paid by men who sometimes dine in their shirtsleeves and who are never worried how the guests range themselves about the dining table, so long as they get there, were faced with a new and grave problem.

Until they heard the Baroness de Cartier's protest they had supposed that their worries concerning this the first diplomatic dinner given since President and Mrs. Coolidge entered the White House, were over.

For weeks they had been arranging and rearranging the names of the distinguished guests who were to sit down to dinner with President and Mrs. Coolidge. They thought they had everything arranged in strict accordance with the time-honored traditions that govern functions of this kind.

According to these traditions, the German Ambassador must take his place in the grand entry into the dining room just where they had him placed and he must escort just the woman who had been assigned to him, the wife of the Belgian Ambassador.

There were to be seventy-nine guests at the dinner. They were to be seated at a great oblong table, with the President and his wife facing each other in the middle. The seating of the distinguished guests had been planned according to precedents which never before had been questioned. And so the officials of the State Department who had worked so hard and conscientiously to have everything strictly according to the best international etiquette were greatly upset to hear that the Baroness did not care at all for the plan and just would not come unless it was altered.

Probably the public will never know exactly what wires were pulled to bring about a change in the seating arrangements for the White House dinner. But that they were changed there is no doubt.

The haughty Baroness de Cartier who had caused all the trouble was among those present, but she did not walk into the dining room on the arm of Dr. Wiedfeldt, nor did she sit at his side during the dinner.

No, the German Ambassador escorted and had for a dinner companion Mme. Hanihara, the wife of the Japanese Ambassador. And the curious thing about this is that Mme. Hanihara's nation was as firmly linked with the cause of England, France and the other allies as Belgium.

According to the gossip of some of those who were at the dinner, the lady from Japan seemed to enjoy herself very much, indeed. To judge from the smiles that wreathed her face, she found Dr. Wiedfeldt a very acceptable escort and an exceedingly pleasant dinner companion.

According to the gossip with which Washington has been humming ever since, that diplomatic dinner was not a particularly pleasant affair for most of the guests.

Nearly everybody present knew what Baroness de Cartier had done and much doubt was expressed as to whether the stand she had taken was either ladylike or diplomatic or respectful to the country to which her husband is accredited. Some cast looks of sympathy at the German Ambassador and others shot at the wife of the Belgian Ambassador glances which made it seem as if the disarmament conference had been very unfruitful of results.

To judge from the proud glint in her eye, Baroness de Cartier felt extremely proud of the way she had forced the hard-working employees of the American State Department to alter the dinner arrangements to suit her whims. But many are wondering if perhaps this pride of hers was not the sort that goes before a fall.

It is suspected that she may be, and very probably already is, extremely sorry for having been so snippy to the German Ambassador and turned the hospitality of President and Mrs. Coolidge into a means for opening up the ugly old wounds of the war. And there is every likelihood that she may be still more regretful.

Her husband is said to have been strongly opposed to the attitude she took. If he had known how much publicity was to be given the incident it is believed that he would have insisted on her going in to dinner on the arm of the German Ambassador—or else remaining at home.

He knows too well how carefully an incident of this kind will be weighed by the Belgian Foreign Office. The Baron is experienced enough in diplomacy to understand that a diplomat's wife must be as tactful and discreet as he himself if he is to achieve the greatest success.

Whatever one's personal feelings regarding the Germans may be, the fact remains that a state of war no longer exists. The United States has resumed diplomatic relations with Germany and has duly welcomed Dr. Wiedfeldt as the representative of that country. He is therefore entitled to at least formal courtesy—particularly on the occasion when the President of the United States is his host.

But the Baroness de Cartier seems to have been heedless alike of her husband's diplomatic future and of her courteous duty to Dr. Wiedfeldt and to President and Mrs. Coolidge. Also, she was heedless of her own social future, which, as almost everybody thinks, is seriously jeopardized by her dictation of the arrangement of the seats at the White House dinner table.

This is the Baroness's third marriage, but never before has she achieved anything like the social distinction which she enjoys as the wife of the Belgian Ambassador. And now it seems likely that she has kicked the fat of her social aspirations into the fire by her foolish determination to snub Dr. Wiedfeldt.

Not so many years ago the woman who now holds her head so high as the Baroness de Cartier was called Miss Marie Dow—a name quite as unknown to the Social Register as that of Jack Dempsey.

Her first husband was Elihu B. Frost. He was a multi-millionaire, but all his millions were unable to push his young wife into the position in the smart set which she coveted. So Mrs. Frost, after a few disappointing years of struggling for social recognition, went to Reno and got a divorce.

Her next husband was Hamilton Wilkes Cary, and everybody thought that through him she at last had found a sure and speedy way to the innermost circles of New York and Newport society. For Mr. Cary was none other than a nephew of the powerful Mrs. William Astor and himself a man of the best social status.

But, alas for Mrs. Cary's ambitions, this husband of hers died before society could get its lorgnettes focussed on her long enough to decide whether or not she had any right to "belong."

Then came the war. Like so many other high-spirited American women, the once divorced and once widowed Mrs. Cary went abroad to nurse the sick and wounded soldiers and to cheer up the disgracefully healthy statesmen and diplomats who crowded Paris almost as much as an invading German army would have done.

Mrs. Cary found her war work not too arduous to prevent her playing about a bit with the rather stern-looking but very jovial Baron de Cartier. Almost before anybody realized that it was anything more than a pleasant wartime flirtation they were married.

When the Baron was appointed ambassador to Washington his wife saw a glorious opportunity to achieve the social distinction in her native land which had been denied her with her first two husbands.

But now even some of her warmest friends and admirers are fearful that she herself has ruined her chances of any such thing.

Some of the gossips have hinted that the Baroness thought, by showing her utter contempt for Germany, she would make herself a great popular heroine.

As far as America is concerned, she already must have experienced a rude awakening from any such dream. The people of the United States are quite agreed that the war is over and they are ready and eager to let it remain so.

The Japanese Ambassador's wife and children. Although her country also has been at war with Germany, Mme. Hanihara took the place beside Dr. Wiedfeldt which Baroness Cartier scorned

Baroness de Cartier de Marchienne, the once divorced and once widowed wife of Belgium's Ambassador, who upset the plans for the recent White House dinner by refusing to accept the German Ambassador as her escort

Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, the hostess at the dinner which was marked by a revival of the war's hatreds on the part of some of the guests

Perhaps Baron de Cartier can explain why his charming wife refuses to understand that the war is over

BASEBALL ASSOCIATION GIVEN REMISSION OF PART SUM OWED ON LEASE OF RIVERSIDE PARK

Pleads Errors In Judgment and Unsuccessful Baseball Year in Asking Help.

NOW OWES $2,000.

City Council Will Take $500 in Full Payment of $750 Account—Remit $250.

Pleading errors in Judgment, mismanagement, careless handling of funds, and a bad season for baseball, Peterborough Base ball Association last night appealed to the Finance Committee of the City Council for some form of assistance towards payment of its debt due on the lease of Riverside Park. The committee will, on motion of Mayor Turner recommended to the Council that $500 be accepted as payment in full of the amount is paid to the Treasurer on or before December 31. This is a remission of $250, the full amount of the lease, $1,000 having been decreased by a payment of $250. The application was not signed, bearing only six names typewritten, and Alderman N. E. Phelan Chairman of the Finance Committee objected to the inclusion of his name as being unauthorized.

The communicatron from the Association addressed to the Mayor and Council is as follows:

"In connection with Riverside Park and particularly referring to the rent for the season of 1924 which is now considerably overdue, we respectfully beg to submit the following facts for the consideration of yourself and your worthy Council.

Through errors in judgment and circumstances beyond the control of the Peterboro Baseball Association the baseball season of 1924 has been a decided financial failure, in-as-much-as it has already cost each member of the Association approximately $130 out of his own pocket to foster baseball in Peterboro, and there are still debts outstanding as follows:

Bank loan $500
Examiner Printing Co. for advertising approximately $200
L. W. LeBarr, uniforms and supplies.....$600
Sundry small acounts, approximately $150
City for Park rental $750

You are probably aware that the only revenue producer at Riverside Park was the senior baseball team The Junior teams and the Mercantile City League which was composed of teams from the various factories and business houses of the city, and the Collegiate Rugby teams have been given the use of the Park all season free of charge. This is necessary if these games are to be encouraged in the city.

Therefore if in view of the financial difficulties which baseball is in at the present, time, you and your worthy council feel that the rent of the Park must be collected at once, each individual on the baseball executive will personally have to pay as a moral obligation an amount from his own pocket sufficient to make up the total due, with a request that we be given an option on the park for the season of 1925.

We freely admit that due to mismanagement the park finances, although not large, have been carelessly handled but we believe that with the help of your worthy council it is a condition which can be remedied in another season, and we must admit that baseball has been a decided advertisement for Peterboro.

Unfortunately a financial statement cannot be published but the books and records of the Baseball Club are open for inspecion by any member of the Council.

Peterboro Baseball Association Executive.
W. J. Oke.
N. E. Phelan
F. E. Convery,
Edw. Wright
T. H. Hooper.
L. W. Lebarr.

Alderman Phelan, chairman of the committee, objected to the inclusion of his name on the letter. He had been an officer in the Peterborough Baseball Club, he said, but not in this Association.

Mayor Turner moved, supported by Alderman Stocker, that providing $500 is paid to the City Treasurer on or before December 31, the City Council will accept this in full discharge of the $750 due on the leases. The motion carried.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

At a recent meeting, which was largely attended the A.O.H. nominated and electea their officers for the ensuing year. The newly elected officers were installed on the 23rd of October. Retiring president Mr. Neary conducted the rites of installaion in a most capable manner. Officers newly elected and retiring made splendid addresses and a hearty vote of thanks, were made to the retiring officers for the manner in which they fulfilled their responsibility in the past year.

The newly-elected officers are as follows:

President—E. R. O'Toole.
Vice-Pres.—J. J. Burke.
Rec.-Secy.—P. O'Toole.
Fin.-Secy.—Jas. Drain.
Treasurer—F. Whaley.
Sergeant-at-Arms—P. McGrath.
Sentinal—Wm. J. Devlin.
Marshall—P. McGrath.
Standing Committee— P. McGrath (chairman), F. Whaley, P. O'Toole, J. J. Burke, Wm. J. Devlin.
Division Surgeon—Dr. F. P. McNulty.

Even stubborn, unruly or shampooed hair stays combed all day in any style you like. "Hair-Groom" is a dignified combing cream which gives that natural gloss and well-groomed effect to your hair— that final touch to good dress both in business and on social occasions. "Hair-Groom" is greaseless; also helps grow thick, heavy, lustrous hair. Beware of greasy, harmful imitations.

DREAMS

Dreams of rain often are bad omens.

To see yourself running through a downpour, your clothes soaking wet, is a caution against entering any new enterprise; betraying a confidence or being too free in your love affairs.

To be watching the rain fall from a place of shelter bids you be cautious for there are those who will do you harm if you venture too far from good judgment.

Interpretations

To see yourself drinking from a cask of liquor you will receive good fortune but will lose friends through dissension.

Tragedy will enter your life if you see yourself entering a theater alone; good fortune if you are in a group.

DRAFT ADOPTED BUT MODIFIED

International League Accepts Form Used in Other Class AA Leagues.

SEASON SHORTENED.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(Canadian Press).—The International Baseball League gave up an eight-year fight against the major leagues Friday when it unanimously adopted the modified form of the draft similar to the one in operation in the Pacific Coast and American Association Leagues last season. This agreement was effected at the annual meeting of the League held here yesterday.

Jack Dunn, manager of the six-time Baltimore champions, who has been one of the bitterest opponents to the draft, was wheeled into line by the other delegates in what was termed by President John Conway Toole as one of the briefest and most peaceful meetings in the history of the circuit.

Modified Terms.

Under the terms of the modified draft a team may take optional players and players by sales agreement from major league teams under a contract containing a provision that only players so acquired shall be subject to selection in the draft. All other players are immune from the draft. Under the existing major league agreement, each big league club can send eight players to a class AA club, which gives International League clubs an offering of 128 players if the maximum number was sent to them.

The draft price was fixed at $5,000. Players taken by option or purchased can be recalled or repurchased by the major league club sending them to the International League on or before September 15 of the current season. After that date the combined major leagues can draft only one player from each International League club through a drawing system.

Shorter Schedule.

Another important change in the league rules calls for a 154 playing programme in 1925 instead of the customary 168-game schedule. The 1925 season will open on April 15 and close September 20. President Toole will make up the schedule and submit it to a special meeting of the League to be held in Toronto February 10.

The League delegates also talked of a "most valuable player award," similar to the one now in effect in both the National and American Leagues, but definite action on this proposition was deferred until the meeting of the League to be held in Hartford, Conn., next Tuesday in connection with the annual meeting of the National Association.

The method of assessment for meeting the League's expenses was also changed from a per capita system to a regular assessment system regulated by the president of the League.

Those who attended yesterday's session included Lawrence Soloman and Daniel Howley, of Toronto.

WINTER CALLS FOR MORE COZY HOMES

Fireplace Furnishes Only Part of Warmth in a Home.

Approach of cold weather requires extra effort on the part of the housewife to make the home cheery and comfortable.

The fireplace alone, even though it has a crackling log fire, is not enough to put the requisite warmth into the home. There must be the atmosphere of coziness that even a log fire cannot give.

That comes from the proper use of the warmer colors in cold weather. The colors of autumn, for instance, carried over into and through winter help considerably to cheer up a room.

These colors may be adopted in sofa pillows, in the accessories like vases, the fireplace screen and lamps. The bright orange glow of amber lights, set in the electric lighting fixtures, also helps.

Off Come Covers.

Now is the time also when the dull coverings of sofa and chairs are taken off and the tones of the original material are brought out. During the warm, bright summer months the "summer covers" help dispel the over-brightness of the room and put a milder tone of light and beauty into it.

With decrease of this warmth from the sunlight, and the increasing winter shadows, the dull covers must come off, for more artificial brightness is required.

Beware of overdoing this, however. That is the mistake some over-zealous housewives are liable to make.

Don't Add.

With the idea of getting brightness and coziness into the home, to make up for the lapse of summer sunshine, they increase the white lights in the fixtures, bring on more sofa pillows, vases and candles and overdecorate generally.

Winter does not call for an increase of furniture, but for a varied use of it. The warm fireglow of amber bulbs in the electric fixtures is worth all a housewife's efforts in any other direction.

This is only a suggestion of what can be done to make hubby stay home.

HOCKEY TICKETS.

Early Opportunity for Fans to Secure Reserved Seats.

The Peterboro Hockey Club will place on sale a block of reserved seat tickets on Tuesday morning, good for the first three Intermediate O.H.A. games this season. The tickets will be disposed of in the order of application and the holders of these advance tickets will be given first chance for reserved seats for the balance of the season, as the plan will be thrown open to subscribers a day before the general public will get a chance at the pasteboards. Three is only a limited number of these tickets and they are likely to be in great demand as a successful season is expected.

GAMES AT RINK ALL DEFAULTED

Quakers Turned Out Complete Line-up, But Lockworks Were Short.

OTHER GAMES OFF.

At the arena last night the opening game of the evening was won by default by the Quaker Oats, when the Lock Works were one man short at starting time. A scrub game played between the two teams, the Quakers winning easily by a 17 to 3 score. The Lock Works who should have given the Quakers a battle were certainly off color last night, for they played sloppy ball and "Bizzy" Thorndyke their speed ball artist, threw them over the rink He was as wild as a hawk at the first of the game, but in the last two innings he pitched more steady ball.
